Index to Volume CX

36053

27 to 53

Nos. ~~1 to 26~~ Inclusive

1565

Authors

Allen, E. B.; Encouragement for the Middle-West 468
Allen, J. H.; Criticism or Praise? 305
Ambler, E. V.; Vacations — Do You Take 'em? 267
Anderson, O. T.; Florida: Its Boom and Its Perils 735
Atkins, G. G.; On Being a Contributing Editor 229; Sitting on the Platform 694
Auld, W. M.; Christmas Carol, The 848
Axtell, A. G.; Indian Summer 738
Babcock, E. B.; Evolutionist's Ideas of God, Man, and Christ 72
Baird, L. O.; Nationalization of the Council 468
Baker, Virginia; Christmas 819
Bartlett, Susan; Peking Sunshine 775
Barton, J. L.; What of Turkey and Missions? 425
Barton, W. E.; Great Need, The 466
Bates, Katharine L.; For Deeper Life 426
Beardsley, H. M.; Rare Fellowship in Service 465
Bel, Sarah F.; Christmas Acrostic, A 887
Boyden, Carrie B.; Prickly Polly Porcupine 596; Little Boy Who Didn't Like Christmas 801
Boynton, E C.; Drawing Power, Jesus' and the Cross 912
Boynton, Nehemiah; "More Strength to Your Arm" 465
Brainard, A. C.; Moment of Insight, A 143
Bridgman, H. A.; Why Not Five Societies? 525
Brown, C. R.; Must Be Intensely Vital 465
Brown, Jean H.; Neighbor Cricket 180; Fuzzy Wuzzy 341; Illumination 395
Brown, R. E.; Philosopher's Stone, The 242; No Room in the Inn 817; New Year, The 918
Brownlee, F. L.; Good Logic, Poor Psychology 46; Negro Education and Leadership 400
Burr, A. W.; Ear and Eye 747
Burton, C. E.; Statistical and Spiritual Gains 467; National Council Secretary's Report 469; Next Steps in Missionary Reorganization 698
Burton, C. W.; Trend of Negro Churches, The 467
Bush, Emma F.; What's in a Name? 405
Butler, Florence H.; Light of Faith, The 267
Byington, E. H.; Unofficial Efficiency 299
Caldwell, Adelbert F.; Robert Stephenson's Sweet Money 405
Call, A. D.; Weightier Matters of the Law 329
Carter, Gertrude; Church Vacation Schools in Maine 48
Cavert, S. McC.; What Tolerance Is 758
Chamberlain, W. C.; My Bridge of Dreams 622
Chandler, W. B.; Preacher and the Magazines, The 236
Chenery, Susan; Our Glorious Liberty 885
Clark, T. C.; To the Corsican 252; Deathless 778
Cleaves, C. P.; Immortals, The 776
Conrad, A. Z.; England's Probems 331
Cook, E. A.; Religious Beliefs of Forty-Five College Girls 917
Cooper, F. L.; Underpaid and Overpaid Ministers 363
Cotton, E. H.; Dr. Cadman on Preaching 733
Covell, A. J.; Rewards of the Ministry 168
Credeford, G. H.; Scarin' the Ghosts 20
Cross, A. E.; On Reading Dr. Gordon's "My Education and Religion" 463
Crowell, Jane C.; Behold the Star in the East 815
Davidson, Winifred; Short Fuse 374; Violent Waters 562; Two Blizzards and a Bear 673
Davis, Grace T.; Power of Man's Spirit 393
Davis, Jerome; What Kind of Patriotic Education Do We Want? 44; Social Ideals for Congregationalists 736
Davis, O. S.; Prayer for the Meeting of the National Council 463; Congregational Ideals in Modern American Life 516
Day, W. H.; Challenge of the Hour, The 465
Dean, Eloise; God's Arrow 393
Delano, Frances J.; Christmas 883
Dewey, H. P.; Human Bond, The 879
Dresser, F. L.; "I Would Not Forget" 328
Eaton, E. D.; William Tyndale 361
Edwards, Jonathan; My Soliloquy at Seventy-Eight 427
Ellingwood, Lena B.; Five-Dollar Bill, A 635
Emerson, C. B.; Kingdom Come, The 301
Ensminger, F. P.; Day at Dayton, A 139
Evans, Daniel; Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches 13, 45, 77, 109, 138, 173, 200, 232
Evans, Nellie H.; Universal Peace 13
Everett, Laura B.; Security Pact of Locarno, The 700
Fagley, F. L.; Church Union Coming 83; Fiftieth Anniversary of Brooklyn Church 174; Moving Pictures in So. Africa 206; Home Missionary Society's Centenary 234; Prospects for New Church Locations 269; Church Building Co-operation 302; Progress in Negro Education 335; Practical Plan of United Church Action 365; Making the Ministry Self-Respecting 396; Congregationalists' Educational Progress 430; Business Before the Council 470; Council on the Churches and World Peace 853; Progress of Co-operative Christianity 882; Religion and Education 919
Ferris, Chester; Wilshire Boulevard Church 80
Firman, Alice F.; Confessions of an Ancient Mariner 778
Fox, Frances M.; First Baby of the White House, The 150; How One Boy Fooled an Indian 436; Joke on an Indian of Long Ago 436
Freeman, John; Kennedy's Second Best 767, 814, 852, 886, 915
Freeman, M. S.; Situation in Tennessee 105
Gallaudet, H. D.; Writing a Book 925
Gammon, R. W.; Middle West Teacher Training 333
Gates, H. W.; Leadership Training 332
Gilroy, W. E.; President Stuart on Conditions in China 391
Gordon, G. A.; Grace from the Infinite 774
Gould, W. E.; Making the Church More Effective 202
Grant, Kate W.; Sea-Gull, The 201
Greene, T. A.; Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work 428, 554, 701
Grey, Fred; Teacher Training in Northwest 334
Grose, H. B.; International Y.M.C.A. Triennial at Washington 699
Guthrie, E. G.; If I Were A Jew 136
Hall, Hattie V.; Christmas Star, The 892
Hall, N. M.; Women of Aigues-Mortes, The 300
Halliday, E. M.; Glimpse at the Work of Church Extension Boards 478
Hannah, I. C.; New Light Upon Evolution 55
Harbour, J. L.; Wonderment of a Layman, The 777
Harlow, S. R.; Stronger Than Treaties 656
Harrison, T. Q.; Gang or Fellowship? 776
Hartich, Alice; Birthday Prayer, A 107
Harwood, F. J.; Message from the Moderator, A 591
Hawkins, Heloise M.; Good Days 19
Hay, E. L.; In the American Tropics 151
Henry, F. E.; Montana, My Montana 793
Herring, H. C.; Social Service Plans 525; Chicago Forum Discusses Prohibition 731
Heyworth, J. R.; Late Victor F. Lawson, The 592
Hinman, Eleanor; W.B.M.I. Meeting at Detroit 739
Hinman, G. W.; American Relations with China 431
Hoadley, H. G.; Christian Spirit in Industry, The 266
Holman, E. H. H.; Man, Machine, and Progress 264; Christmas Bells 881
Holt, Mrs J. V.; Impressions of Northfield Gathering 144
Houghton, Beatrice Y.; Author of a Great National Anthem, The 10
Hurd, H. E.; Aged Seer, The 715
Irving, H. L.; Better Way, The 759
Jackson, Maud F.; Faith of Old, The 695
Jefferson C. E.; "Jonah" 40
Johnson, Josephine; Not Strength of Granite 138
Johnson, Vlyn; Matins 87
Jones, W. E.; Light of a Thousand Candles, The 818
Jordan, D. S.; Value of Higher Education, The 394
Jordan, H. A.; Common Mind, A 738
Jorgensen, Mrs. Theodore; Life More Abundant 237
Joy, Jane E.; When Star Eyes Was Brave 596
Jump, H. A.; Along the Council Trail 631, 697
Kelley, E. E.; Tribute to "Sonny Boy" 233
Kendall, Frances; Christ Child Table, The 757
Kilbourn, H. J.; Music of the Council, The 661
King, H. C.; Education and Unity 465
Knight, W. A.; Progression in our National Hymns, The 9
Kramer, E. D.; Hallowe'en 597; Thanksgiving 696
Kyte, Mary A.; Church Vacation Schools in New Jersey 49
Landers, W. P.; Fall Firesides 555; That Was the True Light 837; At Pilgrim Shrines 850
Larkin, R. B.; Because God Is 919
LaVigne, C. E.; Washington, the City Beautiful 457
Lawrence, C. W.; Christmas 854
Leach, Leah M., Mary's Baby 855
Leavitt, Roger; Iowa's Leading Layman 914
Leiper, H. S.; School of New Ideas, A 48
Levi, Harry; Introduction to "If I Were A Jew" 136
Lewis, J. M.; How to Remain Thirty Years in One Pastorate 76
Lewis, R. E.; Blow Which Angers a Nation, The 392
Lobingier, Elizabeth M.; Have You Tried This Method? 204
Mackenzie, Madella; Journeying 307
MacMillan, T. C.; Honored Leader's Council, An 558
Maurer, Irving; My Sympathy in the Dayton Case 103; Characteristics of the Present-Day Student 295; Failures of Liberalism 771
McCready, H. S.; High Cost of Spiritual Living, The 880
McDuffee, C. B.; Sea, The 55
Merrill, C. C.; Our Developing Congregationalism 556
Miller, C. L.; Parable of an American Traveler 914
Ministerial Boards; Safeguarding the Ministry 476
Montgomery, Helen B.; Day of Prayer for Missions, February 19, 1926 849
Montgomery, Whitney; Revelation 360
Moore, John; Church with a Burning Heart, The 297; Old Vows with New Resolutions 920
Morgan, W. A.; Congregational Leaders in Washington 520
Morse, W. H.; "Please Excuse!" 253; Stenography in Our Forefathers' Day 854
Nash, G. W.; Church and Its Affiliated Institutions, The 79
Nowell, Blanche E.; And Her Dream Came True 923
Olney, William; All One 117
Owen, G. D.; Thanksgiving 696
Page, Mary S.; Above the Clouds 170
Palmer, A. W.; Tsudas, The 266
Parker, F. D.; Prayer 363
Patton, C. S.; Why I Entered the Ministry 43; Time for Ministers to Speak Out, The 199; Gospel in the Present Age, The 586
Peabody, H. E.; New Moderator As His Pastor Sees Him, The 615
Pedley, Hilton; New Departures in Japan 14
Pellet, C. S.; Safeguarding the Ministry 779
Pendleton, Anne; Kai Phal Pakka 341; White Nanny Goat and Fun 924
Perry, Charlotte H.; Autumn Dream 525
Pierce, Eunice H.; Unhistorical Dates 924
Pierce, J. N.; Building Project of First Church, Washington 431; Welcome to Washington 465
Pinkerton, W. B.; Matter of National Honor, A 12
Pollard, Mrs. Dallas; Camps, Campers and Permanent Influences 622
Poole, Louella C.; Thanksgiving 708
Potter, R. H.; Good Fellowship and Progress 467; Pilgrim Way of Christian Fellowship, The 552
"Priddy, Al"; Social Significance of Leisure 169
Pritchard, A. O.; City-Wide Schools of Missions 237
Ranlett, Susanne A.; Prize Gingerbread 273
Riggs, Anna; Toast to Boys, A 374
Riley, G. H.; To Port 83; Temple, The 235
Ripley, Sherman; Atheist, The 734; Environment 734; Life 734
Ritchie, D. L.; Canadian Outlook, A 140; Our Canadian Outlook 593
Robinson, E. W.; Grave of Historic Interest, A 413
Root, E. T.; December 25, 1925 869
Rouse. F. T.; Our New Moderator 700
Ryland, E. P.; Commission on Social Service 585
Sanders, F. K.; Christian Workers in So. America 42, 75, 108 141
Sargent, A. H.; Onward Christian Workers 406
Seabury, Emma; Hill of Gold, The 104; Youth's Atonement 792
Sears, Harriet R. H.; Melody of the Pine, The 756
Shafer, M. A.; Unknown But Known 747; Peril, The 759
Sheldon, F. M.; Disciples of Christ in Convention 703
Shipherd, T. M.; Malpractice Upon Youth 233
Shipman, F. R.; "Time to Get a Move on" in the Southeast 468; Missionary's Love Story, A 914
Simpson, Mary E.; Veronica 275
Sinnett, C. N.; Where Christian Endeavor Has Stayed 925
Small, F. O.; Unwritten Song, The 265
Smith, F. B.; Layman's Convictions, A 850
Snell, Minnie S.; Menka, Who Never Hurt a Living Thing 891
Spear, Grace T.; Inspiration 46
Stalker, James; Movements in Scotland 78
Stanton, B. F.; English Coal and Trade 370; Impressions of Europe 395
Stapleton, John; Finding God 496
Stephenson, A. R.; My Father's House, A House of Prayer for All Nations 200
Stimson, H. A.; Congregational Churches and the Prayer Meeting 307

Stock, H. T.; Young People and Church Attendance 364
Street, W. D.; Parable of the Controversy of the Angel-Led and Star-Led 888
Strong, L. M.; Cross Triumphant, The 238; Communion 413
Swenson, Lisle B.; Bearers of Wood 671
Tapley, C. S.; This is the Time 298; St. Francis of the Mayflower, The 851
Thayer, L. H.; Comrades of the Gleam 913
Thayer, Mary S.; Service Prayer, A 234
Theodore, J. T.; Anthem, An 142
Towart, W. C.; Taking the Children from the Streets 205 van Schaick, John; Universalists of Today 523
Vincent, C. A.; Francis E. Clark 232
Voorhees, Katherine B.; World Peace 925
Walker, J. J.; Growth in the Northeast 468
Walkley, Frances; From My Parsonage Window 400
Warnack, J. M.; Angel of Hell's Half Acre, The 106
Warner, Edyth W.; Evolution 918
Warner, Mrs. Franklin; Shall I or Shall I Not? 916
Watson, E. O.; Who Help Themselves—in Greece 235
Weir, Evangeline; Tom and Frank Play Gypsies 212
Weist, C. S.; Christmas of Ivan Ivanovitch 812
Weston, Thomas; Andover-Harvard Supreme Court Decision 432
Wilder, Charlotte E.; Three Kites, The 150; Little People 267
Willard, Marian K.; Mr. Policeman 117
Wirt, L. L.; Master Builders of Today 271; What One Dad thinks of Scouting 360
Woman's Boards; Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom, The 483
Woods, Bertha G.; "On the First Day of the Week" 253; At a Quarter of Nine 562; "Only Luke Is With Me" 826

Meetings

Chautauqua, Congregationalists at 370
Chicago City Missionary Society Meeting 851
Christian Endeavorers at Portland, Ore. 144
Disciples of Christ in Convention 703
Isles of Shoals Conference 304
Northfield Conferences:
Impressions of Home Missions 144
Foreign Missions 208
Religious Education 279
General 369
W. B. M. I. Meeting at Detroit 739
Woman's Board of Missions in Brooklyn 738
Woman's Home Missionary Federation 664
Y. M. C. A., International, Triennial at Washington 699

Biographies

Bridgman, Dr. Frederick B., Death of 304
Cable, George W. 816
Emrich, Frederick E. 813
Goodrich, Dr. Chauncey, The Passing of 849
Holt, Hamilton, at Rollins College 558
Lawson Victor F., The Late 592
Page, Rev. Frederick H. 597
Peet, Dr. W. W., Testimonial to 175
Puddefoot, William George 884
Seerley, President Homer H. 914
Tyndale, William 361

Poems

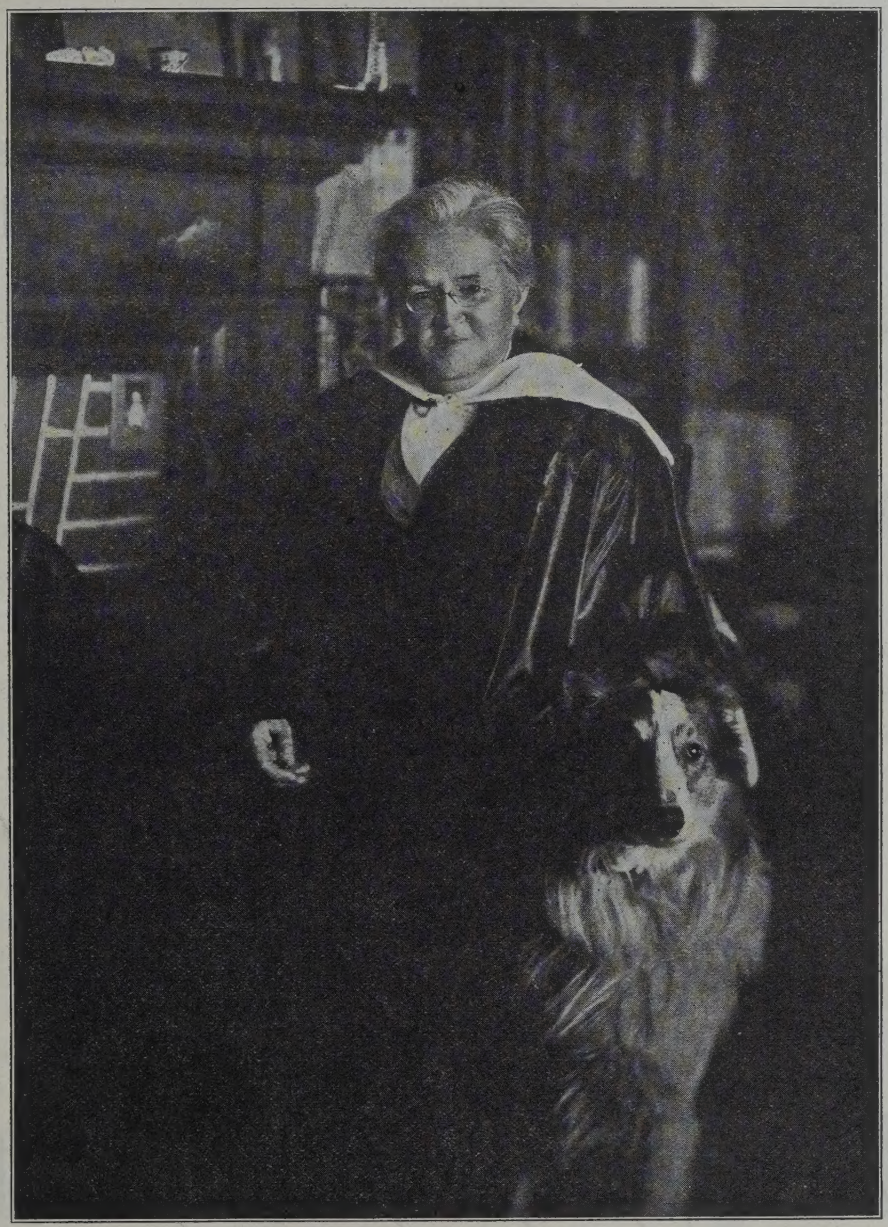
Above the Clouds 170
Aged Seer, The 715
All One 117
Anthem, An 142
At a Quarter of Nine 562
Atheist, The 734
Autumn Dream 526
Bearers of Wood 671
Behold the Star in the East 815
Birthday Prayer, A 107
Bumpa's Cane 673
Christmas 819
Christmas 854
Christmas 883
Christmas Acrostic, A 887
Christmas Bells 881
Christmas Star, The 892
Clark, Francis E. 232
Communion 413
Comrades of the Gleam 913
Cross Triumphant, The 238
Deathless 778
December 25, 1925 869
Environment 734
Evolution 918
Faith of Old, The 695
Fall Firesides 555
Finding God 496
For Deeper Life 426
From My Parsonage Window 400
Fuzzy Wuzzy 341
God's Arrow 393
Good Days 19
Hallowe'en 597
Hill of Gold, The 104
"I Would Not Forget" 328
Illumination 395
Immortals, The 776
Indian Summer 738
Inspiration 46
Journeying 307
Life 734
Life More Abundant 237
Mary's Baby 855
Matins 87
Melody of the Pine, The 738
Moment of Insight, A 143
Montana, My Montana 793
My Bridge of Dreams 622
My Father's House, A House of Prayer for all Nations 200
Neighbor Cricket 180
New Year, The 918
No Room in the Inn 817
Not Strength of Granite 138
"On the First Day of the Week" 253
"Only Luke Is With Me" 826
Onward Christian Workers 406
Peking Sunshine 775
Peril, The 759
Philosopher's Stone, The 242
Power of Man's Spirit, The 393
Prayer 363
Revelation 360
Scarin' the Ghosts 20
Sea, The 55
Sea-Gull, The 201
Security Pact of Locarno, The 700
Service Prayer, A 234
Temple, The 235
Thanksgiving 696
Thanksgiving 708
That Was the True Light 837
To Port 83
To the Corsican 252
Toast to Boys, A 374
Universal Peace 13
Unknown But Known 747
Unwritten Song, The 265
World Peace 925
Youth's Atonement 792

General

American College for Macedonia, An 238
American Relations with China 431
And Her Dream Came True 923
Andover-Harvard Supreme Court Decision 432
Angel of Hell's Half Acre, The 106
At Pilgrim Shrines 850
Author of a Great National Anthem, The 10
Because God Is 919
Better Way, The 759
Blow Which Angers a Nation, The 392
Building Project of First Church, Washington 431
Bulgarian Tragedy, The 201
Dr. Cadman on Preaching 733
Call to a Forward Movement, A 171
Camps, Campers and Permanent Influences 622
Challenge of the Hour, The 465
Chicago Forum Discusses Prohibition 731
With the Children: Prize Packages 20; When Patsy Came to Camp 54; When Patsy Came to Camp Part II 86; Mr. Policeman 117; First Baby of the White House, The 150; Three Kites, The 150; Scales of Justice 180; Tom and Frank Play Gypsies 212; Baby Flicker's Great Adventure in Mackinaw, A 212; Jeremy Dives Into Luck 241; Prize Gingerbread 273; Saturday Night Suppers 309; Kai Phal Pakka 341; Short Fuse 374; What's in a Name? 405; Robert Stephenson's Sweet Money 405; How One Boy Fooled an Indian 436; Joke on an Indian of Long Ago 436; Neighborhood Grandmother, A 491; Lost Spring, The 532; Violent Waters 562; Prickly Polly Porcupine 596; When Star Eyes Was Brave 596; Five-Dollar Bill, A 635; Two Blizzards and a Bear 673; Thanksgiving Crown, A 709; Twins' Topsy-Turvy Gifts, The 749; How Christmas Came to Hope House Part I 790; Little Boy Who Didn't Like Christmas, The 801; How Christmas Came to Hope House 821; Christmas Detectives, The 859; Menka, Who Never Hurt a Living Thing 891; Unhistorical Dates 924; White Nanny Goat and Fun 924; Writing a Book 925
Christ Child Table, The 757
Christian Spirit in Industry 266
Christian Workers in So. America; 42, 75, 108, 141
Christmas Carol, The 848
Christmas of Ivan Ivanovitch 812
Church and Its Affiliated Institutions, The 79
Church Building Co-operation 302
Church Union Coming 83
Church with a Burning Heart, The 297
Church's Overhead, The 203
City-Wide Schools of Missions 237
Confessions of an Ancient Mariner 778
Congregational Churches and the Prayer Meeting 307
Congregationalists' Educational Progress 430
Co-operative Spirit in Industry 268
Council on the Churches and World Peace 853
Criticism or Praise? 305
Day at Dayton, A 139
Day of Prayer for Missions, February 19, 1925 849
Drawing Power, Jesus', and the Cross 912
Ear and Eye 747
Education and Unity 465
Encouragement for the Middle-West 468
England's Problems 331
English Coal and Trade 370
Evolutionist's Ideas of God, Man, and Christ, An 72
Florida: Its Boom and Its Perils 735
Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom, The 483
Forest-Sheltered House of God 435
Gang or Fellowship? 776
Glimpse at the Work of Church Extension Boards 478
Good Fellowship and Progress 467
Good Logic, Poor Psychology 46
Gospel in the Present Age, The 586
Grace from the Infinite 774
Grave of Historic Interest, A 413
Great Need, The 466
Growth in the Northeast 468
Have You Tried This Method? 204
High Cost of Spiritual Living, The 880
Home Missionary Society's Centenary 234
How to Remain Thirty Years in One Pastorate 76
If I Were A Jew 136
If I Were A Jew, Introduction to 136
Impressions of Europe 395
In the American Tropics 151
"Jonah" 40
Kennedy's Second Best 767, 814, 852, 886, 915
Kingdom Come, The 301
Layman's Convictions, A 850
Leadership Training 332
Light of a Thousand Candles, The 818
Light of Faith, The 267
Little People 267
Making the Church More Effective 202
Making the Ministry Self-Respecting 396
Malpractice Upon Youth 233
Man, Machine, and Progress 264
Master Builders of Today 271
Mergers, Moving Toward 626
Matter of National Honor, A 12
Message from the Moderator, A 591
Middle West Teacher Training 333
Missionary Reorganization 667
"More Strength to Your Arm" 465
Movements in Scotland 78
Moving Pictures in South Africa 206
Must Be Intensely Vital 465
My Soliloquy at Seventy-Eight 427
National Council Arrangements 471
National Council Day by Day 616, 658
National Council Secretary's Report 469
Nationalization of the Council 468
Negro Education and Leadership 400
New Departures in Japan 14
New Light Upon Evolution 55
New Moderator as His Pastor Sees Him, The 615
Next Steps in Missionary Reorganization 698
Old Vows with New Resolutions 920
Our Churches at the Capital 460
Our Developing Congregationalism 556
Our Glorious Liberty 885
Our New Moderator 700
Parable of an American Traveler 914
Parable of the Controversy of the Angel-Led and Star-Led, The 888
Pilgrim Way of Christian Fellowship, The 552
"Play's the Thing, The" 239
"Please Excuse!" 253
Practical Plan of United Church Action 365
Preacher and the Magazines, The 236
President's Address to National Council 590
President Stuart on Conditions in China 391
Progress in Negro Education 335
Progress of Co-operative Christianity 882
Progression in Our National Hymns, The 9
Proposed Merger, The 528
Prospects for New Church Locations 269
Protestants Through the Eyes of a Romanist 412
Rare Fellowship in Service 465
Religion and Education 919
Religious Beliefs of Forty-Five College Girls 917
Rewards of the Ministry, The 168
Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches 13, 45, 77, 109, 138, 173, 200, 232
Safeguarding the Ministry 476, 779
St. Francis of the Mayflower, The 851
School of New Ideas, A 48
Shall I or Shall I Not? 916
Situation in Tennessee, The 105
Social Ideals for Congregationalists 736
Social Service Plans 525
Social Significance of Leisure, The 169
Statement of Social Ideals, A 627
Statistical and Spiritual Gains 467
Stenography in Our Forefathers' Day 854
Stronger Than Treaties 656
Taking the Children from the Streets 205
Teacher Training in Northwest 334
Thanksgiving 696
This is the Time 298
"Time to Get a Move on" in the Southeast 468
Trend of Negro Churches, The 467
Tribute to "Sonny Boy" 233
Tsudas, The 266
Underpaid and Overpaid Ministers 363
Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work 428, 554, 701
Universities of Today 523
Unofficial Efficiency 299
Vacations—Do You Take 'em? 267
Value of Higher Education 394
Veronica 275
Washington, the City Beautiful 457
Washington Sectional Meetings 704
Weightier Matters of the Law 329
What Kind of Patriotic Education Do We Want? 44
What of Turkey and Missions? 425
What One Dad Thinks of Scouting 630
What Tolerance Is 758
Where Christian Endeavor Has Stayed 925
Who Help Themselves—in Greece 235
Why I entered the Ministry 43
Why Not Five Societies? 525
Wilshire Boulevard Church, Los Angeles 80
Women of Aigues-Mortes, The 300
Wonderment of a Layman, The 777
Work and Ideals of the A. M. A., The 624
World Federation of Education Associations, The 81
World Hero Prize Competition 671
Young People and Church Attendance 364
Young People's Washington Pilgrimage, The 628

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 27 July 2, 1925



KATHARINE LEE BATES

Author of "America the Beautiful," who has just retired from her professorship in Wellesley College, after forty years' service. See articles by Dr. Knight and Mrs. Houghton in this issue.

Through the Coming Weeks

The Catholic and Protestant Churches Compared

By DANIEL EVANS, D.D.

WE have arranged for an able series of articles by Professor Daniel Evans of the Theological School in Harvard University, dealing with the essential principles of Protestantism. These are not in any sense attacks upon Roman Catholicism, for Dr. Evans has far too much tolerance and catholicity of spirit to assume any attitude of antipathy toward fellow Christians, but they deal in great frankness with historic and theological issues and are not marked by any timidity of speech or hesitancy about stating the plain facts as a Protestant thinker and observer sees them.

Do not allow your subscription to expire

$3.00 per year
$2.75 in Church Clubs

The Congregationalist

14 Beacon Street
Boston

19 South La Salle Street
Chicago

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | July 2, 1925 | No. 27

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh — News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D. — Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis, Minn.
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York City
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

Jew and Christian

WHETHER the activities of the Federal Council of Churches for the promotion of better understanding and good will between Jews and Christians be a symptom or a cause of present tendencies, much is being accomplished in this direction. The problem, of course, is most acute in large centers, but what is happening in Boston and New York is significant for the whole country. Gatherings productive of an entente cordiale have been held recently in these cities, some promoted by federated action and others on individual initiative. The Congregationalist will shortly publish a notable address by Rev. Ernest Guthrie, pastor of Union Congregational Church, Boston, delivered at one of these gatherings. Mr. Guthrie spoke on the theme, If I Were a Jew. Rabbi Harry Levi, of Temple Israel, Boston, has contributed an introduction which will appear with Mr. Guthrie's article.

Law and Religion

PRESENT indications are that the issues between unionists and anti-unionists in Canada which were last year rather bitterly fought out in the Dominion Parliament and in the Provincial legislatures will continue to be contested in the courts until the matter has been carried to the British Privy Council, the highest court in the Empire. Both the Council of the United Church of Canada, and the General Assembly, which the non-concurrent Presbyterians claimed to continue in session, after the unionist majority had declared it adjourned in such a way as was intended to mark its dissolution in the United Church, before breaking up in Toronto passed resolutions anticipating such legal entanglements. The non-concurring Presbyterians claim to be "the continuing church" and assert the right to the name formerly held by the Presbyterian body in Canada. The United Church contests this right, claiming that both the Methodist Church of Canada and the Presbyterian Church in Canada, in their former organization have, by decision of their highest ecclesiastical courts and by action rendered legal by enabling Parliamentary legislation, ceased to exist except as they continue in the United Church. Remembering that the "Wee Free" matter in Scotland was determined by the same ultimate legal authority there can be no assurance what the issue might be. The United Church can hardly be justly accused of undue recourse to law where spiritual rights are unquestionably associated with matters of law, but the Christian world generally would find deep satisfaction if these warring elements in Canada could adjust these matters without appeal to the courts, in some such way, possibly, as has already been done in determining the possession of Knox College, Toronto.

The Passing of Dr. James A. Adams

REV. JAMES ALONZO ADAMS, D.D., who was editor of the Advance in Chicago for ten years from 1903 to 1913, died in Washington, D. C., June 11, and was buried in the Arlington National Cemetery. He was born in Ashtabula, Ohio, May 21, 1842, and was reared in Illinois. He and his three brothers served in the Union Army in the Civil War, and he was a corporal of the 69th Illinois Infantry. He was graduated from Knox College in 1867 and from Union Theological Seminary in 1870. He preached as stated supply in Marshfield, Mo., 1870-71, was a professor in Straight University, New Orleans, 1875-77, and was editor of the Dallas (Texas)

Daily Commercial, 1877-80. In 1880 he was ordained in the Congregational ministry, and was pastor of Pilgrim Church, St. Louis, from 1880 to 1886. For three years following he was pastor of Millard Ave. Church, Chicago, and for six years of Warren Ave., Chicago, taking over the pastorate of the latter while it was still a branch of the First Church. He was on the editorial staff of the Advance for nearly thirty years.

Dr. Adams was the author of Colonel Hungerford's Daughter and a Life of Queen Victoria. He was one of the most brilliant journalists which the religious press has had in America. He was conservative in theology and in politics. He was a stimulating critic and a discerning interpreter of men and events. He was bold in attack and did not shrink from controversy. Under his editorship the Advance rode upon stormy seas and came near to financial shipwreck, but through it Dr. Adams rendered important service. Following his retirement from the editorship in 1913, Dr. Adams served as a contributor to The Congregationalist under his pen name of "Grapho" for several years. His comments on current and historical events and personalities were witty, illuminating, and of exceptional interest.

He has spent much of his time during recent years in the South. He leaves a son, Mortimer V. Adams, of Chicago. Mrs. Adams died three years ago.

The Late Senator La Follette

THE nation is still too near the events and movements in which Senator La Follette participated, and the political atmosphere is still too charged with suspicion and prejudice, for a fair popular estimate of this striking figure. Probably no man in recent times has evoked such intense loyalty and esteem on the part of his hosts of followers, and at the same time such intense hatred and distrust on the part of his most conservative opponents. By the one class he was hailed as a veritable Moses; by the other he was regarded as a sheer demagogue who had won power by plausible legislative expedients.

Our own estimate of the man lies, not between, but outside of these extremes. That he was a man of real force of character and of great ability goes without saying. We believe, also, that he was actuated by personal honesty, public spirit, and high ideals. It was a tribute to the man that his enemies, while they vilified his policies and acts, and made the most of his war record, could bring nothing against his personal honor. We have heard men who knew well the backgrounds of Wisconsin politics accuse Mr. La Follette of ingratitude and disloyalty toward his former leader. We do not know the facts regarding these things, but if Mr. La Follette had been an opportunist or a mere self-seeker he might have pursued a course that would have won him outward reward and at the same time have kept him free from the aspersion because of his radicalism.

Mr. La Follette's weakness, in our judgment, lay in another direction, and was the defect of his good qualities. He was among those who had simplified the problems of life and politics by leaving out many of the important factors. He had intense interest and a very direct policy for his own state, out of which his national outlook and policy developed, but at a period when the whole world is increasingly becoming one community Mr. La Follette had little world vision. His strength and weakness in this respect were never more conspicuous than in his Boston address during the last Presidential campaign. In many ways it was a masterly address, unified, logical, consistent, and if one ignored other factors, exceedingly convincing. One could not listen to the man without feeling his worth and sincerity, but there was also an inescapable impression of a certain limitation in outlook. The utterance was that of a consistent anti-expansionist, and though, because of that fact, it contained acute and just criticism of present national and world politics, it revealed the lack of what one might call, for want of a better term, foreign-missionary statesmanship. Mr. La Follette, of course, was by no means alone among American statesmen in the lack of that phase of vision and statesmanship, but one felt the defect particularly in him just because he was a man who had dared to stake his life and service upon what he regarded as progressive ideals.

Personal Liberty: Ban and Beer

"JOHN BULL Bars Any Broadcasting Against His Beer," is the heading under which a daily paper published an Associated Press despatch telling of the official ban on the liquor question as a radio subject, which prevented Lady Astor from broadcasting a prohibition address on a recent Sunday night. The ban was further effected against Miss Anna Adams Gordon, of Evanston, Ill., head of the American delegation to the World Convention, in Edinburgh, of the W. C. T. U. Miss Gordon planned to give a radio talk on the operation of prohibition in the United States but permission was refused on the ground that the subject was too controversial.

We have long felt that the tendency of certain Englishmen to speak contemptuously of the United States under prohibition as a land where no personal liberty exists, and to assume for their own land a far superior position in the matter of personal liberty, has little basis in fact. It is a question largely of whose liberties are concerned and in what the liberties consist.

The average American does not attach as much importance as does the average Englishman to personal liberty to drink intoxicants, but he does attach immense importance to personal liberty in other matters in relation to which the average Englishman is compliant, and complacent, and with regard to which the exactions of English law and government are exceedingly drastic. In this regard there are more important matters than either prohibition or broadcasting, but the case in point is exceedingly apropos. A nation that officially bars a member of its own parliament, and a law-abiding visitor from another country, from speaking by radio on the subject of prohibition can throw no stones at America in the matter of personal liberty.

The incident illustrates afresh the fact that the liquor traffic and vested interests, and those who have stood for their defense, have been the greatest transgressors against personal liberty. It was, of course, this utter disregard in America by the traffic and its defenders for the liberty, happiness, and rights of the community that led to the reaction that established prohibition. England's fear of the discussion of prohibition, evidenced a few years ago in the loss of "Pussyfoot" Johnson's eye, and later in this ban on radio discussion, suggests great uneasiness on the part of those who have regarded the liquor traffic as impregnably entrenched in their country.

It should, of course, be recognized that many high-minded Englishmen are conscientiously opposed to prohibition, believing with firm conviction that it is an unwarrantable invasion of personal rights and a method of seeking to cure an evil that in itself involves serious, if not disastrous, consequences. One may respect that conviction where it is a political philosophy consistently expressed and applied in relation to all life and law, but it will be interesting to see what such defenders of personal liberty have to say about this ban on radio discussion of prohibition. Will the outspoken personal liberty advocates prove as decidedly anti-ban as they are pro-beer?

Are We Going Backward or Forward?

IN view of the consummation of the movement for a United Church in Canada, what is to be said of the progress toward unity on this side of the line?

A statement attributed to Dr. C. C. Morrison, of the Christian Century, at the meeting of the Council of the United Church of Canada, reported in our columns last week, seemed as pessimistic in its reference to the situation in the American churches as it was congratulatory and optimistic in its estimate of the Canadian movement.

The Congregationalist thoroughly endorses Dr. Morrison's congratulatory references to the United Church of Canada, and to the significance for Christendom of the Canadian movement and its consummation. But is Dr. Morrison right when he represents conditions and movements in this country, contrasted with Canada, as backward and as dominated by reactionary sectarianism?

We cannot share that opinion, and it is our judgment that, apart from the fact that in this country freedom and independency have found more vital and extensive expression than in Canada, the situations in the two countries are not dissimilar, however different they may appear upon the surface.

While this movement for organic union in Canada has been going on the churches of the United States have been making immense progress in breadth of spirit, in a larger sense of fellowship, and in definite movements of federation and co-operation. If these movements seem disappointing in their results it is because they have attempted so vast an undertaking, and because the harvest of a large sowing has been only partially realized.

Dr. Morrison refers to the way in which "ecclesiastical carpenters" have been "going about mending their sectarian fences that had been broken down by the unifying processes of the war."

I could not believe [he is reported as saying] that union would survive that reactionary movement. But here I find, instead of going backward, as we have tended to go back in the United States, you are going forward with such a stride, such courage, conviction, and substantial progress as would have been unthinkable even to us in the days before the war did its serious and sinister work to the cause of union.

But does not Dr. Morrison in his survey of the movement over here apply a very different standard, and view the field from a very different angle, from that from which he sees the Canadian movement?

Judged by the reactionary tendencies which the Canadian church union movement has produced and intensified, rather than from the standpoint of its own progressive spirit and achievement, that movement has been a failure rather than a success. It has not produced anything like full unity. On the contrary one of the negotiating bodies has been seriously disrupted. Life-long friendships and associations have been broken. Homes and families have been divided. Local churches of historic prestige and strength have been split from stem to stern. It is doubtful whether in half a century—almost the extent of the writer's intimate association with Canada—the Dominion has never been more harassed by dissension and controversy than at present. It is not merely that a large section of the former Presbyterian body refuses to enter the United Church. The sectarian spirit is intensified in the other bodies, and, with a few notable exceptions, everywhere outside of the United Church.

Are we, then, to say that the movement has failed, that there has been no real progress because of these facts? On the contrary it is the immensity of the progress that has occasioned the strength of this conservative reaction.

It is our conviction that the same thing is true over here, and that much of the sectarian fence-building, that we deplore as much as Dr. Morrison, is the indirect index of progress. It represents the stiffening of orthodoxy and the intensifying of what professes to be "loyalty to the fathers and to the ancient standards" on the part of those who regard progressive movements as a departure from true faith and polity.

The Canadian movement reminds us of the price at which alone outward union can be achieved, and it also emphasizes the fact that progress toward larger unity may often be won only through minor disunity.

The realization that the more rapid and decided is the progress toward unity, which inevitably involves a liberalizing and progressive spirit, the more pronounced is bound to be the accompanying conservative reaction, should lead us not to attach too much importance to the seeming recrudescence of sectarianism. The leaders of the church union movement did not adequately anticipate this reaction in Canada. It is doubtful whether they could have avoided it, if it had been foreseen; and it is well, perhaps, that they did not foresee it, or the movement for a united church might have been seriously modified or abandoned. As it is, the United Church has been achieved at heavy cost—a cost so heavy that many who appraise the Canadian movement without limit or discrimination would, we fear, speak more hesitatingly if they knew all the facts.

From an entirely opposite point of view it may be said that much of the lack of definite movement for organic union is due to real progress in breadth of spirit and largeness of conception. For an increasing number of men of free spirit and open mind Christian catholicity has become so large and ultimate an ideal that they are not content to stop half way toward the goal. They are prepared to move forward step by step, but they wish to be sure that each step forward will mean a going on and on, and not merely a registering upon some new plane of organization, creed, and polity which may become a citadel against further progress. Many people conscientiously fear the danger of finding a way out from present sectarianism in what might become little more than a great, standardized denomination with all, or many, of the defects of present sectarian organization.

The church in its progress, like an army, sends out a vanguard and a rear guard. From the stragglers in the rear it is possible to judge the direction in which the main army is moving. It is not so easy to define the position of the scouts and vanguard or to tell where the main army will be tomorrow. But the position of those who are moving forward more rapidly than the church as a whole is willing to go must not be minimized, nor can one view with pessimism delay, even in a good cause, which arises entirely from the purpose of attaining a higher and fuller goal.

At least, despite all seeming indications to the contrary, it is our conviction that there is ground for much optimism in the American situation in relation to union and catholicity. We may not be moving rapidly but we are moving forward.

The Scholar's Debt to the Common People

THE solemn obligation that rests upon those who have had the advantages of education was never better stated than in an address by Professor Graham Taylor, recently reprinted from the Proceedings of the Association of American Colleges, 1925. Professor Taylor spoke on The Social and Civic Responsibility and Opportunity of American Colleges and Their Graduates. It was a memorable address, and we wish we could print it in full, but these words ought to be burned into the consciousness of every student in America. Professor Taylor said:

When I first came to Chicago and offered to lend a hand at Hull House, I met a Russian Jewish citizen of this city who in every direct language asked me if I knew I "owed whatever I could do for the great laboring masses of this city." I never had been challenged so before. I hesitated in my answer, but he did not pause. He said, "While we who are as capable as you may be to acquire culture and have perhaps as great a desire to do so, are laboring, we are buying for you the leisure to learn." I never was taught, nor ever once thought that my leisure to learn was more or less at the expense of those whose labor for existence allowed no leisure to learn. Later I found that this man could make good his claim of desiring culture, for he asked me if I could not get him a position as ticket-taker on the elevated railroad to work at night. As he was an expert craftsman, I said, "You want no such monotonous job as that." He said, "Yes I do, I want to work at night, because perhaps from one to three o'clock in the morning I would have a chance I never have had in all my life for consecutive reading."

Professor Taylor records a similar incident concerning his son. He adds:

My son went to Harvard University. He was followed by a letter from a Chicago working boy friend, saying how much he missed him because he loaned him what he called "a hearing ear." But then he drew himself up to full stature to give his friend this reminder: "Do not forget that your education at Harvard is costing a great deal more than you or your father will ever pay for it. Therefore, return in glorious light for all the oil that is being poured into the lamp of your life."

Nothing learned at that university could sink more deeply into the consciousness and conscience of a student than this man to man reminder of the ethic that learning owes something to labor.

In Brief

Self-worship is the worst perversion of fine feeling.

* *

Written in Jerusalem, friendly greetings come to The Congregationalist from Dr. Morris H. Turk, of Portland, Me. "The Holy Land is well named," says Dr. Turk. "It is a revelation."

* *

The forty-second annual session of the Texas Congregational Conference, held recently at Fort Worth, attained, in one respect at least, a notable and possibly an unrivaled distinction. It registered 100 per cent. in attendance, every minister and every denominational officer in the conference being present.

* *

In the death of Dr. Samuel H. Kirkbride recently the American Bible Society lost one of its most distinguished secretaries. Dr. Kirkbride's most distinctive service was in the Southwest, in New Mexico, and Colorado, where he went at first for reasons of health. Later he was transferred to the Northwestern Agency and in recent years made his home in Evanston, Ill.

* *

Other denominations are working out merger plans. The United Lutheran Church is endeavoring to merge five boards representing home mission interests into one "Board of American Missions." The general plan has been approved by a joint commission representing the five boards and it is expected that details of reorganization will be completed by the end of the year.

* *

Among the honorary degrees of D.D. conferred last month of which the recipients were especially worthy were those received by Rev. Enoch F. Bell, editorial secretary of the American Board, from Middlebury College, by Rev. Alden H. Clark, American Board missionary to India, from Amherst, and by Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon of the Pacific School of Religion, from Dartmouth.

* *

What is a "Nixie"? It is an inadequately addressed letter which requires directory service before delivery can be effected, and this service costs Uncle Sam nearly $2,000,000 a year. Of the 200,000,000 "nixies" mailed last year, 21,000,000 went to the Dead Letter Office. A remarkable statement in connection with the poor and inadequate addressing of letters is that annually about $3,000,000 in checks, drafts, and money orders never reaches intended owners.

* *

Dr. Charles Christopher Mierow, dean and acting president of Colorado College for the last two years, has just been elected president. Dr. Mierow is a Congregationalist, and was born in New York, June 16, 1883. He was graduated from Princeton in 1905, and taught the classics in Phillips Academy, Andover, 1908-09, in Princeton 1909-16, and in Colorado College since 1916. He is the author of a number of books on Greek and Latin studies. The announcement of his election as president at Colorado College commencement was received with enthusiastic approval.

The "Inferiority Complex"

WHILE the editorial, Suppliants!, in a recent issue of The Congregationalist has evoked strong approval from outstanding leaders in our fellowship, it has proven a choice morsel for our neighbor of the Christian Register (Unitarian) who seems to be confirmed in the conviction that the surest way to display his liberalism is by questioning the liberalism of other people. It is something of a distinction to be included with Dr. Fosdick, Dean Brown, Dr. Arthur Parker Fitch, Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, Dr. W. P. Merrill, and others, who in recent months have been judged before this high tribunal of the Christian Register and found wanting.

But let us come to the point. Our excellent neighbor, whose belligerency we find amusing, though we admire his solid worth, says in the Register of June 11, under the heading, A Theological Note:

At last, The Congregationalist is stirred to a theological disagreement. We have wondered how long its avoidance of doctrines would last. It cannot resist an objectionable sentence in Dr. Frothingham's centenary sermon, when he said, "We are disciples of a Master; we are not suppliants." Our neighbor editor defends the suppliant idea. He quotes the song:

"I am coming to the Cross;
I am poor, and weak, and blind;
I am counting all but dross;
I shall full salvation find."

That has real vital meaning for many individual Christians, he says, and it is "the attitude of suppliants to a Savior." He implies that even liberals hold to the suppliant theology. Some day we are going to ask, in the name of common sense, Who and what is a liberal? If a liberal can sing that song, we are not liberal. It is a trashy poetical rendering of the substitutionary atonement. It is an egotistical pursuit of safety first,—nothing but "I." It is a preposterous and sicklied prostration of a being so mean and low down that he could not possibly think up even those pathetic lines. It is all bad.

Not a Unitarian on the face of the earth, we declare, would sing such a hymn. Our doctrine spends no time coddling an inferiority complex. Such as we are, we are sons of God and it doth not yet appear what we shall be. So we would live,—erect, just, true, without reproach, without remorse. For our aim also is to be masters of life.

We were minded, at first, to give no other reply to this outbreak than a reference to a certain parable of Jesus, and a certain publican who smote upon his breast saying, God be merciful to me a sinner. Jesus seemed to commend this man, in contrast with the Pharisee who had been assuring God that he was "erect, just, true, without reproach," etc. But this seems to have been all wrong. The trouble with this humble and contrite publican, according to our brother editor, was evidently that he was "coddling an inferiority complex." St. Paul, also, wrote something rather disconcerting to this superman, captain-of-my-soul conception of religion, notably I Cor. 1. But, of course, one recalls that the superman type of critic has discovered in these latter days that Paul, too, was suffering from "an inferiority complex." What a horrible thing to suffer from! A recent writer has explained that this was likewise the trouble with Abraham Lincoln!

Seriously, however, these words in the Christian Register do call for a word of positive reply even if their implications seem sufficiently absurd. It is ridiculous to suggest that The Congregationalist is unduly anxious to avoid theological disagreement or is unconcerned about matters of doctrine. Our editorial columns and our mail bag disprove any such notion.

We have, however, persistently refused to regard any inherent sanctity as attaching to theological disagreement. We are far more concerned about promoting agreements and points of contact between professing Christians of various types, tempers, and opinions, than about emphasizing differences, or encouraging belligerently controversial attitudes.

And this attitude, contrary to our contemporary's rather ungracious assumption, arises not from any futile complacency and desire to be at peace. It is the direct and consciously developed expression of what we conceive to be the deepest and most essential doctrines of the Christian religion. Our whole course, in policy and utterance, is founded in the most thoroughgoing fashion in doctrine, and far from being careless about doctrine we lay the most profound emphasis upon it.

But what is Christian doctrine? Or what are the deepest and most essential doctrines of the Christian religion? Christian doctrine has its sole and adequate basis in love. The essential doctrines of the Christian religion are the doctrine of redemption through the love of God, and the doctrine of the redeemed life and of the redeemed society as established in brotherly love. These doctrines in their very essence make for unity, agreement, understanding, or where these are lacking, for patience, magnanimity, liberty, and hope.

To be faithful to these essential doctrines of divine, or redemptive, love as the source and basis of all holy living, and of brotherly love as the expression of that life, seems to us far more important than to be known as "liberal" or as whatever the Christian Register calls those outside the pale. For us love is the only liberalism, and from that, thank God, in its exclusive and truly fundamentalist zeal, not even the Christian Register can cast us out.

We should like to know what certain Unitarians think about these matters. If we are not mistaken, the editor of the Christian Register has quite as seriously misrepresented the attitude of many in his own communion as he has our own position. He declares that "not a Unitarian on the face of the earth would sing such a hymn" as that to which we referred. It may be recalled that our editorial distinctly suggested the limitations of that hymn. Manifestly it lacks the depth, dignity, and grandeur of such a hymn as that of the Unitarian, Sir John Bowring: In the Cross of Christ I Glory.

But we did emphasize the reality of the experience of the humble, contrite, suppliant soul, that that hymn even in its possible crudeness and emotionalism had been used to express. If we mistake not, it was very much this spirit that found expression some time ago in a very notable article, The Conversion of a Sinner, by a Unitarian layman.

Possibly the Christian Register may assure us that Philip Cabot, also, was "coddling an inferiority complex" when he wrote that article for the Atlantic Monthly.

From Our Western Editor

Every fellow is prone to think his own task more difficult than any other, and naturally so. He is the fellow who must face in his own task the difficulties that are perhaps entirely unknown to others, difficulties that often hide any romance which might inhere in the task itself. I was a pastor for a good many years and have now been a secretary for a considerable time, so that I have a fair acquaintance with the tasks of both ministers and laymen. My experience leads me to believe that the task of the minister is perhaps the most exacting of any of the tasks that men undertake. It seems to me no other work makes such severe demands upon the physical and the mental, upon character and emotion. A secretary hears the story from both the ministers and the churches. Ministers not infrequently confide to the secretary the supreme difficulties that they are facing and a good many church members complain to the secretary about the supposed failure of their minister. The secretary comes to know in an intimate way how much of real manhood and sacrificial life is being poured out upon our churches through the lives of our ministers. Knowing this, I am trying to say that the ministry is the task of tasks.

Rev. James M. Lewis

Two ministers serving in the Middle West have just completed thirty years' service in their respective fields. This is such a notable achievement under the conditions of service in Western churches that we should take note of it. June first the church at Sandwich, Ill., celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. James M. Lewis. "Jim," as we call him, is a native of Delaware County, Indiana, and had his college training at De Pauw University, where he received the De Pauw prize in oratory. He and the Hon. A. J. Beveridge are the only two who have received this prize undivided.

Upon graduation he became minister of the new Burlington Circuit in the North Indiana Methodist Conference and after two years entered Boston University for his theological course. He received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in 1895 and during his student days served as pastor of the Congregational Church at Fairhaven, Mass. He then returned to the North Indiana Conference and was pastor two years at Dunkirk and two years at People's Church, Indianapolis, and was called to Sandwich in 1895.

He has during these thirty years given outstanding leadership in constructive thinking in religious education and in denominational loyalty. He is a clear thinker and a discriminating and forceful speaker and has been one of our most helpful leaders in all that has made Congregationalism distinctive in the state during his pastorate. He has been moderator and preacher of the State Conference, has served again and again on the State Board of Trustees, and has made his local association an example to the country in its program, its finances, and in the oversight given to its churches. During all these years Mrs. Lewis, who is a gracious, refined, resourceful personality, has made their home influence as great an asset in the community as the influence of her husband has been in the state.

It is not too much to say that every great movement in the Sandwich community during these years has found leadership in whole or in part in Dr. Lewis. At the spring meeting of his own Association and at the State Conference meeting held in Chicago, he was given an ovation and presented with books and other testimonials as an expression of the admiration and affection of his brethren. The Sandwich Church has just finished a week of celebration of the anniversary, and among other fine things done was the presentation to Dr. and Mrs. Lewis of a generous purse of gold. Those of us who have known Dr. Lewis during these thirty years can recall that when he began his pastorate he was deemed somewhat radical, but he has served long enough to know that his radicalism has been adopted by the rank and file of our churches. With the exception of the late Dr. Goodwin, pastor of the old First Church, Chicago, who served thirty-three years, Dr. Lewis' pastorate in Sandwich outranks any other in length.

* *

Dr. Charles H. Phillips of Jamestown, North Dakota, is the other honor man whom I have in mind. In one particular I think he has had a more difficult task than has Dr. Lewis. To my notion if a man had done nothing else than live in North Dakota for thirty years he is entitled to a gold medal. Perhaps all of us remember the story told of the boy who the night before his parents moved to North Dakota, closed his prayer with these words, "Good-bye, God, we're going to North Dakota." Dr. Phillips has stayed thirty years and I have never heard him complain of the climate, and he has blessed people every day of his stay.

Dr. Phillips was born in Fairfax, Va., and while he was very young the family moved to Cambridge, Ill. He became a member of the Congregational Church at Cambridge at sixteen years of age. He took his college course at Hamilton, Clinton, N. Y., and graduated from Auburn Seminary in 1885 and was shortly afterward ordained to the Presbyterian ministry. He has had two pastorates, both in North Dakota—one of ten years at Cummings and Buxton and the other at Jamestown. He came to Cummings in territorial days under a commission of the American Home Missionary Society. In those pioneer conditions he voiced a modern message and has kept a steady emphasis upon the real essentials of the Christian life. He has manifested a tolerant and sympathetic spirit that has endeared him, not only to his own community, but to the people of many surrounding communities. Among the large number who met to do him honor on his thirtieth anniversary were Protestant, Catholic, and those representative of no religious belief. One of the best addresses was made by a Roman Catholic priest, who said of Dr. Phillips, "His kindly word and deed have made life sweeter for us all."

Dr. Phillips has given himself in most conscientious pastoral service, not only to his own church, but to his community and his county. His health has never been robust, yet no journey has been too long, nor service too difficult for him to render. He has filled every office in the gift of the denomination in the state, and has been known as one of the most loyal and devoted of our fellowship. At the same time he has done everything that he could to bring about harmony among the denominations and to develop a spirit of church co-operation. During these thirty years Mrs. Phillips has made his home a real refuge, not only for her husband, but for the members of the Congregational constituency at large, who have had occasion to visit Jamestown. Other roses bestowed upon him in addition to the one given by the Catholic priest were, "Pastor of Stutsman County; friend of ours; Dr. Phillips has not been a pastor of Jamestown

Rev. Charles H. Phillips

(Continued on page 19)

The Progression in Our National Hymns

"America the Beautiful" the Latest in a Noble Line

By William Allen Knight

(EDITORS' NOTE—Just thirty years ago a coincidence occurred in the columns of "The Congregationalist" which is now of historic interest. In the spring of 1895 (March 28) an article was here published in honor of Samuel F. Smith, author of "America," then in his 87th year, in connection with a public tribute then paid him. In the summer of that year (July 4) this paper published "America—By Katharine Lee Bates," beginning, "O beautiful for halcyon skies." Changes in various words and lines were afterward made by the author, perfecting her work; but in form and spirit the stanzas were those of her now famous "America the Beautiful." In the following autumn (Nov. 18) "The Congregationalist" published an article entitled "The Passing On of Samuel F. Smith," his death having occurred two days before. This coincidence clearly shows an impressive fact not generally known. The new national song, now so widely prized, appeared just when the author of the older American classic was receiving public honors and ending his days. The following article celebrates this thirtieth anniversary of the publication of "America the Beautiful" by showing the remarkable succession in our great national songs.)

THE author of America the Beautiful, our latest treasure of national song, is now retiring from her Wellesley College professorship after forty years of service. This is a fitting time to appraise her gift's intrinsic value. The Congregationalist may well be chosen for doing so, since this jewel song was first set in array in its columns, now thirty years ago.

The excellences of this song, subdued as they are to utmost simplicity, are obvious. Why, then, attempt appraisal afresh? Because to see these only in and of themselves is to miss this gift's highest worth and meaning. For this song really registers a progression in our nation's thought and life —an emerging into a larger and finer outlook—and does so in a manner nothing short of the ancient prophets' way in voicing divine revelation. Indeed, the hall-mark of master workmen on all our great national songs is the same—registry of the spiritual outlook and discernment in their times.

It is when viewed in sequence and contemplated in comparison with the other major songs of America, bequeathed to us from bygone periods of our nation's life, that the highest charm of America the Beautiful is seen and adequately prized. No words can more surely guide to discernment of the progression registered in our national songs than these from a song of Israel: "There is a river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God." Such a river flows through them all. How its streams broaden and deepen in its ongoing!

"THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER"

The long struggle for independence—"the period of weakness," as John Fiske called it—was at last winning full recognition when, in 1814, Francis Scott Key, while watching our flag "through the perilous fight," scribbled on the back of a letter, The Star Spangled Banner. Its abounding war-time phrases visualized actualities of life for two consecutive generations of Americans. That song out of a long-vanished past has become evermore electric in American life. We spring to our feet at the first sound of its music!

But even in that chief song handed down from embattled early years, what do we find? At the end of its throbbing valiance, "the heaven-rescued band" is enjoined to "praise the Power that hath made and preserved us a nation"; and, sure of conquering "when our cause it is just," their motto shall be, "In God is our trust."

Thus, in our earliest national song permanently cherished, the "river" of trust in God as just and powerful, as making and preserving us a nation, shines out. Not very broad in those days? Deep it surely was—deep as human heroism in loving freedom and daring to achieve it through suffering can measure. "Our fathers trusted in Thee; they trusted and Thou didst deliver them."

"MY COUNTRY, 'TIS OF THEE"

When, in 1832, Samuel F. Smith, a student in the seminary on Andover Hill, wrote the second of the national songs now immortal, it was in a notably different strain. He sang of a "sweet land of liberty"—sang of love and rapture for its historic and its natural charms. He sang in terms of New England, to be sure; but he sounded such a pæan in praise of the secured blessings of liberty that our people everywhere caught it up and have proudly sung it to this day—in far regions of which "the Pilgrims" never dreamed, in teeming cities and sparse prairie hamlets where "rocks and rills, woods and templed hills" are for the most part hardly more than dreamed of.

In this "sweet freedom's song," the "river" is again seen, shining out in the last stanza as before. It is broadened now—its streams make glad the city of God. "Our fathers' God" is "author of liberty"—"our land" is "bright with freedom's holy light"—that it may continue so, "Protect us by thy might, great God, our King!" The deliverer is now the benefactor. "Happy is the people whose God is the Lord"!

But, broadened as the river now was in the abounding blessings of a land of secured liberty, a dire wrong was submerged in its bright expanse. There was not liberty for all! Millions were slaves. Because of that, the nation itself at length neared wreck. Was God to "make and preserve us a nation" and be the "author of liberty," only to watch his handiwork drive headlong to ruin because of a huge wrong imbedded in its life? The submerged wrong must be cleared away by deepening the river—only by deepening the river!

"THE BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC"

Another national song, registering this august progression with amazing exactitude, was sounded in 1861—sounded now in a woman's soul, being in effect an annunciation of "a new birth of freedom." When Julia Ward Howe, after seeing hosts of men in the light of camp fires near the nation's capital, arose from her bed that night to scrawl on chance paper the rhythmic words so strangely sounded amid the darkness in her brooding spirit—then, as truly as ever of old, "The Lord thundered in the heavens, and the Most High uttered his voice."

The Battle Hymn of the Republic is the deepest-going of our national songs. No last-stanza turning now, as in the two earlier songs, from the braved terrors of war or delight in the blessings of peace to God as deliverer or benefactor. From first line to last, "The Lord on high is mighty." In every line the master word is "He," "Him," "His." Throughout, in ceaseless reverberation, He is an ongoing God—"His truth, His day, our God is marching on." Deeps never approached in the two older masterpieces are fathomed now—by vivid flashes, unsparingly varied and repeated, of God as dauntless in requiring righteousness that does away with wrong—by an ethical personal ennoblement that cries back to his sounded trumpet, "Oh, be swift my soul to answer Him, be jubilant my feet!"—at last, after all "the fateful lightning" flashes, by the most tender outshining of love ever known! For, to leave nothing lacking, in this hymn glorying in God's resistless marching on against evil he will not abide, this old-time Unitarian woman sounds, for the first time in our national songs, the name of Christ—sings of the dying Christ, fathoming thereby the utmost deeps in the river of God's ongoing.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in his bosom that transfigures
you and me;
As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

When were the terrors of the Lord ever ended with more masterful lyric sweetness? Everywhere the loyal found this song registering their hearts' beating; they sang it, slavery was done away, and the nation saved.

After those days were over, a generation of vast vitality rounded out its life. It made marvelous material advances, developing the national domain, commerce, industries, immigration, means of travel, transportation, communication—developing centralized federal government to match it all. But still more wonderful were its advances in social consciousness and the accompanying moral urge. The "social gospel" gripped politics and legislation, education and business, literature and religion, as those thirty years went by. The glory of war faded in the glory of common life—of righting its wrongs and doing service in "social betterment." The Golden Rule was the standard raised against "the rule of gold." Brotherhood was acclaimed as practical.

"AMERICA THE BEAUTIFUL"

As a planet swings into place on time, so came now another national song. It glimmered into first view in 1895. Few recognized it as planetary then; but when certain scintillations were cleared away—lo, its glow was discerned to be the same as the glow in our nation's new life! Katharine Lee Bates, standing on Pike's Peak, had seen "the glory of the coming of the Lord" in the new day! Her America the Beautiful registered the nation's new progression in outlook of mind and spirit with stellar exactitude and charm!

No New England localism now, in depicting America's natural delights or historic hallowing; but sweeping strokes envisaging the whole of our widespread land, deft lines epitomizing periods of far-ranging history. Not "the Pilgrims" now, but "pilgrim feet" beating a thoroughfare for freedom across the wilderness; not "fathers" of Colonial ancestry, but "heroes proved in liberating strife"—in all our wars; not rural charms alone, but "alabaster cities"—supreme ministrants now to our people's thought and life.

And the spiritual progression here registered? As each stanza opens with a phase of all-America portrayal, each closes with a phase of the social betterment urge of this new time—always distinctly religious, always beginning with the name of God. For "there is a river" still holds true. First—

"God shed His grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood,"

and this, the all-mastering motif, is reverberated at the close. Next, unflinchingly,

"God mend thine every flaw,
Confirm thy soul in self-control,
Thy liberty in law."

Next, patiently now, it is—

"May God thy gold refine,
Till all success be nobleness,
And every gain divine."

At last, comes the prophetic tenderness with courage!

"O beautiful for patriot dream
That sees beyond the years,
Thine alabaster cities gleam
Undimmed by human tears."

For human tears can dim even alabaster! And they do now—they do, indeed! Is there any hope for the dimming of our finest and best by human tears—any reliance for social betterment that will wipe away human tears? Yes—"There is a river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God—"

"America, America,
God shed His grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood,
From sea to shining sea!"

The Author of a Great National Anthem

An Interview with Katharine Lee Bates

By Beatrice York Houghton

THE schoolroom was hot and crowded, and the clanging and roar of the city street came in at the open windows, making it difficult for the visitors to hear. All the morning the restless children had been droning over their lessons, listless and uninterested. In exasperation, the tired teacher asked, as a last resort:

"What shall we sing for our guests?"

Hands flew into the air, and fifty piping voices cried eagerly, "Amurrica the Beautiful. Amurrica the Beautiful! Oh, ple-ase!"

And now, as they sang, their eyes began to sparkle, and their voices became clear and earnest:

O beautiful for spacious skies,
For amber waves of grain,
For purple mountain majesties
Above the fruited plain!
America! America!
God shed his grace on thee
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea!

O beautiful for pilgrim feet,
Whose stern impassioned stress
A thoroughfare for freedom beat
Across the wilderness!
America! America!
God mend thine every flaw,
Confirm thy soul in self-control,
Thy liberty in law!

O beautiful for heroes proved
In liberating strife,
Who more than self their country loved
And mercy more than life!
America! America!
May God thy gold refine
Till all success be nobleness
And every gain divine!

O beautiful for patriot dream
That sees beyond the years
Thine alabaster cities gleam
Undimmed by human tears!
America! America!
God shed his grace on thee
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea!

During the singing, I had been watching a foreign woman who sat beside me. Her shawl had slipped back from her head, and she stood quiet, listening intently. As the noble anthem came to an end, she turned to me, with tears in her black eyes.

"So goot, thad song," she sighed. "Who made it, lady?"

* *

I determined to seek out the poetess who had thrilled and inspired all America with her songs. It is not easy to break into Miss Bates' busy hours for an interview.

"A reporter with whom I talked last year complained that all I would speak about was my dog. I will try to do better for you," she told me, laughingly.

Miss Bates is a hard-working college professor, and what with her Wellesley appointments, her writing, and her hosts of friends, she has little leisure time. Finally, one day we arranged for the time between luncheon and the Symphony. I awaited her in her study.

It is a restful, peaceful place, Miss Bates' study. A long, low, cheerful room. Four huge, old-fashioned bookcases against the walls, and between them, open shelves of books. Books on the table, chairs, and couch. Books in a revolving case near the center of the room. A typewriter beside the great desk in one corner, and a dictionary on a stand. On the walls, pictures of Spain and Egypt. One unusually good water color; a marine by Woodbury. A dull green scarab fastened to the lintel of the mantel piece. Harmonious colorings in rug and curtains, comfortable chairs. The room is a combination of workroom and library, with an atmosphere which seems to whisper, "Here are born lovely thoughts."

While I waited, I could hear Miss Bates talking to Polonius, who has a perch in the window of the dining-room. This worthy parrot belonged to a friend who did not want him. Whenever people in Wellesley have pets they do not want, they send them to Miss Bates, who has described some of her many favorites in her book, Sigurd. Hamlet, the big collie, and an important member of the household, walked sedately in and coming over to me, laid his head upon my knee. But though trusting me this far, his eyes showed him to be uneasy and restless. Hamlet is a well-chosen name for him.

THE INTERVIEW

"I'm sorry to be late," Miss Bates said, as she hurried in. "I had a taxi, and left it waiting while I completed an errand in the village. When I returned for it, two of the college girls were there, and said they had to have it or they would be late to class. So, what could I do? Of course I let them take it. Consequently I must be busy for a moment."

Absorbed in some papers, she did not speak again directly, and I was glad of the opportunity this gave me to look at her. A calm face, rather tired, for life has not led her along easy paths, but lit with a spiritual glow that nothing can overshadow. I thought of some lines from her poem, A Mountain Soul. Though she had written this of her friend, Katherine Coman, it seemed to me that all unwittingly the author had revealed herself.

Remote she dwells 'mid her Celestial kin,
Rainbow and Moon and Cloud, yet none the less Full many a weak earth creature shelters in Her friendliness.

She comrades with the child, the bird, the fern,
Poet and sage and rustic chimney nook,
But Pomp must be the pilgrim ere he earn
Her mountain look.

Her mountain look, the candor of the snow,
The strength of folded granite and the calm
Of choiring pines whose swayed green branches strow
A healing balm.

"Now," she said, turning at last to face me, "what would you most like to have me tell you?"

"When did you begin to write, Miss Bates?" I ventured. "People seem interested n maiden efforts. What was yours?"

"I never had any," she answered shortly. I was born and spent my childhood in Falmouth, on Cape Cod. Some of my poems eflect that atmosphere. My father, a minster, died when I was three years old. My lder brother went to work when he was ixteen, and by his self-sacrificing efforts I vas put through college. I have repaid the noney, but I never can repay his kindness. This preamble is to show you that I have lways had to work. Immediately upon my graduation I began to teach,—have taught ll my life, except for my four Sabbatical years abroad, and this past year at home. Never worried much about getting things published; was always too busy."

"But how about your first printed work, Miss Bates?"

"Oh, I suppose my maiden effort might be called the poem Sleep, published in the Atlantic Monthly during my sophomore year at college. Four of us were taken to call on Mr. Longfellow, and he was good enough to commend it. Then there was Rose and Thorn. The circumstances under which I wrote that story might interest you.

COMPENSATIONS OF QUARANTINE

"I had been closely occupied with my teaching. In the Christmas vacation of 1889 I went to Stamford to visit the daughter of Rev. Mr. Scoville. New Year's morning his two boys, one of whom has recently published Stay-at-Home Adventures, having poked over an old pile of clothing which they found in the woods, both contracted smallpox. The doctors said that it would be all right to go back to my classes, but when I arrived in Boston, I was met by a telegram saying that the smallpox was of malignant type. I was at a loss where to go. I decided to get lodging for the night and to see a physician in the morning.

"It seemed strange to be going about from house to house, asking a night's lodging. It was growing late, which added to the strangeness. But people were very kind; and the kinder they were, the more anxious I was to find their rooms unsatisfactory, as I did not think it would be right to give such nice people the smallpox. Finally I came to a house where the woman was so disagreeable, so suspicious because of the late hour, and so exorbitant in her charges, that I felt if she contracted smallpox it would serve her right. I stayed in her house.

"I saw my doctor in the morning, and soon afterward I found myself ensconced in two attics—one for myself, and one in which my things were to be fumigated. Twenty-eight days lay before me to be spent in idleness, and I had never been idle. I was appalled at the prospect. To make matters worse, Mr. Scoville, endeavoring to be kind, had tucked a quantity of honeycomb into my trunk, which was forwarded to me. Of course it had broken all over my belongings!"

Miss Bates paused, a humorous twinkle in her eyes at the memory of that experience. Presently she went on:

"My vaccination was effective, and my friends wrote me letters bidding me a last farewell. Some of the letters were absurdly gloomy. I grew demoralized. Reading was my only refuge, and presently in The Congregationalist I found the notice of a prize contest. I sent out for a stock of writing materials. At last I had something with which to occupy myself, and I worked hard over the story. It took the prize of seven hundred dollars. Not much money nowadays, but it seemed a small fortune to me. On that money I took my first trip abroad.

"Though from undergraduate days I occasionally printed verses, as well as stories and essays, in various periodicals, my first published book of poems was issued only ten years ago. Meanwhile I was writing what publishers asked for—text-books, editions of English classics (over twenty of those), an account of the early English drama, a history of American literature.

"There were travel books, too, as an outcome of the years abroad—one about England and two about Spain. There are two more coming. I have a deep love for Spain, which is only exceeded by my love for England. Miss Coman and I drove through the western counties one summer, all the way from Gretna Green to Land's End, while I was writing up the literary traditions of these sections. But most of my many months in England have been spent in her libraries, the Bodleian and the British Museum. My most laborious book, and naturally the one least read, a study of that red-faced old worthy, Thomas Heywood, used to anchor me there. As for poetry, America the Beautiful had gathered up all my adult poems to 1911 that I cared to save, and five years later I collected my children's verses into the volume, Fairy Gold. Then there is The Retinue, which contains war poems and some nature poems. A group of poems in remembrance of my friend of friends, Katherine Coman, is ready; but these touch my life so deeply that I may decide to issue them privately, though I want them accessible to all who cared for her."

She would not talk a great deal about America the Beautiful. She and some friends had gone up Pike's Peak and the vision from that great height exalted her soul into poetic fervor. The wide stretches of country—her country—the dizzy height which set her above it all, gave her a God-like inspiration, and the lines which came into her mind were remembered, afterward to be set down. And now, with three others, it ranks as a national anthem. Not only do children spontaneously love it, but all true Americans are swayed by its rhythm and the grandeur of its phrasing. It has been set to music by over fifty composers; and of all the melodies it has inspired and to which it has been sung, perhaps the favorite is the beautiful hymn tune known as Materna, which stirred the foreign woman into questioning me.

"And now I must go," announced Miss Bates. "Perhaps I should have been more formal and conventional in my answers to your questions."

But Miss Bates had given me something infinitely more precious and interesting than she realized, in letting me glimpse her real self. I had seen Katharine Lee Bates, the woman, unselfish, indefatigable, with time for her pets, her students, her travel, her friends, and writing poetry which is destined to live. In spite of everyday care and drudgery, in spite of her experience of trouble and despair, Katharine Lee Bates has never lost her unconquerable spirit; she has never lost sight of "the purple mountain majesties above the fruited plain."

For lovely is a mountain, rosy-lit
With dawn, or steeped in shadow, azure-hot,
But loveliest when shadows traverse it
And stain it not.

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Millionaire-Washerladies

There was a Ship whereon I sailed, and Keturah with me. And we were many weeks aboard. And there was on the Ship a Laundry where we might send our Clothes in hope that sometime we might receive them back again clean. But as the winter passed by, and the summer came on, the Clothes Accumulated, and the women who wrought in the Laundry were Overwhelmed. And the heat therein was great. And the women who were Passengers began washing out their own Stockings and Handkerchiefs. And the Stockings they hanged up to dry, and the Handkerchiefs they plastered up on their mirrors to dry and then folded them neatly. And some of them borrowed Electrick Irons and laundered their own Dresses and the underwear of their Husbands.

And Laundry Work among Prosperous Women grew to be a Very Popular Indoor Sport, almost as popular as Bridge, and even more useful.

And it became a Frequent topick of Conversation, so that they inquired one of another, saying, Didst thou launder that dress that thou hast on? And they were very proud to answer that they had done so. And in well nigh every Cabin was stretched a Clothes Line, and when ladies appeared on deck a little late, they said, I have been washing out our Underwear, and it is just Lots of Fun, and the Garments are all hanged up and drying, and behold, they look fine.

Now Keturah did her full share of this with the wives of the other Millionaires, and she also enjoyed it. And she had come prepared with a dozen little Clothespins for use in such emergencies.

And I thought as I heard the women talking about their Laundry Work and telling with pride how well it had been done, that it would be well for some of them if they would keep up the habit, after their return home.

For I have known women, and some men, who had nothing to do but to sit down and think about their Health or their Sorrows or how Overworked they were, and I could have wished for their own souls' good and their friends' comfort that they had done their own washing. There be many women and some men who would get joy and health out of daily dozen exercises on the washboard. For few people break down through overwork, but multitudes get sick feeling their own pulses and they break down through having too little to do.

A Matter of National Honor

Have We Fulfilled Our Obligation to the Indian?

By William B. Pinkerton
Mission, South Dakota

IT is the Fourth of July. I am a missionary, a man whose concern it is to interpret to a race of men untutored in modern and civilized ways the ideals of Christian America in faith, in morals, and in worthy and profitable conduct of life. In my home there sat two days ago a genuinely noble-hearted Sioux Indian, an ordained priest of his church, thoughtful, sincere, patient of spirit, and not uneducated. He spoke of some present trials and of days now gone forever for the Indian. He told how his wife made bitter warfare on flies, against which a great, rich people had not been able sufficiently to fortify his home. Then with some, perhaps unintended and unconscious, pathos he told how once in the past his people were able to often change the camp, to choose clean and shady places to abide in, by cool flowing streams, how flies were unknown, how the tipi was ever well ventilated, and how the people were well and tuberculosis and many another scourge were unfeared. In the manner of his speech was no hint of accusation. He is sincerely loyal to the Christian faith he has received and preaches. But none the less there wrestled in his soul the unreconciled factors of a great problem.

The large outstanding factor of it is expressed by the word "dispossession." So my friend felt it. The white man now has those pleasant camping places—most of them. It is literally true. For three centuries this (to the Indian) cruel process has been going on. From the fertile valleys of the eastern coast, from the forested regions of the east central regions, from the flower-decked prairies, from the vine-clad, sunny vales of the Pacific slope, from nooks and corners, windswept plateaus, and dark vistas of tall firs and pines, the resistless movement of an advancing civilization has swept the Indian. It is useless, perhaps, to try to recount the wrongs inseparable from the process. The pen of Helen Hunt, flaming from the vehemence of a woman's instinctive revolt against injustice, told a little of the story, of a ruthless greed, of broken treaties, of suffering men and heart-broken women,—told it as it can never be told again, and the nation has all but forgotten the tale.

The Sioux

And do we dare hope that today this modest effort can turn a few thoughtful minds to a present-day instance of this process? It concerns the Sioux, once sturdy, self-reliant occupiers of an empire. In Iowa, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Minnesota, and in fringes of Wyoming and Montana they made their camps. They thought—and white men confirmed the thought—that the land was theirs. To this day they feel it so. But they could not escape the encroachment of the advancing frontier. The Sioux also must be driven back. From Iowa and Minnesota across the Big Sioux. From Nebraska almost wholly, from all but a fragment of eastern Dakota, from the Black Hills, from the Yellowstone, to a reservation with meets and bounds, the Great Sioux; then from wide areas of that to lesser reservations, contracted and local, and then—what, it seems, may become the means of a final exploitation of the Indian's land—to the individual allotment.

Think for a moment of the child-like native, son of his own wide nature empire, forced back step by step until at last he finds himself cooped up on a tiny bit of land, mayhap miles from anywhere, just 160 rods square. What matters it if it be the finest of soil, out of which a stolid German or a canny Scot would grow rich! What does your red man know of that? The long winding valley he knows, with its singing current, the shaded bottom lands for his ponies, the scrub-oak copses of the coulees, covert of wild fowl, the swelling upland dotted brown with buffalo; but this absurd thing, the allotment, far back there on the flat, no water, no wood, no shelter from storms of winter or hot blasts of summer, and there out of that bit of land the Indian to make his living! I remember, and I do not wonder at it, how strenuous effort and what measure of subtle force at the paying teller's window of the Agency it required, ten years ago, to compel the Indian to leave the camp in the valley by his loved stream and go to his allotment. Logs for his tipi he must haul, maybe for miles. Water he must get as he can. He must have a barbed wire fence, abomination of the Indian only more than of the white man. It is not home, it is a place to stay when he cannot be elsewhere. The allotment is just another form of the irresistible compulsion.

On the Rosebud are about eight thousand of these allotments. Most of them contain 160 acres each, some 320 acres. Every man and woman and every boy and girl over seven years of age has or has had his portion. Normally each allotment is held by a trust patent in the care of the Secretary of the Interior pending the time when the allotee shall be adjudged competent to hold his fee title. Thus the Indian is supposedly safeguarded in continuing possession of his tiny bit of the once imperial common domain.

But—and must there ever be a "but"?—with the allotments made, there was a surplus of land! What to do with it? What but to sell it to the white man. Get the Indian some money. So that was done—nearly twenty years ago in Gregory County, fifteen years ago in Tripp County, eleven years ago in Mellette County. The homesteader appeared. On the Indian's old trail and camp site now are farms, fences, houses, barns, towns, and railroads. The newcomers are industrious, thrifty, successful. They are not content with the homestead, they are land hungry. By lease, by purchase, they take over more land. They pay good money. The Indian once rich in land becomes rich in money; funds accumulate to his credit. The Indian who knows not this new-fangled value of the land as does the white man, does soon learn the value of money. It can be spent. It will buy many things, from a bauble or a meal to a shining automobile. So the bargain counter for land is popular with both sides. On the one side is the eager and often shrewd and sometimes dishonest white man, land hungry; on the other side is the red man at his real estate tether's end, ready and often eager to sell his last fragment of the old, inexhaustible, and wondrously rich domain, to sell it for a price in money which may, indeed, be fair in the market but which to the Indian will mean six months or a year of comfortable living and then poverty and drifting, unless perchance, he can turn temporarily to another piece of land. For in each family, you see, are two allotments, the father's and the mother's. There may also be inherited land, a deceased child's or a parent's. These inherited allotments are more readily salable, and it is these in the main that at present are on the market. But not wholly so. In the last few years hundreds of living allotees have sold their personal holdings and 95 per cent. of all the allotments would be sold if the fee titles could be got. Of the eight thousand allotments on this reservation probably one-fourth have already passed into the possession of whites.

And the funds are gone. Not a dollar of Rosebud tribal funds remains on deposit to the credit of the tribe. On the average, within a year of the sale of individual tracts of land the money so obtained is gone, and thus it is constantly more menacingly true that the present allotees are on their tiny bits of land, there to stay and there to dig to get their living, or to sell and live riotously for a time and then to beg or to starve.

Right there is the opening today for the missionary to the Rosebud Indian. That red brother is at his last ditch. The white man should realize that he has dug that ditch. Now will he help the Indian over it?

It is the Fourth of July. The day marks a great gift of freedom to a nation. But it has little vital meaning as yet to the Sioux. What I have written means that since 1868 this once free man has been coming into a subtle bondage, the burden of which he is now beginning to feel. He is impatient for more liberty. He reads of proposals to "turn the Indian loose," and he thinks he would like to be turned loose. As any man, he wants freedom. But he does not know, for we have not taught him, that liberty comes from within. It means self-adjustment and efficient adjustment to environment. In our civilization it means intelligent and rewarding work in agreement with the world around. And that the Sioux Indian on his allotment has not attained. The nation has no more sacred duty than to give to the Sioux whom it has driven back into this last corner, the allotment, the freedom which can only come from the skill and habit of successful toil. In plain words, it must help him to keep and to farm his land.

The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches

I. The Catholics Look On

By Professor Daniel Evans, D.D.
Harvard Theological School

ONE unexpectedly interesting and significant feature of the present theological controversies in some Protestant churches is the way the Catholics look on, the remarks they utter, and the lessons they draw. The secular press has contained some striking articles by them and one religious organ of the church has run a series of front-page articles, with editorial comment. The Catholics look on, not simply upon those parties and churches in controversy, but upon all the Protestant churches, and observe many things, and make the most of them for their own educational purposes. It is well to realize that we are always under their observation, and it is worth while for us to look upon them, too. The observed should become observers.

As one reads these articles and editorial comments, he finds that there is not a little self-congratulation. The Catholics are not like those other religious folk, in grave controversy. They are not like them uncertain about some things, differing in many things, and without any one authority to give them certainty in all things, and settle their differences. They are not subject to modern intellectual influences. They have the faith, the deposit of truth, and the infallible interpreter, and so they are safe and quiet. One, however, cannot escape the feeling that the reason there is no intellectual unrest, difference, and controversy in the Catholic Church is because effective means and methods are employed to prevent independent thinking and to crush it out if it arises. The old Romans made a desert solitude where they fought and called it peace. And the Catholic Church has done the same whenever independent thinking has arisen. Intellectual peace may come from stagnation, or from the free functioning of the mind in thinking the thoughts of God after him.

Nevertheless, as the Catholics look on, they cannot be altogether complacent. After all, their faithful are not so safe. They are exposed to these modern intellectual influences. They read the newspapers and the magazines and learn what other people are thinking. There is a free trade in ideas, however much the church may believe in, and try to carry out, protective measures. Catholics, like Protestants, come under the influences of modern thought. They discuss these matters amongst themselves and also with non-Catholics. They raise questions and do some thinking on these matters for themselves. Therefore the church scents the dangers involved. The leaders endeavor to safeguard them. They are frequently very much on the defensive. Much of their writings is apologetic in purpose. No intelligent man, however, can escape the influence of modern thought if he has an open mind and desires to prove all things and hold fast to the good.

We observe, too, that while there is more sympathy with the Fundamentalists than with the Modernists, yet both are considered to be in error. Neither the one group nor the other escapes censure; both are wrong; all outside the one holy Catholic Church are in error; they cannot but be misguided. And not only these two parties, but all the Protestant churches, even the Anglican, and the Eastern Catholic Church, also, are in error. They are not true to the faith; they are not loyal to the One Church; they are not faithful to the Christ. On the principle that misery loves company, we ought to have more sympathy with one another in our Protestant churches, while the Catholics look on.

The Catholics who look on think they alone have the faith; they alone are right; they alone can be certain on all matters of faith and conduct. Such an attitude cannot but raise many questions in our minds. There are some matters more fundamental than those now in controversy in Protestant churches. It may be well worth while to turn our thought to these more fundamental matters, to see if the Catholic observers are so right, and the observed Protestants are, after all, so wrong. Indeed, we shall discover that the primary reason for controversies in the Protestant churches is because there are many Catholic remainders in Protestantism, and if we were really thoroughgoing Protestants we would have few, if any, of these controversies.

Cambridge, Mass.

Universal Peace

By Nellie H. Evans

America, dear native land,
With strength of soul awake! arise!
Stretch forth to all the world thy hand,
And prove the pow'r that in thee lies.
The night is gone; far nations see
The shining heights of dawning day,—
Dear land of light and liberty,
Go forth and lead the upward way;
Bid every wrong and turmoil cease,
Proclaim the universal peace.

Long has Oppression's cruel weight
Wrought pain and anguish on the earth,
Grim-visaged war, low greed and hate
Have left their trail of death and dearth.
But now awakened conscience cries,
New visions speak the future good,
Dear land of ours awake! arise!
And sing the world-wide brotherhood.
Guide weary peoples to release,
Proclaim the universal peace.

America, dear noble land,
Thy gentle plains and verdant hills
Thy rocks and woods, thy waters grand
All speak with joy that ever thrills.
O Country fair, awake! arise!
To farthest isles reveal thy face,
Put radiance into saddened eyes,
Give freely of thy wealth and grace.
Dear favored land, thy love increase,
Proclaim the universal peace.

New Departures in Japan

Political and Religious Progress

By Hilton Pedley

WHILE Moroccans, Abyssinians, and Mohammedans are striking boldly for freedom from their white masters in Europe and Africa, the Japanese are intent upon quite a different problem, one that is of a domestic nature, but no less perplexing on that account. This problem is that of securing the maximum of individual liberty under a government of law and order, one which is founded upon the theory of an Imperial House established by Divine right and thus in theory above all constitutional or other restraints. The constitution is a gift from the Imperial Sovereign to his people and may be withdrawn at any time. Practically, then, those in high government positions are sweating under the by no means easy task of so stretching the imperial tent that a hustling nation of sixty millions can not only walk but even run and play within, and neither tear up the stakes nor burst open the sides.

The year 1925 will rank side by side with 1873, 1889, 1894, and 1904 in the matter of new departures. The first of these dates marked the complete break-up of the old policy of isolation and the end of feudal rule, the second saw the dawn of constitutional government in the Far East; the third witnessed Japan's successful bid for supremacy in the Eastern Hemisphere; the fourth hailed the nation as triumphant in her first great conflict with a mighty Western power; and today there is before us the unique spectacle of an Oriental people rejoicing in the newly acquired privilege of manhood suffrage.

The Treaty with Russia

Some quite remarkable things have happened within the past four months. After a rather stormy series of negotiations with Soviet Russia, during which it seemed as if a break might occur any day, late winter brought the news of a treaty ready for signature and ratification, and later still the final steps were taken, for which our rulers, as well as the man on the street, have felt exceedingly grateful. It meant a new outlet for large commercial enterprises, a return to the former convenience of travel across the Siberian plains to European lands, and it held out hopes of a new friendship for the power with whom Japan has had most to fear for many a long day, and because of whom she shed much precious blood just twenty years ago. But the result has not been joy alone. Anxiety also has followed, for not only the merchants of both lands but the thinkers of these same countries are to have a new opportunity. Soviet ideas will seek determined entrance into these islands, and a government already worried over the increasing influence of the proletariat is wondering whither the new order will lead.

It is not surprising, therefore, that while the gate has been thrown open, the fences have been strengthened, and guards have been stationed even at the portals. In other words, our authorities have said to their Russian friends, "You may come in freely but we shall exercise the privilege of deciding upon what you may bring with you, and one thing that shall be most closely watched is your communistic ideas. You may bring them to the border but our people will be instructed accordingly." Hence arose what is now well known as the "Peace Preservation Bill," and it has provoked long and sometimes bitter discussion in both houses of Parliament. It has passed, however, and appears to many to be a doubtful weapon for a government to wield in these days of democratic aspiration. Note the first article in the bill, for it is pivotal: "Any one who has organized a society with the object of altering the national constitution, or the form of government, or of repudiating the private property system, or has joined such an organization with full knowledge of its object, shall be liable to imprisonment with or without hard labor for a term not exceeding ten years." To some of us it would seem as if the government has imbibed Mr. Bryan's fear of evolution, believing that Japanese constitutions and governments were given in the first place by an almighty fiat, to question which would be a most impious act, and to change which would be possible only in the case of the eternal one changing his mind. It came out in discussion, however, that this did not exclude discussion of said subjects, provided the government's consent were obtained.

Manhood Suffrage

In contrast to the above, the new Manhood Suffrage law seems a veritable Magna Charta. Ten million people have been added to the electorate at one stroke, increasing the proportion of voters to population from five per cent. to nearly twenty-five. Property qualifications have been abolished, the voting age is retained at twenty-five, that of candidates increased to thirty, and a year of continued residence in a given place is required. Not yet do ladies come within the charmed circle. Stalwart pleas were made for their admission by parliamentary gallants, but the government smiled blandly and said, "Theoretically you are right. There is no objection per se to the fair sex having a vote, and should be none, but we think that the time is still unripe for putting this theory into practice. Another time, please." Thirty-five years ago the official attitude was very similar in regard to the higher education of women. It changed rapidly, however, and it may not be too much to hope that another decade will see an enlarging of the franchise to admit these same women, who, because of higher education, are beginning to forge ahead in business, professional life, and general scholarship. Titled personages, and all receiving help from their friends or relatives on account of poverty are ruled out. It is to be understood, of course, that the above privileges and prohibitions relate only to the elections for the Lower House. On May 5 a magnificent demonstration in commemoration of the promulgation of the bill was held in front of one of the large hotels in Tokyo.

Thus far in this article we have seen clearly that a tremendous change is taking place in our political and social environment, the full significance of which only time itself will reveal. In the face of increasing restrictions upon freedom of speech and action on the one hand, and the unprecedented extension of the voting power on the other, we may well watch closely the new program in the hope that it may make ample provision for both a large measure of individual liberty and a due observance of the laws of the realm.

Nor has the matter of an alien holding property been left untouched. In 1910 a bill permitting the purchase and sale of land actually passed both Houses, but because of the Korean amalgamation soon after, and the later upset caused by the terrible war, the necessary imperial ordinance was withheld and the bill never became law. In the present cases, also, such an ordinance will be necessary, and there seems to be no reason to doubt that it will speedily be forthcoming. There are certain conditions attached concerning which there is much criticism, but we have no time to enter into that just now. Ambitious aliens can quickly obtain possession of copies of the bill and act accordingly. We anticipate no covered wagon rush to a land whose waste places do not tempt even its own nationals.

The Empress of Japan at Doshisha University, Kyoto

Before turning to the religious world we gladly give a paragraph to the visit of Her Majesty, the Empress, in December, 1924, to the Doshisha, Japan's oldest Christian school, founded by the great Niijima, and now overflowing with nearly 5,000 students—boys and girls—in high schools, in colleges, and in the university. The visit had been long expected and was well prepared for. The president, teachers, and pupils were well coached for the occasion, even the subjects to be taught in her presence, the questions to be asked by the teachers in charge at the critical moment, the prayer to be offered by the president at the chapel exercises, being arranged for in advance, so that nothing unseemly should occur.

We were absent at the time but understand that everything went off without a hitch, that the imperial lady was more than pleased as the result of her short inspection, and that all present were much impressed by her gracious attitude and thoughtful consideration for every one concerned. And now, as I write, the arches are again going up, this time in honor of the Crown Prince and Regent, who is on an extended tour to this western part of Japan and whose imperial parents are soon to celebrate their silver wedding anniversary.

A Buddhist Celebration

In the religious world, various activities have either come and gone or are in course of prosecution. In Buddhist circles, our city was recently stirred by the annual gathering of the priests of the Jodo (Pure Land) sect to the most beautiful of all our temples. The occasion was the commemoration of the death of an ancient sage, and the ceremonies were impressively brilliant, drawing large numbers daily to witness the spectacle. In connection with Buddhism the experience of a few days ago may be interesting. Seven of us made a pilgrimage to a famous temple eight hours distant by rail, auto, and on foot. Situated almost 3,000 feet above sea level, and at the top of a winding pass that presented the unique sight of an almost continuous procession of pilgrims, it has the distinction of being the burial place of Kobo Daishi, a religious scholar, who some 1,100 years ago came home from a long period of study in China, and, wandering to this hill-top, proceeded to found there that mysterious sect called Shingon, which even today claims a host of followers and urges its believers to the attainment of a life from which all unworthy elements have been excluded, and the soul is at peace in those spiritual activities that a perfect reflection of the character of Buddha can produce. Moreover, this good priest, being of a practical turn of mind, introduced further the Japanese syllabary, which through the years has been such a boon to the uneducated masses unable to read the difficult Chinese characters, which at that time were the only vehicle for communicating ideas. And finally he brought about the union of Buddhism and Shintoism, which paved the way for a ready acceptance of the former in a land where hitherto it had been regarded in the light of a foreign intruder.

We spent a rainy Sunday at the temple. At 5 A.M. we attended morning chapel in the place of worship within our monastery. From 6.30 till 10 we listened to an exposition from a learned professor of the college near-by, of some of the teachings peculiar to the saint, and then in the afternoon two of us took part in the ceremony of initial baptism in one of the temples some distance away. It was called "The Baptism of Establishing Spiritual Relation with Buddha" and from the intense moral appeal at the beginning to the final ceremony of receiving on the head a thin bamboo stick dipped in water, was most impressive. It compared favorably with some High Church Episcopal and Catholic displays that we have seen. The reaching out of the Oriental for the spiritual, as opposed to the material, was finely symbolized.

Christian Progress

But our readers will ask, "What of Christian Movements?" These, too, are going on apace. First and foremost is the nationwide evangelistic campaign, organized in the fall of 1924 and put into operation in January of the present year. Scheduled to continue for six months ending with June 30, it looks now as if an extension of time may be necessary. Suitable times and seasons vary in different districts, so that it is impossible to have all activities simultaneous, and the program is fairly large. We are in full swing now, influential centers have been selected, and while there has been no attempt at the spectacular, fine addresses along Christian educational lines have been given and have received cordial and appreciative attention. The National Christian Council, or N. C. C. as it is commonly called here, has been organized for not more than a year and a half, and this campaign has been in the nature of a practical demonstration of unity on the part of many denominations in presenting the essentials of the Christian message.

The Christian Literature Society (C. L. S.), child of the Federation of Christian Missions, is no longer a new organization. Our own Dr. Gulick had much to do with its inception more than 20 years ago, and it has been much before our mission boards of America, demanding justly a whole-hearted support. At its annual meeting in August of last year, it was voted to transfer the work of the society to the N. C. C. just as soon as the proper adjustments, financial and otherwise, could be made. Negotiations have since been going on between the executives of both bodies, and the end is not yet. The move is a radical one and time is needed to accomplish the end in view. In the meantime the matter of a central building for practically all of our interdenominational activities is before us. There are signs that the near future may see our hopes realized in this direction, and considerable money is said to be available, but the details involved are of such a nature that it has been deemed wise to defer definite action till the annual meeting this year, when the pros and cons can be satisfactorily threshed out in council assembled.

Our older workers are fast passing away. January saw the going of Dr. Uemura, the outstanding leader of the Presbyterian Church, Japan. He was a member of that famous band of young men whom Dr. S. R. Brown of the Dutch Reformed Church gathered about him in the early seventies. He has been pastor of perhaps the strongest church organization in the land for many years, he was the editor of the denominational organ and recognized as one of our foremost writers, and he was prominent in interdenominational conference. He was singularly independent, sometimes hard to get along with, and in theological work preferred to establish an institution of his own to which he attracted a considerable number of bright young students. On the whole he was conservative in his views, but had his eyes ever towards the light. Verily a great man has fallen in Israel.

Our own Miss Barrows entered into rest on March 13, five months after she had departed from the land of fruitful labor for forty-eight years. She will long be remembered by those Japanese ladies whom she so carefully trained for years in the weekly Bible class, and who turned out in force to share in the memorial service held in the Kobe Church.

Kyoto, Japan,
May 13, 1925.

Sometimes

Across the fields of yesterday
He sometimes comes to me,
A little lad just back from play—
The lad I used to be.

And yet he smiles so wistfully
Once he has crept within,
I wonder if he hopes to see
The man I might have been.

—Thomas S. Jones, Jr.

ALONG OUR STREAM OF FREEDOM

(Ps. 126)

What minister is there who does not once in a while like to try his hand on another congregation than his own? And perhaps the people like the change quite as well, if not better! Perhaps that is one of the reasons why I recently accepted an invitation to spend a Sunday in Washington City. It was early in May, and in the metropolis there were few signs that spring had come. But a sweep down through the fields of Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, and Maryland furnished sufficient life and color to impress the most skeptical that, although spring lingered in the lap of winter, we were not after all to have a summerless year. Arriving at the capital one is impressed immediately with the contrast between it and the metropolis. For one thing there is less crowding, less bustle, more open space, more breadth of street and avenue in Washington than in New York, and the change is most welcome. But on the Sabbath morning Washington is wide awake earlier than Gotham, where the custom of late sleeping on the Sabbath seems incorrigibly fixed. Early Sunday morning in Washington, after the Southern custom, the people are awake, and it is possible to have Sunday schools before the morning service rather than after. And that is good pedagogy, for the child mind is more active in the morning than in the afternoon.

Lincoln Temple

In almost all the northern cities colored Congregational churches name themselves after Lincoln. Certainly it is appropriate that in Washington, where Lincoln dipped his pen in the blood of his heart and wrote the Emancipation Proclamation, there should be a Lincoln Temple. I had the privilege of preaching there that Sunday morning in early May. It is located in the northwestern part of the city, where the better element of the Negro people are congregated. As I went on my way to church the streets were thronged with colored people on their way to their respective places of worship. They were well dressed, happy, and prosperous looking. Although the rain had come, the Temple was full, men, women, and children composing the group, with a great preponderance of young men. The chorus choir, well drilled, reverent and attentive, sang well. It was a Communion day, and it was worth going a long way to hear the choir leading the audience in singing, "I Want to Be a Christian in My Heart," while the elements were being distributed. The preacher of the morning found a hearty response in the audience as he endeavored to set forth the best way to overcome difficulties. What race has a better chance to develop character by overcoming difficulties than the black?

Howard University

Dr. Cravath founded Fisk at Nashville, General Armstrong organized Hampton at Old Point Comfort, and General Howard gave to the colored school at Washington his name. President Coolidge is authority for the statement that Howard University was begun in a prayer meeting, and in the First Congregational Church. It is located on a high eminence overlooking the colored section and the entire city. It has a budget of half a million a year, and enrolls over 2,000 students in collegiate, theological, medical, and law departments. It is the best equipped university in the world for the colored race. The Rankin Memorial Chapel is the place of worship for the university. A weekly vesper service is held Sunday afternoons, at which the fine chorus choir usually sings, and an invited speaker is heard. It was my privilege to be the speaker for that day. I can bear testimony to the quality of the worshiping group as they responded to his appeal for men of culture, character, and consecration for service in every part of the land.

PLYMOUTH CHURCH

The colored Congregational churches of Washington are certainly to be congratulated on their names. I have spoken of Lincoln; there is another by the name of the People's Church, which I did not have time to visit on this particular Sunday, but which is flourishing under the leadership of Rev. James Brown, formerly of Anniston, Ala. Then there is Plymouth, named probably after Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, in honor of the great work of Beecher for the colored race. Rev. J. C. Olden is now the pastor there in succession to Rev. A. C. Garner, who is doing yeoman service at Grace Church in New York. It fell to the lot of the visitor to speak there at the closing service of the day. It was Mother's Day, and I felt strangely moved to speak on the making, the treatment, and the duty of mothers. I was struck with the response I felt in the emotion for higher motherhood. There is no race that has a more tender sense of motherhood than the colored race. What great mothers this race has produced. Take my own mother. She was a slave. She could not read or write. And yet somehow she espoused the central things of life: religion, home, education, progress! Where did she get these things? There is only one answer. Taught of God!

A COLORED CATHEDRAL

Leaving the capital at midnight and thinking over the one overwhelming impression of the day, I found it brought home to me that there ought to be in Washington a great colored Congregational cathedral church. I join most heartily in the appeal now being made for a million dollars for a cathedral Congregational church, which in the nature of the case will be for the white. I would sugg that we add another quarter of a million fo similar church for the colored. Under leadership of Rev. R. W. Brooks the Linc Temple has outgrown its present quarters, a is longing for a larger edifice. The three c ored churches of Washington have a total me bership of about 1,500. Were I a bishop, would put these three in one great church the present fine site of Lincoln, which star midway betwen the two others, organize c great staff of workers, and unify the appeal our churches for the race. With this unity a an adequate church plant, the effect of t center would be far-reaching, particularly view of the fact that such a large number the Howard University students attend t Lincoln Temple already. What monume would be more worthy of Lincoln himse Yes; let those who are planning the cathed build two, one for the white and one for t colored.

HENRY HUGH PROCTOR.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Vital Questions for Congregationalists

To Come Before the National Council in October

"Let Us Not Confuse Ourselves"

I am sending you a brief answer or two on some of the questions which have been raised concerning matters which will come before the next National Council.

The Next Moderator. I wish that some brother in the Middle West would speak up in an audible tone and nominate a layman of character, ability, force, and devotion from somewhere west of New York. That good old principle of alternating between laymen and ministers ought not to be forgotten; neither should the geographical distribution of honors be overlooked. The Middle West can generally make itself heard pretty effectively on any subject in which it is interested. Won't it please speak up?

Union of Presbyterians and Congregationalists. It would seem a good time to let the project of union between Presbyterians and Congregationalists sleep for awhile. The great and honored Presbyterian Church, with which for generations we have been in close and sympathetic relations, does not seem to the outside observer to be in a state of mind which encourages the thought of matrimony. Quite seriously, it would seem that urging projects of union between the Presbyterian and Congregational churches would result only in deepening the schism which seems to be already tragically developing in the Presbyterian Church. The Fundamentalist branch of the Presbyterian Church, which has already spoken with such bitterness concerning Congregationalists, would be still further embittered by the addition of a great, strong, liberal contingent to the Modernist party in the Presbyterian Church. The probability is that the Congregational churches would find themselves uniting only with the liberal party in the Presbyterian Church, and there would be far from a decrease in denominational rivalry. The reflex of such mingling in denominational quarrels would undoubtedly be the exacerbation of feeling within our own churches. The Congregational churches, thank God, after a somewhat protracted period of reorganization in theology and administration, have now found themselves, and are proceeding with a sane, intelligent development of the devotional and intellectual life; witness the net gain of 18,000 members in 1924. We have a great function to perform in the presentation to the younger generation in the United States of a sane, devoted, liberal, evangelical Gospel. Having found the way, let us walk in it. Let us not confuse ourselves by attempting to compromise with other parties or other churches. We can render a greater service to the Kingdom of God by proceeding quietly, unitedly, and devotedly on the path which, under God, we have discovered. (REV.) LEWIS T. REED.

Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Favors Two Home Boards

The Moderator of the next Council should be a Western layman, and the logical candidate is ex-Governor Sweet of Colorado.

The tendency of the day is toward mergers and concentration in all lines of business, so as to save "overhead" and insure "efficiency" without too much waste. This, however, can be carried too far, so that the effect of "individual appeal" would be diminished. I think the proposal for one foreign board and one home board would be carrying it too far. I should advocate the continuance of both the American Board and the Woman's Board, and the merger of the home work into two, instead of one—one having charge of the definite church work, and the other of the educational work.

I should favor the continuance of the Missionary Herald and the American Missionary as they now are.

There seems to be valid reason why the Foundation for Education should be merged with the Education Society; and the work of the Annuity Fund by and of the Ministerial Relief could well be administered by the same organization.

Oak Park, Ill. GEORGE M. HERRICK.

Layman Favors Unity

I am not well enough acquainted with the general organization to answer the questions in much detail. But my feeling is that there should be a consolidation of the denominations of boards and of publications where a common ground of underlying principles can be found.

It is a policy to put the advantages of variety of appeal ahead of the disadvantages of scatterization of effort. The layman of today is interested in the things in which the denominations can agree rather than in those in which the denominations differ. He is interested efficient centralized organization for missiona work rather than in perpetuating tradition names and independent movements. He wi I think, be more inclined to read one stro publication than three weaker ones.

As church people, we are too inclined to fo get that this is an age of big things and th only big things in a church way catch t attention of the man on the street. Moreove mercenary ventures and commercial efforts a unified and co-ordinated, and our energy shou be thrown into competition with them inste of jealousies and jurisdiction of disputes b tween groups in the same general cause.

Winnetka, Ill. MERRITT LUM.

A Woman's Point of View

I am answering your questionnaire as a individual rather than as the Iowa president the W. H. M. U. I think women should ha representation of one-third in the Nation Council and other boards. If we can uni with the Presbyterians and still keep our fre dom of belief, I think we should do so.

I think that women's relation to gener church organizations should be co-operati rather than auxiliary.

I believe there should be one board for fo eign missions and one for home missions.

By all means unite the Foundation for Ed cation with the Education Society.

I believe the Annuity Fund and the Boar of Ministerial Relief should be administered b the same board.

Why not be merged in organization and sti keep specific objects of interest?

I wish the American Missionary and th Missionary Herald could become a month edition of The Congregationalist.

I think the state conference has not becon over-emphasized. I think it is the logic head of each state. I think the societies shou make their approach through the conferenc rather than through individuals or individu churches. This will mean a closer sympath and recognition of each other's responsibilitie between state superintendents and between stat women's organizations. This will take tim and patience and wisdom, but I believe wi bring the best results.

Grinnell, Ia. MRS. P. E. SOMERS.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

The East

THE POLITICAL AWAKENING OF THE EAST, by GEORGE MATTHEW DUTCHER (Abingdon Press. $2.00). The author of this important survey of political progress and of present political conditions in Egypt, India, China, Japan, and the Philippines, is Hedding Professor of History in Wesleyan University, and the volume consists of lectures delivered on the Bennett Foundation at that university. These lectures followed an extensive tour of personal investigation in which during leave of absence from Wesleyan Professor Dutcher made the circuit of the globe. The importance of adequate knowledge of the facts concerning developments in the East and of ability to interpret them cannot be overestimated at the present hour. Such knowledge and interpretation are by no means easy of attainment, for the East is still far removed from the West in background and ideals. Professor Dutcher has therefore rendered a most valuable service. His work is not marred by the tendency prevalent at present to play up all the defects of imperialism against the hypothetical virtues that might, or might not, emerge if Western control and influence were completely withdrawn from India, Egypt, and the Philippines. Professor Dutcher is not an apologist for imperialism. He writes from the standpoint of sympathy with Eastern ideals and with progress toward self-government. But he gives the impression of being careful in his acquisition of facts, fair and impartial in their presentation, and discriminating in his judgments. He is not swept away by theories, nor is he too ready to take movements always at their professed value. He sees and estimates things in their practical bearings and relationships. We highly commend this volume of nearly 400 pages to all who desire some adequate introduction to political conditions and movements in the East.

THE SECRET OF THE EAST, by OLIVER HUCKEL (Crowell. $3.00). Somewhat more discursive and popular in treatment than Professor Dutcher's volume, but also valuable for its information and spirit, and for its contribution to an entente of understanding and good will between East and West are the lectures delivered to a company of fellow-travelers during a journey to the Far East, which Dr. Huckel has here brought together. Back of these lectures are years of interest in the theme and of special study. The book is dominated by largeness of vision and Christian purpose. The author's task is primarily that of interpretation. He writes from the standpoint of the quest of world-order, international cooperation, and permanent peace, and he believes that these can be attained only through the growing spirit of justice and brotherhood. Dr. Huckel, who is well-known for his years of service in the Congregational ministry, has written a volume, helpful, enlightening, and worthy of wide circulation.

TIBETAN FOLK TALES. Translated by A. L. SHELTON. Edited, with an introduction, by MRS. SHELTON (Doran. $2.00). The folk lore of primitive peoples is interesting for its revelations of their superstitions, with frequent flashes of moral insight. These tales gathered by Dr. Shelton in his Tibetan travels have been handed down from one generation to another, being told about the campfire at night. They remind one of Aesop in that most of them have to do with the deeds and sayings of animals that exhibit many human characteristics. The book is well printed and illustrated and furnishes a wealth of stories to read or tell to the children.

AN EDUCATIONAL AMBASSADOR TO THE NEAR EAST, by HESTER DONALDSON JENKINS, PH.D. (Revell. $2.50). This is the story of Mary Mills Patrick and the American College for Girls at Constantinople, of which Miss Patrick was the organizer and president. It is written by one who was a member of the faculty and who had intimate knowledge of the events which she describes. The author gives interesting sketches of the history and characteristics of the various nations represented in the student body. It is a thrilling story of dauntless faith and courage which won through to the goal in the face of tremendous obstacles, the story of a lifework well summarized in the words of Dr. Peet at the retirement of President Patrick:

> She has had a vision that has led her to devise generous things for the young women of this land; eloquence that has enabled her so to paint the picture of her dreams as to enlist support and gifts of others; leadership that has enabled her to work out here the reality of her vision so that we all rejoice in the splendid fulfillment of it.

Fiction

MARTHA, by PERCY MARKS (Century. $2.00). Speaking recently in Boston, Mr. Marks stated that in this book he had described a town in which he had lived for years, and that while in The Plastic Age he had faithfully depicted certain phases of college life, in this book he had to a much greater extent reproduced almost in entirety characters he had actually known. Also, that the attitude of Californians toward the half-breed Indians was as he pictured could be easily verified. In view of this it would be obviously unfair to suggest, as many critics have, that no such conditions exist in California as he describes. It is perhaps only right and necessary if such conditions exist, that they should be written about. Many people will prefer that an author be not so brutally frank in his realism. Percy Marks seems almost to revel in his sex exposés in this book as in The Plastic Age, and makes one wonder if some of this same frankness has not been used merely to give his books the sensational flair the present day seems to demand.

Martha is half white, half Indian, and was brought up and educated in a minister's family. Determined to be considered white, she marries a white man whose brutalities disgust her. After an heroic and almost winning fight against public prejudices, she falls in love with, but fails to marry, another man. After this episode her fight is a losing one and she is last seen as one of the dirty squaws whom she herself had so despised.

The story is dramatically told, and like The Plastic Age will afford matter of debate as to the author's purpose and taste.

PATTERN, by ROSE L. FRANKEN (Scribners. $2.00). An unusually well written novel. The story of a woman from childhood, through various phases of girlhood, through the deeper experiences of marriage and sorrow and through the futile, restless life as led by so many modern women. The author in the last few pages endeavors to bring harmony into the life of the heroine by having her suddenly discover a meaning in life that there is in it a pattern of which she is a part—but the discovery seems too sudden.

NORA PAYS, by LUCILLE VAN SLYKE (Stokes. $2.00). An ignorant young mother runs away to New York and deserts three small daughters and a husband who is too much of a student to be much of a husband. Fifteen years later she has become the owner of a smart shop in New York and developed into an unusual woman. After her husband's death a letter from her youngest daughter arouses atrophied maternal feelings and Nora endeavors to bring her children into her life—an experiment that ends in disaster. She is left finally alone to commence even business anew. The character of Nora during her successful days is skillfully drawn but the portrayal of the strange relationships between mother and daughters is not so convincing.

THE SPECIMEN CASE, by ERNEST BRAMAH (Doran. $2.00). An interesting series of short stories in which the author has successfully attempted a variety of types of theme and treatment. They are selected from what he has written during a period of thirty years.

HALF GODS, by LYNN MONTROSS (Doran. $2.00 net). This novel is announced as a discussion of the question, "Has the church a place on Main Street?" Frances Leeper, former college student at Chicago, goes back home to Willow Ridge, a suburb of Chicago, and takes her part in Main Street. She was married as an undergraduate to a fellow student and proceeds to get a divorce. She has two suitors, Ted Prowant—a busy, fast young man, and Rev. Frederick Eckart, minister and widower, magnetic in personality and strenuous in his fight against unrighteousness. Really religion and the church do not have a good chance in this portrayal. The place of religion in the redemption of Main Street remains yet to be written.

Books for Boys

SCOUTING ON THE MOHAWK, by EVERETT T. TOMLINSON (Appleton. $1.75). A new edition of a well-known boys' book. It is the story of a scout of the British during their war with the French and Indians in 1757.

FOUGHT FOR ANNAPOLIS, by FITZHUGH GREEN (Appleton. $1.75). Endorsed by Rear Admiral Henry B. Wilson, Superintendent of the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, as "a just and impartial picture of the Naval Academy," the author has told an interesting story of the career of a Texas boy at Annapolis.

ALL FOR ANDOVER, by CLAUDE MOORE FUESS (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard. $1.75). The title of this book, written by a member of the faculty at Phillips Andover, suggests its nature and its interest for boys.

THE MAGIC-MAKERS OF MOROCCO, by FRANCIS ROLT-WHEELER (Doran. $1.50), in "Round the World with the Young Journalists," a series dealing with adventure in countries all over the globe, the West Indies, South America, Czecho-Slovakia, etc. Mystery, keen detective work, and exciting adventures make these books full of interest for boys and girls. Each volume is illustrated, with a frontispiece in color.

Order through the Pilgrim Press.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

Loose Imaginings

Our grandchildren are going to be vastly amused when they hear of some of the notions that this generation has gulped with eager credulity. Loose imaginings are always more popular than tight facts. But there is a pathos about it all. We want to feel—all of us do—that we amount to something; we want some greater sense of satisfaction from this experience of being alive; we realize, many vaguely and some clearly, that we ought to be able to do more with our Selves than we are doing. We burn to find the secret of achievement if there is a secret, and we long for health.

But the multitude have not learned that these great and legitimate desires are not to be gained through loose thinking and fatuous gullibility.

It is wise not to swallow all that gets into print under the name of psychology. There must be many who, first excited by specious promises, have soon been left in a state of aching disappointment. Applied psychology will not turn the race that now inhabits the earth into a race of supermen, nor is it yet able to cure all the ills that flesh is heir to.

Scientific investigators have not been able to find that all disease is a matter of thought. Disease attacks animals and plants, as well as men. The germ theory of disease appears to be valid. At the same time no one can yet say to what an extent the power of germs can be countered, and disease cured, by the wholesome action of a mind that knows how to think straight. Dr. Dubois, of Paris, after abundantly illustrating the curative power of the mind in nervous diseases, makes this significant remark: "It is a mistake to believe that these educative measures can be used only on neurotics. To persuade patients and make them leap over obstacles by the power of encouragement alone is necessary in the majority of diseases."

But you can not base a healthy and sound life on deception of any kind. Error works only evil in the world. Truth works only good. There are people who are afraid of Truth. They are afraid some bull of a truth will get into the china shop where they keep their beloved errors, and smash them to smithereens.

When you read about Truth with a capital T it perhaps sounds philosophical and intangible and high-brow and vague. It is the most practical thing in the world, and the most everydayish. Unless the carpenter and bricklayer work in accordance with Truth, your house is likely to come toppling about your ears. Gravitation must act always the same, or the world might fly off into space and be cooked in some vast Betelgeuse, or a boy who tried to slide down hill might slide instead into the unfathomable void between the worlds.

Some people know a great deal, but it does them little good because so much of what they know isn't so. I do not want to build my life on a basis of falsehood, no matter how pleasant the falsehood may be, nor how inviting the view from its greensward. Some storm will sweep away my house in my hour of need, if I build on falsehood. That on which God builds is the Truth. Until we, men and women, learn to look first and foremost, always and in all realms, for the Truth, we must pay the price in disordered lives and troubled hearts.

Closet and Altar

THE CHRIST OF TODAY

Then said Jesus to them again: Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.—John 20: 21.

Jesus refers to himself as the Son of man, but he refers to far more. You, my brethren, are every one of you a manifestation of the Son of man. In so far as you have ever had a noble thought, taken an upward look, sacrificed or suffered for the eternal good; in so far as you have ever felt yourself thrilled and inspired by the Spirit of God, and gone forth as his servant to do his will, you are the Son of man. It is abundantly clear that our Master meant this.—R. J. Campbell.

Some people will never know anything about Jesus Christ except what they see in the lives of his disciples. We must remind people of Christ by living the Christ-life ourselves.—J. M. Thoburn.

Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born,
If he's not born in thee, thy soul is all forlorn.
God's Spirit falls on me, as dewdrops on a rose,
If I but like a rose my heart to him disclose.
In all eternity no tone can be so sweet
As when man's heart with God's in unison doth beat.

Whate'er thou lovest, man, that, too, become thou must;
God, if thou lovest God; dust, if thou lovest dust.
Immeasurable is the Highest; who but knows it?
And yet a human heart can perfectly inclose it.

Johannes Schaffer.

Do not look, then, at fellowship with Christ as men look at a hospital to which they may one day be driven to have recourse. Do not think of it even as an embellishment of life which you may do well enough without. But understand that fellowship with Christ is the one only means by which you can reach the highest and become all that you are meant to be.—Marcus Dods.

The end of it all, now as then, is to "multiply the word of God," that is, not to multiply copies of the Scriptures, but to increase the number of those whose lives are such as to constitute them incarnate expressions of the thought of God, until the civilization of the brotherly man shall prevail in all the earth.—E. I. Bosworth.

O Lord most merciful, in whom is our hope and knowledge of eternal life, we bless thee that thou hast revealed thyself to us in Jesus Christ our brother and our Lord. Let the example of his faith and love become the pattern by which we seek to live amid the temptations and perplexities of our present life. Thou hast sent us forth as witnesses, make us ever conscious of thy presence with us and always eager to follow the law of thy commandments. So in the measure of thy holy love make us lights in the world, proofs of thy fatherly kindness, helpers and guides for those who stumble in the way. And keep us ever, as we would be kept, from all disloyalty and betrayal of thy cause by our folly and self-seeking. In the name of Christ. Amen.

Isaac Ogden Rankin.

[Assembled by Isaac Ogden Rankin]

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Signposts to Happiness

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic for July 12-18

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: The Beatitudes of the New Testament.—Matthew 5: 1-12; John 20: 29; Romans 4: 7.

Light from the Bible Passages

The Beatitudes are recipes for the happy Christian life. They do not represent the only ways to secure it. Jesus wishes his followers to have a measure of happiness, but happiness after his idea of it. In his hilltop message he stamps with his approval certain types of followers: those who feel a spiritual need, those who are of humble mind, those who have a continual thirst for uprightness, those who are pure in heart and purpose, those who are seeking peace. Contrary to popular thought of his own day and ours he congratulates those who have to pass through sadness and persecution. The rewards which he promises to all such are the finest in the world; they are what men are ever seeking, but usually by other means. He also congratulates those who can have a faith that thrives without visible proofs.

Leads for the Leader

You need to find a definition of real happiness. What does it depend upon? Because we are Christians what difference does it make in our definition? How much depends upon material things? How much on immaterial things of the mind and spirit?

How many of these things which Jesus praises have we in our lives? Are we inclined to dodge them if possible? Are we afraid to put them to the test?

Have we lost our sense of sin and its displeasure to God so that we do not feel the need of forgiveness? How does prosperity and ease of life affect this?

How keen are we about the practice of righteousness? Is that the standard of our action? Are we governed by that as much as by the things that "everybody is doing"?

Thoughts for Members

When these marvelous Beatitudes, quickened and raised into their pure perfection, have soared into the supreme height at once of the immediate revelation of God and of the ultimate capacities of man, what are the two conceptions which they blend? They are simply those of peace-making and of sonship.—Rupert Foster.

"The Bible is a book of beatitudes and benedictions. 'Blesseds' shine over the inspired pages, like stars in the heavens."

We are struck at once with their unworldliness. They are altogether different from men's beatitudes. They run directly counter to the maxims which rule in society and give impulse to human ambitions.—J. R. Miller, D.D.

There is a peculiar fineness of character to be found in a man who has passed through a sad experience and been comforted.—Dean Bosworth.

A Moment of Prayer

Open our eyes, O Lord, to see happiness through thine eyes, to catch the thrill of the possibilities which thou dost open to us. Keep us, we pray, from being captivated by the world's estimate of what is most desirable. Make us more and more eager to win from thee a worthy "blessed" for the use we make of thy gifts. Amen.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

The Gospel in Antioch of Pisidia

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for July 12
Acts 13: 42-52

As Antioch in Syria became an important new center in the life of the early church and a new base for Christian propaganda, so Antioch in Pisidia quickly became an important outpost, and this not only in a geographical sense. It became early in the first missionary journey the scene of strategic conflict between Jew and Gentile, and between the conceptions of the new religion that on the one hand were dominated by Judaistic prejudices and on the other regarded the Gospel as inherently involving a ministry to men in need no matter what their present or past racial or religious condition.

If we marvel that the richness and fullness of the Gospel of God's love and Christ's redemptive work should be limited by narrow prejudices even in the days of the beginning of its conquest of the world, and should we be disposed to judge harshly those who thus opposed or limited the full reach of the Gospel, let us remember how grievously all through the history of the Christian Church this same attitude has limited Christian vision and progress. Is it not but a generation ago that many were denying that Christ died for all men, and that Calvinistic orthodoxy was doing much to put its logic against the conception of a universal Gospel? In these things, however, let us be more concerned about emulating the true vision and experience of religion than about judging those of the past. Let us emphasize the freedom that the new religion brought to an intense Pharisee like Paul, and let us seek the vision and experience of the Gospel that will similarly enlarge our horizon in our conception of the Gospel and in our practical relations with a world of need.

The profound need and responsibility of the church today lie in this one direction of adapting divine resources to human conditions; whether it be in the matter of personal salvation, in the uplifting of the unfortunate, or in the establishing of a better basis for society, the whole problem of life centers in this. It is in daring to believe that the Gospel has a work to perform for those who have never known it and who have never experienced its transforming power that the way of true progress lies.

In many quarters the development of foreign missions has been as bitterly opposed as the Jews in Antioch of Pisidia opposed the preaching of the Gospel to the Gentiles. In fact it may be said that there has been no work of redemption that has not had its critics and in relation to which criticism has not been expressed upon the professed basis of religious conviction. Young people's movements in the church, work for boys and girls, even city mission work, all these have been developed against the indifference, and often the actual opposition of those who have conceived of the church in a very narrow and limited way. One can think of cities where the "first church," historically strong, has assumed a self-centered and fearful attitude toward the developing of religious life and needs in the community. Instead of fostering new churches in new areas, the central church has often looked askance at new organizations, or at best given a limited and grudging assistance. How foolish and deadly has been this policy one sees in the later experience of certain communities! One can think of instances where the old, strong, historic church has settled into barrenness and death as the community has expanded its bounds, while on the contrary one finds many communities where the old church, alive to all its opportunities and responsibilities, has so put its life and interest into the churches that it has fostered in new and developing sections of the city that while it has helped these to life and ministry it has in some way preserved its own vigor and continued in unabated service. In these matters it is the spirit that quickeneth, it is the spirit that giveth life. It was Sir John Seeley who said that "no virtue is safe that is not passionate," and in a sense the idea that he expressed in that statement applies to the faith and life of the Christian Church. It is only in the eagerness and passion with which the church reaches out for new borders, and in the zeal that the church manifests to apply the Gospel in its richness and fullness to all human need, wherever it is found, that faith and life establish their vital continuity.

But the larger and nobler the religion the more bitter has always been the hostility to it of the narrow-minded. So Paul and Barnabas found themselves assailed with intense persecution and persecution of a type that corresponds very well to the methods of narrowness and bigotry everywhere. The Jews, who were opposed to Paul, "stirred up the devout and honorable women and the chief men of the city." They played, just as the leaders of bigotry and prejudice play today, upon those who lack the sense of discrimination but who are sincerely devoted to what they conceive to be religious truth. Instead of answering the preaching of Paul and Barnabas in fair and reasonable ways, they raised the cry that Paul and Barnabas were turning aside people from the truth. When argument fails it is always possible to bring a charge against somebody's orthodoxy.

Surely the story of these things in the New Testament ought to warn us against those who pursue these methods in the modern day. However, persecution succeeds in its nefarious work. It drove Paul and Barnabas out of Antioch in much the same fashion as it has driven modern prophets from their places of ministry today. The prophet, however, may be driven from his place, but he can never be driven from his ministry. Paul and Barnabas went on to Iconium still preaching the Gospel and the preaching of the Gospel in its depth and fullness and in its application to the life of all mankind goes on in the modern world despite the efforts of those who would limit it in conception or application by their petty bigotries.

From Our Western Editor

(Continued from page 8)

alone, but of Stutsman County at large; if I had lost my way to God I know of no one I would rather go to for leadership than Dr. Phillips; there is no measure for thirty years of such constant and consistent pastoral service; we have forgotten to what denomination he belongs, nor do we care, but we wish him many more happy years among his loving friends."

The mere mental effort of producing the sermons needed in thirty years preaching to the same people is a herculean task. But this is only a part of the work of the minister. We must take into account also the life that goes into pastoral visitation, into bearing the woes of the unfortunate and the broken, into comforting the sick and the dying, into giving a measure of leadership to every public welfare movement, especially those of an educational and reformatory nature. I have known the work of these two men quite intimately and their service reminds me of Paul's characterization of his own: "On every side I am harried but not hemmed in, perplexed but not despairing, persecuted but not abandoned, struck down but not destroyed—wherever I go I am being killed in the body as Jesus was, so that the life of Jesus may come out in my body." It is this sort of ministry that these two men of God have rendered through thirty years of service.

Chicago, Ill., R. W. G.
June 22, 1925.

Women's Foreign Missionary Conference at Northfield

The leaders of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Conference to be held at Northfield, Mass., July 14-22, expect a great registration and are preparing a great program. The authors of two of the study books, Helen Barrett Montgomery and Mrs. E. C. Cronk, will teach their respective books, Prayer and Missions for seniors and Brave Adventurers for juniors. Miss Gertrude Schultz and Miss Mary Peacock wil conduct classes in the most timely new books on Latin America. A new feature will be the forum on World Peace conducted by Edward C. Carter and Miss Bertha Condé. Church women need to know the fundamentals underlying possible action by the United States in the coming session of Congress.

All the features which make Northfield so delightful and profitable will continue. Bishop McDowell of Washington, D. C., will preach Sunday morning; Mr. Milton Stauffer of the Student Volunteer Movement will give the World Survey Sunday evening; Rev. Howard Robert Weir, rector of Grace Church, Salem, Mass., will conduct the Bible hour each morning. The girls' camps are an important feature. Round Top is historic. There will be a pageant one evening, an international program, an evening on South America, an Oriental college session, with missionaries from many lands, and on Tuesday evening, the 22d, a flag service for volunteers.

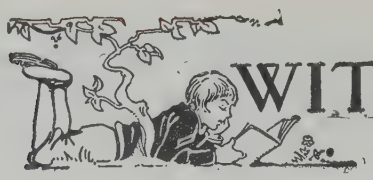
Circulars giving details may be obtained from the Foreign Mission Boards. Reduced railroad fares or summer tourist round-trip tickets to East Northfield, Mass., may be secured. Mrs. James Madison Pratt is chairman of the program committee, and Mrs. Henry W. Peabody is chairman of the conference.

Good Days

By Heloise M. B. Hawkins

That day is good which joy bestows,—
When life doth blossom as the rose;
And every hour brings deep content,
And our dear wishes find free vent.

But for soul's worth is that day good
On which some evil is withstood;
Some new strength found, some height assailed
At which the heart has hitherto quailed.



WITH THE CHILDREN

Prize Packages

By Rose Brooks

Helen Martin sat dispiritedly at her desk after the last of her twenty pupils had gone. "I will not cry, and I will keep my head up," said the young teacher to herself vehemently, at the same time resisting an all but overwhelming desire to bury her head in her arms and cry it out.

"This is where I've landed, is it?" her thoughts whirled on. "Fine teacher I'll make if I can't hold a country school of twenty children up to the mark,—discipline and all!" Helen's blue eyes stared unseeing at the trees just shimmering into green outside the window.

"Had to argue my way into this school. The committee said I was too young to keep the big boys in order. And my arguments won, and here I am, wondering before even one year of teaching is over, whether or not I can win. Patience!" The blue eyes were as stormy as Helen's thoughts. "Why can't I go down in history as Job has? Well, anyway I haven't lost my temper once with those boys, and every one of them is coming round except Ben—but how long can I bank on them with Ben as ringleader? He gets more unruly every day. And yet—and yet—they say there's always a key. I wonder why, underneath, there's something about Ben I like when he's ruining my year, and perhaps my future chances, if this year fails"—

Ten minutes had the big round wall clock ticked off, with Helen outwardly unmoving and inwardly gathering the reins over herself when Ben Thompson suddenly appeared in the doorway, a yellow envelope in his hand.

"Met Mr. Fowler, and he asked one of us to bring this back to you. Said to tell you it came an hour ago," and Ben, with unwonted quiet, laid it on the desk and turned to go.

"Thank you." Helen's courtesy toward her chief problem had never failed. With one brief glance she read the message and without a word hurried to the entry for her hat.

"Would you mind," she said in a voice that sounded far away,—"would you mind locking the windows and doors and leaving the key at Mr. Fowler's? I'm sorry to trouble you, but I'll have to catch the five o'clock train," and without further explanation she slipped swiftly out.

To her surprise Ben was striding at her side three minutes later, key in hand. To her greater surprise, Ben's voice was saying, "I hope it isn't anything bad. I can drive you to the station, Miss Martin, if you have to go."

"My mother has pneumonia," said Helen, as though benumbed. "It would help, of course, to be driven over, but I think I'll have time to walk. Thank you, though. There'll be no school till I get back. I'll ask Mr. Fowler to post a notice."

"I'll see to it." Ben was talking like a man and acting like a gentleman. Helen was too numb to reason. What are words anyway? Why not accept miracles sent by the gods without comment?

"I'll see to the school," Ben repeated amazingly. "And I'll come after you at four o'clock," and at the Fowler's gate he left her and strode home, a new swing to his stride, a new set to his shoulders.

The three-mile drive to the station was a silent one. "I don't know when I can get back," said Helen as the village came in view. "I'll telegraph you."

"Me?"

"You can let the school committee know. I'm leaving it to you to explain for me. Say I'll be back as soon as I can—though perhaps they don't care as much as I do whether school's open or not." No reproach was in Helen's voice,—a mere statement of fact.

"I'll see to it," said Ben tersely.

Had this manly boy who was helping her at every turn, who carried her suit case, bought her ticket, been for seven weary months the ringleader of all mischief in her small school domain? Had this straight boy slouched indolently at his desk, weeks on end, spreading laziness, trying nerves to the breaking point? Oh well, if miracles did happen, let them. And Helen, looking her former arch-enemy straight in the eye, said, "I don't know how to thank you, Ben."

And Ben, cap in hand, helping her on the train, said, "I know your mother will be better, Miss Martin."

"Better, better, I know she'll be better," the wheels clicked Ben's words over and over as the miles lessened; clicked them unceasingly, till at last Helen reached the home station and jumped off almost into the arms of her father, whose first words were, "Better. The crisis is over. She'll get well."

A week later and Helen was again bound for the hill schoolhouse, her thoughts full of the remaining three months of her term. "It was a miracle, or a dream," she mused. "What did make Ben act so? Perhaps the last three months will go better. They've all had a week's vacation." If there were a bright side, Helen was bound to see it.

"Ben!" she greeted, as she alighted from the train. "How good of you!" and like old friends they drove to the house of the Fowlers. "All the children know school opens tomorrow?" she asked at parting.

"They'll be there," said Ben, head up, but looking a little sheepish.

"New teacher got along real well," Mrs. Fowler greeted Helen at supper, half an hour later.

"New teacher!" gasped Helen. "Has there been a new teacher while I've been gone?"

"Dropped from the sky," said Mr. Fowler, his eyes twinkling. "Kept order by the mailed fist method, I understand.

"Where I failed,—discipline," and Helen turned to Mrs. Fowler for enlightenment.

"You?" Mrs. Fowler's eyes matched her husband's for twinkles. "Not you. The school committee says any teacher who can discipline as you have! Well, this countryside wants you to stay just as long as you will."

"But the discipline—"

"Don't you worry over the discipline! You go to school tomorrow morning and see what you'll see. The new teacher'll be there."

Bewildered, eager to see her successor, Helen went to school bright and early next morning, to find the schoolroom spick and span, wildflower offerings on her desk, twenty alert children already in their seats. Slouchers! Not a sloucher among them! Shoulders square, backs straight, smiles to meet her smile! But where the new teacher? No one sat behind her desk, no one stood in the entry or at the blackboard.

"We've done six pages of arithmetic whil you've been gone!" volunteered Jimmy gayly

"We've read three chapters in the reader, announced Alice blithely.

And then Helen laughed,—laughed as if sh were one of her youngest scholars, and infec tiously the whole school laughed with her.

"A magic school, this!" said Helen at last "Off goes the teacher, and on goes the schoo better than when she's here! Suppose yo share the secret? Who taught you while was gone?"

"Ben!" the school chorused proudly.

"Taught us all the whole business, same you do!" chirped Jimmy.

"Had to study nights. We saw him," in formed Alice mercilessly.

"Made us mind," supplemented Tommy rubbing the back of his head reminiscently.

A sudden silence fell in the little schoolhouse in which young teacher and oldest pupil looke at each other. "Could anything in me hav won?" Helen was asking herself, though al she said was a quiet, "We all thank Ben," an added impulsively, "I never was so proud i my life."

"I wonder," Helen said casually to Ben a recess, "if you'd mind helping me carry som extra books home tonight?" Somehow sh must have a word with him.

"I can't ever thank you, Ben," she sai simply, on the homeward way. "What you'v done may mean the difference between failur and success in my teaching career."

"Guess I didn't do much for your success first part of the term," said Ben manfully though abashed. "But the others all cried— the boys could make 'em—"

"Cried? Who cried?"

"The other teachers. We had lots of 'em They'd never stay. The boys used to mak 'em cry, and then they'd go, and then w wouldn't have school for awhile." Ben's fac was scarlet.

"I see. Have you been just trying to mak me cry this year, Ben?" and two merry blu eyes smiled straight into two brown ones.

"Yes," confessed Ben, amazed into twinkle, himself. "Didn't really mean any o my, monkeyshines. But I couldn't make yo cry. You've won. And I just want to tel you—" Dead stop as Ben's tongue became tied "Tell me," said Helen, "because then I hav something I want to tell you."

"Oh, well," finished Ben, "I've just told th boys they'll settle with me, if there's any mor of this discipline fuss—"

"Ben!" Helen beamed on this her unrul pupil. "You'll have to listen just till I tel you you're the most wonderful prize packag I ever found in this world! Your outwar wrapping was a little deceptive at first, but wrappings off, I'm so proud of the prize, Ben!"

And peace and happiness and progres reigned at the little schoolhouse in the hills.

(All rights reserved)

Scarin' the Ghosts

By George H. Credeford

There was a little maid,
And she was afraid,
And so she dressed in white;
And I've heard her say
She dressed that way,
To scare the ghosts at night!

With the Schools and Colleges

Marietta College Commencement

Last year the interest in the Marietta commencement was greatly increased by the presence of General Charles G. Dawes, just returned from Europe after the successful completion of his work as head of the Dawes commission and about to be nominated Vice-President of the United States on the Republican ticket. This year he came back as Vice-President, with no desire to be singled out for distinguished honors but eager to mingle among his friends of former days and to be called "Charley" as of old. With him came his brothers, Rufus, who shared with him in the work of the Dawes Commission; Beman, the chairman of the directors of the Pure Oil Company, and Henry, who has lately become president of the company after notable service as comptroller of the Currency of the United States.

The experiment of a week-end commencement, begun last year, was continued with such satisfaction that it can now be considered an established custom.

There were the usual social events, outstanding among which were the June breakfast on the library lawn, "one of the most delightful events in any college," as some one called it, and the President's reception, which were very largely attended.

The students were listened to with interest in the oratorical contest in which freshmen and sophomores discussed some of the important topics of the present day, in the class day program which was of unusual interest, and at the commencement exercises, where five students presented such subjects as Illusions, An Appreciation of Nature, John Marshall, Shelley the Idealist, Social Service. Marietta College still clings to this older habit of student addresses at commencement as being of more vital interest than the words of even an outstanding speaker from beyond the college circle.

There were three formal addresses during the commencement period. One was by President John L. Hopwood of the Mid-Pacific Institute of Honolulu, which was a keen, comprehensive and convincing discussion of the Race Question. The second was the annual sermon before the Christian Associations given this year by Bishop William F. McDowell of Washington. It was an eloquent presentation of the motive of repentance—not a threat of punishment and personal disaster, but an opportunity to share in the world service of the Kingdom.

President Parsons' baccalaureate discussed the Youth Spirit. He pointed out that civilization is in the hands of the older men but their supremacy is being more and more disputed by youth the world over. He looks to youth to preserve world idealism and to overthrow the evils to which age has become callous. He took a hopeful view of the youth of today and urged the graduating class not to lower the flag of their unselfish hopes and ambitions.

The commencement exercises were shared in by only a part of those who wanted to hear them. A class of forty-nine was graduated and in addition three master of arts degrees were conferred. An interesting episode was the conferring of a bachelor of arts degree, dated with his class, upon Byron Bancroft Johnson, who is a grateful son of Marietta. Honorary degrees were conferred upon President John L. Hopwood of Honolulu (Doctor of Divinity), Rev. Arthur C. Folsom of Fort Wayne, Ind., whose son was in the graduating class (Doctor of Divinity), Mr. Charles Augustus Hanna of New York (Doctor of Humanities), and President William J. Hutchins of Berea College (Doctor of Laws).

The alumni dinner was a most successful close of the exercises. One hundred and twenty more persons sat down than last year and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Dr. W. G. Sibley, whose daily articles in the Chicago Journal of Commerce are widely read, was the toastmaster, and the program included short and effective speeches by Judge J. E. Sater, who has lately retired from the Federal Court in Ohio, Dr. Hopwood, Mr. Ban Johnson, Mr. Rufus Dawes, who talked of the work of the Dawes Commission, the president of the college, and the Vice-President of the United States.

The college has had a most prosperous year. For the third successive year the treasurer reported no deficit. The endowment funds of the college have been increased by the bequest of Mrs. Catherine Andrews Mather, of Detroit, who left the college endowment for a chair of geology in memory of her father, Ebenezer Baldwin Andrews, who held the chair of geology, mineralogy, and chemistry at Marietta College from 1851-1870. He was one of the most widely known geologists of his time. The student body has been larger than ever before and of fine quality. Three hundred and fifty-six students were registered in strictly liberal arts courses.

The outlook for next year is most encouraging. It has been decided to limit the incoming freshman class to 150, and there is no doubt that the full number will apply. There will be even more careful selection than in the past. The college has adopted the inquiry blanks similar to those used by the University of Chicago, and will make use of the detailed information which they are furnishing in making its choice. It is seeking to eliminate the student who has no intellectual ambitions.

Another 10 per cent. increase in the student body—this was the gain last year—will bring the numbers to the limit of capacity. The whole student body will then be limited until such time as there is such increase in the plant as shall justify a movement forward to the limit of 450 which the college has set for itself.

J. H. W.

In the Interest of Fisk

Rev. Paul E. Baker, chaplain of Fisk University, will travel during the summer in the interest of the sschool, visting alumni clubs in so far as he is able to get around to them. The alumni have promised to raise $25,000 of the school's indebtedness. Mr. Baker will be concerned in helping to raise this money. He will also seek new students among the graduates of the high schools.

The board is especially anxious to get before its constituency the future policy of the school. Modern methods of control are being instituted, such as a student council, an athletic association, and student committees to regulate life in the dormitories. A student publication representing both students and alumni will be circulated beginning with the fall term. A more modern curriculum to met the practical needs of the day is being worked out. Courses to fit for professional service will be emphasized. In other words, the life and work of the campus is being organized along lines akin to that of the great universities of the day.

However, with this adjustment to meet modern methods and modern policies the school plans to maintain its historic policy of high intellectual standards and fine moral idealism. The high place it has won for itself in the thinking of the country is to be maintained. Every effort will be made by faculty and trustees to give the highest educational and religious advantages to the colored students of the South, East, North, and West who turn to it for training.

Our Readers' Forum

Atlanta Graduates in Southeast

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

In the kind communication printed in your issue of June 4, regarding my resignation, it was stated that "twenty former students of [Atlanta] Seminary are now serving as pastors and general workers in the Southeast." The casual reader may not have understood that this sentence referred to Congregationalists only. The "twenty" might have read "twenty-four," and twelve men may be added for other denominations. We could wish that all our graduates stayed in "the Southeast," but of course they do not do so, any more than all Andover graduates stay in Massachusetts.

Atlanta, Ga. FRANK R. SHIPMAN.

Dr. Mills Nominated for Moderator

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

"Who shall be the next Moderator of the National Council?"

My answer is Rev. Charles S. Mills, D.D., if his official position permits. No man of our fellowship deserves this honor more than Dr. Mills, and the Council would honor itself by choice of one so eminently qualified in every way. He has been pastor of noble churches; he has labored tirelessly for all our churches; he knows our varied work intimately and has a passion for it that is rare.

He is, as everybody knows, a fine presiding officer, a skillful executive, and a man of wide affairs. By his experience and his great gifts he would represent the denomination with unusual distinction. JAY T. STOCKING.

Upper Montclair, N. J.

President Davis for Moderator

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

For the next Moderator of the National Council I nominate President Ozora S. Davis of Chicago Theological Seminary. There are few men in the country who have rendered greater service to the denomination than this distinguished scholar, preacher, author, and administrator. No man is better known or more greatly beloved among Congregationalists in the Middle West where, as everyone knows, the future stronghold of the denomination will be. For many years he has rendered valuable service to the churches from coast to coast. He is a master of assemblies, a thorough student of Congregational history, a matchless preacher, and highly esteemed by ministers and laymen throughout the entire country.

Detroit, Minn. (REV.) A. K. VOSS.

Tribute to One of Our Veterans

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Occasionally The Congregationalist recalls to its readers some veteran servant of our churches whose name was well known a score or so of years ago but who, though still among us, is so quietly passing the evening of his life as to be out of the range of ordinary church news.

Such a one, who on June 1 entered his 90th year, is Rev. Henry Taylor Staats, of Pasadena, Cal. He held pastorates in Connecticut, at Orange, New Haven (Grand Ave.), Derby,

(Continued on page 31)

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

Leaves Plymouth Church, Worcester

Dr. Robert MacDonald concluded, June 30, a ten years' pastorate of PLYMOUTH, WORCESTER, MASS., and with Mrs. MacDonald will start in October on a year's tour of the world in which he will be chaplain of a party of 500 tourists, and during which he will visit mission fields, and, in April and May, occupy pulpits in London. At a farewell reception attended by more than 400 Plymouth members and friends the church presented him with a gift of $1,000—$100 for each year of service—with the suggestion that, if inclined, he use the money for the purchase of some work of art with which to associate the love and devotion of the people of Plymouth Church. The presentation was made by Dr. John C. Berry, a long-time member of Plymouth and former member of the Prudential Committee of the American Board, who also gave a warm expression of the esteem of Plymouth Church for Dr. and Mrs. MacDonald and of appreciation of their accomplishments during the past ten years.

Among the notable marks of progress have been the reception of 551 new members with a net gain of 248, making the present membership 1,025; the securing of one of the finest church organs in the city of Worcester; the provision of 11 beautiful memorial windows; the acquisition of a parish house left to the church 20 years ago by Charles Morgan, a charter member, for several years rented and recently taken over and adapted for church use; the raising of $15,000 to cancel indebtedness and of $65,000 toward an endowment fund of $100,000; and the formation of a woman's federation of church organizations largely through the efforts of Mrs. MacDonald.

Dr. Berry paid tribute to Dr. MacDonald as a remarkable preacher, bringing to his pulpit ministry a clear voice, choice diction, a scholarly mind and studious habits, and the crowning grace of a deep spirituality. Under his leadership the prayer meeting has continued to function as a strong factor in the life of the church. He has also taught a large brotherhood Bible class. Mrs. MacDonald, too, has been a magnetic teacher in the church school and by her graciousness and tactfulness as well as remarkable organizing ability has filled a large place of influence in Plymouth Church.

Dr. MacDonald has served as president of the Worcester Congregational Club and during his term of office a departure from the set custom introduced a series of discussions of topics by experts with an increase of interest. He has also filled many appointments as a speaker both within and outside the city. His pastorate will conclude upon the date of the 40th anniversary of his entrance upon the ministry. He leaves Plymouth Church strong and united. F. D. T.

Cool Breezes from Southern Florida

Four years ago it was said that the tip of Florida was so hot in the summer time that no one could work. Church activities were supposed to wane. Now we discover that many of the children who come from the North during the winter have no other Sunday school than ours down here because in the North Sunday schools are closed on account of the heat and other reasons. Sunday schools and church services continue here the whole year through and flourish during the summer, which is not so hot on account of the ocean breezes. The following story of church progress among our Congregational churches in and about Miami reflects much healthy activity.

The most interesting and according to some the most remarkable development in church work has taken place in LAKE WORTH, just north of Miami and near Palm Beach. Rev. Lillian B. Fulton is the pastor. In eight months she has received about 100 new members into the church. The congregations have grown so rapidly that the church is being enlarged at a cost of $14,000. Eight hundred people can then be seated. A new pipe organ has been installed. They have a vested choir. A parsonage costing $7,000 is being built this summer. The property value is rising to $60,000. The free-will offerings at the servic have increased from $576 last year to $2,2 this year. On some Sunday evenings as ma as 800 people have been literally jammed in the church. Seventy-five per cent. of the me bership attend prayer meeting. The attendan at Sunday school has doubled and the scho has been graded. Mrs. Fulton has an assista to help her in this great work. The best pa of the report declares that the spiritual li of the people has developed notably and "ma are really finding God for themselves."

The pastor of FIRST, MIAMI, Rev. R. Ward, has just observed his sixth anniversa as leader of that important church. He h been greatly assisted by his capable wife. The two conscientious workers took hold of a di cult task six years ago and they have broug the church to the notice of the public and ha established it as one of the leading churches the city. The Sunday school has a membe ship of 265. There are a Boy Scout troop a several other helpful organizations. Mr. Wa has devoted a great deal of his time to publ and semi-public activities. His position in t community is unusual. He is a major in t Florida National Guard and is otherwise ide tified with military life. Through his offici connection with these many organizations t community has come to know the Miami Co gregational Church. Land values have ris so rapidly that the property which was orig nally purchased for $5,000 is now wor $200,000. Mr. Ward has been honored by b ing selected by one of the daily papers to pr pare a sermon each week for its pages. Th makes three of our Congregational ministe who are engaged in sending out messag through the newspapers of Miami. The churc has just purchased a new pipe organ at a co of $6,000.

One of the oldest communities near Mia is COCONUT GROVE, and there we have our ol est Congregational Church. It is called Ply outh Church, but is the union church organize there more than 25 years ago. For the pa five years the pastor has been Rev. J. Kuykendall. At a recent gathering the past invited all the new members who had joine since he became pastor to sit together. Ha of the congregation was made up of such men bers. The immediate new thing at Cocon Grove is a new parsonage which will soon erected. An addition to the auditorium contemplated. It is interesting and a sign progress to know that many of our Florid churches are faced with the necessity of pr viding more room for their congregations. Th church is planning to expand its work of ser ice for the community. There is a promisin field about four miles square without a churc near-by. This summer the church has calle an associate to investigate this new field an if deemed wise Plymouth will undertake minister to it. Rev. S. E. Frost, Jr., has bee called to look after the summer activities. M Kuykendall will take a vacation, spending th first part of the time reporting the trial Professor Scopes at Dayton, Tenn., for th Miami Herald and then a part of his time will preach at Montclair, N. J. While he absent Mr. Frost will supply his pulpit.

Mr. Kuykendall has become known in thi region as a liberal in religious matters, espe

REV. AND MRS. S. G. GUTENSOHN IN THE PLATEAU CANYON

Mr. Gutensohn preaches in the Plateau City Church and is responsible for the social activities in the Plateau Valley Larger Parish, Colorado lly since he published his book of sermons The New Meaning of an Old Creed. Wil-m Jennings Bryan's attitude on religion, and the subject of evolution especially, has found Plymouth's preacher a rather stout antag-ist. It is interesting, to say the least, to ow that Mr. Bryan has gone to live in Coco-t Grove and has become aggressive in new ans to build a church on his estate close to ymouth. Though Mr. Bryan is a Presby-ian he has been made a member of the ethodist board of trustees that is building e new church.

Mr. Kuykendall has been editorial writer on e Miami Herald for the past few years but s recently decided to devote his entire time his church work. His salary has been in-eased $2,000.

CORAL GABLES has completed its first unit d has landscaped the grounds beautifully. ervices are being held in the beautiful audi-rium during this summer season. It has en decided to build the new Miami University Coral Gables and this will greatly aid the urch in its educational and cultural work.

MIAMI BEACH, across Biscayne Bay from iami, is carrying on a vigorous summer pro-am. Rev. W. V. Meredith, a recent graduate Union Seminary, is now serving as summer sociate and is both preaching and leading in rious forms of community service. The urch is engaged in rounding out plans for s new church plant. The pastor, Rev. E. King, conducts a summer Bible class, and l the organizations flourish during the mmer.

Not very far north of us is WEST PALM EACH, where we have a union Congregational urch. Dr. A. G. Lyon is pastor. He has ade a considerable impression on the com-unity through a series of drama sermons on Sunday nights. He acts out a story that is based upon a true incident, and he uses stage fittings such as footlights and scenery, has the full co-operation of his choir, and dresses to represent the characters he wishes to present. After the first night his church was entirely too small to accommodate the crowds that came to see and hear. The trustees of the church are now considering building a new and much larger church.

Miami Beach, Fla. E. A. K.

With the States in Conference

Missouri Conference

The 61st Annual Meeting of the Missouri Conference was held at Westminster Church, Kansas City, May 11-13. It was preceded by a young people's institute and rally at First Church, Kansas City, at which there were 74 enrolled, some of the young people coming from across the river in Kansas City, Kan. These young people's gatherings have been held for the last five years as a part of the State Conference, in which the young people largely plan their own program and are the presiding officers and speakers. They unanimously voted as follows, at this meeting: "We recommend that some means be provided to hold similar young people's institutes in connection with the State Conference in the future for the purpose of co-ordinating the work of our young people of the Congregational Church and the State Conference."

The central theme of the conference was "Congregationalism, the Great Religious Factor in American Idealism," and different phases of this theme were emphasized throughout the meeting by the several speakers. Dr. George W. Nash brought the message of the United Boards and spoke under the following captions: "The Pilgrim Adventure," "Congregational Citizenship," "Our World-Wide Work." Dr. Albert W. Palmer of Oak Park, Ill., added greatly to the interest of the meetings by the following series of addresses: "Hawaii: A Post-Graduate Mission Field"; "Sermon Writers and Sermon Writing," and "How to Keep Friends with Japan."

The reports from committees, though printed and distributed, were commented upon, and showed satisfactory progress, especially the reports on evangelism and the Pilgrim Memorial Fund. The superintendent's report indicated a series of increases in church membership, Sunday school enrollment, young people's work, home expenses, and benevolences.

The women had their special place on the program as usual. Mrs. B. F. Finkel, president of the Missouri Branch of the W. H. M. U., outlined their year of progress, and Mrs. George M. Siemens of Kansas City read an extremely interesting paper, "Drury College and Christian Service," and reported gifts of over $8,000 the past year for additional endowment for the chair of dean of women at Drury. Mrs. C. B. Marsh, president of the Missouri Branch of the W. B. M. I., with others, gave an illuminating account of their work and the special drive for Kobe College which is now in progress.

One of the new features connected with the work of the conference the past year is the "Larger Parish Plan" for southeast Missouri, with Rev. F. G. Wangelin and family residing at Grandin. This is in co-operation with the National Home Missionary and Sunday School Extension Societies. The conference has been developing this project for five years, ever since Dr. Malcolm Dana visited Missouri and surveyed our work in connection with Noble, Willow Springs, and Grandin and outlying Sunday schools. Mr. Wangelin is a specialist in agricultural methods, as well as an efficient pastor and preacher. There is every indication of promise and enlargement in this new type of rural work.

Isles of Shoals Congregational Conference August 10-24

Delightful Fellowship. Varied Recreation. Stimulating Addresses. Reasonable Rates. See full page article in The Congregationalist of June 11th, page 757. For circulars and full information apply to ELEANOR BROOKS GULICK, Executive Secretary, Wellesley, Mass.

A pleasing social feature of the conference was the men's banquet on the first night, at which the speakers were Hon. H. M. Beardsley, ex-Moderator of the National Council, and Mayor Beach of Kansas City. On the next evening there was the women's missionary banquet, with Mrs. E. C. Ellis of Kansas City and Washington, D. C., as toastmistress. Responses were made by Mrs. Clarence Reidenbach, Mrs. Roy Chaney, and Mrs. F. G. Beardsley.

Instead of having a separate day given over to the discussion of the every member canvass and its details, as formerly, this theme was worked in as a part of the program under the title, "How the Money Comes," which was a plea from Rev. Frank Maples, formerly of East Chicago, Ind., now of Old Orchard, Mo., for a complete budgeting of all expenses, and a thorough every member canvass. This was replied to by Treasurer P. A. Griswold, on "How the Money Goes," which explained in detail our missionary expenditures. The conference adopted a home missionary budget for the ensuing year of $18,500, with an aim of $60,000 benevolences for the boards.

An item of peculiar interest to the Missourians was an address by Rev. W. C. Timmons on the proposed project for a National Congregational Church in Washington, D. C. The conference adopted a strong resolution concerning the same, pledging its help spiritually and materially to the consummating of this worthy project.

The Oregon Gathering

It is doubtful whether any state conference ever held its annual sessions under more hopeful circumstances than did the Oregon Conference which met at Oregon City, May 5-7. The entertaining church has recently dedicated a beautiful new house of worship. This building, on a new and most attractive site, replaces the old one which was burned down two years ago. Over $60,000 has gone into this new building and great credit is due, not only to the church which made notable sacrifices, but also to the pastor, Rev. Caradoc J. Morgan.

Supt. C. H. Harrison has succeeded in a notable way in realizing a growing, practical efficiency within the elastic bounds of a democratic organization. To his leadership is due, in a great measure, the enthusiasm and optimism that carried a well-planned conference to a successful issue. Under the kindly and skillful moderatorship of Dr. Frank G. Brown, a leading layman of Central Church, Salem, the program was carried out as previously arranged. The conference was notable for the fraternal spirit displayed and the attention and interest shown to all speakers whether faithful local workers or "big guns" from abroad. Everyone felt—and the young people not less than others, that they had their part and place in the meeting. During the three days about 40 local state men and women were heard from, covering every phase of denominational activity. The program was planned to interest the last man and woman and young person in the work of the Kingdom.

DELEGATES AT THE STATE CONFERENCE AT OREGON CITY

Waiting to be taken over in cars to the pulp mills. As fast as one machine was filled, another took its place.

The proposed changes in the organization of our national societies were freely discussed. Rev. Helen S. Ranney of the W. B. M. P. and Rev. George W. Hinman of the A. M. A., both from San Francisco, spoke for the present status. Dr. Horace C. Mason, of Seattle, a member of the Committee of Twelve, spoke on "What the Committee of Twelve Has Been Commissioned to Do and Some of the Problems to be Faced." Sec. C. E. Burton of New York City spoke of "The Steps Which Led to the Suggested Changes."

The discussion revealed a very decided opinion in favor of the five-society plan, but with special reference to maintaining the present status of the American Missionary Association.

The conference sermon was preached by Dr. C. G. Clark of Portland. A notable and winning visitor was Rev. Leyton Richards of Birmingham, England, the chief speaker at the dinner hour the first evening. Dr. Richards' clear thinking and courageous progress toward a restatement and frank acceptance of Christ's doctrine of non-resistance won for him the sincere admiration of all. Those whose convictions would not let them follow him in every particular could not help noting his sympathetic and understanding reaction to their position also.

Two hours were given to religious education as a special subject, but it is noteworthy that scarcely any program covering three days of denominational interest can be carried forward without the aims and plans of religious education being found prominent throughout the whole.

"The Program of the Local Church," "The Place and Part of the Young People in Church Work," "The Significance of the Ministry," "Benevolence and Evangelism," were some of the topics discussed. Dr. F. W. Hodgdon of Berkeley, Cal., and Dr. L. O. Baird of Seattle, Wash., were visitors and speakers at the c ference. Rev. L. A. Young led the devotio sessions, giving four thoughtful and help addresses on "Christian Essentials—G Christ, Sin, and Immortality." The women the Oregon City Church contributed largely the success of the conference by serving delegates sumptuous meals at reasonable ra

The closing evening was given up to young people, large delegations coming fr near-by towns and taking active part in meeting which followed.

Altogether, Oregon Congregationalists h made forward steps in the work of the chu and Kingdom. F. G

Michigan Meeting at Cadillac

A splendid attendance, inspiring progr and encouraging reports were characteris of the 83d annual meeting of the Michig Conference held in the fine new church Cadillac, May 19-21. The heartiest of welco to the conference and the city was presen by Rev. Percy V. Dawe, pastor of the Ca lac Church, and the hospitality of the chu and of the city was of the finest.

Outstanding among the many things of terest was the report of the superintendent registrar, Rev. J. W. Sutherland. For some years Dr. Sutherland has gone up and do Michigan visiting our churches, and it was welcome bit of news to hear his affirmat that the state of the churches was never m encouraging than at present. A recent qu tionnaire to the pastors of the state, to wh 90 per cent. replied, showed an active and ward moving status. The net gain in the m bership of the churches for the year was 1,7 and in the Sunday school, 639. These h been the highest gains since 1894-5, when l bering was at its peak in Michigan. amount contributed to benevolences to ap on the apportionment was $115,646. Ot items of benevolence bring the total up $202,812 for the year. Home expenses w $995,514, making the total output for year $1,198,326.

The report of the trustees, given by Chester B. Emerson, revealed one import change in the personnel of the state staff the retirement of Rev. E. R. Latham, had served the board for nearly nine years the capacity of Sunday school mission and director of religious education and yo people's work. Mr. Latham resigned to acc a call to the church at Grand Ledge. At request of the board, he will continue as rector of the Summer Assembly at Oli June 19-27. An important change, also, the state board was revealed in the resignat of the treasurer, Mr. Coleman C. Vaugh who has served in this capacity for some ye High appreciation of his services was expres by the conference. Dr. H. H. Halliday, retary of the Michigan Agricultural Coll was elected to serve in his place. The

FIRST MORTGAGES
and REAL ESTATE BONDS
Interest 7% Semi-Annually
On Improved Income Florida Real Estate
Loans confined to
Tampa and South Florida
Principal and Interest Guaranteed
Write for booklet and information
GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

The Fisk Teachers' Agencies
120 Boylston St., Boston 225 Fifth Ave., N. Y.
Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Birmingham, Chicago, Kansas City, Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles. Everett O. Fisk & Co.

An Instant Success
Hymns of the Christian Li
Edited by Milton S. Littlefield, D.D.
Published February 2nd, 1925. 8,000 s
Examination copy on request. Price $135 per
A. S. BARNES & CO., 7 W. 45th St., N

BIBLES of every descriptio size and price. B from your own Pu lishing Society.
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New York 19 S. La Salle St. Chica nce welcomed greatly the news from the tees that they had decided not to nominate uccessor to Supt. Sutherland in response to letter of resignation placed in their hands etime ago, and the conference rejoiced to

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

If a foreigner insults one of our admirals, us expend half the nation's wealth to enge our honor, but if the whole world eds the gospel, let's take up a penny col-ction!

r that he would continue to serve as super-ndent. The trustees reported that the work er Dr. Sutherland was going forward with force and efficiency.

The work of the churches in behalf of stu-ts at the University of Michigan Normal ool at Ypsilanti, and the Normal School at amazoo received attention, especially that e at the University of Michigan in our n Arbor Church. Two students of the uni-sity were present to describe the program religious and social activities carried on. grant from the conference for this work Ann Arbor was increased from $1,200 to 200 for this year.

ne of the significant losses of the year was ociated with Ann Arbor and the University Michigan, in the death of its president, Dr. rion Leroy Burton. A fitting tribute to , prepared by Dr. Herbert A. Jump of the n Arbor Church, was read at the memorial rice by Rev. O. G. Rich. One other name borne in tender remembrance at this serv- that of Rev. George Benford, who died in nd Blanc, Mich., Feb. 7, 1925.

t was a great treat and inspiration to have h us for this conference the Moderator of National Council, Dr. R. H. Potter. He ressed the conference inspiringly on the sub-, "A Congregational Christian," and at an-er session held a forum on "Congregational oblems and Possibilities." It was also our vilege to have with us Dr. Charles S. Mills New York, who gave an inspiring address "The Day of the Open Door," and also pre-ted matters concerning the Pilgrim Memo- Fund and Annuity Fund.

The Value of Religious Pageants" was in-stingly presented by Miss Alta MacLaren Lansing. Following her address a pageant presented in the church by young women Cadillac.

Prof. Frank G. Ward of Chicago Seminary ke on "How We Get Our Ministers." Pres-nt Paul Voelker of Olivet College spoke on eligion and Education," and Rev. Arie khorst spoke on "The Needs of Olivet."

Week-day religious education in the schools eived considerable attention, Mr. Charles J. or, superintendent of schools in Traverse y, describing its success in that place, and ers reporting its progress in other Michigan ns.

An interesting number on the program was ur Rural Churches in a State of Flux." r. C. H. Harger, general missionary, opened discussion with a discriminating paper on ur Situation in Michigan." He was fol-ed by Rev. A. A. Allington of Northport, Rev. Ira D. Fales of Benzonia, who gave phic descriptions of conditions in their ishes.

The sermon was preached by Rev. C. W. rriam of Grand Rapids, on the subject, he Practice of Monotheism."

The concluding address was given by Dr. H. Jump, on "The Sermon on the Mount."

Rev. W. H. Skentelbury of Charlotte, assistant moderator, presided during the conference. Dr. Chester B. Emerson of Detroit was elected moderator for the ensuing year. No place, as yet, has been selected for the next annual meeting.

Pennsylvania Conference

The meeting of the Pennsylvania State Conference, held at McKeesport, May 26-28, opened under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Association. The theme of the conference was "The Challenge of a Common Brotherhood." The moderator, assistant moderator, registrar, and treasurer come from churches which were or still are Welsh; the guests of honor were the Evangelical Protestant churches which are just coming into our denomination, of German birth. A pageant, presented by the young women of the McKeesport Church represented six nationalities. One of the most attractive musical numbers was rendered by the choir of the Allegheny Slavonic Church in their own language, and by representatives of the Duquesne Slavonic Church. An address was delivered by Rev. Harold M. Kingsley, director of Negro work in the North. Rev. Enoch Hughes, pastor of a Welsh church in Scranton, was elected moderator, and the invitation of the First Welsh Church was accepted as the meeting place in 1926.

From West to East

HAWAII

Honolulu Bible Training School

The closing exercises of the Honolulu Bible Training School were held in the Mission Memorial Building on Sunday evening, May 24. Thirty-three persons received diplomas for having completed four years' work in Bible study, and three others received certificates for part time work.

One notable feature of the occasion was the granting of Service Certificates, silver and gold seals, for Sunday school service since graduation. Twenty-one persons qualified for these special honors. Among them was Mr. Samuel K. Toomey, who has a record of 16 years' Sunday school service. He made the statement that he has only missed two or three Sundays from church and Sunday school during that period of time, and these periods of absence were due to the fact that he was away from the Islands.

It is needless to emphasize the fact that the churches of the Islands are greatly strengthened by the help which students from this institution give during their summer vacations, and one feature of the program was the signing of their names to a declaration that they will assist some Sunday school this summer. Between 50 and 60 students volunteered for this service this year.

Union Church Started at Koloa, Kauai

An experiment in friendly relations between national groups is being inaugurated in Koloa, Kauai. It ought to be of interest to the church-at-large. Koloa is a small town with a diversified population. In the town are four Congregational churches.

These have been developed from small missions among Hawaiian, Japanese, English-speaking, and Filipino people. The English-speaking work has been organized into a union church. At times it has tended to draw some of the children of the churches whose services are conducted in languages other than English. This has not developed the harmony and co-operation desired.

Recently a plan has been proposed by Rev. John P. Erdman, one of the field secretaries of the board of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association for fusing these churches into one organization, to be called the United Christian Church of Koloa. Each national group will constitute a department in the church and will handle its own budget and finances. Representatives from each department chosen by themselves will constitute the standing committee. The pastors of the departments will be associated in the new church.

There will be a united Sunday school, with groups meeting simultaneously, according to a plan to be devised by the proper representatives of the departments. The pastors of the churches that are merging into this united church are, for the Hawaiian Church (to be supplied), for the Japanese Church, Rev. T.

The Churches of the World Together for the First Time Since Nicaea

During August practically all the Protestant churches of the world, with the great Eastern Orthodox Church present also, are to meet to consider all the united activities and the problems of the universal Church.

It is to be a conference, not on doctrine, not on orders, but on the Life and Work of the Churches. It will consider what the united churches can do for the application of the Gospel to the great social, industrial, educational, and international problems now facing the world.

Representative leaders from all nations and nearly all communions, to the number of six hundred will be present.

It is hoped that some great pronouncement which shall go forth to the world as the voice of the Church Universal may issue from this conference. The bringing together of the Christians of every nation will in itself be a wonderful help toward good will.

The expense of such a gathering is very great. Several large contributions have been made, but it was thought that many would like to have some share in this great emprise who have not been personally asked to give.

There remains $10,000 still to be raised to complete America's quota. Would you not like to be one to have some part in fulfilling this obligation?

Contributions may be sent to

UNIVERSAL CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE ON LIFE AND WORK

70 Fifth Avenue, New York City

Takahashi, for the Filipino Church, Mr. C. Cortezan, and for the Union Church, Rev. E. H. Osborn. N. C. S.

CALIFORNIA

Rev. Jerome Holmes at Bakersfield

For a series of addresses on China, Rev. Jerome Holmes came six successive weeks to BAKERSFIELD in the Kern District. He gave similar instruction in the Los Angeles area. They were most inspiring and instructive. Those who heard them realize the ability of Mr. Holmes to succeed Rev. Henry Kelsey in the Pacific office of the American Board.

This is the cathedral church for Kern County, and Rev. Edgar Fuller has been the unofficial bishop for 28 years, with a devotion and sagacity much prized by his brethren. The church is fostering several branch Sunday schools.

Hollywood, Los Angeles, Rapidly Growing

On June 1, Rev. J. H. Lash of HOLLYWOOD, LOS ANGELES, left for Hillsdale College, Michigan, to attend the quinquennial reunion at his Alma Mater; thence soon to Cleveland, O., representing the Hollywood Rotary Club at the International Rotary Convention. As a member of the Sherwood Eddy Fellowship Party, he goes to London, Holland, Germany, Paris, and also to Geneva to attend the League of Nations Conference.

For the spring season, the church night was continued in the midweek meetings. Dr. Raymond Brooks of Pomona College gave a series of illuminating addresses on "The Old Religion in the New World." More recently Prof. Carl Knopf of U. S. C. has given a course of lectures upon "The Hope for the World," being studies in the apocalyptical books. A delightful annual observance in this church is the Mothers' and Daughters' banquet given by the Mothers' Club, assisted by the Senior Girl Reserves.

Straitened for room, the church has hardly completed its large parish house before it must consider plans for the main building. The land upon which the building stands, purchased for $23,000, will now bring more than $365,000.

Third Church for Long Beach

Hemmed in at the north, its natural line of expansion, by the lucrative oil fields, LONG BEACH must perforce stretch out along the coast line. Thus a new community has sprung up at Belmont Shore. The section has by comity been allotted to the Congregationalists, and work started there several months ago has prospered. About 4,000 people are in the neighborhood, and our organization is one mile fr the other nearest church, a Methodist. church was formed April 5, with 45 membe to which others are coming rapidly. Upon l donated, there will soon be commenced t first unit of a beautiful structure. Only block away, a grammar school building is r ing. At present, meetings are held in t large rooms of a real estate office. The cong gation is shaping itself into the various cieties approved for service. There is a cided community spirit prevalent. Rev. W. McCreery is the successful minister.

San Bernardino Builds Parsonage

Upon a lot given to it alongside the chur the congregation of SAN BERNARDINO ere an eight-room parsonage to cost $10,000.

Rev. H. B. Mowbray, the pastor, has l on a six months' leave of absence to attend some matters of business in the East.

This church is really famous for the nu ber of its workers in public service. Recen S. W. McNabb, a member, and mayor of t city, was appointed by the President to t office of Federal District Attorney for Sou ern California. A former member is Jud Benjamin Bledsoe of the Superior Court, L Angeles, who resigned to be candidate mayor of that city. Another in the federal se ice is Hon. Rex Goodcell, in the Revenue Off of the Department of the Interior. T principal of the high school, county super tendent of schools, president of the Y. C. A., president of the Women's Club, cou district attorney, the postmaster, as well various others in the schools and city hall, from this congregation. Mr. Mowbray built for himself a position of great influe among the men of San Bernardino.

Fellowship for Missionary Presidents at Claremont

With seven cottages completed and occup at the Missionary Home in Claremont, th are now a happy and interesting group of m sionary veterans in fellowship. In their hon Dr. and Mrs. Doremus Scudder recently ranged a reception. The guests of the Ma were: Rev. and Mrs. H. P. Perkins, forme of Paotingfu, China; Rev. and Mrs. Geo M. Rowland of Tokyo, Japan; Rev. and M A. B. Caldwell of Jhelum Punjab, India; R and Mrs. James McCann of Tientsin, Chi Miss Cornelia Bartlett, formerly of Smyr Miss Margaret W. Leitch, Miss Mary Leit and Mr. George W. Leitch, formerly of Ceyl Another guest of international interest v President Bayard Dodge of the American U versity of Beirut, who spoke at a midw meeting on the situation of American edu tion in the Near East. A dinner was given the inn for him and his party.

New Church at La Canada

Out along the ridges where the people the Los Angeles-Pasadena area like to p golf or to make their homes, something lik thousand people have gathered in the exten community called La Canada. There we h a community church, with Rev. Selwyn Eva minister. Friends have joined with memb in building a beautiful new church in stu of the Gothic type. In the auditorium th are two choice memorial windows, Hofma "Good Shepherd" and "The Ascension." Al a cloister, about the court, ten classrooms h

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

CAMPS AND VACATION PLACES

A Place to Spend a Pleasant Vacation. We can offer good rooms, good beds, good eats, good porches, in fact everything in New Boston is good. Rates reasonable. The Tavern, Frank O. Stevens, Mgr., New Boston, N. H.

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., in the vicinity of the White Mountains. We offer the comforts and conveniences needed for a successful vacation and rest. No hay fever. Lower rates to those who come in June and July. Booklet. A. J. Newman, Prop.

White Mountains, North Conway, N. H. Would you enjoy a mountain vacation, grand scenery, home cooking, all conveniences, golf, movies, etc.? Write Arthur H. Furber.

Washington, D. C. Visitors will find excellent accommodations, home-like rooms, downtown, close to White House. Restaurants near. Two blocks from Washington Auditorium. Garage on premises. Free map. Telephone Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 G St., Northwest.

REAL ESTATE

Jaffrey, N. H. For Rent—"Monadnock Rests" cottage, seven rooms and bath. Also house lots for sale. George A. Adams, East Jaffrey, N. H.

Camp to rent, July. Adults, country elevation, housekeeping conveniences. Restful surroundings, easy access to town. Price reasonable. Box E, Goffstown, N. H.

Rent-Sale—Cottages at Crystal and Platte Lakes, also hotel, Benzie County. Saunders, Beulah, Mich.

To Rent—For summer months, in beautiful college town, two small rooms. Light housekeeping privileges. Box 634, Amherst, Mass.

For Rent—By the week, month or season, one farmhouse cottage and one smaller cottage, both in Fitzwilliam, N. H. For terms write Charles E. Burbank, West Boylston, Mass.

HELP WANTED

Wanted—A young man trained and experienced in young people's work, with emphasis upon Boy Scouts and Sunday School, in large New England church. Salary made right. Give references. Address "C. B. A.," Congregationalist.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

POSITION WANTED

Opportunity as Director of Religious Education or Educational Pastor desired by college and seminary graduate, with special pedagogical training, and experience in teaching, organizing and social work. Address "D.," Congregationalist.

College junior, minister's son, desires position with family on summer vacation. Can drive car, tutor young boys. Box 493, Sharon, Mass.

SUPPLY PASTOR

Wisconsin pastor desires pulpit engagements during July and August. "Pastor," 280 Washington St., Woburn, Mass.

Wanted—Summer supply, New York City or suburb, for pastor on vacation; or in a vacant pulpit with later possible view to permanency. Credentials from leading churches in United States. Box 176, Hastings, Pa.

MISCELLANEOUS

Good printing, paper covered books, pamphlets, sermons, no hurry orders, etc. Stationery,—500 six-inch envelopes and 500 letterheads, billheads, or statements for $5.00, 1,000 for $8.50, all excellent bond paper. Religious work solicited. The Print Shop, E. Northfield, Mass.

For Sale—A church bell, good tone. Forty-eight pews, oak, comparatively new. Will seat 240 persons. Apply to W. H. Jordan, Orono, Me.

Handkerchiefs, pure linen. Special offer. Ladies' colored woven borders, assorted colors, $1.90 per dozen. Ladies' plain white, $2.50 per dozen. Men's plain white, $3.00 and $3.90 per dozen, postpaid. Heaton Mfg. Co., 8725 78th St., Woodhaven, N. Y.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

Vacation and Sunday Schools find twelve Scripture Crosswords on separate cards for individual pupils valuable for interest and instruction. $2.00 hundred. First Congregational Church, Gardner, Mass.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wastleless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

A Good Boarding Place

Are you looking for a good boarding place with a Christian family? Just try an ad in our classified columns, and you will be fully repaid for the small amount it will cost you.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

MARBLEHEAD, MASS
THE LESLIE
A quiet, cosy little House by the sea. Opens June 27
Private baths. Descriptive booklet. 21st season.

en built. A pipe organ to cost $7,000 is on e way. Next will come the church school ditorium. The cost will be about $75,000. nce the erection of the new plant, the mem- rship of the church has doubled.

rish House for Escondido

Ground has been broken at ESCONDIDO for a w parish house, 60 by 92 feet, to cost $30,000. oney has also been raised for a Pilcher pipe gan to cost $6,000.

At the annual meeting, May 8, reports for e year indicated balances in all treasuries th much the largest budget last year both r home work and for benevolences. Twenty- e members have been received, making 110 enter during the two and one-half years' inistry of Rev. W. A. Schwimley. For the ird time in this brief period, the minister's lary was increased. Into the prosperous tle city of Escondido in its charming valley, any families are moving, and our church is ert to its opportunity. C. F.

TEXAS

smissal Council at Houston

On May 29 a council met at Houston and smissed with cordial recommendation and ap- eciation of a useful five years of service ev. E. H. Willisford, Ph.D., who resigned to accept the secretaryship of the City Welfare Department. Rev. Samuel Pearson was elected moderator, Rev. Charles E. Weidner of Port Arthur, scribe.

During the five years of Dr. Willisford's pastorate some 80 members have been received, the property cleared of all encumbrances, all investments of the C. C. B. S. even having been repaid, and a small amount placed at interest for a building fund. The relation of pastor and church to the other ministers and churches of the city has been most cordial, and neighbor pastors at the council expressed the finest good will.

IOWA

Seventieth Birthday Celebration at Lewis

LEWIS has granted the pastor, Rev. W. E. Baldwin, leave of absence for the summer to enable him and his wife to visit their parents in England whom they have not seen for many years. The general prosperity of the church under the present pastorate is awakening interest in behalf of more adequate equipment for handling the social and young people's work.

Progress at Shenandoah

Since the coming of Rev. L. A. Lippitt last September, activities at SHENANDOAH have quickened along many lines. There has been a marked forward movement in the matter of religious education, missionary instruction, and wider community service. As a result of quiet but effective pastoral work 50 members have been received since Jan. 1. Three men over 55 years of age were baptized at a recent Communion service. A series of sermons preached by Mr. Lippitt on "How Some Interesting People Came to Christ" created a good deal of favorable comment. At a week-night study hour early in the year, the topic of study was "What Our Church is Doing in America." Only once did the atendance fall below 60. During the Lenten season the Fellowship of Prayer was used and only the third order for the booklet could supply the demand. Thursday of each week is given over to week-day religious education, when the children of the first six grades are dismissed from the public school and come to the church for religious instruction.

NEBRASKA

Nebraska Building Projects

GENEVA conducted the last services in their old building, Sunday, May 31. A few days later this building was wrecked to make way for the building of a new house of worship to cost $50,000. Plans have been approved by the church membership and the board of trustees have been authorized to proceed with letting of contracts as soon as the ground can be cleared.

FEDERATED, FAIRMONT (Congregational-Presbyterian), will also build a new home, for which $43,000 has been subscribed.

The church building of EXETER has been enlarged to twice its former size and finished with stucco.

NEW YORK

Rev. J. N. Atwood Leaves Berkshire

Children's Day was observed at BERKSHIRE with a fine program by the children. The pastor, Rev. J. N. Atwood, baptized twin girls, ten months old, and also received seven young people into the church on confession of faith. Since coming to Berkshire six years ago, he has taken about 40 into the church, largely young people. He leaves July 1 to accept a unanimous call to Second, North Coventry, Ct. On June 19 a largely attended reception was given Mr. and Mrs. Atwood in the church parlors. Kindly words were spoken regarding their work in Berkshire and a substantial piece of gold was presented. Best wishes of many friends follow them to their new field of labor.

CONNECTICUT

Congregational Association

The 216th annual meeting of the General Association of Congregational Ministers of Connecticut was held in the Fourth Church, Hartford, Tuesday, June 8. Dr. J. J. Dunlop, pastor of Fourth Church, Hartford, gave an address of welcome, and Dr. A. J. Lord of Meriden was chosen moderator. Dr. Oscar E. Maurer of New Haven, the retiring moderator, gave an address in which he dwelt on various evidences of the lack of completeness in the so-called Christian civilization of the day, and

Church Furniture
Pews · Pulpits · Chancel Furniture · Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
Dept. D.
CHICAGO 14 E. Jackson Blvd.
BOSTON 69 Canal St.

Pulpit Gowns
and Choir Vestments
CUSTOM TAILORING
FOR CLERGYMEN
Pulpit Hangings & Bookmarkers
Cox Sons & Vining
131-133 E. 23rd Street, New York

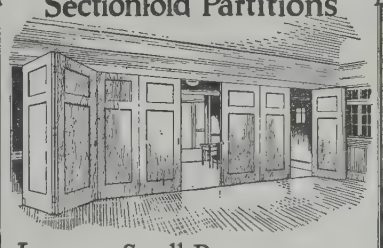
CHAIRS
designed and built for
CHURCH and SUNDAY SCHOOL
Special catalog
JOHN A. DUNN COMPANY
Established in 1839 at
Gardner Massachusetts

Individual Cups

Over 50,000 churches use Thomas Service. Self-collecting Tray saves one-fourth cost of others. Catalog and Trial Free.
Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 5 Lima, Ohio.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1114 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND 220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

Wilson
Sectionfold Partitions


Large or Small Rooms
As Occasion Demands
WITH Wilson Sectionfold Partitions a large room can be easily and quickly subdivided into several small ones, suitable for meetings and classes of various sizes. Adaptable to old buildings as well as new.
Send for 40 page Catalog No. 11
THE J. G. WILSON CORPORATION
ESTABLISHED 1876
11 East 36th Street New York City
Offices in all principal cities

Church
EMBROIDERIES, ALTAR LINENS
PULPIT GOWNS, CLERGY AND
CHOIR VESTMENTS, CLERICAL
CLOTHING Estimates on Request
J. M. HALL, Inc.
9 East 35th St., New York
Tel. Caledonia 8648

ESTEY
PIPE AND REED ORGANS
Estey Organ Co.
Brattleboro Vermont

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
79 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B.

urged the need of bringing the Gospel to bear on life. Rev. Robert E. Carter of Washington spoke on a sin which he defined as the endeavor to hurry God. Rev. Walter B. Williams of Danielson spoke on "The Minister's Problem of Reality" and Rev. A. B. Patten of Torrington on "The Discovery and Development of Personality." Supper was served by the women of the church, and in the evening Senator Hiram Bingham spoke on "Law and Order," pointing the strain put on the law-abiding spirit by the multiplicity of laws and especially where laws were enacted which did not express the crystalized public opinion.

MASSACHUSETTS

Dr. Madsen Ten Years at Gloucester

The pastor, Rev. Albert A. Madsen, Ph.D., completed ten years of his ministry at TRINITY, GLOUCESTER, on June 1. For this occasion the church clerk, John J. Pew, collected the following statistics for these ten years. (Deacon Pew has been a deacon of Trinity Church for 51 years and clerk for 35 years.) Members received into the church, on confession of faith 222, by letter 82, a total of 304. The present membership is 546, a net increase of 153. Baptisms, infants 288, adults 77, a total of 365. Marriages 176. Funerals 342. The attendance in the Sunday school is better than at any time during the past decade. The average for the present year is 25 above that of the same period last year.

During these ten years the church raised for benevolences $29,290, for church expenses $80,575, for Sunday school expenses $5,632, for building and improvements, including the new parish house, $44,478, a total of $159,975. In addition there are outstanding pledges to the building fund totaling about $10,000. Five thousand dollars has been added by legacy from the late John Gott, to the endowment fund; and under the will of Mrs. Clara T. Perkins the endowment fund will receive $8,000, and three women's organizations of the church a total of $2,000. By the will of Miss Ida Tappan $200 will come to the foreign and home missionary departments of the woman's association.

Mr. Pew notes that for the four years 1921-1924 when the church was paying for its parish house and extensive improvements on the church edifice, the benevolences amounted to $19,688, an average of $4,922.

Mortgage Burning at West Roxbury

WEST ROXBURY, BOSTON, Rev. E. H. Byington, pastor, celebrated its 90th anniversary in June by burning the mortgage which was placed on the church when it was remodeled ten years ago. At the anniversary Communion the pewter bread plates, given by Judge Hubbard of Boston when the church was organized, were brought out after nearly half a century of retirement for service once more, and the pewter font of the same set was used in the baptism of children. Dr. Frank W. Merrick, a former pastor, assisted at the Communion service, making the principal address.

The 90th year has brought many of the activities of the church to a new high point of enthusiasm and achievement. It is the first year in its history that has witnessed the addition of more than 100 to the church roll, which now numbers 800. The congregations on Sunday mornings have been unusually large, ordinarily filling the church. To accommodate all on Easter, two Sunday morning services were held, one at nine, and the other at ten-thirty, the pastor preaching the same sermon at both. The total attendance at the two was 1,215, the seating capacity of the church being 700.

A Gift of Chimes to First, Braintree

FIRST, BRAINTREE, has received from Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Jackson a chime of bells in memory of their daughter, Mrs. Edith Jackson Holbrook. On Sunday, June 14, the bells were dedicated with appropriate services, Rev. E. A. Leslie officiating in the enforced absence of the pastor, Rev. Harry Grimes. The evening following a recital was given by Chester Meneely of New York which attracted wide attention.

Grace Church, Holyoke, Stresses Religious Education

In the past eight months, two friends of GRACE, HOLYOKE, have made "dollar for dollar" gifts amounting to $5,300. Of this sum, $2,300 is to be spent in bettering the department of religious education. Miss Isabelle Chute, formerly on the staff of Campello, Brockton, and a recent graduate of the Hartford School of Religious Education, has been placed at the head of this department. Newell Townsend of Bates College has been secured for a term of three months for special work with boys and young men. Milton Shattuck Mulloy, of Waterbury, Ct., is the Amherst College representative on the vacation school faculty. Grace Church now has three men and two women employed the year round on full time, and ten additional workers employed on part time. Pilgrim House has recently been rebuilt and now contains on the ground floor the Grace Church press, the beginners' department, and the women's room, the home of the famous class taught by Mrs. Robinson, out of which over 75 young women have been married. In the upper stories are attractive apar ments for the sexton, and for the manager the printing department.

Church and Ministerial Recor

Calls

ATWOOD, J. N., Berkshire, N. Y., to North Co entry, Ct. Begins July 1.

BAKER, M. W., Anti-Saloon League, Topek Kan., to acting pastorate, St. Mary's. At wor

CLARKE, H. E., Plainfield, N. J., to Mt. Morr Baptist, New York City. Accepts.

JOHNSON, H. C., Washburn College, Topeka, Kar to acting pastorate, Athol. At work.

JONES, J. L., Almena, Kan., to Plevna. At wor

LUDWIG, W. E., Reformed, Lincoln, Neb., to Fe erated, Carbondale, Kan. At work.

PHILLIPPI, H. R., Glendive, Mont., to Columbu

SELIGER, C. H. B., Camden, Me., to Walnut Hi At work.

WESTWOOD, F. W., Manitoba, Canada, to Universi Park, Portland, Ore. Accepts.

WILSON, C. W., United Parish, Orono, Me., First, Woodbury, Ct. Accepts.

Resignations

STARK, C. W., Earlville, Ia. Effective Aug. 30.

Ordinations

BUTT, GEORGE, o., Johnson, Vt., May 6. Serm by Dr. W. C. Graham; other parts by Re Messrs. I. C. Smart, Stanley Cummings, E. Hays, E. R. Gordon, A. B. Ross, William M ler, H. M. Bartlett, and W. C. Clark.

Accessions

	Conf.	Tot
ARIZONA
Phoenix, First	13	1
MASSACHUSETTS
Haverhill, Riverside	8
NEW YORK
Orwell	3
NORTH DAKOTA
Argusville	4
Beach	5
Berthold	6
Bordulac	8	1
Carrington	15	1
Crary

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA
Sixtieth Year Opens August 17, 1925
Prepares men and women for
The Pastorate — Social Service
Religious Education — Foreign Service
Research
Practical Instruction. Opportunities for Self-Support.
Facilities of University of California.
Graduate Degrees. Faculty of Ten.
Modern and Commodious Buildings under Construction.
COME TO CALIFORNIA TO STUDY
HERMAN F. SWARTZ, President

Gordon
A Graduate School of Theology and Missions, of high scholastic standards and evangelical loyalty. Degree of B.D.
Theological, Missionary, Religious-Educational College course of 4 years, college standards, broad curriculum. Degree of Th.B.
NATHAN R. WOOD, President
Gordon College of Theology and Missions, Boston, Mass.

GRINNELL
A College of Liberal Arts for Men and Women.
Applications for admission in September, 1925, are now being received.
An illustrated booklet will be sent on request.
Address:
Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, (Dept. C.)

Bangor Theological Seminary
The 110th year opens Sept. 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor, Maine.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

MILWAUKEE-DOWNER COLLEGE
Milwaukee, Wisconsin
Standard Academic Courses for B.A. and B.S. Degrees.
A Four-Year Course in Home Economics for the B.S. Degree.
A Four-Year Course with a major in Fine and Applied Arts or in Music, for the Degree of B.S. in Arts.
A Two- or Three-Year Academic Course, completed by work in an approved hospital, for the Degree of B.S. in Nursing.
A Three-Semester Diploma Course in Occupational Therapy, completed by work in approved hospitals.
MISS LUCIA R. BRIGGS, President
For catalogue address the Registrar

SEA PINES School of Personality for Girls
THOMAS BICKFORD, Founder
Outdoor life. Training in self-discovery and self-directi Stimulating ideas of health, responsibility, Christian fluence. One hundred acres, pine groves, seashore. Coll Preparatory, Cultural, Secretarial and Athletic courses. A Crafts. Dramatics. Music. Corrective Gymnastics. Rec tion Camp July and August. Summer Courses and Coun orship Training for older girls and young women.
Miss Faith Bickford, Miss Addie Bickford, Directors
Box V, Brewster, Mass.

The Training School at Vineland, New Jerse Devoted to the interests of the whose minds have not developed normally. Schools, shops, farm research laboratory. $1,200 per annum. E. R. Johnston Director. C. Emerson Nash, Superintendent, Box 4

	Conf.	Total
kinson	10	11
ke	1	1
elson	25	26
in	13	14
go, First	15	33
sher	28	34
dner	4	4
nd Forks	4	11
nkinson	8	9
rvey	4	4
ttinger	18	20
lsboro	3	5
nestown	11	12
ldeer	9	9
kota	5	6 ds	2	2
rmarth	7	7
x		4
dora	1	1
tt	2	9
gree		3
gan		4
gent	17	18
nborn	12	14
keston	5	7
va	1	1
hpeton	23	27
lliston	40	45

Personals

LINGER, Rev. E. S., general missionary in regon, has been seriously ill with penumonia at followed an attack of pleurisy. For two eeks he lay in his home in Portland in an ceedingly critical condition. His many friends joice that he is now well on the road to covery.

ON, Dr. Edward D., who has had temporary arge of Pilgrim Church, undenominational, ew Bedford, Mass., will close his work there ly 1.

NS, Rev. and Mrs. G. H., Newtown, Ct., on eir recent silver wedding anniversary were ven a reception in the social rooms of the urch and were presented with a purse of oney.

D, Edwin C., prominent in the West Somerlle, Mass., Church, and Miss Cornelia E. erth, Milwaukee, Wis., were married, June , at Littleton, Mass., by Rev. H. E. Titus of anover. All the principals are members of is year's graduating class of the School of eligious Education and Social Service, Boston niversity. Mr. Field plans to continue studies Harvard Divinity School.

SON, Rev. D. A., who recently retired from e pastorate of Westbrooke, Me., was given a rewell luncheon by the Cumberland Fraterty of Congregational Ministers. Mr. Hudson as gone to the church at Charlemont, Mass.

VITT, Rev. Burke F., is now living with his n, Rev. Ashley Day Leavitt, at 35 Vernon ., Brookline, Mass.

GAN, Dr. C. L., who has completed 50 years the ministry, was given a reception and nner by the congregation of his church, Payon Park, Belmont, Mass., June 2, in commemoation of the event. After supper addresses ere made by Theodore Spadtmiller of Central hurch, Jamaica Plain, where Mr. Morgan was astor for ten years; Rev. H. F. Smith of est Medford, whose pulpit Dr. Morgan supplied while Mr. Smith was overseas; Rev. W. . Macnair of Prospect St., Cambridge; Rev. . J. White of the Belmont St. Baptist Church, elmont; Rev. C. F. Weeden, Newton Center; ev. W. R. Campbell of Highland, Roxbury, epresenting the; Suffolk South Association; ev. S. H. Woodrow of Newton Highlands; ev. C. H. Patton of the American Board; ev. A. F. Pierce of Shawmut, Boston, and ev. E. D. Eaton, formerly president of Beloit ollege. Letters of congratulation were read om Rev. J. G. Taylor, Arlington, and from lymouth Church, Minneapolis, with which Dr. Iorgan united when a boy. The parish preented their pastor with a large radio set.

ART, Dr. George T., Cambridge, Mass., vice-resident of the board of trustees of Wheaton ollege, Norton, Mass., is serving as acting resident of Wheaton.

Events to Come

National Council of Congregational Churches, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

Thirtieth International Christian Endeavor Convention, Portland, Ore., July 4-9.

Isles of Shoals Congregational Summer Conference, Star Island, off Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 10-24.

Northern New England School of Religious Education, University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H., Aug. 10-17.

Northfield Summer Conferences

Woman's Interdenominational Home Mission Conference, July 6-14.

Conference for Women's Foreign Missionary Societies, July 14-22.

Conference of Religious Education, July 23-Aug. 1.

General Conference of Christian Workers, Aug. 1-17.

Massachusetts Christian Endeavor Institute, Aug. 17-24.

Deaths

REV. JAMES A. ADAMS, D.D.

Rev. James A. Adams, D.D., died at his home in Washington, D. C., on June 4, aged 83 years. He was husband of the late Mrs Emma Maunder Adams and father of Mortimer V. Adams of 1320 North Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. The burial was at Arlington Cemetery, Washington, D. C.

Dr. Adams was pastor of the Warren Avenue and Millard Avenue Congregational Churches in Chicago for many years. He was editor of the Advance for ten years and connected in an editorial capacity with that paper for thirty years.

LOST!

WHAT? BATES HALL

WHERE? THORSBY INSTITUTE, Thorsby, Alabama

WHEN? April 27, 1925

HOW? Midnight Fire

$30,000 needed to replace loss.
Thorsby people will give $3,000.

The only white school in the state aided by the Congregationalists.

Our Friends will be Friends indeed if they will help in our time of need by sending their checks to Helen C. Jenkins, Principal, or E. W. Butler, Treasurer, Thorsby, Alabama.

HARTFORD

W. Douglas Mackenzie
President

Theological Seminary
Dean, M. W. Jacobus

School of Religious Pedagogy
Dean, E. H. Knight

Kennedy School of Missions
Dean, E. W. Capen

Through these associated schools Hartford offers full training for:

1. The Christian ministry.
2. Religious education and social service.
3. The foreign field.

Each School has its independent faculty and its own institutional life, and together they form one interdenominational institution with the unity of common aim and spirit.

HARTFORD SEMINARY FOUNDATION, HARTFORD, Conn.

HAVE YOU MADE YOUR WILL?

Remember the enduring work of The Chicago Theological Seminary. Established in 1855, this Institution has sent out more than 2,000 trained leaders, into fields of Christian Service. It needs your help for a larger service.

"Where There's a WILL, There's a Way!"

Write for special booklet on Wills.

OZORA S. DAVIS, President,
5757 University Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

A Congregational preparatory school with a moderate tuition. 113th year opens Sept. 16th. High elevation. Nine buildings. 100-acre farm. Separate dormitories for boys and girls. Gymnasium. Playing fields. Outing club.
DR. FRANCIS E. CLARK, President of Trustees. CHARLES ALDEN TRACY, A.M., Headmaster, Meriden, N. H.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong
Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady, Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Henry Smith Leiper, M.A., Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries

Rev. A. V. Bliss, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York.
Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.
Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD O PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit plies and Congregational ministers seeking torates. Maintained by the Congregational ferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Co Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chair

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secre and Missionary Education Secre
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and A Education Secre
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Secre
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Educa Program including Social Service, Missio Education, Student and Young People's W aids Ministerial Students, University Pas directs campaign to secure Recruits for Chris Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of denomination for the publication and distribu of The Congregationalist, church school e ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, teac magazines, children's and young people's we papers, and books for home and church use, book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Man
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregation
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusett
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinoi

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Cong tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Tr Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTE 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hur Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PAC 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIO FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSIO UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasu Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Cong tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIET constituent of the Congregational Home Mis ary Society, represents the churches of Mass setts in their home missionary work. The So solicits bequests, pays annuities on condit gifts, administers trust funds for churches. erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Se Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Bost

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Co bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object i establishment and support of Evangelical Co gational Churches and Sunday Schools in Bo and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirel Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites tributions for this purpose. Bequests and An Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Sup tendent; Rev. William F. English, Treas Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICU constituent of the National Society, solicits tributions, administers Special Trust for Chu and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. Willia English, Treasurer, Congregational House, ford.

Our Readers' Forum

(Continued from page 21)

ol, and Glastonbury. In 1888 he removed asadena. A son, William R., who was ied to become a leading figure in Pasa- s development and in California finan- ircles, had preceded him by a year. The r had regarded himself as a retired min- but, invited to gather a Sunday school ne northern edge of the young city, he merican Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congrega- tional Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Con- gregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gather- ings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches.

uests and Annuities are solicited in order that House may be freed from mortgage indebted- and the Association thus enabled to furnish Missionary Organizations with business offices minimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hub- l, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 on Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

acon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816

ne visitation and personal missionary service nnection with our churches. Emergency re- Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contribu- and legacies gratefully received and scrupu- administered.

m Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. r, Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

orated 829 Boston Reorganized 1922 man's Friend Society, Inc.

s Society, reorganized 22, now fully rep- s the Congregational hes of New England practical, social and us work among sea- Has finely equipped ls at 287 Hanover Boston, and at Vine- Haven, and Reading s at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. Society provides dormitory accommodations, g and recreation rooms, religious services, ables, and games of many kinds, a restau- a canteen, shower baths, postal and bank- acilities. Donations and bequests solicited. lbutions received on an annuity basis. Pres- Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., . Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore sfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; , Charles F. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. Franklin P. Shumway; Office 618 Con- ional House.

erican Seamen's Friend Society

Incorporated 1833

only American undenominational interna- and national Society aiding seamen. ntains a Sailors' Home and Institute at est Street, New York City. n libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing New York. BLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00). owrecked and destitute seamen aided. PPORTED by contributions and legacies. N B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE Y WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary. RENCE C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 76 Wall St., York, to whom contributions may be sent.

merican Sunday School Union

delphia, Pa. Founded 1817

ional, Interdenominational. Establishes and ains Union Sunday Schools in the outlying districts of the country. Publishes and ates moral and religious literature. Helps urches of Christ by its pioneer and founda- work, not duplicated by any other agency. rted by voluntary gifts. Contributions so- . Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. ibutions and communications relative to in any part of the country may be sent to ew England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

gave himself to the enterprise, organizing the North (now Pilgrim) Congregational Church, and continued as its pastor 18 years. When, in 1906, he resigned, his pastorate had attained a length surpassing any in the Southern California Conference. He then became pastor emeritus, which office he still holds.

Four years ago, while in excellent health, he was suddenly stricken with total blindness. This affliction, added to the burden of years, has largely cut Mr. Staats off from previous associations. Fortunately possessed of sufficient means and enjoying devoted wifely care, his situation is made easier than would otherwise be possible. He retains to an unusual degree his faculties, other than sight. Parishioners or their descendants from his Connecticut parishes occasionally visit him or cheer him with their written messages. He delights to recall intimate association with some of the "giants" of two generations ago—Leonard Bacon, Henry Ward Beecher, and others; but he is also keenly alert to the current life of our churches and of the Kingdom. Warmly evangelical in spirit, he has been intellectually progressive, never ceasing to believe that "God hath more truth and light yet to break out of His Holy Word." Mr. Staats' successors and associates in the Pasadena pastorate testify to the fine courtesy and unfailing loyalty with which this pastor emeritus has sustained them as they have led their church, sometimes in new paths.

Continuously for 65 years he has taken The Congregationalist, and now in his blindness, as it is read to him weekly, his interest in it is unabated. G. M. M.

Announcement

From the Nominating Committee of the National Council of Congregational Churches

As provided in the constitution of the National Council, the Nominating Committee hereby nominates the following two committees for the meeting to be held at Washington, Oct. 20-28, 1925.

Any delegate or member of the churches who desires to bring matters before these committees can do so by addressing the chairman of either committee.

MRS. FRANK F. FERRY, Secretary,
391 Sheridan Road, Winnetka, Ill.

BUSINESS COMMITTEE OF NATIONAL COUNCIL

Rev. Albert W. Palmer, Oak Park, Ill., Chairman
Mrs. H. F. Swartz, Berkeley, Cal.
Mr. William Green, Waterbury, Ct.
Mr. H. M. Pflager, St. Louis, Mo.
Rev. Lloyd Douglas, Akron, O.
Rev. William F. Frazier, Burlington, Vt.
Rev. Henry K. Booth, Long Beach, Cal.
Rev. Charles S. Hager, Albany, N. Y.

COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS, NATIONAL COUNCIL

Rev. Henry L. Bailey, Longmeadow, Mass., Chairman
Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, New York City, Ex-Officio Secretary
Rev. Theodore R. Faville, Madison, Wis.
Rev. Charles C. Merrill, Chicago, Ill.
Mrs. D. Foster Updike, Glen Ridge, N. J.
Rev. William P. Harmon, Ticonderoga, N. Y.
Dr. Edwin G. Warner, New York City
Rev. Warren J. Moulton, Bangor, Me.
Rev. George W. Hinman, San Francisco, Cal.

RISIBLES

"I am very much surprised to hear that they are married; I thought he was merely flirting with her."

"He thought so, too."—Collier's.

She—"Here's the paper says a lawyer told a man in court that he was particeps criminis in the affair. What does that mean, William?"

He—"My dear, you ought not to ask me to explain such things to you before the children."—Baltimore American.

Stage-struck Maiden (after trying her voice)—"Do you think I can ever do anything with my voice?"

Stage Manager—"Well, it may come in handy in case of fire."—Pearson's Weekly.

"What do you make a week?" said the magistrate to an Italian organ-grinder.

"Four pounds, sare."

"What, four pounds for grinding an organ?"

"No, sare; not for da grind—but for da shut up and go away."—Continent.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder* and *The Advance

July 2, 1925

Vol. CX No. 27

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook 3
Editorial—The Late Senator La Follette 4
Personal Liberty: Ban and Beer
Are We Going Backward or Forward?
From Our Western Editor 8
The Progression of Our National Hymns, by William Allen Knight 9
The Author of a Great National Anthem, by Beatrice York Houghton 10
The Parable of the Millionaire-Washerladies 11
A Matter of National Honor, by William B. Pinkerton
The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches, by Daniel Evans 13
Universal Peace, by Nellie H. Evans 13
New Departures in Japan, by Hilton Pedley 14
Along Our Stream of Freedom 15
Vital Questions for Congregationalists 16
Among the New Books 17
Our Invalid Parish—Loose Imaginings 18
Closet and Altar 18
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic 18
The Congregationalist's Bible Class 19
Women's Foreign Missionary Conference at Northfield 19
Good Days, by Heloise M. B. Hawkins 19
With the Children—Prize Packages, by Rose Brooks—Scarin' the Ghosts, by George H. Credeford 20
With the Schools and Colleges 21
Our Readers' Forum 21
News of the Churches 22
Announcement 31

JESUS AND THE JURY

A Living Faith for Living Men

By ASHLEY DAY LEAVITT

Minister of Harvard Church, Brookline, Massachusetts

In this series of addresses the writer has seized u pon the interesting coincidence in the number of the disciples and the traditional jury. Other striking parallels are pointed out; the presentation of the evidence, the reaching of the verdict.

This is made the basis of a strong appeal for the competence of the average man in judgment on moral and spiritual questions. It is not an attempt to state conclusions, but to open the way for each man to form and stand by his own convictions.

These addresses have been given in many schools and colleges, as well as in the writer's church, and they have been published at the repeated requests of interested listeners who wished to have them in this permanent form. Price, $1.00

A List of Miscellaneous New Titles

Of Equal Interest to Ministers and Laymen

EMPTY CHURCHES The Rural-Urban Dilemma

Charles Josiah Galpin

A systematic analysis of the forces which are emptying our rural churches and of the remedies which will fill them again. "Economic dissipation," says Mr. Galpin, "is a sin of the church." Extensive investigations which he has conducted as a government expert reveal the startling fact that three million dollars is spent every year to keep competing churches alive. Such economic waste the writer calls a sin against the layman in the name of religion. $1.00

THE DOCTRINE OF THE INFALLIBLE BOOK

Bishop Charles Gore

"Dr. Charles Gore stands forth as the champion of a sane Biblical criticism. His able defence of the rights of reasonable and temperate criticism is welcome. . . . He writes this little book at the request of the Student Christian Movement, to replace this old-fashioned belief by a better, which maintains that inspiration does not necessarily involve infallibility or absolute accuracy in matters of historical detail. Dr. Gore's putting of the broad case for reverent freedom in our attitude to criticism cannot fail to be helpful."—The Epository Times. $1.00

OUT-OF-DOORS WITH JESUS

Bishop William A. Quayle

There is no attempt to make a theological study of Jesus based upon His teaching and His deeds. But the spirit, teaching, and purpose of Jesus are disclosed in this spiritually sympathetic inquiry into His relationship with God's great out-of-doors and the wonderful life that He found there, and in which He exulted, for, as Bishop Quayle says, "His shadow is cast on a sun dial out in the open sky." $1.50

THE GOSPEL OF JOHN Benjamin W. Robinson

A Handbook for Christian Leaders

The writer has written his whole book in accordance with the suggestion contained in the following quotation: "What a considerable and beneficent revolution would take place in teaching and writing if a teacher should in writing a practical handbook 'confine himself . . . to telling only such facts as play so important a part in his own everyday thinking that he could recall them without looking them up.'" That message of good cheer will sell his book to hosts of men who have floundered about in the bogs of the technical commentators of whom the Gospel of John has been a conspicuous victim. $2.25

THE CHURCH OF THE SPIRIT

A Brief Survey of the Spiritual Tradition in Christianity

Francis Greenwood Peabody

What kind of Church, it is asked in the present volume, will represent a spiritual Christianity? What will be the internal dangers which it must encounter? What will be the external enemies which it must overcome? How shall the Church of the Spirit militant become at last the Church of the Spirit triumphant? $2.00

JESUS AS OTHERS SAW HIM Joseph Jacobs

A Jewish View of the Life of the Nazarene

The life story of Jesus is here told vividly and dramatically in the form of a series of epistles, giving a contemporary picture of the time, purporting to have been written in the year 54 A.D. to Aglaophonos, Physician of the Greeks at Corinth, from Meshullam Ben Zadok, a Scribe of the Jews at Alexandria. Illumined by a marvelous sweep of imagination, this book also bears the stamp of the scholarship and literary genius of one of the most distinguished modern English critics, who was also the leading Jewish literary figure of his day. $2.50

WHY I AM A SPIRITUAL VAGABOND

Thomas L. Masson

Thomas L. Masson is an editor of The Saturday Evening Post and was for twenty-eight years editor of Life. Why I Am a Spiritual Vagabond is a call to spiritual vagabonds all over the world. Mr. Masson gets directly at the heart of religious controversy in this new book, tells of his own conversion, and shows how peace can come through spiritual development and discipline. He interprets the sayings of Christ from practical experience, showing that as He lived so we must live, without withdrawing in any way from the world or limiting ourselves in our daily lives and contact with others. $2.00

SCIENCE AND RELIGION J. Arthur Thomson

The author's aim has been to show that the results of modern scientific research and discovery cannot be regarded as antithetic to religious interpretation. It sets before the reader the work of science and shows that the scientific account of nature is essentially in agreement with the religious vision. This internationally famous scientist discusses in an unusually interesting, suggestive, and clarifying manner Science and Religion and the so-called conflict between them. $2.00

A WAY TO PEACE, HEALTH, AND POWER

Bertha Conde

This is a book which will steady the thinking of those who are looking for a rational, constructive faith, and who need new reasons for confidence in the philosophy and the inevitable triumph of Jesus Christ. It may be used for personal study in order to discover the methods by which mind, body, and spirit may disclose God as a reality and as an adequate power for transcendent living. It is equally valuable as a text-book for discussion groups through the use of the suggested collateral reading. $1.50

THE CREATIVE SPIRIT An Inquiry into American Life

Rollo Walter Brown

A timely and invigorating discussion of the forces that are stifling the creative spirit in American life today. Mr. Brown, not content to inveigh with brilliance and wisdom against the mechanical and deadening influences in the present standardization of education, art, and science, also shows how they may be overcome and life freed of their restrictions. $2.50

Congregational Publishing Society

(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston

19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 28 July 9, 1925

First Congregational Church, Ansonia, Connecticut

Which recently celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary

"JONAH"—A Sermon for Boys and Girls

By Charles E. Jefferson

WHAT KIND OF PATRIOTIC EDUCATION DO WE WANT?

By Jerome Davis

FROM NOW UNTIL THE MEETINGS of the National Council at Washington in October, there will be discussed in our columns vital problems that must come before that body. To delegates these articles will be of inestimable value and of great interest to every loyal Congregationalist.

The meetings will be reported in careful detail so that to the farthest outposts of the denomination the messages and decisions may be spread.

The Congregationalist

$3.00 per year
$2.75 in Church Clubs

14 Beacon Street
Boston

19 S. La Salle Street
Chicago

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | July 9, 1925 | No. 28

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh — News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D. — Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis, Minn.
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York City
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

Editorial

"Thinking Through Our Task"

WE wish that every one in the Congregational fellowship could read the address under the above title delivered by Superintendent Charles C. Merrill, of Illinois, at the Eighty-Second Annual Meeting of the Congregational Conference of that state. It is published as a supplement to the June number of the Pilgrim Outlook, the monthly organ of the Illinois Congregational Churches. We have just read it carefully, and may emphasize some of its most salient points.

Dr. Merrill in listening to Dr. Watts O. Pye describe the methods followed in evangelizing the Province of Shansi in China, has been stimulated to consider what might be accomplished in the home field if in relation to all the problems and tasks of the church, the ministry, and the denominational fellowship we could be led to apply the "combination of genuine religion with high intelligence," which has enabled Dr. Pye and his associates to achieve such remarkable results.

In the local church, where we begin in Congregationalism, and with which, as Dr. Merrill truly says, Congregationalism stands or falls, this principle means the most thoroughgoing study of the field for the bringing of Christianity, under the most intelligent program and purpose, into the most vital contact with the individual and the community. Dr. Merrill quotes Dr. Pye as follows:

I think it is important that we try to get each preacher and his church to map out some sort of definite plan for the conquest of the field allotted to that church, a plan which reaches through several years, if possible, and then let the carefully planned work of each year, each month, and each day be making some definite contribution to that end or goal. To work haphazard without a clear vision of the goal or end in view and without a known plan is to waste a lot of effort and time. We must have a conception of the work. It is no use to grope about at random. There must be strategy in the campaign; there must be proportion and horizon in the outlook; there must be some clearness of vision of the work to be done and the best way of doing it.

Dr. Merrill offers some valuable suggestions for such a study of the field, with the conclusion that where a church is not making healthy progress instead of the frequent prescription of a change of pastors there might often be more effectually substituted a change of program on the part of pastor and people.

Much the greater part of Dr. Merrill's address is devoted to the need of thinking through the problem of the ministry and its present situation. The concern that he expresses for the ministry cannot but be shared by every man whose contacts with churches and ministers are at all wide and intimate. We have long felt the serious, if not tragic, aspect of personal and denominational problems relating to the ministry, about which little is being said, regarding which there would appear to be almost a conspiracy of silence. We have been planning shortly to devote considerable space in The Congregationalist to frank discussion of these matters. Meanwhile Dr. Merrill has most surely touched upon the tender and difficult places. He has spoken from the standpoint of fundamental sympathy with the minister, but he has spoken with the critical temper of one who hears the complaints of the churches, as well as the ministers' side of the case. He thinks that if it be cynically asked, What Ails Our Ministers? as it is asked, What Ails Our Youth? the reply must be largely in the same terms that Dr. George A. Coe has replied to the latter question. The trouble is not so much with the ministers as with the age. With keen thrust Dr. Merrill defends the ministry at one of the most common points of attack—the matter of church attendance and the failure to win large congregations.

It may well be asked [he says] if fifty years ago, with the automobile in existence, together with the magazines and the Sunday paper, the plethora of books and other influences that could be named, including the radio, there would have been any greater proportionate church attendance then than there is today.

But none the less, Dr. Merrill expresses the opinion that "take it by and large, the morale of the ministry is not at all sufficient for the present-day need." The reasons for this, he thinks, are not far to seek, and several of them he emphasizes forcefully. First is the question of salary, which in many cases is still inadequate. He points out that in Illinois during the last decade the average salary of the Congregational ministry has almost doubled. It is now $2,183 where ten years ago it was $1,193, but even this higher average means that many ministers are still receiving considerably under $2,000, and Dr. Merrill expresses the opinion that "we ought to come rather quickly to the time when no well-trained and competent Congregational minister shall receive less than $2,000 and parsonage, no matter where he is located."

In the increasing demand for young men, Dr. Merrill indicates, the churches are unconsciously seriously weakening the ministry and embarrassing the future. Far-seeing young men, he points out, will not be attracted to a work, no matter how high, under conditions where there is to be no job for them at fifty or fifty-five.

Moreover [he continues], an undue demand for young men produces anxiety, a sense of injustice, a lowered morale, all along the line of the ministry. Morale is also lowered by the fact that frequently when a man has reached the age of fifty or fifty-five he sees that he has struck the grade in which he must forthwith remain, if, indeed, a lower grade does not come to him. He loses hope and he loses heart and the church to which he ministers suffers accordingly.

How under these conditions may the ministry display a strength that shall overcome the lowering tendencies of the age? Dr. Merrill thinks that there ought to be higher standards and a more crucially selective process developed, not at ordaining councils, but at the very first portals to the ministry. He thinks that this selective process should more stress the quality of leadership as essential, no matter what may be a man's other gifts. He thinks, also, that in the seminary years there ought to be the most definite training of leaders in relation to the exact conditions under which leadership is to be given—something along the line of what Dr. Arthur E. Holt is developing in a course in Chicago Theological Seminary "in which specific parishes are being considered and men are being asked to prepare solutions for the particular problems of those parishes."

In addition to these suggestions for producing a better, and better-trained, ministry, Dr. Merrill inquires why there might not be similar summer courses or post-graduate courses in leadership for men now in the ministry. He thinks, also, that the right type of man from outside might visit a minister on his field, talk over his problems and offer suggestions, in much the same way, we suppose, that business organizations call in an expert from time to time. Dr. Merrill thinks that the Congregational ministry "just now is fairly full and that there is no great call for a particular increase in quantity." There will have to be a yearly addition of properly qualified men, and he thinks that there is need of careful study of the reason why so few ministers are coming from Congregational homes. This does not mean, however, that there need be "any kind of hectic campaign on the ground that there are too few ministers."

A final section of Dr. Merrill's address dealt in a rather fundamental way with the thinking through of the problems of the corporate life of the Congregational fellowship. We shall refer later to this section of the address.

Larger Tasks for Local Churches

ATTENTION is called to a letter in this issue from Rev. E. Tallmadge Root, Secretary of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches, regarding a recent editorial reference to Union Churches. Mr. Root has in some measure misunderstood the nature and purpose of that reference. There was in our mind no intended assumption that "Union Churches are rivals of denominational churches," and we thought that careful emphasis was laid upon the formative character of most Union Churches and the weakness often inevitably arising from the local conditions which they have been organized to meet. What we had in mind was to emphasize what Mr. Root himself expresses so well—that in the main "there has been no machinery, such as a denomination provides to bring before them [i.e., the Union Churches] the opportunity and obligation to share in world evangelism."

We are glad to know that this need is being met, and if leadership everywhere is as intelligent and as efficient in organizational and spiritual ways as the leadership that Mr. Root is giving in Massachusetts, the "State Federation of Churches" may become a very effective agency for the development of fellowship and world service in the Union Churches.

Mr. Root refers to the Union Churches as mostly unaided. It must be recognized that much of the strength claimed for denominationalism, and much of its actual power for good or evil, has been in its ability to aid local churches. Union Churches, except where they have some peculiarity of organization, are mostly Congregational in form. The Congregational churches have been becoming more "denominational," not in sectarian spirit or purpose, but as churches, individually as free and simple in their organization as Union Churches, seeking to develop through free fellowship as effective methods of serving the highest interests of the Kingdom, as less enlightened denominationalism has brought to the service of more sectarian ends.

The problem of attaining and expressing fellowship in corporate and spiritual effectiveness is the problem of Union Churches, as of our own. We care not how the problem is solved, but it cannot be solved unless along with independency and simplicity of local church organization there be some recognition and expression of the catholicity of the true life and real tasks of a Christian Church.

Mr. Root undoubtedly recognizes this, and no man whom we know is working more indefatigably toward this end. It is a pleasure to see that having recently won The Congregationalist's prize for the best essay on the possibility of Christian co-operation between those of extremes of theological and critical opinion, Mr. Root has also been awarded the prize of $100, offered by a Virginia layman, for the best essay on Church Co-operation. The essay has been published by the Federal Council of Churches under the title, Church Federation a Necessity.

Political and Social Fundamentals

TWO books have recently appeared, the one by an ex-President of Yale, and the other by the President of Columbia, that illustrate in principle, if not in detail, what ought to be the attitude of the "intellectual" in relation to current life and institutions and in the fundamental estimate and criticism of forces, motives, and principles that govern social and political action.

Ex-President Hadley, in The Conflict Between Liberty and Equality (Houghton Mifflin Co.), makes the complaint that in relation to such action today there is little fundamental thinking, that principles are largely absent, and that government tends to become a matter where selfish and sectional interests play for advantage, or where even high-minded people face the problems of progress in fragmentary fashion with little conception of a definite goal related to the welfare of the whole people and little definiteness of conception or aim in working toward that goal.

Though he has little sympathy with Socialism and its program President Hadley says that the Socialist Party is the only political party "that recognizes how deep our troubles lie." He thinks that "we can expect no real reform until the American people as a body realizes that the differences of opinion underlying these questions are too deep to be settled by any process of surface healing, too poignant to be forgotten in any show of superficial agreement." He thinks that we must go to the root of things and that "if we think that our ideas of the methods of conducting a commonwealth are better than those of the Socialists, it is our fault if we fail to go into the matter as thoroughly and as fundamentally as do our opponents."

President Hadley, in the three chapters which were originally delivered as the West Memorial Lectures at Stanford University, endeavors to go to the root of things. His titles are suggestive: Industrial Problems and Political Ideals, The Uses and Dangers of Property Rights, and The Uses and Dangers of Representative Government. Frankness and incisiveness characterize his treatment; there is much searching and thoroughgoing criticism regarding social and political fundamentals; and whether one agrees with Dr. Hadley either in fundamental outlook, or in matters of detail, there is always the consciousness of a thinker, who accepts the obligations of the intellectual, and who is seeking to see the problems of life without bias and in a large way.

Probably the same is true of President Nicholas Murray Butler in his book, The Faith of a Liberal (Scribners), which consists also of lectures and addresses, but, generally speaking, President Butler has not been as successful as Dr. Hadley in discussing fundamental issues in a dispassionate way. In some respects, in fact, he appears as a biased and prejudiced partisan, and his "liberalism" is compromised by his failure to apply his own principles with thoroughness and impartiality. The famous address on Prohibition, delivered at the dinner of the Missouri Society of New York, in April of last year, is included, and illustrates this weakness of President Butler where his prejudices sway him, or where his principles are applied in a partial and lopsided way.

We do not say this because President Butler so strongly opposes Prohibition. There is indeed a strong case to be made against Prohibition from the standpoint of political philosophy and the incidence of social legislation. We are under the impression that Dr. Hadley could state that case with clearness and fairness, and in such a way that one could approve its consistency with the fundamental point of view, whether one accepted that standpoint or not. Prohibition, of course, is to be approached and discussed in such a way, not as an isolated measure or phase of legislation, but in relation to the whole matter of paternalistic and regulative legislation, and the best method of attaining the common weal. The problems involved in the indulgence and traffic in intoxicating liquor manifestly go beyond the mere question of personal liberty or personal delinquency. They have inherently social aspects, and the question whether or not we shall permit locomotive drivers to drink alcoholic intoxicants—and many non-prohibitionists would be prohibitionists at that point—is not inherently or ultimately removed from the question whether we shall permit anybody to drink such intoxicants.

President Butler for the most part discusses Prohibition without adequate reference to its backgrounds in social fact and its relationships to other laws, and to the end and purpose of law. He writes about the whole question as if intoxicating liquor were as harmless as pure drinking water, and a mass of fanatics in America had passed a prohibitory law regarding something about which there had never been any question of social evil and abuse. Men of open mind and conscientious conviction are disagreed as to the validity and effectiveness of Prohibition as a method, but there can never be any gain in ignoring the serious nature of the evils it was intended to remedy, and it must be remembered that many people supported Prohibition only because they believed a drastic measure necessary where all other measures had failed. Prohibition, also, it must be remembered, is not more drastic than many laws, applied to lesser evils, against which President Butler does not apparently find it necessary to protest.

Minor criticisms, however, should not be allowed to detract from the interest and significance of the fact that college presidents speak out their mind on important issues. A distinct evil from which America suffers at the present time is the suppression of opinion. In many respects there is a general conspiracy against outspokenness. If a man believes that any course of action is wrong, it is his privilege, and possibly his duty, to say so. If what he says is answerable let it be fairly answered, but we shall never have the right constructive attitude toward the problems of law and government when there is any effort to remove issues from the field of fair discussion. We call attention to these two books editorially because they are so well worth reading. They will stimulate either intelligent agreement with, or intelligent difference from, the views expressed; and either result will be helpful.

Congregationalists and Church Union

THE time seems fitting for a careful appraisal of the life of our Congregational fellowship in relation to Christian unity, and particularly in relation to the movement that has issued in The United Church of Canada.

Is there anything in that movement before which the spirit and outlook of our fellowship stands condemned? Is there anything that suggests a reversal or development of our "denominational" policy in the hope of stimulating progress toward unity? Is there anything that can reasonably be done that we are not doing at present? These questions ought to have heart-searching investigation, without any disposition to underestimate our ideals and achievements or to lower our colors where our course and attitude are right, but also without the slightest desire for self-justification where our activities are weak, inadequate, or wrongly directed.

If we know and understand the heart of our Congregational fellowship there is among us today very little interest in denominationalism as such, and very little purpose to maintain or upbuild a Congregational "denomination." The surest way of defeating any measure or proposal in any Congregational gathering at all broadly representative of our fellowship would be to prove it to be inspired by "denominational" ambition and purpose, and not primarily justified by the interests of the Kingdom of Christ. In this respect an intensely anti-denominational spirit is constantly in evidence among us. In fact its overemphasis and misdirection constitute one of the chief problems with which our leadership has to deal. We have been notoriously lacking in the sort of loyalty to institutions, organizations, leaders, and policies that gives to highly connexionalized communions greater appearance of strength and solidity.

Fellowship and Organization

While this to many has seemed our crucial weakness, to others it has been our greatest strength. It has arisen directly from the purpose to set spiritual ideals above outward organization and artificial bonds, to place the spirit of Jesus as the bond of fellowship and as the inspiring influence in the church above esprit de corps. It is not too much to say that the foremost leaders in our fellowship have not only been more concerned about attaining and expressing the sound principles and basis of a free, catholic, Christian fellowship than about building up a "denomination"; in fact, it must be said that in the most distinctive development of recent years there has been the constant purpose to avoid both the spirit and forms of sectarianism.

In one sense there is an increased "denominationalism" in our Congregational life. The Congregational churches of America have been more closely organized under a "National Council," and in many ways there has been an effort to establish through this Council greater unity in spiritual enterprise and increased effectiveness in the performance of common tasks. Not denominationalism but the more effective service of free, co-operating churches, has been the spirit and motive underlying much in this direction that may seem to the outsider to be largely the expression of a trend toward denominationalism.

The correctness of our own interpretation of the significance of this effort to attain greater efficiency in the doing of the things that our churches share in common is evidenced in two ways. On the one hand every development has had to make its way against the most jealous guarding of the liberties of the churches and the most determined opposition to anything that might mean the building up of a "denomination" rather than a fellowship. And on the other hand, this drawing of the Congregational churches together into a deeper Christian consciousness and into closer co-operation has been accompanied by a constantly enlarging breadth of spirit and an increasing recognition of the meaning and practice of Christian catholicity. If it be true that the Congregational Churches of America were never more closely bound in co-operation and organization than they are at present, it is also true that they were never less characterized by anything approaching sectarianism. Calvinism, and its development in the "New England theology," have long ceased to be characteristic of our churches. Even the polity of local independency has become considerably modified, in practice, and under the conception of catholicity. Few of our people would insist upon a particular polity except as it is related to what are regarded as well-defined spiritual rights and liberties. If these latter be safeguarded, much that has passed under the name of "congregationalism" would have less emphasis. The fact is that the chief bond of our churches is no longer found either in uniformity of polity or of theology; in the last analysis it will be found to be a common spiritual purpose, and a common consciousness of spiritual freedom as an end and purpose of the Christian life and of a church truly catholic in the sense of being wholly Christian.

Spiritual Unity and Formal Proposals

Moreover, while this free, spiritual co-operation has been developing in our churches, and they have been willing to enter into much more highly organized life, there has been an increasing distrust of mere organization and of artificial movements for promoting unity, that have had in them little recognition of the necessary spirit and basis of effective co-operation. Anxiety not to seem in any way apathetic toward projects of unity and of interdenominational co-operation, and the desire to further practical efforts to bring the churches together, have led Congregationalists in recent years into relationships and negotiations regarding which there has been among our people at large, and on the part of many of our leaders little enthusiasm or sense of conviction. It cannot be said that Congregationalists were indifferent to the Inter hurch Movement, or were responsible for its failure hrough any lack of support, but it must be recognized hat there was never a deep confidence in methods largely oreign to the best life and development of our churches. Possibly we hoped that methods in which others had con-idence might turn out better than our worst fears antici-ated.

Similarly we entered into a Concordat with the Epis-opalians in the hope that some large element of unity ight emerge in ways not clearly seen. It is difficult at he moment to realize how intense was the enthusiasm of ome of our outstanding men in the hope of achieving ome historic and strategic blending of episcopacy and ndependency. But the lack of enthusiasm of many of ur people was justified when it became apparent that e were negotiating chiefly with sacerdotalists, whose ain concern was to bring us all under episcopacy. En-husiasm also halted when it became further apparent hat the much-talked-of dual ordination could not be ac-omplished, even under conditions where the candidate ad made practically every concession short of becoming n out-and-out member of the Protestant Episcopal hurch.

It must be candidly admitted that these events have roduced a reaction which makes our churches little dis-osed to regard seriously proposed movements for unity hat in the last analysis are little more than proposed ex-ensions of some denominational polity or principle. At resent we are engaged in a courteous entente with the resbyterians. In the Cleveland area it is somewhat ore than an entente, and the enthusiasm for the move-ent of men like Dr. Dan Bradley, and other outstand-ng liberals, gives hope that this movement might prog-ess on a basis favorable to the maintenance of all the piritual heritage that we have won. We believe that ost of our people would welcome union with the Presby-erians if it could be achieved upon a basis of as full and omplete recognition on their part of our rights and iberties as we should be willing to accord them on our art. But it seems to us the part of wisdom, candor, and onesty to say that neither our recognized leaders nor he rank and file of our people would welcome union on basis that might make it possible for some new Dr. IacCartney, a generation from now, to appeal to the tandards and courts of the church to oust some new r. Fosdick from a local pulpit where his ministry was esired, acceptable, and approved by its fruits. Many of s are deeply concerned that the rights and liberties of the osdicks of the future, and of the churches that choose employ them, shall be amply safeguarded (as they now re under Congregationalism) in any arrangements into hich we may enter. Nor is this in any sense a matter of ectarianism; it is a matter of inherent, elemental prin-iple. We have no desire to establish denominational dis-ipline for others; but we have the most profound de-ermination not to submit to such disciplines ourselves, nd to maintain the liberty of action and of prophesying hich by long effort and much sacrifice, by precedent and efinition, have gradually developed in the free fellow-hip of Congregational churches.

The fact is that the world has inadequately recog-ized, as we have been slow to assert, the progress oward unity that has been historically achieved in our Congregational fellowship, especially during the present generation. While we are congratulating the United Church of Canada, born on Wednesday, June 10, and without in any way minimizing the significance of that occasion, it is worth while to remember that the Congregational Churches of this country had already anticipated some of the most notable characteristics of that union.

Our Vital Contribution to Unity

While this union has brought together Methodists and Presbyterians, our American Congregational fellowship, in membership, ministers, and churches considerably larger than that of the United Church, has brought together greater extremes of religious temper and theological opinion than are represented even in the United Church. For at least more than a generation in local Congregational churches and in the larger activities of our denominational life Arminian and Calvinist have worked harmoniously together. We have taken a pride in the variety of our fellowship, and the constant aim has been to make the life of our churches, in vision and communion, comprehensive and all-inclusive. The Congregational church in many a community bears witness to the ideal and realization of practical Christian unity.

It should never be forgotten that a "Congregational" church does not differ in any essential respect from the "community" or "union" churches, which groups of Christians (none of whom, possibly, are technically known as "Congregationalists") often unite to form. The Congregational "body" or "denomination" is nothing more nor less than the free fellowship of such churches that has developed spiritually and historically.

If this simple fact were more widely known and emphasized, the uniqueness and immensity of our contribution to church union would be more commonly recognized. And there would likewise be a clearer recognition of the way in which Congregationalists may serve the cause of unity in the future. It is to this end, and not in any spirit of vainglory or denominational pride, that we state these things. If we are to serve the future we must know exactly where we stand. If this statement, what purports to be the national organ of our fellowship, in any way misrepresents our position and our ideal, it cannot be too hastily corrected.

But the fact is that our National Council, at its Springfield meeting, has already adopted a masterly statement on the whole subject of Christian unity and church union. That statement emphasizes the things that we have sought to state here, and makes it plain, as it ought to, that the Congregational eye scans the horizon ready to welcome every friendly gesture. But it makes it equally plain that we have set our faces Zion-ward in the matter of unity, and that we will not take one backward step. The nature of the forward steps that seem possible, and that Congregationalists are apparently prepared to take, we shall seek to outline in a further, constructive statement in next week's number. We make no apology for devoting much space to these issues. Not only is the immediate interest in them intense, but the problems of world unity for the abolition of war and Christian unity for the strengthening and effectiveness of all the forces of Christ's Kingdom are the greatest problems confronting the church.

"Jonah"

A Sermon to the Boys and Girls

By Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D.

Preached in Broadway Tabernacle, New York City

LET us think today about "Jonah." I always feel I ought to say "Mr. Jonah," or "Dr. Jonah," or "Rabbi Jonah," or "Saint Jonah." To say just "Jonah" seems a lack of courtesy. It is something like speaking of Hylan or Smith or Coolidge without using the "Mr." As there seems to be nothing which we can properly put before Jonah's name, we have formed the habit of putting something after it. We say "Jonah and the Whale." The whale distinguishes him from other Jonahs and serves as a title of distinction. Jonah is famous because of the whale. But I am not going to speak about Jonah and the whale. Whales do not appeal to me. I am interested in men. Some people are always going daft over whales. This is because whales are big. Many people see nothing, admire nothing, and believe in nothing unless it is big. I like best great things. Man is great. I am immensely interested in this man Jonah. A whale is nothing but a big animal which lives in the water. A man is the child of God!

Everybody smiles whenever the name of Jonah is mentioned. I put all the blame on that whale. This morning I am willing you should smile, but I want you to smile at the right thing. You may laugh, but there is nothing to laugh at about the whale. It is the man Jonah who is funny. He deserves to be laughed at.

According to the story there lived once upon a time a man by the name of Jonah, and God told this man that he wanted him to go to Nineveh and exhort that city to be good. Jonah did not want to go, and so he started in the opposite direction. He bought a ticket for Tarshish. Now Tarshish was a city in Spain, and Spain was the western end of the world. Beyond Spain there was nothing that anybody knew anything about. Nineveh was at the eastern end of the world. Jonah started for Tarshish because he was determined to get just as far from where God wanted him to be as he could. He thought he would get away from God by going out on the water. But God is as truly on the water as on the land. A terrific storm came up and everybody thought the ship was going to sink. The sailors felt sure that somebody on board had committed some heinous sin, and they decided to find out who the culprit was. They found out it was Jonah. Jonah did not deny it. He made a full confession. He admitted he was trying to get away from God. And when the sailors asked him what they ought to do to him, he said, "Pitch me overboard and let me drown." And they pitched him over, but he could not drown. God is in the water as well as on the water. His power extends to the bottom of the deepest of all the seas. He will not let a man drown if he wants that man to live. He wanted Jonah to live, and so he rescued him. There were no men willing to pull Jonah out of the water, and so God got a fish to do it, a very large fish which could swallow a man without hurting him. That fish carried Jonah to the shore, and as soon as he found himself on dry land again, he heard God saying to him, "Go to Nineveh! Do what I told you to do." This time Jonah obeyed. He saw there was no use in trying to get ahead of God. He started for Nineveh. Nineveh was hundreds of miles away. You must look it up sometime on the map. Jonah had no map, and I do not know how he ever got to Nineveh. But one can always do what God wants one to do.

At last Jonah reached Nineveh and he walked through the streets bawling at the top of his voice, "In forty days from now Nineveh will be destroyed." That was all he was able to say. He was in a bad humor and therefore could not tell the people of Nineveh about God's love, or his willingness to forgive their sins. All he could talk about was destruction. He liked to think of all these people going to perdition.

To Jonah's surprise the people gave heed to his message and began at once to feel sorry for their sins. Thousands of them fasted and put on sackcloth to show how sorry they were. After a while the king heard of what was going on, and he, too, repented, and fasted, and put on sackcloth, and sat down in ashes. He ordered the whole city—and there were hundreds of thousands of people—to put on sackcloth, and he commanded that sackcloth be put on the animals, too. But this repentance displeased Jonah very much. He did not want Nineveh to repent. He wanted the city to be destroyed. He hated the Assyrians and he did not want them to be saved. And so when he saw the people turning from their sins Jonah was disgusted, and would not stay in the city any longer. In his anger he scolded God and told him that he had always known he was a merciful God and would let these wicked Assyrians off too easy, and that was the real reason why he had objected coming to Nineveh at all. And so Jonah refused to stay in the city. He built himself a little hut out in a field to shield him from the sun, for it was very warm, and as the sun each day got still hotter God caused a gourd vine to grow up over the hut with its broad, cooling leaves, which made Jonah very happy. But the gourd vine soon died and that put Jonah into a worse humor than ever. He raged and stamped and fumed and wished he was dead. Life was not worth living in such hot weather. While he was weeping over the dead gourd, God went to him and tried to reason with him, and to show him that a city is more precious than a gourd, and that if a man can pity a gourd, God ought to pity a city which he has planted and caused to grow, and which has in it not only men and women, but thousands of little children, and ever so many dumb animals. And there the story ends.

You notice I call it a story, for that what it is. A long time ago people used t suppose it is history, and that is why son people nowadays make fun of it. We neve make fun of a story, no matter how mar impossible and unbelievable things are tol in it. Whoever made fun of Robinson Cruso or Treasure Island or Little Red Ridin Hood or Jack and the Bean Stalk or Alice Wonderland? We never make fun of storie We always make fun of a history filled wit things that are impossible. This is a stor It is a parable, just like the parable of th Prodigal Son. That is a short parable, on twenty-two verses long. This is longer, f it has forty-eight verses. It is an allegor just like the allegory of the Good Shepher The Good Shepherd is a short allegory, ha ing only eighteen verses, whereas the allego of Jonah has nearly three times as many. is not nearly so long, however, as the all gory which John Bunyan wrote, for that h many hundreds of verses. It is a satire li the satire of Gulliver's Travels. Gulliver Travels is a satire on human nature, a Jonah is a satire on racial bigotry. Now, a story people always do what we wa them to do. And so we are compelled to wri stories. We create an ideal world becau the actual world is so disappointing. In t actual world hardly anything comes o right, but in a story everything comes out it should. If things do not come out rig in a story, then we do not like it. We thro it down, saying it is a poor story. Now the story of Jonah everything comes o right. The disobedient hero finally obey He got himself into a lot of trouble, a other people into a lot of trouble, too, b finally he made up his mind that he mig as well give in. That is always a sensi thing to do. Jonah tried to get to Tarshi but he never arrived there. He went Nineveh, where God told him to go.

And then the city repented. That is wh a wicked city ought to do, but no city ev does that except in stories.

A gourd grew up in a night. Of course real gourd could not do that. But in a sto things happen at just the right time. gourd vine was needed for Jonah at on and so one grew up in a few hours. Outsi of a story it would have required weeks that vine to grow. But in a story any vi no matter how big, can grow up in a nig

Now, none of these things ever happen A fish never swallowed Jonah and kept h in his belly for three days and three nig and then belched him up on the shore w a beautiful poem in his hand which he b written in the belly of the fish. That ne happened, but in a story it happened cause it was necesssary that Jonah sho get to Nineveh, and he could not get th in any other way.

Nineveh never repented. No city e does. The king and the nobles and all clas of the population, from the top of soci down, never repent at the preaching of a y, even Jesus of Nazareth himself. Much would they repent at the preaching of tranger whom they had never heard of ore—a wandering Jew like Jonah. No ever put sackcloth on all of its animals, ever compelled them to fast for their sins. know that Nineveh never repented. She w more and more wicked until in the r 606 B.C. she was completely destroyed. lay there are on the banks of the Tigris at masses of ruins to show where that ghty city once stood. The ruins prove t she never repented.

The whole book, you see, is a story, and events narrated are all fictitious. Why, n, was the story written, and how did it into our Bible? The answer is that it s written to show how big a fool a man n make of himself when he is full of reli- us prejudices, and how mean and con- nptible a man can be and at the same ne think that he is a very good man. The ry was placed in the Bible, because for usands of years the world will need to be rned against racial and religious bigotry, d will need to be reminded of the amazing eadth of God's love.

Jonah was a snob—a Jewish snob. He dis- ed foreigners and looked down on them. did not care what became of them. He retly wished that they were all dead. He s a hundred per cent. Jew. He felt deep ntempt for all other races. He knew he d far more light than they had, but he as not willing to share it with them. He ided himself on possessing a knowledge of e true God, but he would take no trouble give the knowledge to foreigners.

He was a hater. He hated Nineveh. Nin- eh was the capital of Assyria, and Assyria ad been for centuries the enemy of Jonah's untry. There were reasons why Jonah ight have been expected to despise Nineveh. ne was luxurious and domineering and uel, and the whole world stood in horror her atrocities. Jonah hated her so in- nsely that he would have been glad to have er blotted out. There was a deep fear in s heart Nineveh would fail to get what as coming to her.

Jonah had a surly disposition. He was ways getting angry. When he found the ssyrians repenting, he at once lost his mper, turned on his heels, and left the city, nd when he found that the gourd vine was ithering he at once had another tantrum nd wished he was dead. The possible death f a great city did not disturb him in the ast, but he almost went crazy at the sight f a dying gourd. He was a peevish grown- p baby, and the author of the story wanted verybody to see just how unreasonable and arrow-headed and despicable Jonah was.

The story is for the whole world. It is or us Americans. It is a message which od intends especially for us. No other ation needs it more than we do. These are he things which the story says to us: First, o not be a snob. Do not look down on other ations. Do not sneer at Canadians or Mexi- ans or Cubans or Porto Ricans or Brazil- ans or Patagonians. Do not sniff at Ital- ans or Russians or Poles or Chinese or apanese, and do not call them ugly names. Black men and red men, brown men and yellow men are just as dear to God as white men. Other nations are as near to God as we Americans are. He loves other races just as dearly as he loves ours. Keep your eyes off of other peoples when your eyes are full of scorn. Keep your tongue off of other nations and races when your tongue feels like saying cutting and insulting things. Do not be a Jonah!

Second, do not hate any race or nation no matter what it may have done. Do not hate Austria or Hungary or Bulgaria or Germany or Turkey. Do not wish them to be destroyed. Do not be jealous of their prosperity or progress. Do not desire to keep them down. Do not be afraid that God will be too good to them. Remember Jonah. Beware of being like him.

Third, do not be surly. Do not sulk because God does not do what you want him to do. Do not fret because you fear God will be too good to your enemies. Do not be disagreeable because you are uncomfortable. If you are disagreeable you will make other people uncomfortable, and if they are uncomfortable they may become disagreeable, too, and in this way you may make a very unhappy world. Do not mind the sun in your eyes. Think always of the work you have to do. Do not whimper over the wilted gourd vines which you will find all along your way. There are greater tragedies than withered gourd vines to weep over, and you must save your strength for things worth while. Do not be a fussy, cranky Jonah.

Fourth, believe in the loving kindness and infinite tenderness of God. Here we come to the deepest and most precious teaching of the story. The author wanted to give the world a noble conception of God. Note how compassionate God is in his solicitude for Nineveh. In the New Testament we are told that when Jesus saw the multitude he was moved with compassion, and that when he looked upon Jerusalem he wept over it. So does God always feel compassionate when he looks upon great cities with their ignorance and wickedness and misery. He pitied Nineveh because the city was so helpless. He picked out a man who could teach her what she needed to know. He took him from a country to which fuller light had come. He sent him to the poor, benighted Assyrian capital. God made him a foreign missionary. But Jonah did not believe in foreign missions. He thought there was work enough to do at home. But God was patient with him. He tried to educate him. He spoke kindly to him. You must not miss God's tenderness in dealing with poor, selfish Jonah. "Are you right to be angry because I am merciful?" What a gentle question that is. One feels in those words the same tenderness which we find in the words of the father in the parable of the Prodigal Son: "It was meet that we should make merry and be glad, for this thy brother was dead and is alive again, and was lost and is found." "Are you right to be angry about the gourd?" And the snappish Jonah replied, "Yes, I am right!" And then God points out to him how unreasonable he is. Here is a wilted vine and a dying city. Jonah is sorry for one and not for the other. A gourd can stir pity in his heart, but a great and needy city cannot move him at all. Jonah did not bestow any work on the gourd. He did not cause it to grow, and yet he laments when it dies. Nineveh has been planted by God. God has caused Nineveh to grow. Ought not God therefore to feel concerned about Nineveh, in which there are thousands of little children and great numbers of dumb animals?

This is the supreme lesson of the book of Jonah. Many people never see it because they keep staring at the whale. The only whale in the world which I thoroughly dislike is the whale mentioned in the first chapter of the Book of Jonah. It has done an immense amount of mischief. It has led many people to think that the Book of Jonah is a joke, and therefore that the whole Old Testament is a joke, and therefore that Christianity is a joke! The reference to the religion is a joke! The reference to the whale is a brief one—only twenty-five Hebrew words, filling less than three English sentences, and yet those three sentences have blotted out for many persons all the other sentences in this wonderful book. The author was not interested in whales. He did not set out to teach us anything about big fishes. He was not recording a series of miracles. He wanted to teach the world something about God, something wondrously beautiful. The last sentence in the Book of Jonah is the highest point of revelation reached in the Old Testament. In that sentence you get a marvelous unveiling of God's heart. Standing on this sentence as on a mountain peak, you can easily look over into the New Testament country. You have come within sight of the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Who wrote the story we do not know. In this world we shall never know. It does not matter. We know that he was inspired. He wrote as he was moved by the Holy Spirit. Men can be inspired to write stories just as truly as they can be inspired to write poems or laws or sermons. The author of this story saw, long before Jesus came, that

"The love of God is broader
Than the measure of man's mind;
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind."

The Death of Dr. Adams

Dr. James B. Adams, whose death in Washington, D. C., June 4, was reported in last week's issue of The Congregationalist, had come to Washington to do some literary work, and about six months before his death became critically ill. About May 15 he went to the Washington Sanitarium, where a thorough examination of his condition was made and his malady pronounced as cancer of the stomach. After two weeks in the sanitarium Dr. Adams returned to his home quietly and patiently to await the end, which he realized was not far distant. He was buried in the National Arlington Cemetery June 6, with full military honors, a firing squad from the Cavalry Post at Fort Meyer giving the farewell salute. Rev. Franklin I. Winter, associate minister of the First Church, Washington, officiated.

He that would govern others must first be lord of himself, and he only is lord of himself who is consciously and habitually the servant of God.—Alexander Maclaren.

Christian Workers in South America

II. Congregationalism in Brazil

By Frank K. Sanders

(EDITORS' NOTE—Rev. Frank K. Sanders, Ph.D., D.D., LL.D., is director of the Committee of Missionary Preparation for the Foreign Missions Conference of North America and charged with other editorial and administrative functions on behalf of all the Boards. He was sent to the Congress on Christian Work in South America at Montevideo, as a representative of the Foreign Missions Conference, but also serving as chairman of the Committee on Education of the Committee on Co-operation in Latin America. This article is the second in a series of five articles which Dr. Sanders has written for "The Congregationalist.")

A STAY of nine days in the imperial domain of Brazil, however instructive and full of incident, can hardly qualify a sane correspondent to do the country justice. Brazil is a Latin country, and the newcomer finds plenty to amuse, startle, or instruct. Only the Riviera can compare with Rio in sheer scenic beauty. No one who has looked down upon the city, its harbor, and the ocean from Corcovada can forget that scene. But the wealthy and populous city and state of Sao Paulo, with its vast stores of coffee and fruit, suggest Brazil's immense resources. Only temperament or climate can prevent Brazil from taking a foremost rank among nations. As one meets the representative men of the nation, men of business like the late Dr. José Carlos Rodriguez or Sr. J. L. Fernandez Braga, educators like Dr. A. Carneiro Léao of Rio, or religious leaders like Dr. Erasmo Braga, who was elected president of the congress at Montevideo, he concludes that Brazil's surest asset lies in the type of men being developed today. These men have their own ways of getting things done. They are more democratic and suave than we are. Instead of forcing a barrier, they often walk around it. They are brilliant rather than doggedly persistent, but they are much alive, we find, to the most recent progress of the world and are determined that Brazil shall profit by it. Politics prevails in Brazil, as well as in the United States, and not infrequently blocks some excellent plans.

A Democratic Country

Brazil seems to be an unusually democratic country. Its present freedom was achieved gradually, but surely. Discovered by Cabral about 1500, settlements by the Portuguese began at once, although the real period of colonization was during the second half of the century. Brazil became a kingdom under the scion of the Braganza dynasty in 1815, was proclaimed an independent empire in 1822, and by a bloodless revolution became a republic in 1889. In the great gallery of the School of Fine Arts at Rio is an imposing painting of much historic interest, yet rather pathetic, which depicts a brilliant imperial reception at the harbor front of Rio only three evenings before Dom. Pedro was exiled forever by his people. The great majority of Brazilians, while kindly disposed to the monarch, have not regretted that step.

Under the imperious demands of colonization during these four centuries, settlers and workers of every hue have been welcomed, so that Brazil, far more than the United States, has been a melting pot of Latin, Indian, and Negro peoples. At the present day, Italians, Germans, Iberians, and other Mediterranean peoples, plus the Japanese, are pouring into Brazil intending to remain as citizens. The state of Sao Paulo is—as its citizens admit—the wealthiest and most progressive section of Brazil. Some of its most virile leadership is reported to come from a group which boasts of its Portuguese-Indian heritage. The pure Indian stock seems to have difficulty in resisting our diseases, but contributes much brain power.

The men and women one meets in responsible positions make a New Englander feel as much at home as he would in Georgia. He has an equal respect for what he sees. Representative Brazilians are companionable, relatively enterprising, and forward looking. The educational quartet in the large group going to Montevideo, Professors Fleming, Holmes, and Sweet, and your correspondent, gave their spare time while in Rio and Sao Paulo to the careful study of public and private education. They found the elementary and secondary schools in these cities well handled under modern methods. Political favoritism must be allowed for, to some extent, but as long as such real students of education as Dr. A. Carneiro Léao of Rio and Prof. Pedro Voss of Sao Paulo can remain in positions of widespread influence, the future seems encouraging.

The group was impressed by the crowded schools in these two greatest cities of Brazil and by the capable teaching. The percentage of illiteracy in Brazil is still very high, but the problem is being attacked with good judgment. Particularly striking was the artistic touch given on every side, school buildings, grounds, hallways—even outside walls are attractive. The story goes around that when the Rockefeller Foundation made one of its generous offers of assistance toward the erection of a great medical plant at Sao Paulo, the Brazilian authorities came near rejecting the gift in the fear that the plant would be erected with as little regard for artistic values as are observed in the average North American mission school or church.

Naturally the deepest and most direct impressions of our crowded days in Brazil related to the religious, educational, and civic situation in the Protestant communities. These are found at their best in the great cities. Rio and Sao Paulo rate far ahead of Bahia or Pernambuco in evangelical development. In Sao Paulo, for example, are twenty-one organized churches representing nine or ten denominations (if we include the Y. M. C. A. and Salvation Army), with fifty-two Sunday schools and 3,722 pupils. With the various preaching stations there fifty-four places within the city where evangelical message is regularly present In Sao Paulo as well as in Rio, relig seems to attain a dignified and even in ential standing. Mackenzie College, w its excellent School of Engineering and fi equipped Baptist College for Women at Paulo, represents the fine type of truly m ern educational institution developed wit recent years. Bennett College for wo at Rio is another first-class school wh we were able to examine. There are, course, other institutions probably of eq standing at other points in Brazil which had no opportunity to see.

The Congregational Churches

There are two wholly independ churches in Brazil, missionary in spirit, wholly self-supporting and self-directing, Independent Presbyterian Church of Bra and the Congregational Union of Bra Each sent fine representatives to Montevid The latter church represents so unusual development and seems so worthy of fraternal recognition as a national Cong gationalism, that I will devote the remain of my space to its description.

The Union includes today some twen seven organized churches with eighteen p tors, thirteen evangelists, 3,463 members, a seventy-three Sunday schools with 6, teachers and pupils. The rate of grow since 1916 has been about forty per ce Miss Edith Dabb, the Indian expert of National Board of the Y. W. C. A., and writer, as the only Congregationalists route to Montevideo, attended together, Sunday morning, March 15, the regular se ices of the Fluminense Congregational Chu at Rio, where I had the privilege of exte ing the friendly greetings of the Congreg tionalists of North America.

Arriving quite early, we found a liv Sunday school in session, just completi the annual celebration of the Cradle R Department. The babies were all there. T morning service was followed by the ce bration of Communion. Except for the u of three large Communion cups of massi silver for the whole congregation, and e cept for the wide range of color in the au ence, we felt entirely at home through every detail of these services.

The origin of this purely national gro of Congregational churches is worth telli Back in the fifties a bitter anti-Protesta persecution broke out in the Madeira Island which aimed to drive out every believer. O group of the converts of Dr. Robert Kalle an independent medical missionary, fled New England and settled. A smaller gro fled to Brazil. Dr. Kalley himself, by t connivance of friends, got away to Scotlan but soon crossed the Atlantic to look aft the New England exiles. While there, abo 1858, he got news regarding the group Rio de Janeiro, and determined to throw his lot with its members. Though an earne Christian, he represented no North Ame nor British denomination. In fact, he tically antedated missionary effort in zil. He set himself at once to such forms eligious work as the Empire permitted. organized the first Sunday school ever wn in Brazil, he preached constantly in ate houses in and near Rio; he soon ered a group of believers and organized Fluminense (i.e., The Church of Rio) gregational Church, of which he became pastor.

Vhen the church had outgrown all private acities and desired to build a house of ship, a special decree was necessary in er to get around the privileges of the nan Church. This decree, granting the t of owning property to this Protestant gregation, was passed by the imperial gress and approved by Dom. Pedro II. securing of this decree, due to the ends Dr. Kalley had made in high circles, s the first step ever taken in Brazil in direction of religious freedom. The me minister of that day, Baron Homem Mello, a liberal statesman whose name eld in high honor, was to the day of his th very proud of the success attained in s case. There were still some limitations. spire of any sort could be erected on the ucture because of the unwillingness of emperor to allow Protestant churches to ar the exterior aspect of a sacred edifice. e recognition of this feeling doubtless ex- ins the unobtrusive location away from street of practically every one of the der evangelical churches in Rio.

Extending Influence

The Fluminense Church became quite omptly a missionary church organizing Sun- y schools and preaching stations which ew gradually into self-supporting churches. entually these churches of similar origin lt the need of some sort of connectional nk. Led by the late Dr. F. A. Sousa, the ongregational Union of Brazil was organ- ed, whose president today is Rev. Antonio arques of Rio, a lecturer, writer, and edi- r of wide influence.

Dr. Kalley retired from the pastorate in ie time and died in the early nineties. His astorate was continued vigorously by one his early converts, Rev. Joao M. G. dos lvos, who was educated in London. He now the aged, greatly beloved pastor meritus of the church. When we talked ith him, he was serenely awaiting an opera- on for cataract which he hoped would en- ble him to devote himself once more to eading and study. We found many inter- sts in common. The energetic young pastor f the church, Rev. Jonathas d'Aquino, fol- ws this apostolic succession.

One of the older missionaries in Brazil, r. H. C. Tucker of the American Bible So- iety, made the remark to me personally hat the development of this purely national, elf-supporting church has had a stimulating ffect upon the various denominational roups in Brazil. Dr. Kalley introduced into Brazil the work of the British and Foreign Bible Society. His successor was for many ears its representative at Rio. Members f the Fluminense Church have always been n the forefront of intelligent generosity. Among them was for many years the late Sr. J. L. Fernandez Braga, a well-known business man. When Myron Clark reached Brazil to introduce the work of the Y. M. C. A., Sr. Braga became his best friend and ally, enabling him to discover and secure a home for the Association and its work. Sr. Braga left a large sum in his will for the erection, near the church he loved, of a suitable building for Sunday school and social purposes. His son, Sir José L. F. Braga, has taken his place as a trusted friend of every good and worthy enterprise.

Should Be Linked With Our Churches

With this growing group of churches, already exercising an influence disproportionate to their number and financial ability, we Congregationalists in North America ought to be in friendly and direct relations. These churches have a real part to play in the evangelization of Brazil. Like ourselves, they have been playing the game in sincere co-operation with other denominations, but have not waited for those denominations to lead the way. They share with other churches in a union theological school and other educational institutions, and co-operate in various forms of union activity. As a national group of Congregational churches they should be regularly represented at the next International Congregational Council, five or six years hence, but I am hopeful that Sr. Braga, who recently returned to Brazil from a visit to Europe, during which he acted as a delegate to the World Sunday School Convention in 1924 at Glasgow, will find it convenient to make a business trip to the United States about next October. Were he presented at Washington to the members of our next National Council, one glance would justify all that is herein written.

Why I Entered the Ministry

By Carl S. Patton

A MAN does not always know with perfect clearness, years afterward, why he has taken a given course. He does not always know even at the time. Forces in him that are obscure to himself may often be at work. But as near as I can tell at this distance, some of my reasons were as follows:

I had been brought up among church people. I liked them. I never had any uncomfortable experiences with them to set me off or make me critical toward them or toward the church. They were the kind of folks among whom I seemed to belong. My father was a minister, and many ministers used to come to our house. They seemed to me generally to be a fine upstanding lot of men. They had influence in their communities. They counted. I took note of that, as a boy.

The kind of education I got, the old-fashioned classical kind, did not predispose me to any other calling. Of technical, mechanical, or mercantile callings I got no information, or at least I got no push toward them, out of my education. Several callings into which a man of my general interests might have entered I eliminated for one reason and another. A lawyer I could not be because I knew I couldn't make a speech (I suppose I had the old picture of a lawyer as forever standing before a jury—quite absurd of course, but nobody told me any better). A doctor I could not be because I could not stand it to see people suffer. An engineer I couldn't be because "math" was a terror to me, and I was reasonably sure that a man who couldn't subtract or multiply any better than I could would come to grief. In short, these other callings, fine and noble as they are, made no special appeal to me.

Meantime, the reasons that some fellows gave for not going into the ministry did not appeal to me either. Some of them said you couldn't have your freedom in the ministry; but I thought a man who deserved his freedom would get it wherever he was. Some of them turned from the ministry because, as they said, they weren't "good enough." I wasn't good enough either. But I always thought that if a man was good enough to be a member of a church he was good enough to be pastor of one. And I hoped that maybe I might get a little better as I went along. I thought I could probably behave myself well enough so as not to be a scandal on a noble profession. Some of the fellows said they wouldn't be ministers because they didn't want their conduct scrutinized and criticised by everybody in the parish. But that didn't bother me. Some fellows would not go into the ministry because, as they said, they hadn't anything to preach. But I didn't see why a fellow should expect to have anything to preach till it was time to preach it. In short, the reasons why many good men turned away from the ministry seemed to me trivial, flippant, unworthy, or absurd. I had lived in a minister's family, and I didn't see any bars up.

I liked books. And it seemed to me that a man who liked books had a better opportunity to read and study, and to read and study whatever interested him, than a man in any other calling. I thought I could see the difference between some ideas and some others, and that nothing influenced people more than the fundamental ideas they held, and that nobody had a better chance to help mold those ideas than the minister.

The idea of conducting a funeral terrified me; therefore, I didn't dwell on it. I knew I shouldn't know what to say to people who were in sorrow, but I thought maybe I could listen well.

And rising out of all these difficulties that one might find in the ministry, and far above any mere intellectual or other personal advantages in it, there kept coming to me the idea that if a man could be a fairly decent minister, could learn something as he went along and could communicate it with reasonable force and clearness to his people, could become in any real sense however restricted a leader in the moral and spiritual life of his community, there was not any other calling in the world in which he could do so much good as he could in the ministry. I kept coming back to that idea. I believed it was true then. I believe it is true now. And I thought a man ought to put his life where it would do the most good.

I went into it heartily, without more misgivings than a young man will have about any untried course. And I have had a glorious time at it. I wish I had done better. But every day I thank God t somehow he steered me away from eve thing else and opened this wonderful d before me.

What Kind of Patriotic Education Do We Want

An arresting opportunity and responsibility facing the leaders of the youth of America

By Jerome Davis
Yale Divinity School

THE term "patriotism"—is it not "all things to all men"? During the war did not the profiteer clothe himself in the flag, did not certain manufacturers suppress legitimate strikes with the cry of treason, and even now do we not hear military officers say patriotism demands a bigger, better navy ready for a bigger, better war? We are all confused, dazed, bewildered by "patriotism"; nowhere do we find unanimous agreement as to its meaning, nor does the average individual know how best to practice it.

Surcharged with emotion the word undoubtedly is. Is it possible to analyze its inner meaning, really to uncover its highest and truest significance? At present it is not beyond the bounds of possibility that unpatriotic practices may have long masqueraded as patriotic, that we are blindly and unconsciously, it may be, but none the less truly following the road of treason and disloyalty to the highest good. An eminent American general of the World War says, "Our very conception of patriotism needs to be revised." If one turns to Webster's dictionary he finds patriotism defined as "devotion to the welfare of one's country." But what is the test of "devotion" and what is one's "country" and how can we know what is her highest "welfare"? Clear thinking and honest reflection lead to the realization that one's country is not to be defined primarily in its material aspects; it is not the rocks and templed hills of one's native land. The Jews wandering in the wilderness could still be patriotic. To be true to country, one must be true primarily to the people of that country. Then to be patriotic one must do the tasks day by day which contribute the maximum to the welfare of the people. If this is true, a business man who is making the maximum profit he can extract from the sale of oil to a willing public, a general who is trying to secure millions of dollars for military appropriations while fighting similar appropriations for peace is not a real patriot. The genuine patriot may be the man who is fighting the temporary whims of the populace whether they be for the best navy in the world or for materialistic power.

Was Jesus a Patriot?

Perhaps this will be made still clearer if we ask ourselves whether Jesus was a patriot. Obviously he is not the kind of a patriot that our miltarists love to extol. During the war, the Sermon on the Mount in a popular reprint was even prohibited from certain of the camps. If we reflect, however, we know that Jesus was doing the day by day things which contributed the maximum to the welfare of his people, and part of the price which he had to pay was a non-resistant death on the cross.

It is perhaps stimulating to ask ourselves who would be generally considered by thinking Christians to be the most patriotic leader in India today. There is probably little question that an almost unanimous ballot would be given for Mahatma Gandhi. In the latter part of the nineties we find him in South Africa. Just how and why did he ever come into world fame as a patriot? Was he leading the armies of Great Britain, was he championing the merchants and manufacturers in a masterful productive campaign? On the contrary, he was the leader of a non-resistant movement of good will against certain injustices practiced upon his people by the British Government. To this day we find Gandhi worshiping God, loving all men as his brothers and hating no one. As a result it is quite possible that, as Romain Rolland tells us, he is exercising a greater influence over his fellow men than any other single living man. A leading social thinker of India wrote recently, "What the missionaries have not been able to do in fifty years, Gandhi by his trial and incarceration has done—he has turned the eyes of India toward the Cross."

Our task in America is to produce patriots of the Jesus type. In so far as we are failing to do that—and there is little question that our Eastern colleges are not turning out many leaders who even faintly resemble this type—we are failing to educate for patriotism. Jesus was a constructive revolter for the common good. He was deeply spiritual yet constantly strove to serve the people in their needs. He did not encourage great possessions but on the contrary repeatedly spoke against wealth. The two supreme patriotic injunctions of Jesus were: Love God and love your neighbor. Few men in history have been able to do that completely without literally selling what they have and then joyfully launching forth on the great adventure of following Christ.

Our society bases the criterion of success largely on monetary achievement. This should deceive no real patriot. To accept that standard is to be a traitor to the cause of Christ and also to one's country. As leaders in patriotic education we, too, must constantly keep reminding our generation: "This people honoreth Me with their lips, but their heart is far from Me. But in vain do they worship Me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men."

The kind of patriotc education that we want to foster is the kind that Jesus gave. Was it not the example of a life devoted the common good? Was it not an atten to meet human need of every kind direc and with the spirit of invincible good w and spiritual devotion?

Problems Facing Patriots Today

Confronting us now are four issues momentous consequence to the welfare our people and of the world; the proble of class, race, property, and internatio relationships. These are the questions whi we must teach American patriots to fa not amidst the swirl of machine-gun fire, deadly poisonous gasses, and the hate of w but now in the calm of peace. We reali that we have no great panacea, we kn that the solution of these complex proble is not easy, but face them we must. Wh is the wise use of property, not for in vidual power and pleasure but for the gre est possible welfare of our fellow men? So things are already clear as daylight. Wh ever grasps at wealth by using the labor even the weakest personality without reve encing his soul and his equal human wor is prostituting him. Social injustice is t sterilization of love. We can also sure realize and teach that if we do not elimina war, war will surely eliminate us. Can not bring home to the youth of America t awful judgment Herbert Hoover so recent gave that "the next war will be the cem tery of civilization"? If that is true, th perhaps, after all, the pacifists are amo the greatest patriots. They are educating f the welfare of all. They are strivi desperately to prevent a world catastroph

If the world is ever to be free from wa it must be through the creation of inte communication, mutual understanding, lik mindedness, and international good wi Disasters can only be averted if the peopl of the world have a comprehension of inte national problems and are willing to mak the necessary effort to try to solve the Owing to the growth of intercommunicatio through commerce, immigration, and the im proved technique of radio and airplane, th educational standards of one country are vital importance to all the rest. In th past, conflict and misunderstanding hav been frequent because each nationalisti group was attempting to follow an indivi ual pattern of conduct in an internationa world. We have used the state as an outle for the preservation of our individual egoism In our modern world this is dangerous i the extreme and hence unpatriotic. Hence to be "patriotic" in the old, bombastic, na tionalistic way may in reality mean to b a traitor to the real welfare of one's cou

y. Can we longer claim to be patriots if e refuse to sponsor the movement to out-w war? We must find an international ophylactic against vindictive hatreds, na-onalistic ambitions, and schemes for racial lf-aggrandisement. This can only be found rough some educative process, and through revaluation of old values.

For a long time the socialists have had eir internationals; it is high time that e educational and Christian forces of the orld united on a genuine, constructive cam-ign to banish illiteracy, misunderstanding, d destructive propaganda and to build a nuine world friendship. If one-tenth of e money now being spent by the nations of e world for military purposes were to be ed for the larger peace patriotic program, e should never face another war. Here is ne of the strongest reasons for endorsing me association of the nations of the world.

ARE WE FEARLESSLY FACING THE TRUTH?

In all this program is there not both challenging opportunity and an awful sponsibility resting on those of us who e in any way concerned with the leader-ip of the youth of America? Are we edu-ting the younger generation to pioneer constructive adventure for the common od, really to take Jesus in earnest? How any classes have we had in our church in e past year which have genuinely and fear-ssly gone into the problems of race, class, roperty, and war? As ministers are we triotic to Christ and to our fellow country-en if we have failed to devote hours and days in thought and prayer on these great issues not only individually but in organized classes, forums, and discussional meetings among the young people? We must fearlessly face God's truth. Concretely can we not as church leaders use some of the following methods which have actually been tried in the past:

Appoint committees in each church to report on the subjects of racial, class, economic, and international relationships, especially as they affect our duty to the local community life.

Study the peace movement and have reasoned conviction regarding it. Know current international news as well as the past. The word "peace" was rarely more popular than it is now. People want information. Be ready to give it—not dogmatically, but as one with conviction. Speak to groups on various phases of the movement.

One society in connection with World Good Will Day gave a pageant representing something of the best from every great nation in the world.

A group at Earlham College in 1924 conducted the following peace work: Forty-six students spoke to seventy groups totaling 7,000 people; fifteen faculty members contributed automobiles for the work; letters regarding the Bok Peace Plan were written to thirty-one ministers; a peace committee was appointed from the student body; a special "peace" bulletin board was provided; speakers were brought in to speak to the college.

Hold a monthly discussional luncheon on international topics with speakers from both sides, or a forum in the evening.

Investigate to find out exactly what the public schools of the community are doing to educate for peace. In one community they started an occasional assembly meeting on international affairs in the high school.

Create good will between the young people of America and foreign countries by exchanging stamps and postcards.

Increase the support of foreign missionary work. Every church should help to support its own representative abroad.

The Boy Scouts of England promoted international friendship by sending about 18,000 English boys to eighteen foreign countries and helping about as many foreign Scouts to visit England.

If there are any national or racial groups in the neighborhood which are looked down upon or oppressed, could you enlist their co-operation in some common cause? One church threw open the parish house to a foreign group to use as they saw fit.

See that the library of your church has good books and periodicals on international questions and that the Sunday school is studying the problem, using such textbooks as Christian Fellowship Among the Nations.

One church has a peace committee. It distributes literature and posters and also sends peace literature to those who want it.

We must do more than merely think and make speeches. Discussions and talk alone never have and never will win many disciples to a life of patriotic devotion to the Master. Discipleship necessitates a life that is lived. Should we not, then, finally educate by demonstrating that a life can be dominated by invincible good will even in the midst of a semi-pagan world? We must be fearlessly honest in any belief which we think squares with that of the Master regardless of whether it cuts across age-long prejudices and the selfish practices of some among those whom we minister. Let us be educators according to Jesus!

The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches

II. The Infallible Teaching of the Catholic Church

By Professor Daniel Evans, D.D.
Harvard Theological School

THE Catholic on-lookers, who congratulate themselves that they do not have eological controversies in their church, nd who are desirous that all non-Catholics ould find their haven with them, base all eir beliefs and hopes on the claim that eir church, alone, is the infallible teacher f mankind. There is no other authority on arth recognized as comparable to it, or as aving any place alongside it. The links in he chain of infallible authority are few, ut strong, and they hold against any strain r stress: God—Christ—the Church—the ope. God is the supreme authority; he ends his Son who has equal authority; the on endows his church with the like author-ty, and the Vatican decree made the Pope nfallible in his ex cathedra utterances. here is some difficulty at one point. The eason the church is infallible is because he Pope is infallible; so the fourth link in he chain should be the third, and the third e the fourth. The authority of the church s derived from the Pope, not the Pope's rom the church. "Such definitions (regard-ng faith and morals) of the Roman Pontiff re of themselves irreformable and not be-ause of the consent of the church." Pope ius IX is said to have remarked, "Before was Pope I believed in papal infallibility, ow I feel it."

The church made infallible by the Pope is above the Bible. Christ gave the world a church, not a book. It was the church that gathered the Bible from the various writings then current. The church declares the Scriptures inspired and is the sole guarantee of the contents of the Scripture and its inspiration. And the church alone can rightly interpret the Scriptures, tell what is to be taken literally, or figuratively, or symbolically. Not only so, but it is the church, too, that can tell what questions as to the meaning of certain Scriptural passages are still open, and what ones are closed, and it alone will be in a position to know when God's intention with regard to the meaning of these open questions is to be declared. The church alone has never made an error.

This is the teaching with respect to the claims made on behalf of the infallible teaching of the Catholic Church, taken from its own teachers. No one can understand the attitude of the Catholic Church towards the whole of life, and the other churches and the modern world of thought who does not know these claims. These claims are nothing if not thorough. They are interesting if for no other reason, but there are certainly other reasons for our interest in them. It is over against such a claim we are to consider our own religious life and thought, and the life and work of our churches. If it is infallibility we are seeking in religion and morals, here we may find it. If it is answers to all our fundamentals we want, here we may get them. If we want to be relieved from the burden of believing with our own souls, and be secured from the strain and stress of individual thought on these great matters, then we know where to go, and into what haven to sail. If we want others to tell us all we are to believe, and all that we are to hold for truth, and all that is true in science, and all that's truly interpreted in and from the Bible; and what questions are open and what closed or to be closed, then we know where we may have these deadly privileges.

We cannot, however, rush in this direction without reflecting on two or three things. The claim to such infallible authority is not made good, either by history, logic, ethics, or theology. Nor does such infallibility help us out much just where we would like to know; these open questions are just the matters where Science has much to say and declares that for her they are closed. What's the good of an authority that's silent on urgent questions? Moreover, who is to assure us that we rightly understand the infallible teaching of the church? Here is the missing link in the chain of infallibility. In order to be sure that we rightly understand the very teaching of the church we ought ourselves to be infallibly inspired, otherwise we may go astray and be in danger of the judgment. Every teacher who lectures, every preacher who preaches, and every parent who exhorts or admonishes, knows full well that in spite of all their care in communicating truth they are frequently misunderstood. In all teaching and preaching and training there are two minds involved; the one may know the truth fully and express it clearly, and yet the other mind not get it. One mind may be infallible, but if the other is not, then there's no security against infallibility in understanding. Cardinal Newman felt this difficulty and was forced to maintain that the faithful lay Catholics are also infallible, though it is a passive infallibility. He forged the missing infallible link in the Catholic chain of infallibility. The logic of the theory requires this, though the logic of experience contradicts it. Very frequently we, like Pope Pius IX, have believed ourselves to be infallible, only to find later that we were mistaken. We fell back into that class which the proverb hits off: "To err is human."

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Quarantine Flag and the Blue Peter

There be many flags that fly upon a ship, and he is a learned man who knoweth the meaning of them all. When a ship entereth a port, it is boarded by the Port Doctor, and there is a Yellow Flag run up at the masthead. And the ship cometh not up to the Dock until the Doctor hath satisfied himself that the Passengers and Crew bring with them no Disease that might endanger the folk ashore. And the Doctor cometh aboard again when the ship would sail, and again inspecteth the ship before it can have a Clean Bill of Health. And there be some Port Doctors who magnify their office and delay the ship with Foolish Technicalities, and there be others that take the word of the Ship Surgeon and are quick about it. And there be other kinds also.

Now there is a flag that the ship runneth up when it is almost ready to sail, and it hath a blue border around a white square, and they call it the Blue Peter. And it is a flag that looketh good when the ship would be on its way, and the Passengers are facing homeward.

Now there lay in an Harbour nigh unto our ship another Vessel, and it ran the Blue Peter to the top of the mast. And all who saw it knew that the ship had discharged the cargo which it brought to that port, and had taken on another cargo, and that its passengers were on board, and it was ready to sail.

But it did not sail. For behold, the Yellow Flag rose up beside the Blue Peter.

And I inquired concerning it, and I was told, There hath some trouble occurred. Maybe some one on board hath been ashore and come back having been exposed to Small Pox. Or maybe some Coolie on board hath been found with the Plague.

And the ship waited long until there had been Fumigation and much delay, and the Blue Peter flew helplessly until the Yellow Flag came down. Then did the ship hoist its anchor, and sail away over the Seven Seas or some of them.

Life is a Voyage, and he who hath the heart of a Bold Navigator, let him sail. But beloved, be careful what thou hast on board before thou essay to sail, for the Blue Peter must sometimes come down for the Yellow Flag. Wherefore lay aside every unlawful cargo, and the sin that doth so easily beset thee, and raise high the bright Blue Peter, and sail over the bright Blue Sea.

Good Logic, Poor Psychology

By Fred Leslie Brownlee

Corresponding Secretary, Department of Missions, American Missionary Association

The tentative report of the Committee of Twelve is as convincing as logic. It looks good on paper. It sounds good to the lover of simplicity, the mechanician, the organizer. It has for its motto multum in parvo. Psychologically, however, it ignores living processes, the way men feel and think and act. We challenge its conclusions because its premises are practically and psychologically absurd. The mechanical superstructure which the report proposes to erect doubtless will prove to be increasingly expensive to operate, with a decreasing income, and with the missionaries and their needs only in the peripheries of the minds of the managers. Finally, it would morally and spiritually bankrupt our home missionary endeavors, at least—speaking from experience—so far as the American Missionary Association is concerned.

A thoughtful review of the report's assumptions would make clear what I am trying to say. Time and space permit me to deal only with the general assumption which seems to be something like this: People do not want to give to so many causes. They desire to be screened from concrete appeals. If causes are bunched, therefore, they will give more liberally and more readily. This carries only under the stress and the drive of a war-psychology with its abnormal loyalties and extravagances. Already, even in some of the cities where the charities are local and supposedly familiar, the dangers of impersonal giving and the mechanics of wholesale administration are apparent. The trend of modern thought in psychology, philosophy, education, and religion is away from the general and toward the particular; away from the abstract and toward the concrete; away from the impersonal and toward the personal; away from centralized authority and toward democratic responsibility; away from some super-organization's projects to the individual's concrete interests.

There is no common denominator for missionary work, not even "missionary," much less "Congregational." To bunch the multiplicity of individual interests and activities now in action, and intelligently and economically guided by a number of organizations, historically created because of the needs which lie back of the activities; to unite all of this, I say, under one or two colossal boards, created not because of the specific needs, but in order to simplify the management, and mechanize "drives" or "E. M. C.'s" in the interest of wholesale receipts, yea, even the long-talked-of $5,000,000, runs absolutely counter to man's natural manner of feeling, thinking, giving.

What we need to do is to let the peo know what our missionaries are doing what they need. People give, and give joicingly, to causes in the concrete and organizations in the abstract. This is w the Congregational Churches in America be giving to the American Missionary Asso tion. Pastors and members of these churc gave to the work that the A. M. A. was try to do, and not primarily because it was Congregational agency. They gave generou and gladly. They will continue to do so o as long as they consider the work itself wo while. This is also why the American Missi ary Association today holds at least 128 tr funds which in the near future will amo to almost $9,000,000, largely designated special phases of its work. In the last ana sis, every bit of charity or missionary w must rise or fall on its own merits.

As one directly connected with all of missions and the missionaries of the A. M. this is what I ask: Let our work be known the concrete. Bring it close to the members the churches, collectively and individually. them hear and speak and give for themselv How many of them know what the Commit of Twelve and the Commission on Missions thinking about? How many of them ca How can they care when it appeals to th if perchance they listen in now and then, l an academic discussion of church machine What we need to do is to bring the work a the giver together.

Meanwhile, our receipts are decreasing, missionaries are worried and underpaid, buildings are rotting, our appeals are barr from direct access to donors, and our Depa ment of Support needlessly spends wee months, yes and even years, talking about h "we must play the united game" to the tune an increased cost for every dollar collected. the members of our churches knew more abo this, they would scrap the whole business, a give their money direct to the individual m sions where people know how to make one d lar do the work of two dollars, instead of ducing a dollar to the value of 77 cents organizers and experts do through talk abo efficiency.

Inspiration

By Grace Terbell Spear

On God's great canvas of the western sky
A wondrous scene before us lay revealed,
His hand alone could paint such majesty,
Such color never human touch might yield.

Soft pinks and lavenders and crimsons roll
In curling waves, of ever-deepening tone
While lakes of green,
Mid sands of burnished gold
Beneath, against the blue of twilight shone.

Heaven's gates seemed opened wide that might know,
In verity, the joys that wait us there,
And faith's dim torch, rekindled in that glo
Burned bright again above the world's despa

Soul-filled, reluctantly we turned away
Earth's vexing tasks and problems to resum
Yet will the memory of that closing day
Life's pathway long with radiance illume.

New times demand new measures and ne men; the world advances, and in time ou grows the laws that in our fathers' day we best; and doubtless, after us, some pur scheme will be shaped out by wiser ones tha we, made wiser by the steady growth of trut —Lowell.

Vital Questions for Congregationalists

To Come Before the National Council

The Women Needed

If the women of our churches would back one Home Board and one Foreign Board heartily and efficiently as they now support ir own Woman's Board, the cause of mis-ns would take a long step forward.

The Laymen's Missionary Movement failed rmanently to interest enough men in our urches to give a missionary atmosphere. We men need the constant urge of the women keep us in line. Through the division of ces, large numbers of laymen take no part missionary work and have no interest who ght be interested in an efficient and live joint rk.

As to losing interest because of submersion well-known and greatly loved boards, we ve been accustomed to give to the work, ce the advent of apportionment and not to lividual societies.

I believe the above represents the views of ny of our most interested laymen.

ROGER LEAVITT.

Cedar Falls, Ia.

A Layman's Thoughtful Views

"Who shall be the next Moderator of the tional Council?" I would suggest the name Mr. Arthur Deering Call. I believe the time s come for the election of a layman. Mr. ll is a distinguished layman who is the ex-utive secretary of the American Peace Society, l editor of the Advocate of Peace. He is strong man and would grace the position.

"Should the Presbyterians and Congrega-nalists unite?" Answer: I am very strongly favor of anything that will reduce the num-r of denominations. I was born and brought a Presbyterian, and my father and his father re Presbyterian ministers. I do not think at it is possible to come to any basis of ion with the Presbyterians until they put eir own house in order. I think that to bring e question forward at this time would ly cause feeling that would make it ch harder to approach at a more opportune te.

As to the utilizing of the energies of our men. It was Mr. Sherman who said the y to resume is to resume. My observation that on committees and other places where l work is to be done that the few laymen osen were chosen more for the conspicu-sness of their names than for any real work at was expected of them. Every church has few laymen who are dependable to see rough anything that they agree to undertake. through your ministers you could get a list such laymen, and the particular line of their erest, you would have a group to call on.

Regarding the several questions concerning e consolidation of our boards, if this were t such a two sided question, we could have me to a decision thereon a long time before is. It is a question of weighing the argu-ents. When the former consolidation was t through, I was much interested in it and ted in favor of it at the National Council. am not so sure now as I was then regard-g the matter. I think, however, that the eight of the argument is in favor of con-lidation, but it will mean a lot of additional ucation among our people.

I see no reason why the Foundation for ducation should not be merged with the Edu-tion Society, nor why the Annuity Fund and e Ministerial Relief Fund should not be ndled by a unified agency.

"Shall we lose interest in missions if we lessen the number of specific objects in the Apportionment by merging some of the Societies?" I should say not, provided that we learn to stress the object rather than the medium through which the object is accomplished.

The merging of the magazines is an economic question. If the magazines could be put on a paying basis, my answer would be no; as they are not, perhaps it is best to make the effort to cut down the overhead and consolidate them all into one paper.

As to the emphasis of the State Conference, and as to the local societies coming direct to the churches, I feel that the decision must be made which is the better approach, and having decided, stick to that plan. If the apportionment plan is the wise one and our benevolences become more or less of a machine-made plan, it seems that the State Conference is the part of the machinery to be used. Without the definite apportionment the State Conference could accomplish but little. The point I am making is the thing should be one or the other and not both methods used. If the responsibility is put up direct to the state organizations, they should be held responsible for results.

NORTON M. LITTLE.

Washington, D. C.

Against Too Much Simplification

The next Moderator of the National Council should be Rev. Dan F. Bradley, D.D., of Cleveland. I appreciate that there might be some sentiment for a layman to hold this office, but the requirements of it are now such that it would seem as though it would be difficult to find a layman who could give to it the time and the attention which it deserves. As I know of none such, and assuming that Dr. Potter's successor will be another minister, there is no one in the country who has better claim to the honor than Dr. Bradley. Born in a distinguished missionary home, identified both by family and by his own unhesitating and great love for our missionary interests, the leader at one time of one of our most distinguished colleges, the supporter of every outstanding interest of Congregationalism in a way that has made him nationally known, the pastor of several of our largest churches with a record of unusual usefulness and honor, the friend of every forward-looking cause and the kindly associate and helper to the limit of his power of his brethren in the ministry, he is both by his length of service, the quality of his achievement and the character of his mind, the outstanding man for this position in our Congregational fellowship today.

The representation of women in the Council and in our Missionary Association ought to be enlarged. There are certain practical considerations to be kept in mind, but certainly none in theory against their having an equal part with the men.

As a minister in Cleveland and as one of the original sponsors of the union of Congregationalists and Presbyterians, it is unnecessary to say that I advocate going forward with the plan. I am, however, heartily convinced that if union is effected, it must be essentially upon the basis of the fundamentals of the Cleveland plan; namely, leaving both to churches and ministers the utmost freedom in the matter of faith. It would be folly to expect free Congregational churches and ministers to submit themselves to the constraints under which our Presbyterian brethren are suffering today. If we cannot have union which preserves to all who desire it such liberty as they now possess, we cannot have it at all. But I am earnestly desirous that union shall be proposed and developed on the basis of the preservation of such liberty.

I would say that the unification of the Foreign Mission Boards would seem to me to be determined by the attitude of the women in this respect. If they wish to unite and could be confident of maintaining their present average of gifts, there might be some saving in administration. If the matter is not wholeheartedly approved, there would be a loss in gifts which will not be compensated for by any theoretical gain.

I can think of no folly that has been proposed in our denomination more complete than that which would be involved in the scrapping of the immense sentimental values connected with the name as well as with the work of the American Missionary Association. Nobody who has had contacts with the colored people in the South and realized their love for the name and its traditions would ever dream of proposing a plan involving such a loss. It is needless to say that financial considerations are closely connected with those of sentiment. The mania for simplification which has prevailed in our group for a number of years (the net result of which has been the increase of officials, of machinery for doing business, and of the raising of our overhead expenses with no proportionate gain for our missionary services), seems to have reached its limit in the proposals made at Chicago, that we throw away one of the chief glories of our past for a new development in this discredited policy of simplification.

Speaking only for myself, I would say that so long as there is a secretary of the individual societies left who can present his own distinctive cause with intelligence and zeal, he and no one else will receive an invitation to the pulpit where I serve. Personally I am not interested in abstract discussions of missionary work and every year convinces me that people with money, especially business men, cannot be reached by such appeals.

(REV.) FERDINAND Q. BLANCHARD.

Cleveland, Ohio.

A Unified Publication

The proposition to unite the Missionary Herald and the American Missionary into a monthly magazine number of The Congregationalist so that all three would come under one subscription appeals to me very much indeed.

I believe we could push the subscription campaign for a unified denominational publication much more effectively than we can at present with three separate periodicals. It would help the pastor of the local church immensely if he could simply say, "Here is one all-around religious publication which you ought to have. It is a weekly newspaper with a magazine number and it covers the whole range of religious interests." Following the good example of the Survey, we could even let people choose the weekly issue or the monthly "graphic" edition. Some one has said that "religious journalism is the last stand of good journalism." We need a unified publication and then we need to put our churches behind it with a great subscription list.

(REV.) ALBERT W. PALMER.

Oak Park, Ill.

A School of New Ideas

Some of the things which happen at a summer conference for young people

By Henry Smith Leiper

THE atmosphere of a young people's conference is the ideal place in which to come in contact with a number of new ideas, as well as new friends. One of the first new ideas which is very certain to be met is that concerning the church.

The average boy or girl has probably never thought of the church in terms other than those applicable to the local organizations which represent its inharmonious differences and sometimes its petty rivalries. They have never been conscious of the wider life of the church; they have not seen vividly portrayed the fact of its world inclusiveness, nor have they met in intimate personal contacts representatives of that world life, who are mature enough to be a real part of it but young enough not to have lost their contact with the boys and girls. In this group are missionaries from far off places, overseas and at home, board secretaries and other representatives of the church's larger life. Through them and through the atmosphere of the conference itself, the young people come to have an idea of the church which is larger, more healthy and more adequate than the old idea they brought from home. If this new idea is properly presented it has the effect of magnifying their sense of loyalty to the church in the home town, and increasing their enthusiasm for the doing of its share in the world-wide work.

Another new idea which many young people meet for the first time in a student conference is that of the intense practical interest and helpfulness of the Bible in interpreting life. Even though they are steadily improving and are the scenes of devoted effort on the part of many fine men and women, our Sunday schools are woefully lacking in the kind of Bible teaching which makes the book live for young people. Through the summer conference young people come to realize, as perhaps they never have before, the fundamental place of the Bible as the record of man's most intense and inspiring religious experience.

Yet another new idea met with on the conference grounds is that concerning the enterprise of missions. Not infrequently, the young people have conceived of the whole great enterprise as quite outside of their interests; but prolonged and intimate contact with young missionary leaders from home lands and overseas produces a very definite effect. The human side of missions, the reasonableness of it all, the relationship that the enterprise bears to the solving of the world's conspicuous problems—race relations, industrial relations, international relations, war—becomes clear and makes a deep impression on the minds of generous hearted, eager youth.

The New Commandment

Along with these new ideas about the church, about the Bible, and about missions, comes to many a boy and girl a new idea as to the meaning of Christian fellowship. The new commandment which Jesus left in the minds of his closest friends the night before his death—"Love one another"—is illustrated by the healthiest kind of whole-hearted association in days of full activity where boys and girls, men and women, young and middle aged and old feel the compelling power of Christian fellowship and sense its all important place in the building of the Kingdom of God. The most neglected commandment of all, the most apt to be obscured by the ordinary type of religious discussion, is brought clearly to the center of the stage and made to appear what after all it really is, the ultimate and fairest flowering of the tree of religious knowledge.

The fifth great new idea that usually dawns in the consciousness of young people at a Christian conference is concerned with work and play. A modern gathering of this type is not merely recreational by any means; there is plenty of work, and some of it hard work, but it is attacked co-operatively. It is surrounded with an atmosphere of healthy, joyous fellowship, it is properly motivated and linked effectively with the dominant enthusiasms of young people. The quick turn from work to play and from play to work as a group of boys and girls come from a classroom to a fast and furious game, or from the afternoon games to an hour of sunset meditation when real thinking is done about the deep things in life, the hardest kind of work, tends to establish more firmly than ever the conviction that the Christian life should be full of both work and play in reasonable proportions, alternating so as to bring variety when it is needed and the opportunity for concentrated, energetic effort when strength has been stored up.

The student conference gives to young people a new idea of worship. In meetings where young people themselves lead the services of worship, or in those where the leadership is in the hands of older men and women, the fact is recognized that worship exists solely as a means of making vivid and real to the mind and heart of the individual the living presence of the Father, God. One who has never attended a Communion service at a student conference where the office of deacons is taken by the young people themselves, can hardly imagine the impressiveness of such a scene. Not only is the public and corporate worship life of the conference such as to bring a new idea of the meaning of worship to the young people, but the very atmosphere tends to bring into the minds and hearts of you Christian disciples a new appreciation of t place of worship in the individual life. N once, but many times, one will hear fr the delegates who have returned from su a conference the comment that its most lasti effectiveness is somehow connected with t hours of worship, particularly the vesper se ice on the hillside in the glow of the setti sun.

Leaders for the New Day

There is yet another side to this conferer life which needs to be noted. It has a ve definite plan in the vitally important matt of vocational guidance. This is not becau there are any direct attempts made to de with this problem either through discussi or class work, but indirectly, personally, a unofficially the conference leaders are broug into constant and perfectly natural relatio ship with the problem of the choice of l work as it affects the young people. N many of the Christians of the present time c escape having heard it said, somewhere some one, that the Y. M. C. A. never fails get leaders for its work in all lands, where the church seems to have a constant strugg to find the right men and women who a willing and able to take places of leadersh The answer is quite simple—for years t Y. M. C. A. has held regular summer co ferences where the matter of the choice life work has naturally been considered. would be interesting indeed if one were make a study of the proportion of those places of Christian leadership, not only the Y. M. C. A., but in the churches a missionary societies, who have chosen the life work as a result of a summer conferen held by the Y. M. C. A. Now that t churches are holding summer conferences, the is every reason to look forward to an increas readiness on the part of the young people put their lives into the leadership of t church and its world-wide missionary ente prise. Indeed the time has already come wh there are more missionary candidates availab than there are funds to put them to wor The reaction of this upon the churches c hardly fail to be extremely stimulating to larger degree of Christian stewardship.

Church Vacation Schools

In Maine

By Gertrude Carter

Extremes meet in Maine. From forest primeval to modern city is not a matter of centuries, but of a few brief hours by train, auto, or steamboat. So, naturally, extremes must meet in any account of Maine vacation schools. Traveling through the amazing distances of that region, deep into the heart of the forest, and coming suddenly upon a group of farms, a thriving little village, or even a small city, our thoughts are stirred by speculations about the children of these isolated farms and small villages. Can any church reach them?

Not all of them, we must admit; only a few out of many as yet. But as a beacon light that shows the way to all, one church group is solving the problem. A little to the west of the more commonly traveled line of railroad lies that thirty-mile-long strip known to the church as "the Aroostook Larger Parish." There were four vacation schools in the parish last summer, managed by holding two at a time in the forenoon in one community, and another in the afternoon in another town. Can you see in imagination the truck on its rounds to bring in the children from the distant farms, gathering the up here and there until often as many thirty-five joyous youngsters were crowd in at a single trip? No horn would be need to warn other travelers of the approach that truck. The largest of the four tow in which these schools were held has a pop lation of a little over 2,000. No other ev approaches a thousand, the smallest havi less than 200. Yet the enrollment of childr in the vacation schools of the Aroosto Larger Parish totaled over 300.

In the opposite corner of the state, in o of Maine's prettiest villages, stands a chur facing a tiny park. A broad expanse of a joining lawns and grounds invite little fol to out-door sports and games, while chur and vestry call to devotions and story hou Fifty-nine children answered the call, no le than 19 of whom had never attended chur or church school before. But if you ha visited that church school in the fall aft vacation school had been held, you would ha found all nineteen enrolled as members.

In another village one woman saw the ne of the children, and prayed that a leader mig be sent. As we all do at times, she fail to realize that the clear vision of the ne constituted a call to personal service.

mer's wife, in the midst of the hard work the haying season, she assumed the task, d walked three miles each day to teach ool. The immediate result was a group 80 children so filled with missionary zeal it every piece of handwork made was given fill Christmas boxes to be sent to mission tions—not a single child kept back a toy favorite bit of work for himself; and by ir daily offerings they raised over ten dollars money to be sent to home and foreign ssions.

In such schools, taught by such consecrated chers, nearly three thousand children of ine were enrolled last summer. This year ny new vacation schools will open their ors.

In New Jersey

By Mary A. Kyte

It was a happy group that met in a comnity daily vacation Bible school in a church Hudson County, N. J. Here Italians, Jews, tholics, and Protestants representing several nominations, worshiped, sang praises to God, died the Bible, played and worked together ring the month of July, 1924. It mattered tle to these children what their creed or me surroundings were while in this environent, as every child was treated alike and ven the same opportunity for progressive velopment.

In this daily vacation Bible school our attion was called to a family group of Italian ildren, by birth and training members of the tholic faith. They came every morning omptly, clean and with their best manners. he father of the family is a cobbler and I ncy that each peg driven in a shoe was acmplished more perfectly because of his love r these childern. One of our instructors d occasion to have several pairs of shoes ended during the daily vacation Bible school ason. She took them to the cobbler and ent her way. When she returned for her oes, she asked, "How much do I owe you?" he cobbler replied, "Not one cent, lady. You ve done so much for my children in that hool, I could not take your money! I will end all your shoes without money." Of course e instructor would not accept his offer, but exessed her joy in being able to help his little es, and she has cherished the spirit of apreciation of this Italian cobbler who was illing to give his time, talent, and strength one who was living each day with his ildren.

In this school as in the other schools in Hudson County we have given the older girls nd boys some responsibilty for groups of ounger children. For example:—they will t with a group during the worship period nd Bible instruction, and, in the craft work lass they assist the smaller children. This evelops their ability and aids our instructors here the classes are difficult to manage effiiently on account of many children and few nstructors. This year we are placing fifteen irls in the schools in our county as secrearies and assistants, each girl having started er interest in this work as a pupil several ears ago. This group of girls has been taking daily vacation Bible school course under our upervision during the past winter, and special nstruction in the secretarial branch of this vork.

ARE YOU INTERESTED?

Someone said, "It may be all right, but I annot see the use of spending money for wood o be sawed up and wasted by boys in a laily vacation Bible school, and the materials hey buy for the girls must cost a great deal f money! Another hobby, I suppose."

This "someone" did not appreciate the values of the daily vacation Bible school until his own son came home and retold the Bible stories, whistled the old-time hymns of the church, and repeated prayers the children were learning. It was then he let his thoughts drift back to his own childhood days. He could picture the home with his mother and father. He fancied he could hear his father asking the blessing at the morning, noon, and evening meals. It was while passing through this silent retrospection that the values in this daily vacation Bible school became an understandable, worth-while factor in the life of his boy, for this training in religious education, he realized, was not practiced in his own home.

BOYS LIKE TO MAKE THINGS
A Church Vacation School in Maine

The father of the lad began to appreciate the keen interest his son was taking in the daily vacation Bible school. The boy's conversation bubbled with enthusiasm for it, and when he proudly carried home a piece of handcraft work, which he had started to make for himself, and then decided he would send it to some boy in the near-by Home for Crippled Children, his father confessed that for years he had tried to teach his son to think of others first, and it seemed like a hopeless task. Yet here was an evidence of unselfishness, for the toy was well made, very attractive and greatly prized by the boy. Then the father marveled how, in just a few weeks, the young woman who was the instructor in the daily vacation Bible school could mold the life of his son so that happily and of his own volition he suggested sending this first bit of his own handwork to a boy he had never seen!

One evening, several weeks later, this "someone" sat again in his comfortable arm chair, apparently reading, but his mind was too confused to concentrate on his paper. Again he found himself wondering why he had drifted away from the church after the years of training he had received in a Christian home. Suddenly he looked up and said, "Son, tell me all about this daily vacation Bible school you go to every morning." The boy was enthusiastic as he told of the worship period, the Bible and missionary stories, the habit talks and the handcraft work, some of which would be packed and sent to the orphan children of the Near East for Christmas, while other articles would go to the hospitals, day nurseries, and the poor children of the community. He told how baskets were being made to be filled with flowers for "shut-ins."

The father listened, and his training of long ago was rekindled. It took courage to reorganize that home, but this ten-year-old boy, guided by the influence of the daily vacation Bible school, could and did take the initiative. Through prayer and co-operation, and with an added interest in the activities of the daily vacation Bible school, a new atmosphere reigned in that home, the mother and father becoming active in the church and expressing a deep interest in all branches of religious education. The experience of this boy and his parents is not uncommon.

First Church, Ansonia, Ct.

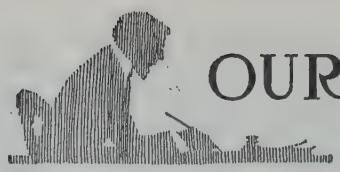
Though not the largest, oldest, or most pretentious of Connecticut Congregational churches, First Church, Ansonia, a picture of which appears upon our cover, and which recently celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary, occupies a distinctive place in the life of the community, and is typical of those churches which are strongholds of American Protestantism in rapidly developing and changing communities. Ansonia has become one of the centers where there is a great excess of people of foreign birth and foreign extraction.

The church is a solid and substantial stone structure, attractive in itself and both beautiful and strategic in its location at the top of the high ridge that runs through the town. It seems to hold a fortified place in the life of the community.

During its 75 years it has had eight regular pastors, and it is interesting to note in these days of shortening pastorates that the present pastorate has been much the longest of them all, Rev. Otto W. Burtner having been minister since 1906.

Under Mr. Burtner's leadership the church has made substantial growth and a fine stone addition has been built, providing excellent quarters for the church school and for the work of the parish. When this addition was built in 1915 the entire church was redecorated, making a bright and attractive auditorium.

The 75th anniversary was suitably celebrated in a week of special services. On the opening Sunday the Editor had the privilege of being present and preaching at the morning service. In the evening Rev. Sherrod Soule, D.D., superintendent of the Missionary Society of Connecticut, spoke on "Century Changes and Contrasts in Congregational Connecticut." Between Sundays, Professor H. H. Tweedy, of Yale Divinity School, and Moderator Potter, of the National Council, addressed public gatherings, and greetings were received from surrounding churches. On the second Sunday, Secretary Charles E. Burton preached on "The Function of the Church," concluding a week of inspiration and rejoicing.



OUR READERS' FORUM

Union Churches and Benevolences

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

An editorial in your issue of June 25 seems to assume that Union Churches are rivals of denominational churches.

Whatever may be true elsewhere, I can testify that this is not the spirit of the Union Churches of Massachusetts. Their self-consciousness is rather that of being one example of the growing unity of all denominations, manifested in other ways, such as federated churches, local federations, and state and nation-wide co-operation. Union Churches are content to fill their proper place in this growing movement, as furnishing the only solution in fields where there is no church and where no denomination can successfully enter.

It is frankly admitted that their benevolences are not yet equal to those of the denominational churches. For this there are obvious reasons. The average membership of our 26 Union Churches is 126, against an average membership of 252 in the Congregational churches of the state. They are young—only three—the Memorial. Church in Springfield, organized in 1865, being the oldest, can trace existence as a church back beyond the opening of this century. In these, their early years, they have been compelled to provide building and other equipment unaided. Moreover, until very recently there has been no machinery, such as a denomination provides, to bring before them the opportunity and obligation to share in world evangelism.

This lack is now being supplied by the State Federation of Churches, which not only gives them fellowship with all denominations, as well as each other, in an annual Conference, but also assists the Missionary Committee which that Conference has appointed, to acquaint them with opportunities for missionary interest and contribution. Thus there is brought to their attention the urgent need of the independent Albanian Mission and of the building fund of the Union Church of the Panama Canal Zone. In 1921 the reported benevolent contributions were $3,519, in 1924 $5,209, an increase of 48 per cent. in three years.

As an example of their local efficiency, one of them on Easter Sunday increased its membership 50 per cent. by the addition of 41, of whom only two were children. Is not such a movement full of promise and worthy of all encouragement?

E. Tallmadge Root,
Executive Secretary,
Massachusetts Federation of Churches.
Boston, Mass.

The Cruelty of Blockades

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

The resolutions of the Massachusetts Conference sound like simply asking America to forego selfish insistence on her own rights in order to facilitate action for the enforcement of peace and justice. That would be very Christian. But in fact the resolutions seem to propose an encouragement of the use of a nationwide blockade as a weapon of war against an aggressive nation.

We found out, as soon as the censorship was lifted after the treaty, that a modern blockade is a supremely barbarous method of making war, causing more suffering for a given amount of efficiency than do guns and bayonets, and making babies the greatest sufferers of all. The excuse for the blockade is said to be that in modern war there are no non-combatants, but this is a very stupid lie so long as babies exist.

To increase the use of blockade means making war more cruel and horrible in the hope of deterring nations from resorting to it. This is a clear case of doing evil that good may come. Blockade, which is a war against babies, is a crime even when used by those who have a righteous cause of war against the babies' fathers. The children must not be put to death for the fathers, says Moses. And in time of war the only guardians of the babies are the neutral powers who ought not to allow a blockade to become strict even if it is aimed at a guilty nation.

The conference might as well have resolved that America should not object to the use of poison gas and disease germs in war if they are used against an aggressive nation, or that if Germany had a good cause of war against France, Germany would be justified in invading neutral Belgium in order to attack France.

Ballardvale, Mass. Steven T. Byington.

The Primacy of Jesus

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

A certain pastor says that many young people do not join the church, and that many who do are not the stronger characters but seem to join because their pastor and parents wish it.

Our churches are doing much for their young people, all perhaps good and helpful. Yet in our laudable desire to show them that a Christian can be happy, having plenty of fun and good times, are we failing to show them the other side? Are we in danger of swelling the number of Christian quitters who allow trivial excuses to keep them away from the services of the church, and make their economies begin with their contributions? The question returns, how can people be led to give Jesus the first place in their hearts and lives?

In this connection it troubles me very much that the plain practical Bible teachings about the Holy Spirit, and our need of repentance, of forgiveness and cleansing, of a Savior from the guilt and power of sin are practically dropped out of the present-day religious teaching. It follows, of course, that Jesus is no longer held up to us as our personal Savior, but simply as our Master, Teacher and Guide. Whenever people are led to accept him as Master and begin to yield him loyal, self-denying obedience, we rejoice, whatever the means used.

It does seem to me, however, that the most appealing motive of all is being largely unused. In all human relationships, to whom do we give the first place, and for whom are we willing to make sacrifices, if need be? Whom but those whom we love, who have shown their love to us? Jesus himself said, "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." When we can lead people to realize in some degree their need of a Savior and can show them Jesus Christ as the one "who bore their sins in his own body on the tree," as one of whom each of us can say, "He loved me and gave himself for me," then we may expect them to say, "We love him because he first loved us." We may hope, too, that this love will grow stronger as years pass showing them more of his own patient love.

Let us not forget either in our prayers and efforts for others to ask that the Spirit, whose work Jesus so emphasized, may send home their hearts and bring to their remembrance the truths presented to them.

A Lover of the Church.

"Education for Life"

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

I have read with interest your editorial comment on The Future of the American College and the symposium published a week earli How about a frank recognition on the pa of the churches that their attitude toward t public school system needs reconsideration? W have too much assumed that separation church and state means cutting out all re gion from public schools. That no more f lows than that non-partisanship in politi matters in teaching means cutting out teaching of political affairs from the schoo

If religion is truly something which touch all of life everywhere, then it is a proper su ject of study in the public schools and cann be cut out of the life of teachers and pupi The fact that there are widely differing re gious conceptions does constitute a serious di culty, but I cannot believe it insurmountab to intelligent leadership.

Edward Shillito in recent comment on t Phelps-Stokes Commission's Education in Ea Africa, places this volume beside the story General Armstrong and Hampton Institute Education for Life. He says it deals with ed cation as "from first to last a gift of pure a undefiled religion—a religion which is not o subject among many, but a 'single wide inte est' gathering unto itself all the many interes which make up a human life." My query whether a people which could produce t ideal presented in these two books, the ideal education for life, is not capable of finding t way to apply that ideal in its public scho system. I believe it is and that one step t ward that end must be the making of a clea cut distinction between the two ideas "church and state" and "religion in t schools."

We must disabuse ourselves altogether the idea that a state-supported institution any more likely to be "godless" or "irreligiou than a school supported any other way. W must be prepared to insist that teachers be, far as possible, men and women of faith an vision, of insight and spiritual imaginatio and that the atmosphere of the schools on less than the atmosphere of our homes an churches, should be pervaded with the sense the challenge of the unseen as truly as of t visible universe. Any true education must i clude the stimulus of the quest for the ideal well as of the mastery of matter.

North Church, Lawrence R. Howard.
Cambridge, Mass.

No man is in his place so long as he is ou of church. To say that a man can be as goo outside as inside the church is absurd. A well might one say that a man who continu ously neglects his civic duties is as good citizen as the man who performs them. Ma is a home-making animal, and he mars h life if he is not loyal to the home. He is political animal and he curtails his life if h is not faithful to the state. He is a religiou animal, and if he holds aloof from the churc he starves and stunts the highest instincts o his nature.—Charles E. Jefferson.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

The Gospel in Lystra

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for July 19

Acts 14: 8-20

Persecution is often less embarrassing to the read of spiritual truth than too great out-ırd success. This was illustrated in the perience of Paul and Barnabas at Lystra. The healing of a cripple led the multitude to tribute to Paul and Barnabas god-like powers d character. "The gods are come down to in the likeness of men," said these Lystrans. ıul, being the chief speaker, they called Mer-ry, and Barnabas they called Jupiter. So treme did this outburst of pagan superstı-ɔn become that the priest of Jupiter brought en and garlands and would have done sacri-e with the multitudes. It was a time for the issionaries of temptation and danger. The rsonal danger could not be avoided, but to ve weakened in any way in the presence of mptation would have been disastrous to the iritual mission and purpose of Barnabas and ıul.

No doubt many a missionary has been placed a somewhat similar situation. Whether he s performed seeming miracles or has simply hibited to ignorant and native people the sults of better knowledge, the missionary has en again and again regarded as possessing range and occult powers. Temptation to take lvantage of this superstitious attitude, es-cially for good ends, has undoubtedly often en present to the missionary; possibly at nes the missionary has succumbed and has lopted unworthy means in the hope of serv-g true ends. Noble ends, however, soon be-me debased when the means of attaining em are ignoble, and it is unlikely that Chris-ın missionaries have ever to any great ex-nt yielded to this temptation any more than d Paul and Barnabas.

They took advantage of the occasion to speak these Lystrans plainly concerning the nature God, and it is interesting to see the striking ntrast between the simple conception of a iritual God as Paul expounds it in a few ɔrds, and the superstition that bound those whom he spoke. But the multitude were not sily dissuaded from their purpose and ap-ırently were not won spiritually.

The wonderment and superstition occasioned seeming miracles does not as often in any ay induce spiritual conviction, as might be pposed. Jesus himself bore witness to this hen he reproached the multitude in a former y. "Ye seek me, not because ye saw the iracles, but because ye ate of the loaves and ere filled."

The intense popularity of Paul and Barnabas ıssed very rapidly under the fury of re-ction. Jews came to Lystra from Antioch ıd Iconia and they easily persuaded the ckle multitude that Paul and Barnabas ere not gods in human form but were the up-ılders of a new religion, which they rightly nceived to be against the religion of super-ition. The multitude, who would have made crifice to Paul and Barnabas, now stoned aul and dragged him out of the city, leaving m for dead. What happened to Barnabas is ɔt indicated. Fortunately fury sometimes ends itself ineffectively, and Paul was ap-ırently not as seriously injured as appeared. t any rate he was able to go to Derbe with arnabas on the day following the stoning.

Here we have illustrated both the effective-ness and the futility of persecution. Persecution has power to accomplish dastardly ends. It is a great mistake to regard it lightly. Paul and Barnabas were driven forth, their ministry was interfered with, but persecution has never been effective in destroying the truth. It may affect the earthly course of the missionary but it cannot affect his real witness.

Summer Schools of Religious Education

One of the special features of the International Summer School at Lake Geneva, Wis. (July 27-Aug. 8), is a three-day Convention of Fine Arts in Religion, which will be held July 31 to Aug. 2, under the personal direction of Prof. H. Augustine Smith of Boston University. Professor Smith is internationally recognized as a specialist in Congregational singing, choral and instrumental music, worship and ritual, drama and pageantry, and visualization. Thousands of church schools and young people's societies use and love his Hymnal for American Youth. His more recent Hymns for the Living Age is being widely used in the churches. Professor Smith conducts a Fine Arts Conference annually at Chautauqua Lake, N. Y., where thousands of people seek instruction and inspiration under his leadership.

This three-day seminar will be devoted to the study of Worship Services in Principle and Practice; The Choice and Use of Pictures in Religious Education; The Use of the Hymn Book in the Church and Church School; Pageantry and Drama in Religious Education; The Building of Master Programs for All Occasions.

International Leadership Schools

If some one were to ask you what is the greatest need of our Sunday, week-day, and vacation schools, you would most likely reply, "Trained and consecrated leadership." The next question is, Where can such training be found? Among the agencies that offer such opportunities are three leadership schools which will be conducted by the International Council of Religious Education this summer as follows: Geneva Glen, Col., July 13-25; Lake Geneva, Wis., July 27-Aug. 8; Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H., Aug. 17-29. The program and leadership of these schools are the product of the united efforts of 35 Protestant denominations and 56 state and provincial councils of religious education. The various denominational boards and state councils have provided some of their best leaders.

Among the many instructors and lecturers are Hugh S. Magill, LL.D., general secretary, International Council of Religious Education; Norman E. Richardson, Ph.D., professor of religious education, Northwestern University; Rev. Erwin L. Shaver, New England secretary, Congregational Education Society; H. Augustine Smith, professor of the fine arts in religion, Boston University; Luther A. Weigle, Ph.D., Sterling professor of religious education, Yale University; Benjamin S. Winchester, D.D., former editor, Congregational Publishing Society.

Standard Training Course credits earned by students in these schools will be certified to the various denominational boards for denominational recognition. For illustrated catalog, which gives full information concerning all three leadership schools, write to the Congregational Education Society, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill., or the International Council of Religious Education, 5 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

With the Schools and Colleges

Talladega Commencement

Talladega College has graduated larger classes than she did this year, but never has a more hopeful spirit existed at the end of the year. It was, in fact, a commencement more than an ending, for people's thoughts were on the future. Talladega has attained as high scholastic standards as any Negro college in the South, and its system has recently been proved far more wise and progressive than some with larger numbers. An increased attendance is assured next year, equipment is further increased, and two new buildings will soon be begun.

During the last year a fine gymnasium has been erected through a bequest by Mr. James Callanan,—a gymnasium such as few similar schools possess. It is crowded with students every day under the supervision of the physical director. Certain evenings are allotted to teachers. The young ladies use it certain days under a woman instructor. A swimming pool adds greatly to health and recreation.

The Sessions Practice School will be built this summer, taking the place of the worn-out Cassidy building. A new science hall, greatly needed by our growing departments of science, will be built the coming year and named after Dr. E. C. Silsby. It will cost about $100,000.

Nearly 200 people came over from Birmingham, about 80 miles distant, in special cars, to hear the baccalaureate sermon and see teachers and graduates. President F. A. Sumner preached, as usual, and Sunday evening was devoted to the theological seminary, the main address being given by Supt. H. S. Barnwell. The address to the alumni on Tuesday was given by Dr. John W. Goodgame, Seminary '01, of Birmingham, now the leading colored Baptist preacher in the state. Monday evening 22 completed their course in the preparatory school. Wednesday morning 20 received their A.B. degrees. Two graduated from the seminary, one with a diploma and one with the B.D. degree. One received her diploma in Nurses' Training. A striking address was given to the class by Dr. Kerrison Juniper of St. Petersburg, Fla. C. A. J.

Northfield's Commencement

The graduating class of Northfield Seminary numbers 55. The preacher of the baccalaureate sermon, the evening sermon in Sage Chapel, and the commencement address was Dr. Robert E. Speer of New York, vice-president of the board of trustees. A feature of the sacred concert, which has become a musical event in this section of New England, was the rendering of an original composition by Miss Tillinghast entitled "Prayer and Praise," and dedicated to Principal and Mrs. Charles E. Dickerson, resigned. This concert is given by the entire student body of Northfield Seminary and Mt. Hermon School, conducted by Mr. George S. Dunham, director of music. Among the graduating class are the daughters of seven missionaries. On Sunday evening an open-air memorial service was held on the slope of Sage Chapel hill in memory of Miss Lucy J. Brooks, a well-beloved teacher in Northfield Seminary.

"How strong, how peaceful, how deeply joyful our lives may be, if they are sacramental, lived in memory of Jesus, the central stream of deep determination, like his—doing the will of our Father."

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

Squarely and Honestly

If you would live happily you must learn to look at all the varied circumstances of life squarely and honestly. And you must learn to look into your own mind in the same way. Evasion of facts is always dangerous. Frank recognition of sober actuality, and an honest estimate of its true worth for life as a whole, will help a man to feel and act healthily as life's diverse experiences come one after the other. This is the way to guard against mischievous subconsciousness processes. You must develop the habit of using your conscious mind clearly, reasonably, loftily. You must not let fears, despairs, repulsions, antagonisms, fruitless longings, get hidden away in the forgotten closets of the mind.

Lack of money, an irritating environment, bodily infirmity that blocks desire and ambition, the hard grip of pain, the possibility of hidden dangers as well as open—what are such things in themselves? Even if the worst they could do should come to pass, what would it amount to? Your toil is humdrum, perhaps; but that is the lot of most men; and it may be nevertheless a contribution to the world's daily need. All of us live hourly in danger. Many and many a man has not found his true vocation till late in life. If what the world denominates success does not come, there is still a great Success that is possible. You can make the repugnant task and the uncongenial environment minister to the greatening of your Self—that which you know as "I."

But if not especially your environment, or your circumstances, or your Self with which you are out of harmony, and with which your relations give you neither joy nor peace, perhaps it is God. It may well be that the greatest need in your life is a revision of your ideas about God. Poor, harassed people are suffering many things because of their petty, or unjust, or hard ideas of the Eternal Father. It is saddening to hear things taught and see things done in the name of religion, as continually one does, which help only to undermine, if not to destroy, religion. The cruelties perpetrated in the name of Christianity are an illustration. The terrors implanted in the name of Christianity are another. The hatreds encouraged in the name of Christianity are a third. The narrowness and exclusiveness preached in the name of Christ must be added to the list. At the present time we are seeing a fear of investigation and of science taught, in the name of Christianity, which brings Christianity into disrespect and betrays Christ.

The mind that attempts to think of God must enlarge itself to the greatest measure possible. It is a good daily prayer to ask God to help us to think of him adequately, and to put our minds into harmony with his mind in all things. Harmony with life, and a just estimate of all its varying experiences and offers, are to be gained by learning to look at all things as God looks at them, to think as God thinks, to realize that God is love and that he desires our perfect development, to love all the world after the pattern of the Eternal Love. As peace is at the heart of the Eternal, so peace will grow in our human hearts as they learn to be like the Eternal.

Life, the life of here and now, has adequate meaning only as it is viewed under the aspect of eternity. To look at life with enlightened eyes is to look at it in the light of its immortal possibilities.

Closet and Altar

THE BEAUTY OF THE EARTH

He hath made everything beautiful in its time.—Ecc. 3: 11.

The time of the singing of birds is come—the time when nature calls aloud to us and bids us awaken out of the deadness of personal grief and rejoice in the new manifestation of his beauty that God is making to the world. "Behold. I am alive for evermore, and the dead live to me." Was not this the secret saying which the new verdure was writing all over the hills, and which the young pattering leaves and singing birds were repeating in music? It must be well to have ears to hear and a heart that could respond with a little flutter of returning joy and thankfulness.—Annie Keary.

Here in the country's heart
Where the grass is green,
Life is the same sweet life
As it e'er hath been.

Trust in a God still lives,
And the bell at morn
Floats with a thought of God
O'er the rising corn.

God came down in the rain,
And the crop grows tall—
This is the country faith
And best of all!

Norman Gale.

The array of Solomon was very splendid and magnificent: he that had the peculiar treasure of kings and provinces, and so studiously affected pomp and gallantry, doubtless he had rich clothing, and the best made up that could be got, especially when he appeared in his glory on high days. And yet, let him dress himself as fine as he could, he comes far short of the beauty of the lilies, and a bed of tulips outshines him. Let us therefore be more ambitious of the wisdom of Solomon, in which he was outdone by none, wisdom to do our duty in our places, rather than the glory of Solomon, in which he was outdone by the lilies. Knowledge and grace are the perfection of man, not beauty. —Matthew Henry.

Christians are like the several flowers in a garden, that have each upon them the dew of heaven, which, being shaked with the wind, they let fall dew at each other's roots, whereby they are jointly nurtured and become nourishers of each other.—John Bunyan.

We bless thee, O God, for the beauty of the earth, for its delight of blossom and its promise of fruit bearing that lead our hearts in gratitude to thee. Its throbbing life that climbs in very vein and spreads abroad in leaf and flower, its joy of the bird's song and the lamb's frisking and the herd's content come of thy bounty. Help us to leave behind every wintry doubt and fear and discontent and, welcoming the life thy Spirit brings, to grow in Christ's likeness as the trees grow each in the likeness of its own kind. Are we not children by thine own choice of fatherhood, O God? Give us a child's joy, that we may enter in to thy content with the works which thou hast made. Prepare our hearts for fruit bearing, and may thy life within us grow ever strong and pure, rich with all hope, ready for every needful sacrifice, overflowing with thy peace through years of earth and all the glorious ages of the immortal life with thee. Amen.

Isaac Ogden Rankin.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Bible Women—Great and Good

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic for July 19-25

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: Great Women of the Bible. Lu 10: 38-42; Esther 4: 1-17.

Light from the Bible Passages

The Bible is a book about men rather th about women. The Jews were more concern with the male than the female of the race hence the man appears on the horizon far mo frequently than the woman. In this Boo the characters are rarely appraised; they a usually presented in all their realism, and are left to draw our own conclusions. Marti and Mary are among the few whose failin and excellencies are mentioned. Martha lac poise in the midst of cares, and is critic Mary can make time, if necessary, to listen Christ. Esther is a woman of remarkab powers of tact, quick judgment, and qui forcefulness.

Leads for the Leader

Why do we ordinarily turn to the men the Bible as examples of high Christian livin Are they more exemplary? What in t Jewish mind kept women in a subordina place?

Study a few of the well-known women of t Scriptures, such as:

1. Sarah. Think of her in her days romance. She was willing to sacrifice all t things that made home dear to go with Abr ham into an unknown country, almost like missionary (Gen. 12 and 13.). When h husband asked her to deceive others (Gen. 1 11-13) she still remained steadfast.

2. Ruth. Picture her patience in povert her intense devotion, her strong decisivenes her respect for those older than herself, e pecially her mother-in-law, her readiness give up everything for the sake of the happine of others.

3. Mary the Mother of Jesus. Note h modesty, her willingness to bear hardship wit out complaint, her superb motherliness. T to get inside her mind as she was bringi Jesus up to manhood, her perplexity over h mysterious developments and deeds.

4. Dorcas (Acts 9: 36-42). A quiet, u assuming woman, whose name means "T Timid One." All her life doing thoughtf little deeds for others, absolutely unselfis Universally loved when alive and mourne widely when dead.

Other notable women are: Rebekah, Rache Deborah, Hannah, and Mary Magdalene ("T Paul of the female world").

Thought for Members

In exalting Woman, Christianity has tran formed the ideal of human greatness. T qualities once peculiar to herself, and by t possession of which she was socially degrade have become the qualities essential to h manity—male as well as female. I do n know of any change in the transition fro the old to the new which may not in its la analysis be referred to the influence of t feminine ideal.—George Matheson, D.D.

A Moment of Prayer

We thank thee, O God, for the gifts womanhood, that mean so much in the life the world. Sanctify the use made of the by those who possess them. Magnify the bles ings of those who are recipients of the Multiply in this thy world noble wome whose hearts reflect thine own. Amen.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

The Gospels

THE FOUR GOSPELS AND THE CHRISTIAN IFE, by WALTER B. DENNY (Pilgrim Press. 1.00). Dr. Denny is pastor of the First Con- regational Church, Huntington, Ct., having ome to the pastorate from a rich and varied cademic experience as student and teacher. In is volume he has presented within brief com- ass and in a form well adapted to young eople and to the average reader, for laymen ther than for theological students, the things at everybody ought to know for the proper ppreciation and understanding of the Gospels. While Dr. Denny's dominating purpose is to elp toward such study of the Gospels as shall veal the living personality of Christ, he alizes that even such a high quest is closely lated to historical and critical data concern- g the origin, date, authorship, etc., of the ospel writings. In these matters Dr. Denny a commendable guide, especially for the oung student. He not only is fully familiar ith the results of scholarly investigation, but manifests unbiased and well-balanced judg- ent in matters where there is wide variation opinion. As an introduction to the Gospels e book is exceedingly valuable both for the dividual student and for use in groups and asses.

THE FOUR GOSPELS: A STUDY IN ORIGINS, CANON B. H. STREETER (Macmillan. $3.50). he student who wishes a more exhaustive eatment, or the laymen who has mastered Dr. enny's simpler and more elementary presen- tion, can find nothing better than this able olume by Canon Streeter. While it challenges e interest of the most advanced student, pre- nting much material which Canon Streeter as based upon his own original research, it written in a style, and follows a method, hich help to make it comprehensible to the y reader. The synopsis that precedes each apter is especially valuable in this respect, efining with much precision the questions dis- ssed and their treatment.

Canon Streeter's expressed purpose is to pre- nt in this volume in a co-ordinated way, in far as they bear upon the origin of the Gos- ls, the results of studies in specialized fields research. "Students in various specialized anches of research," he says, "such as textual iticism, source-analysis, the cultural back- round of the early Church, and the psychology Mysticism, have worked at these subjects ore or less in isolation; and without intensive ecialization the advance made would have en impossible." The student will at once ppreciate the inestimable value of such a work co-ordination by a competent scholar who nows his subject and materials thoroughly. his volume, which the publishers present as Canon Streeter's ablest book," will be recog- zed as not only that, but as one of the most nportant in the critical study of the Gospels.

THE GOSPEL OF JOHN, by BENJAMIN W. OBINSON (Macmillan. $2.25). Professor Rob- son, whose chair is that of New Testament nterpretation in Chicago Theological Semi- ary, describes this volume as A Handbook for hristian Leaders. Though his purpose is the ractical one of enabling the Christian leader present his religion forcefully by showing ow scholarship has revealed and accentuated e power of the Fourth Gospel, and to this d technical discussions are avoided as far possible, the primary value of Professor Rob- inson's book, as of Canon Streeter's, is in its co-ordination of the scattered materials of the critical study of the Gospel of John since the appearance of Westcott's commentary over 40 years ago. The results of this study, Professor Robinson points out, are in various volumes and in many studies of separate phases of the subject, but "no single comprehensive, critical commentary embodying these results has appeared either in England or America in all these years." The time manifestly was ripe for a volume designed to supply this lack, and Professor Robinson's work deserves a warm welcome.

As an indication of a certain unanimity of trend that ultimately marks impartial and thoroughgoing scholarship, it is interesting to compare Professor Robinson's treatment of the Gospel of John with Canon Streeter's. Much similarity of result appears in spite of much difference in style and method. One has an opportunity also in reading these two volumes to test the principle upon which Professor Robinson has written. This is contained in a suggestion quoted from James Harvey Robinson's Humanizing of Knowledge (p. 106):

> What a considerable and beneficent revolution would take place in teaching and writing if a teacher should in writing a practical handbook "confine himself . . . to telling only such facts as play so important a part in his own everyday thinking that he could recall them without looking them up."

We question the soundness of that principle in critical studies, for there will always be matters of the utmost importance that even the expert is not likely to "recall without looking them up." However, the principle does make for simplicity, continuity, and readableness, and it is thoroughly justified within the limits in which Professor Robinson has applied it.

Recent Books About Paul

THE LIFE, LETTERS, AND RELIGION OF ST. PAUL, by C. T. WOOD (Scribners. $3.25). The author is fellow and dean of Queen's College, Cambridge. "To write an adequate life of St. Paul," he remarks in the opening sentence of his preface, "would require a combination of Robert Louis Stevenson with William James, both working under the direction of a theological scholar who knew the facts and a Christian saint who could interpret them." We are inclined to think that Dr. Jefferson, in his Character of Paul, came as near to realizing that combination as it is likely to be realized in any one personality, but Dr. Jefferson's book was a series of impressionistic studies rather than a formal and detailed biography. It is this that the author here attempts, and though he disclaims any great pretensions, his book is to be regarded as a scholarly and critical biography adapted primarily to young theological students at Cambridge and elsewhere. Its secondary interest to teachers and general readers is hardly less marked.

The author inspires confidence at once by the simple directness of his style, which is in keeping with the clearness of his spiritual outlook. His study is primarily of Paul's religion, in contrast with others who write chiefly on Paul's theology. Paul's theology, he says in an illuminating sentence, "was surely built in almost every detail on his daily religious experience," and the author reveals his purpose as a biographer in the expressed conviction that "we need books which will interpret his religion in terms which touch men's own experience of life rather than in the theological jargon which the modern mind finds both dull and unconvincing." It is high praise of this book to say that it justifies its author's purpose.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL, by D. M. ROSS (Doran. $2.00). A Study of St. Paul as the Interpreter of Jesus, is the sub-title of this book. Broadly speaking it is in harmony with Mr. Wood's emphasis upon the primacy of Paul's religious experience over his theology. Its motto, says the "jacket," might be: "Back to Jesus with Paul." It will be helpful to those who have unduly associated Paul with conservative theology, and have failed to see how essentially he was a man of liberal and liberalizing spirit.

THE PEDAGOGY OF ST. PAUL, by HOWARD TILLMAN KUIST (Doran. $1.75). The author is a professor in the Biblical Seminary, New York. He has dealt here with an exceedingly interesting and fruitful theme, concerning which, so far as we are aware, very little has been written. It is instructive to find both Professor Kuist and Professor Horne, of New York University, who contributes a foreword, both emphasizing the fact that the Bible is "the source-book for much that is best in modern educational theory and practice." Professor Kuist has given us an original, suggestive, and illuminating volume.

The Problem of Immortality

THE CHRISTIAN BELIEF IN IMMORTALITY, by JAMES H. SNOWDEN (Macmillan. $1.25). In 1922 the Churchman announced a prize of $1,000 for the best treatise on the subject, The Christian Belief in Immortality in the Light of Modern Thought. Over a hundred manuscripts were submitted and the prize was awarded to Dr. Snowden for the treatise now published. It is a cogent, careful inquiry regarding all the facts and an excellent, constructive statement of the natural, religious, and Christian grounds of belief in immortality, with a further discussion of the nature of eternal life and of the "pragmatic tests and confirmations" of the doctrine of immortality.

SHALL WE LIVE FOREVER?, by ELISHA ALONZO KING (The Pilgrim Press. 15 cents). An Easter message by a well-known contributor to The Congregationalist, who is now pastor of Miami Beach Congregational Church. This booklet is published in co-operation with the Commission on Evangelism of the National Council. It is a simple, practical presentation of the grounds of faith in immortality, in which a great deal is expressed in condensed form.

Beecher Lectures

TWELVE LECTURES TO YOUNG MEN, by HENRY WARD BEECHER (Doran. $1.50). A welcome reprint of the first and most widely circulated of Beecher's books. We predict for it a continued wide circulation.

Reviewed in Editorial Columns

THE CONFLICT BETWEEN LIBERTY AND EQUALITY, by ARTHUR TWINING HADLEY (Houghton Mifflin. $1.50).

THE FAITH OF A LIBERAL, by NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER (Scribners. $2.50).

Any book mentioned in these columns may be obtained through the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, Boston or Chicago.

WITH THE CHILDREN

When Patsy Came to Camp

By Daisy D. Stephenson

PART I

Midday in midsummer—in mid-forest! What description is potent enough to add to this enchantment, particularly when one knows that this forest was reached far up a winding canyon where one came under the spell of western mountains with their misty blue haze?

Three trim tents snuggled under murmurous pines, facing a stout little log cabin, dubbed the State House by merry maids. Here, ruling Amadahi, Forest Water, sojourned Miss Angela Northcutt, chaperon of the campers; and rearward, napping when not cooking or bossing "The Angel" and all, Charity Bowser, more popularly "Cherry Bounce," held sway.

Things were uncannily peaceful at present. Out in the camp front yard which extended from the Great Divide to Nebraska, between twin pines, an ancient gunny-sack hammock swung lazily. A reddish bob and a magazine, upside down, were the only visible signs of life to a prying camp bird. Then—"whoo-oo!" The peace was shattered as homing hikers swarmed upon the scene, shamelessly expectant of lunch.

"Pinky Wayne, it's up to you, or be dumped. We inherited this relic as a whole, and you've had it for hours." And Connie Mason took forcible possession, while Pinky decamped with an indifferent yawn.

"Where you been?" she yawned, curling up on springy pine needles.

"Miles up the most thrilling new trail the ranger's working on," Judy Collins replied in animated staccato. Judy was such a shining example of "pep" that she was a bit hard to endure at times. "You know those Scouts camping on Larkspur Lake? Well, they've made fast friends with the ranger by helping him with the new trail. He thinks they're seraphims," she ended on a scornful note.

"They're having a better time than we are," admitted Jane Arnold ruefully. "They have that lake with all rights to swimming and fishing therein, plus some rowboats a rancher loaned 'em. Pigs!"

Jane was a star in the school firmament, and a camp with no swimming pool included was losing its charm. "If only that cranky old rancher up our road wasn't so stingy!" she exploded. "That little crystal lake would be just ducky for a morning plunge."

"Yes, and it's simply teeming with trout," added Judy gloomily. "Flocks and herds of 'em. And that man put up that insulting sign the minute we made camp!"

Even the Angel had felt that the crude sign: Keep Out, This Means You, was a trifle personal. They had counted on a lake, of course. All well-regulated camps had one. A jolly little creek gurgled back of the cabin, and furnished conveniences for Cherry Bounce in the way of handy dishwater as well as a cooler for supplies. Then, too, the girls were not past the wading stage entirely. After a long, hot hike it was fun to sit and dangle one's toes in the cool, limpid water. Still, it was only sizable enough for tadpoles, Jane declared, and they could have done with a creek and a lake besides.

"I heard one of the Scouts, that tall, good-looking one with the manners, invite the ranger to a fish fry tomorrow evening," contributed Eve, Jane's elfin, blonde sister. "I sort of lingered, examining a calypso and hoping they might invite us—"

"You'd think we had smallpox. They probably begrudge us the free scenery, and the air we breathe. We could have fun clubbing together on a campfire supper, couldn't we?" sniffed Judy.

Pinky showed signs of coming to life. "Oh, who cares about superflu's boys? Girls, while I was dreaming here listening to the ripples rip and the pines soo or suf or whatever they do, I decided Robin Hood had the right idea. I'm thinking of turning outlaw and being captain for you merry maids." And she hummed a bit from the tuneful opera, about a bow of yew and dwelling in the greenwood forever and a day.

Blunt Judy, intent on anointing fresh sunburn and mosquito bites with cold cream, flashed Pinky a critical glance. "M'm. If you don't stop lolling and nature faking, you'll be more suited to the rôle of fat old Friar Tuck."

Pinky flushed still pinker under this unflattering opinion. She and Judy were old combatants. "Well, I'm not forever worrying my peace of mind over a new freckle, or sleeping in gloves to keep my hands dainty," she retorted warmly. With an elaborate air of blotting Judy out, she addressed the others. "What do you suppose Cherry Bounce was making for dessert when I was doing the dishes? Strawberry tarts to be smothered in cream, if the Infants can take it away from that horrid rancher."

"Oh!" groaned Connie, consulting a dainty new wrist watch. "And half an hour to wait! Where's the Angel?"

"She had some errands on her mind, so she decided to go for the mail herself," explained Pinky. "Time she was back, though. I thought Linda was with you."

"No, she's off in the wilds stalking a poor, innocent rubythroat," sighed Eve. "I just know the birds are nervous from dodging her and that new field glass. Oh, here come th Infants!"

Theo and Trudie, cousin chums, bore dow on the group with a jingling of pails and reckless disregard for the contents thereof.

"It's probably turned to butter if you ga loped the whole mile at that pace," waile Pinky, mindful of dessert.

Trudie twinkled and jiggled her pail gentl "No, it still splashes," and she headed fo Cherry's realm, taking Theo's share with he Theo plopped down in the shade and fanne herself with her wide hat. "I must say thos folks at the Double B are about as cordial a hornets. Trudie and I yelled ourselves hoars before the old man called off his dog. Beas wouldn't let us inside the gate, mind you! know he hasn't a single wagging muscle. W were 'umble as Uriah Heep and tried all ou winning smiles. But when we told the ol codger the folks across the creek couldn't spar us milk or vegetables, he 'umped' a time or tw and couldn't see his way clear to putting him self out for a 'passel of ongrateful transients I got on my dignity and told him if he hate so to part with his produce, we'd cultivat canned milk."

If the ghost girl hadn't taken our side we' have been minus dessert." Trudie took up th tale as if she had been listening in while raid ing the cruller jar. "She called him from th window and said things in a whisper, maybe spell of some kind that changed him to humar Anyway, he condescended to take our money though I told Theo it would probably b clabber."

"We were going to thank the girl but sh melted in thin air, and she was so chalky Trud called her 'the ghost,'" continued Theo. "On thing," positively, "we're not going to be th only ones to risk hydrophobia this hot weathe You can take turns."

"I think we've struck an awfully unfriendl place," declared Jane. "A rancher who make signs and has a shotgun feeling for us, an

A FRIENDLY WRESTLE IN ANIMAL TOWN

outs who don't include girls in their good ns."

'Oh, we're having a good time," consoled nky, "if only Patsy could have come."

'Yoo-hoo!" came the welcome call from the il.

'It's the Angel with the mail, and Linda's h her," caroled Connie.

'The postmistress was generous. Letters for rybody!" Miss Angela thoughtfully elimi-ed suspense and started distributing letters thwith. "A parcel for Theo and a box for erry Bounce."

'Who's yours from?" Trudie asked Theo h more curiosity than correctness. "Mine's m Dad. Five-dollar bill—whoops! Want to d it?"

'Just my other old middy!" grumbled Theo, ning her parcel in disgust.

Jane paused over her plump family round in. "Nobody get one from Patsy? Oh dear!
lid hope we would."

'She said she'd get away about the middle the month," recalled Linda. "Isn't this it?"
en apprehensively, "Goodness, if I thought tsy wouldn't get to camp—"

'She has to! We've all lived on it," spoke Pinky. "And she needs it most of any one.
ink of housekeeping and canning and keep-
; home fires burning in that stuffy apart-nt! And here we are wailing for an extra nket at night."

'If we don't hear by Monday, let's chip in l call her long distance," suggested Jane skly. The Angel had winged her way to cabin-ette, reappearing in a crisp blue ck just as Cherry Bounce, aided by dishpan l pancake turner, executed the favorite camp lody in B natural.

'Hark to the cowboy's serenade! 'Come and it!'" laughed Connie, who often visited on anch and knew the customs.

'Cherry's one tune appeals to me anew three es a day," confessed Jane, leading the lunch
e. "But even Cherry can't beat Patsy when comes to biscuits and muffins and scrump-us salads. Course, with her mother away the college all day, helping the Dean, Patsy s had to do everything. Funny how she's the siest of anybody, yet she's forever doing nething extra for somebody."

'We explored another trail on our way to hornet ranch," Theo told the company iably. "And we made an awfully int'rest-discovery, didn't we, Trude?"

Trudie ducked her black bob, but could not ng herself to neglect her ham and roasting beyond murmuring, "Tree dweller."

'Wh-at?" echoed three as one.

'Well, that's what it is. A teeny cabin rched up in the highest old pine and rustic ps curly-cueing up. I was pining to climb and 'vestigate, but we heard a typewriter king so fast—"

'Man or woman?" inquired Pinky, suspect-a joke.

'From the kimono and things hanging on a sh, I guess it's a she."

'Mercy, have you two Infants had a sun-oke?" gasped Judy, not too worried for a ond helping of everything.

'We have not," retorted Theo indignantly.
o and see for yourself, O ye of little faith!
ere that white arrow says 'Woodland Park miles.' That's a government nursery and 're going to see what it's about, aren't we, ude?"

Trudie felt sufficiently reinforced to take re interest in lesser affairs. "And take our laks," she volunteered. "Dad says all the ng trees they are planting on mountains ound that have been burned by forest fires are raised at Woodland Park. Do you s'pose they hatch 'em in a sort of incubator?"

"Silly!" giggled Theo fondly. "As if you hadn't grown up in a greenhouse yourself. But don't you think," she appealed to all, "it would be a lark to go in a body when Patsy comes? Make a picnic of it? If there's any cross old dragon wagging his tail and guarding the little trees, Patsy'll just disarm him with one smile, same as waving a mystic wand."

"She has a way with her," agreed two or three in a breath, while Pinky added, "There's only one of Patsy and I wish she were twins. Then one of her could be in camp with us, and the other at home with her mother. She promised to help me start a new green sweater."

"Well, I'm saving those bloomers I snagged on the barbed wire. Patsy's an artist at mending," complacently remarked Judy.

"You can't monopolize Patsy, because she's going birding with me!" cried Linda anxiously.

There was no word from Patsy the next day, which was Friday the thirteenth, and an unlucky day for several of the campers. Connie lost her wrist watch during an early hike to the glacier, and though she searched for hours, aided by Linda and Jane, it seemed as hopeless in that virgin wildwood as trying to locate a certain trout in a lake.

(To be concluded next week)

(All rights reserved)

New Light Upon Evolution

By Professor Ian C. Hannah

Oberlin College

The change of one single vote might have placed the ancient and much respected State of North Carolina in the column of those commonwealths that in the interests of Christian orthodoxy have banned the teaching of the soul-destroying doctrines of evolution.

And yet, although the fact appears entirely to have escaped the attention even of scholars, it was not Darwin at all, but the great Elizabethan after whom the capital of that state is named, by whom the theory of evolution was first clearly set forth, at least in modern times,—for Buddha and Empedocles closely approached the idea. It is the strangest comment upon the position of the extreme Fundamentalists of today that it was actually to uphold a most important point in their own most cherished dogmas that Raleigh enunciated his conclusions.

When acting as attorney at the trial of Raleigh, Coke used some most unfortunate vituperative expressions concerning the character of his illustrious victim, and one of them was "damnable atheist." This appears to have been entirely undeserved; in any case the History of the World (published in 1614) is written in a strain of devout Christian piety. Wishing to render the Biblical account of the Noachic deluge more creditable and satisfactory to certain critical minds who were speculating on the tonnage and maximum carrying capacity of the Ark in relation to all existing beasts and birds, Raleigh suggests that the number of species was in those very early days materially smaller than in his own time.

But it is manifest and undoubtedly true, that many of the species, which now seeme differing, and of severall kinds, were not then in rerum natura. . . .

And whereas by discovering of strange Lands, wherein there are found divers Beasts and Birds, differing in colour or stature from those of these Northern parts; it may be supposed by a superficiall consideration, that all those which weare red and pyed Skinnes, or Feathers, are differing from those that are lesse painted, and weare plaine russet or blacke; they are much mistaken that so thinke.

And for my own opinion, I find no difference, but only in magnitude, between the Cat of Europe, and the Ownce of India; & even those Dogges which are become wilde in Hiapagniola, with which the Spaniards used to devoure the naked Indians, are now changed to wolves, and begin to destroy the breed of their cattell, and doe oftentimes tear asunder their owne children. The common Crow and Rooke of India is full of red feathers in the drown'd and low Islands of Caribana; and the Black-bird and Thrush hath his feathers mixt with blacke and carnation in the North parts of Virginia.

The Dog-Fish of England is the Sharke of the South Ocean. For if colour or magnitude made a difference of Species, then were the Negro's, which we call the Blacke-Mores non animalia rationalia, not men, but some kind of strange Beasts; and so the Gyants of the South America should be of another kind, than the people of this part of the World. We also see it daily, that the nature of Fruits are changed by transplantation, some to better some to worse, especially with the change of Clymate. Crabs may be made good Fruit by often grafting, and the best Melons will change in a yeare or two to common Cowcummers, by being set in a barren Soyle. (Raleigh, History of the World, Ch. vii, sec. 9.)

This brief passage anticipates the main contentions in Darwin's Origin of Species (1) that species are not immutable, (2) that they are greatly affected by environment, especially soil and climate. Had Raleigh been permitted to live out the natural term of his life he might have gone on to the same disturbing conclusions about monkeys that have given so much trouble to theologians. Surely such considerations should pour oil on the troubled waters by which the churches are so greatly agitated. The very things that today seem to threaten the authority of the Old Testament were put forth three centuries ago to meet the same objections that are urged.

The Sea

By Charles B. McDuffee

I girdle the globe with my deep blue charms,
And fold the continents in my arms;
I nurture the life of plant and man
From the frozen reef to the torrid sand;
I carry the ships that the nations send
On war, and peace, and fellowship's end;
I rock the drowning to sleep in me,
And croon through the ages a mystery.

The heart of the sailor is mine for life,—
He yearns for me more than for home, or wife;
He leaves them behind for the thrill and zest
Of the plowing ship on my heaving breast.
When the prow is pointed towards lands afar,
And the mast sways under the midnight star;
Yet he knows not why he is drawn to me,
For I never disclose my mystery.

I curl on the beach in a line of white
That makes the children scream with delight;
And the throngs that come on a summer's day
To sit on the sands and look away
Where blue meets blue, 'till the set of sun,
And the vanished throngs of yore have done:
Yet they never discern why they come to me,
For I keep through the ages my mystery.

In the dead of the night when I'm left alone,
When the black clouds come and the stars are gone,
And the gathering winds whisper in my ear
The things that cause men's hearts to fear,
And the deep boom sounds on the rock-bound shore,
And along the beach the breakers roar,
Then my heart beats throb in the pulsing tide
As I speak with the power I dwell beside,
Of worlds that have been, and of worlds to be,
Preparing the throngs for eternity,
That, for ages has been my mystery.

The Pastor Says: Too many students are omitting the third syllable from their development.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

With the States in Conference

New York State Conference

Jamestown is a city beautiful for situation in Chautauqua County near the southeastern end of Lake Chautauqua. Thither the Congregational tribes went during May 19-21, to attend the State Conference meeting. It was about as far west in the state as they could go, a just balance to last year's Brooklyn gathering in the extreme southeast.

Promptly at two o'clock on Tuesday the moderator, Rev. F. A. Kimberly of Antwerp, N. Y., opened the conference by introducing Rev. A. C. Elliott of Salamanca as chaplain of the day. A thoroughly spiritual message on the values of worship gave the conference its note in this opening moment. Later in the afternoon the conference was welcomed, first on behalf of the city by Mayor Samuel A. Carlson and on behalf of the churches by Dr. A. E. Randell, the genial minister of First Church, where the conference held its meetings. Mayor Carlson is an interesting man to look upon.—tall, white-haired, with rugged Scandinavian countenance,—and also to hear. Not many times does a conference listen to as unusual an address of welcome. After the conventional courtesies of greeting, Mr. Carlson treated us to a paper in which he definitely and seriously gave the churches counsel on questions of the day and it was good counsel. He advised us to be broad enough in our intellectual sympathies to honor all who were searching for further truth in God's world, and to be brave enough to accept the truth they found. He bitterly arraigned the state authorities of New York for nullifying prohibition enforcement legislation and proposed that if in no other way possible the Eighteenth Amendment should be enforced by the United States Army. In most gracious fashion Dr. Randell spoke his word of greeting emphasizing the part the other Protestant churches of the town had taken by their co-operation in making the meeting a success, especially the Pilgrim Memorial Congregational, the Baptist, and the Methodist Churches.

Wayne B. Wheeler, General Counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, then gave an address of startling power on the Eighteenth Amendment and its influence. His topic was: "Facing the Facts." He did not claim the millennium as a result of Prohibition but gave some encouraging figures to show progress. Arrests for drunkenness have decreased 500,000 per year as compared with saloon years. Alcoholic insanity has decreased 66 per cent. Formerly we had 275 drunk cures, now we have 27. Nevertheless, we have yet to fight.

The outstanding event of Tuesday evening's program was the conference sermon by Dr. C. E. Jefferson. Who shall tell the secret of the power of this man? A simplicity of style at first almost deceiving, a masterful clarity in phrasing, a direct Anglo-Saxon vocabulary, —these are the outward garments of the thought he presents. The argument seems in keeping with the style. It lies on the surface. Any hearer may follow its course. Yet with all its directness there is growing evidence of the something plus which gives it power—an evidence of a great throbbing passion which breaks forth again and again as a volcano bespeaking the fires beneath. This emotional restraint affects the audience powerfully. You listen easily yet eagerly, and gradually recognize in a sort of subconscious way that you are hearing a great message. He made a plea for the social application of the spiritual principles of Christianity. Without that application the Christian Church is doomed. He pled for a reaching out in thought, prayer, and deed until America and the world should be upon our hearts as Judah and Jerusalem were upon the heart of Isaiah.

Interesting Moments at New York Conference

When Dr. W. H. Rollins, delegate from the Westchester Church, moved that the report of Dr. W. H. Rollins, superintendent of the conference, be accepted.

When Rev. John Luther Kilbon, upon hearing Rev. John Lewis Clark of Brooklyn give publicly a report of Japanese military aggression against the United States arose and said, "Somebody has been lying to you, John."

When Dr. Eddy described the three kinds of treatment accorded to the man who fell among thieves on the Jericho Road by saying that the thieves beat him up, the Priest and Levite passed him up, and the Good Samaritan lifted him up.

When Hubert Herring said, "Give us a patriotism which does away with, 'Oh, Say Can You See,' and substitutes a patriotism that says, 'America, America, God shed his grace on thee.' "

When Mr. Calder was asked, "How would you handle the Soviet question?"

When the conference unanimously voted to accept the following resolution: Therefore, be it resolved that we do declare our hatred of war and our love for the things of peace, our unalterable opposition on the part of the church to the entire war system —economic exploitation, imperialism, and militarism. That we register with our government our growing determination to eliminate war, and that we dedicate our lives and our resources anew to the building up of a world brotherhood, a peace within the principles of the Sermon on the Mount that shall be enacted faithfully.

The Communion service which followed was a real service. The formalism which sometimes marks the Sacrament at our brotherhood gatherings was entirely absent. Having heard a message of God's will we went into his very presence to consecrate ourselves to its accomplishment.

Wednesday's sessions were given over to the annual meeting of the New York Home Missionary Society. Its main item of interest, aside from the reports of Supt. W. H. Rollins and his co-laborers, was the address by Dr. Cady of the A. M. A., who told of the progress in the promotional program of denominational benovelences. In the afternoon, under the auspices of the State Committee on Religious Education, with Rev. H. J. Condit as chairman, a pageant was most admirably staged by the young people of the church illustrating the value of the young people's conferences to be held this year for N York State at Cook Academy and Blair Ac emy in June and July respectively. Two dresses by representatives of young peopl work, Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury for the W man's Board of Missions and Miss Olive Pe son of the Sunday School Extension Socie presented inspiring record of these branch The closing event of the afternoon was due the courtesy of Jamestown in providing t whole conference with a trip by auto out the shores of Lake Chautauqua.

The evening's session was taken up with t banquets of the conference gathering, one conference fellowship at the Baptist Churc the other for young people at Pilgrim Mem rial Congregational Church. Miss Pearson a Miss Seabury were the speakers at the lat gathering, while at the former, Supt. Rolli made a strong presentation of the need for i terdenominational comity combined with nominational loyalty as a key to religious pr ress in the future. Singing by the Piedmo College quartet and helpful messages from R G. E. Merriam, chaplain of the day, were re contributions to Wednesday's program.

Thursday morning was given over to the d cussion of the interests of the college stude The direct responsibility of the church for t religious life of the college and university st dent was strikingly presented by Rev. J. A. Moore, student pastor of Cornell, where he working with marked success. Dean T. Graham of Oberlin gave a strong address the subject, "What Is on the Student's Mind Dr. Graham emphasized the problem facing instructors by reason of the new world which the student of today was orienting hi self. This new world was, in part, reason f the evidences of apparent revolt, intellectu and moral, which marks student life. He a tributed the reason for this revolt to the e phasis the world and the church in the pa had placed upon programs rather th principles. So many programs had failed a the keen mind of the student turned away fro such failures. Hence the radicalism in the o posite direction from the world's beaten path There was much to admire in this trend, ho esty, sincerity, and at times an alarming fran ness. There were dangers, a tendency to di card all foundations and standards. Patienc honesty, and prayer were necessary in helpi the youth of today to accomplish a successf trek. Dean Graham was thoughtfully opt mistic of the outcome.

The program committee is to be congrat lated on the extremely helpful program of t Thursday afternoon session. It was given ov to a conference on human relations, openi with three 25-minute addresses, one on "Indu trial Relations," by John Calder, chairman the Social Service Commission; the second "Racial Relations" by Brewer Eddy; and th last, "International Relations" by Hubert Herring. Valuable discussions followed eac paper. It was this element, above a others, which made the session the stronge of the conference. As a usual thing, we not have sufficient opportunity to hear fro the floor. Mr. Calder stated that the workma was not asking for paternalism at the hands his employer, nor the perquisites of benev lence. He stated that the self-respecting Ame n workman asked five things, and as a tter of justice; first, a steady job; second, quate real wages; third, a good foreman; rth, individual and collective voice about conditions of work; fifth, a chance to rise. Eddy made the story of the Good Samari- the basis of his plea for right racial rela- ns. He said that white supremacy ought to the kind that will lift up other races to its el like the tide which floats all ships how- r high it rises.

n the evening Dr. Allen Stockdale gave an pirational address on "Sustained Enthusi- n." It was a well placed appeal to carry on h the enthusiasm and vision it had been ir privilege to enjoy during the meeting. r. H. A. French, of Brooklyn, as chaplain the day, articulated the whole day's pro- m with three stirring devotional talks on ne Questions of Jesus."

During Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday rning the New York Branch of the W. B. M. the New York Woman's Home Missionary on held joint meetings in the First Metho- Church.

Thomas D. Powell of Buffalo was elected derator for the ensuing year; Mr. Willard Harmon of Ticonderoga, secretary; Wells Fitch of Riverhead, assistant secretary. lton, N. Y., was chosen the next place of eting.

Too much cannot be said of the kindly cour- and hospitality of the Jamestown people caring for their guests. Under the able man- ment of E. Snell Hall, chairman of the mittee on entertainment, the arrangements e perfected to an unusual degree. Dr. A. Randell, as pastor of the entertaining rch, was an ideal host. Jamestown is a ghtful memory in the minds of all the tors.

Young People's Creed

The young people of SOUTH, CONCORD, N. H., the conclusion of their Lenten conferences h the pastor, Rev. C. B. Bare, drew up informal creedal statement to express their h and ideals. It was submitted to the rch committee by those applying for church mbership, as a summary of their religious convictions. It was printed in the church calendar on a recent Sunday and is as follows:

GOD—We believe in God, the Supreme Being who rules over all, the Creator of the universe and all life therein, the loving Father, the Protector, and the Councillor.

JESUS CHRIST—We believe in Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Savior of men, the Agent of God who taught man the ways of God and good will towards men, and who died on the cross to prove the depth of God's love for man.

HOLY SPIRIT—We believe that the Holy Spirit is the Spirit of God, the Spirit that descends on Jesus, the Spirit behind conscience which counsels and directs us, and the Spirit animating all sincere worship of God.

CHURCH—We believe that the church is a union of the followers of Christ existing for the purpose of teaching people to live Christ-like lives, and we believe that our relationship to the church is such as to require of us that we support it financially, believe in its creed, further its purpose and aims, attend it regularly, and actually try to live a Christian life.

CREATION OF THE UNIVERSE—We believe that the universe has been created and is being created by God according to the Creator's laws, and presumably will last forever.

IMMORTALITY—Due to our conception of God and a certain instinctive faith, we believe in the survival of the spirit—in a life with God where justice is done.

BIBLE—We believe that the Bible contains the teachings of God as they were interpreted and written by men, and forms a religious standard for Christians.

TO BE A CHRISTIAN—We believe that to be a Christian is to believe in God and the Bible, and try to meet our own problems of life in the same high spirit in which Jesus met his problems, and to extend throughout school and community the highest standards of Christian character.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

The Lord's Day is a firm foundation on which to build a six-story week.

Accepts Chicago Pastorate

Rev. J. R. Heyworth, who has just begun the pastorate of NEW ENGLAND, CHICAGO, ILL., is a native of Lancashire, England. He gave himself to the work of the ministry in his youth and at the age of 19 became a local preacher in the Wesleyan Methodist Church. Soon after this he was appointed a lay preacher, and in 1906 he enlisted for missionary service in the Canadian Northwest where he served with the Methodist Church of Canada. From 1908 to 1911 he was religious work secretary for the Toronto Central Y. M. C. A., and at the same time took a course in Victoria College where he graduated in 1911. He was assistant pastor for some time to Dr. J. J. Martin of Calvary Congregational Church, Montreal, and for two years following this served the Congregational Church in Paris, Ontario.

REV. J. R. HEYWORTH

In 1914 Mr. Heyworth came to the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Lombard, Ill., and at the same time took up his studies in Chicago Seminary. He served the church at Lombard four years, and then took the Park Manor Church, Chicago, where he made a remarkable record. The church budget was doubled and the benevolent budget was multiplied tenfold. Under his administration the membership of the church was increased about 50 per cent. He was active in community service of all sorts and was especially strong in the organization of forces for law enforcement in his district. In 1924 he resigned to accept the position of official representative of Chicago Seminary in Illinois. He continued in this service until called to the New England Church. He is a convincing preacher, a good student, and an untiring pastor. New England Church faces the downtown problem at its worst, but it has a group of people who are loyal and devoted, and the church and pastor are going forward with courage to meet the situation.

Palo Alto's Good Record

"When the outlook is not good, try the uplook" must have been the motto which has guided Rev. Willard B. Thorp during his ministry at PALO ALTO, CAL. Viewing the church now in its present prosperity, one can scarcely believe that four years ago the church was on of disbanding.

This church is located near Leland Stanford Jr. University, yet the conditions are somewhat different from those existing in most university centers, inasmuch as the university is a full mile and a half distant from the church center of town and maintains a splendid pulpit with university preachers in the beautiful Stanford Memorial Chapel on the campus. Consequently the opportunities of the local church are not as numerous as one would find in most university centers.

In 1920 the outlook for our Congregational work there was exceedingly dismal; then came

THE HALL ORGAN COMPANY
WEST HAVEN, CONN.
High Grade Pipe Organs
Churches Masonic Halls Residences

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B.

McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND 220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

Offering Envelopes
for all purposes. Prompt Service
Ask For Prices
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New York 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

Vivid with meaning throughout the ages
Sweet and precious are the memories evoked by the rich mellow tones of Deagan Tower Chimes
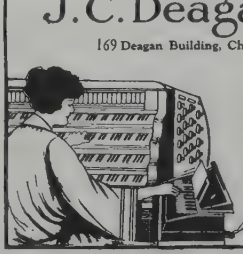
Stirring the innermost depths of human emotions these Golden Voiced Chimes exert a powerful influence for good throughout the community, thus making them, indeed, the memorial sublime.
Deagan Tower Chimes are played by the organist from electric keyboard. Standard sets $5,000 to $10,000
J. C. Deagan Inc.
Established 1880
169 Deagan Building, Chicago, Ill.


Belfry Plans
When building or remodeling your church make sure that the belfry provides for chimes. We gladly co-operate so that if chimes are offered as a memorial they can be readily installed.

An Instant Success
Hymns of the Christian Life
Edited by Milton S. Littlefield, D.D.
Published February 2nd, 1925. 8,000 sold.
Examination copy on request. Price $135 per 100.
A. S. BARNES & CO., 7 W. 45th St., N. Y.

Mr. Thorp, with his inspiring optimism, his pervasive personality, his compelling leadership! An appropriation of $500 a year from the Education Society, together with a special subsidy of $1,100 from the California Home Missionary Society, made it possible for the church to go forward on a program which has brought it to its present prosperous condition. The money given was, in a large measure, in recognition of the strategic position of the church and the critical importance to the denomination of maintaining a strong and representative church in this university town, but confidence in the man at the helm made the venture a safe one.

The results accomplished reflect to the credit of both pastor and people and amply justify the large expenditure of funds. The church has now a membership of nearly 250, a splendid body of people, including nearly a score of faculty families. Its apportionment contributions amount to over $1,500 a year and are steadily increasing. It has paid off all its debts, including a loan from the Church Building Society. Besides liquidating this large indebtedness the church has reduced the freely-granted aid of $1,100 to zero, and is now providing for the entire salary of its pastor, even relinquishing the $500 from the Education Society, although the pastor continues his work among the students as heretofore.

Doane College Assembly

The picture on the next page shows a part of the delegates of the fifth annual young people's assembly at Doane College, Crete, Neb., held June 6 to 15. The regular enrolled attendance was 176.

This was a smaller conference than the gatherings of the past two years, due mainly, we infer, to the longer session, and, of necessity, greater cost. It was nine days instead of the usual seven. But the attendance was large enough, and the general opinion expressed frequently was that it was the best we have ha

We were fortunate in our leadership. Re and Mrs. Edward L. Nolting of Madura, Indi and Dr. Watts O. Pye, Fenchow, Chin brought the world vision and the present-da triumphs of the Gospel; Miss Miriam L. Woo berry of New York City pictured the nee and variety of the work in the homeland; ar Mrs. Grace Mayer Oakes, Chicago, gave specif training for work in the home church in th line of dramatics and religious education.

We flatter ourselves that better leadersh cannot be found. They not only presented we their specific part of the program, but the gave themselves unsparingly to the whole a sembly, and after all, team work is what coun in these gatherings.

We were likewise fortunate in our sta leadership. Rev. Harold Cooper, pastor of ou College Church at Crete, conducted the hillsid vespers. Rev. Ervine Inglis, of Vine, Lincol had charge of the convocation periods, and Re W. B. Kline, a Nebraska product but who h been loaned to Iowa, led the recreations. The three elements of the program, vespers, co vocations, and recreation, afford great poss bilities in any assembly, and these three me each in his field superbly met these opportun ties. But we serve notice here that Nebrask has first claim on them.

One of the new features of this conferen was group discussion on life problems. T delegates were divided into groups of from to 15 each. The groups were so selected th each was composed of a single grade. A past was selected to lead each group. An outli for the discussion was furnished him in a vance with considerable concrete material alo the case method. All groups discussed the sa question each day and on the last day all t groups met in one assembly and reported fin ings and compared conclusions. Dr. W. Tyler, state superintendent, had general char of the course, and worked it out in detail f the various pastors. He also held a conferen with the pastors each day comparing expe ences and preparing for the next discussion.

This was not a substitute for Bible, but w Bible under a new name and with a new a proach. Instead of taking the teachings Jesus as a starting point, as most discussi courses do, we began with a real life proble and in the discussion made an honest effort solve it—then we tested the conclusions wi the teachings of Jesus. The Bible was n used as a spring board from which to leap b was climactic in our thinking. The reactio both on the young people and pastors we most gratifying.

Two other new features which worked w were a camp fire evening with nature son and poems, and an evening called "Discoveri Talent." Both were high grade and very i pressive. In the first we were brought ne to Nature's God, and in the second we had chance to recognize the splendid talent of t young people themselves. The program w composed of music, instrumental and voc readings, story, dramatization, and pantomin All this material had been previously prepar and used elsewhere. It was a fitting recog

OLIVET CAMP

On beautiful Lake Geneva

Williams Bay -:- Wisconsin

NORMAN B. BARR, Superintendent

Comfortable and sanitary accommodations. Abundance of good food well cooked and served. Board and Lodging, $12 to $18 per week per person. Bungalows, Cottages, and Tents furnished for light housekeeping, $12 to $30 per week; $30 to $75 per month; $65 to $160 per season, June 15-Aug. 31. For information or reservation write to Olivet Camp, Jedd C. Landwair, Manager, Williams Bay, Wisconsin.

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion.

CAMPS AND VACATION PLACES

Come to Broadacres. Good rooms, milk, cream, eggs and chickens, trout fishing, river bathing on farm. Mountain scenery. Rate on application. Mrs. Fred Kendall, Alstead, N. H.

A Few Guests can be accommodated in an attractive Colonial house near lake, 30 miles from Boston. Electricity, bath, telephone, good home cooking, shade trees, beautiful walks and drives. An ideal place for rest and recreation. Reasonable. Address Mrs. G. M. Rogers, Westboro, Mass.

White Mountains, North Conway, N. H. Would you enjoy a mountain vacation, grand scenery, home cooking, all conveniences, golf, movies, etc.? Write Arthur H. Furber.

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., in the vicinity of the White Mountains. We offer the comforts and conveniences needed for a successful vacation and rest. No hay fever. Lower rates to those who come in June and July. Booklet. A. J. Newman, Prop.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, home-like rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large, brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

Best place for vacation, mountains, New Hampshire, 100 miles from Boston. Board or rent bungalow. Moderate rates. Howard Brown, Alstead, N. H.

Boarders wanted at Maple Lawn Farm. Bath-room, beautiful shade trees, real farm food, a delightful place for a rest; $14 per week. Chas. E. Baker, New Boston, N. H.

REAL ESTATE

For Rent—Furnished eight-room house. Bath, electricity. Georgetown, near Haverhill, Mass. "P. R.," Congregationalist.

SUPPLY PASTOR

Pulpit Supply. During July and on August 2, the minister of First Church (Reformed) of Newtown, New York City, is available as supply for churches. Rev. Edward Niles, Annisquam, Mass.

Wisconsin pastor desires pulpit engagements during July and August. "Pastor," 280 Washington St., Woburn, Mass.

PASTOR WANTED

Liberal Community Church desires pastor. Must be effective in pulpit, energetic, liberal and progressive. Splendid opportunity in city of 60,000. All communications in strict confidence. Address "Liberal," Congregationalist.

POSITION WANTED

Desire position to teach in high school, Science Department. Address "F. T. I.," Congregationalist.

Opportunity as Director of Religious Education or Educational Pastor desired by college and seminary graduate, with special pedagogical training, and experience in teaching, organizing and social work. Address "D.," Congregationalist.

HELP WANTED

Wanted—A young man trained and experienced in young people's work, with emphasis upon Boy Scouts and Sunday School, in large New England church. Salary made right. Give references. Address "C. B. A.," Congregationalist.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wastieless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

For Sale—A church bell, good tone. Forty-eight pews, oak, comparatively new. Will seat 240 persons. Apply to W. H. Jordan, Orono, Me.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

Good printing, paper covered books, pamphlets, sermons, no hurry orders, etc. Stationery,—500 six-inch envelopes and 500 letterheads, billheads, or statements for $5.00, 1,000 for $8.50, all excellent bond paper. Religious work solicited. The Print Shop, E. Northfield, Mass.

Vacation and Sunday Schools find twelve Scripture Crosswords on separate cards for individual pupils valuable for interest and instruction. $2.00 hundred. First Congregational Church, Gardner, Mass.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

Walker's Concordance Over 50,000 more references than any other low priced concordance to the Bible. 980 pages. Cloth $3.00. ½ leather $3.75. Postage 20 cents.

THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New York 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

DR. MURPHY ADDRESSING YOUNG PEOPLE AT THE DOANE COLLEGE ASSEMBLY to talent and was a profitable evening's rtainment.

ome of the results of these conferences for five years are: (1) A more general distribu- of delegates from over the state; (2) a ndid group of more mature young people, are backing the church and the assembly; (3) a growing group of ministers who are noting the assembly and who are becoming easingly efficient with young people. The lts are clearly evident in the home churches. he new officers of the young people's organ- ion are: President, Allen Boughton, Cook; vice-president, Lois Ericson, Lincoln; etary, Helen Baldwin, Crete; and treasurer, ght Newton, Franklin. C. G. M.

From East to West

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Chase to Leave West Lebanon

fter a successful pastorate of three years, . L. G. Chase is to leave WEST LEBANON Aug. 1, to become chaplain of the Vermont e Prison at Windsor. Before coming to st Lebanon, Mr. Chase had served the com- ity church at Wilder, Vt. He has made past three years notable by additions to church membership, and by his appeal to men and to the young people of the parish.

s for Co-operation

ollowing an address by Rev. J. M. Phillips FRANKLIN ST., MANCHESTER, at the meet- of the Southern Division of the Merri- k Association held recently at Dunbarton, ommittee was appointed to discover ways and means by which the city churches could help the weak struggling churches in their vicinity. Other speakers at the well-attended meeting were Rev. Stoddard Lane of First, Manchester, Rev. C. B. Bare of South, Concord, and Rev. Messrs. Malcolm Dana and H. M. Bowden of New York City.

Mr. Andrew to Be General Field Worker

Rev. B. F. Andrew has been called to be general field worker for the State Conference to work with Sec. E. R. Stearns. Mr. Andrews is well fitted by training and experience to succeed Rev. O. J. Guptill, who is now with the Maine Sea Coast Mission. His early home was a Congregational parsonage; his undergraduate work was done at Dartmouth College; and his seminary was Oberlin. From 1919 to 1922 he was pastor at Hebron, and since that time has been at the Aroostook Larger Parish, Me., in charge of the work in religious education and assisting in the other parts of the varied activities of that large field. He will be of great assistance to the conference officers in their attempt to strengthen and aid the rural churches of the state.

Baptisms at Littleton

On Children's Sunday, in connection with the morning service, the pastor of LITTLETON, Rev. G. A. Merrill, baptized 16 children. One father and mother brought their four children for baptism, the oldest 11 years, and the youngest a baby.

MASSACHUSETTS

Shelburne Falls' Progress

Rev. J. H. Sargent has been pastor of SHELBURNE FALLS for more than two and one-half years, and during this time the work of organization has gone forward both with the adults and young people.

Last fall the church was incorporated. At this time the "Ministers' Library Fund" for the parsonage was reinstated. It had been out of existence for some years. Such a fund is one of the greatest assets to a minister who, at best, cannot buy the books he sometimes deems necessary for his work.

This Easter doubtless was the best in Shelburne Falls' history, the church being crowded at the morning service when the largest class, at any one time, was received into this church, 32 coming on confession and seven by letter.

Fifteen hundred dollars was voted at the annual meeting in January to be used for repairs and renovations on and in the church building and parsonage.

Besides the five deacons the church has always had it was voted to establish a deaconess office as well, of which there shall be three. This new departure works out well.

Pushing Forward at Brimfield

Since Rev. R. W. W. Campbell became pastor of BRIMFIELD in February, 1924, the size of the congregations have been gratifying, when one considers the limitations in a country village. The parsonage has been painted and papered throughout, and last fall the parsonage furnace was put into good order. This indebtedness is paid off, so that the church is clear of debt along that line. There was a debt on the church, however, but the little company of faithful members cleared half of that debt last year, and are now endeavoring to clear the other half. The church building is sadly in need of repairs, but a special effort will be made in the near future to meet that need.

At the Communion service, May 3, three adults were received on confession, making a

Did You Have Whooping Cough When You Were a Child?

Remember the stuff mother rubbed on your chest that loosened the phlegm and brought relief so quickly.

It's called Roche's Embrocation and is still aiding thousands of little ones throughout the land.

Effective for croup and colds on the chest too

Sold by All Druggists

E. FOUGERA & Co., Inc., New York
W. Edwards & Son, London, Eng.

ROCHE'S EMBROCATION

Fights Whooping Cough and Croup

FIRST MORTGAGES and REAL ESTATE BONDS

Interest 7% Semi-Annually

On Improved Income Florida Real Estate

Loans confined to Tampa and South Florida

Principal and Interest Guaranteed

Write for booklet and information

GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

The Pratt Teachers' Agency
70 Fifth Avenue, New York
Recommends teachers to colleges, public and private schools in all parts of the country. Advises parents about schools.

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.
THE LESLIE
A quiet, cosy little House by the sea. Opens June 27th. Private baths. Descriptive booklet. 21st season. The best and nearest view of the President's yacht.

total of nine for Brimfield and three for East Brimfield since Mr. Campbell took up his labors there. The Easter services were well attended. The Sunday school work is going along splendidly, with a fine staff of teachers. Altogether the little band there are doing nobly, and are hopeful for an even better future.

Installed at Raynham

Rev. C. L. Holton was installed as pastor of RAYNHAM CENTER and NORTH RAYNHAM, June 16. The council was held at Raynham Center in the afternoon and was followed by supper at which the after-dinner speakers were Rev. M. E. Creeger of the Grace Methodist Church, Taunton, Rev. M. P. Tobey of the North Taunton Baptist Church, and Dr. Horace F. Holton of Porter Church, Brockton. This was an occasion of fine fellowship.

The installation service was held at North Raynham in the evening. Rev. F. B. McAllister of Broadway, Taunton, moderator of the council, was unable to be present in the evening and Dr. E. A. Burnham of Winslow, Taunton, was elected to preside. Rev. H. E. Oxnard was scribe. The Scriptures were read by Dr. H. F. Holton. One of the three hymns used was selected by a member of First Church, another by a member of Second Church, and the third was chosen in memory of George Erickson. The sermon was preached by Rev. Neil McPherson of First, Springfield. Rev. John Walker of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society offered the installing prayer; Rev. J. R. Chadwick of Westville made the address to the church; Rev. Albert Reynolds of Pilgrim, Sherborn, a former charge of Mr. Holton's, gave the address to the minister, and the right hand of fellowship was extended by Dr. Burnham, a lifelong friend of the newly-installed pastor. Greetings were extended by the W. C. T. U. through Deacon F. Canham. Rev. A. R. MacDougal of Fall River offered the closing prayer. The invocation at the beginning of the service had been offered by Howard R. May, brother-in-law of Mr. Holton.

Mr. Holton is doing an outstanding piece of work. The two churches are well united under him and a new parsonage has just been completed at North Raynham.

CONNECTICUT

Accepts Massachusetts Call

Rev. R. G. Pavy, for the past four years pastor of SOUTHINGTON, will leave that church the last of August to accept a call to Second, Westfield, Mass. He is a graduate of Franklin College, Franklin, Ind., with a degree of A.B., of the University of Chicago, with the degree of M. A., of Yale University with the degree of B.D. He spent last summer studying at Harvard University. This month he is to marry Miss Gladys S. Bishop of Southington, a graduate of Simmons College and an instructor in the Meriden High School.

J. S. WATERMAN & SONS INC.
ESTABLISHED 1859
UNDERTAKERS
Local and Suburban Service

NEW JERSEY

New Organ for Little Ferry Church

Recently LITTLE FERRY held a service in dedication of new pews and a new organ. Dr. Jay T. Stocking of Upper Montclair delivered the address. Supt. C. W. Carroll also shared in the service.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

A Perkiomen Supper at Ingram Memorial, Washington

On the evening of May 21 about 200 young people of INGRAM MEMORIAL, WASHINGTON, gathered together for a Perkiomen Supper. Twenty-three persons told of their experience at Perkiomen Summer Conference. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance at this conference in August. Washington has become one of the leading groups.

Association Meets with First Church

The spring meeting of the Washington Association met with FIRST, WASHINGTON, on May 19. The churches of the district have made rapid progress in the last three or four years. One would go far before he would find a stronger group of pastors. Rev. George L. Farnham of Cleveland Park acted as moderator. Dr. Charles Allen Dinsmore of Yale gave an address on "The Bible as Literature" and preached the association sermon.

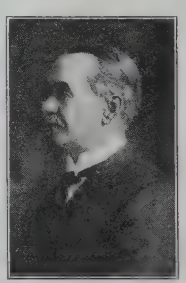
Large C. E. Society in Washington

The Senior Christian Endeavor Society of FIRST, WASHINGTON, has been called an institution in itself. With a membership of over 150, it is noted in the city for its diversified ministries to needed organizations.

TENNESSEE

A Voice for Spiritual Freedom

For more than sixty years FIRST, MEMPHIS, has been the only free, evangelical church in one of the most conservative cities of the South. The membership, increasing but not large, represents some of the influential people of the city. Under the strong leadership of Dr. R. A. George, entering upon the sixth year of his pastorate, the church has been influentially identified with important civic, social, and philanthropic movements, and many of the sermons of Dr. George are published in the city papers. The church has recently reaffirmed its loyalty to Congregational principles by voting to publish a sermon by the pastor on the things for which the church stands. The nearest Congregational church is that of Chattanooga, over 300 miles distant, but the church is strong in its sense of denominational fellowship and is a tremendous influence for freedom in a city that is one of the strongholds of Fundamentalism in the South.



DR. R. A. GEORGE

OHIO

Rev. W. S. Holland Locates in Willoughby

Rev. W. S. Holland, who recently resigned the pastorate of Woodburn, Ill., is now making his home in Willoughby with his oldest son. Mr. Holland has been in the pastorate for 48 years, beginning his preaching on the streets of Washington when a boy of 17. He attended Dickinson Seminary, Williamsport, Pa., for four years, preparing for the ministry, two years of which he served as student pastor. For 16 years he preached to the "lumberjac in Pennsylvania. He has also preached miners and oil men, and has served as a ho missionary in South Dakota.

NORTH DAKOTA

Rev. Peter Cooper's Big Parish

Rev. Peter Cooper of BOWMAN has eno to do in his big parish to keep three men bu He has eight regular preaching points, inv ing 150 miles to make the circuit. Recen he reached five appointments in company w an Indian chief. Attendance ranged from to 300 at each place. With a troop of B Scouts, 37 in number, he spent a week ca ing in the Bad Lands. As his parishioners far apart, his mileage runs high. At a rec service, there were 31 cars, several sad horses, and one buggy lined up around church. Of the eight points reached, four h oversubscribed the apportionment, two h paid the exact amount, and the other two h paid more than one-half. Daily vacation Bi schools will be conducted at eight points two weeks in each place.

SOUTH DAKOTA

State School of Mines Baccalaureate

Sunday, May 24, was a splendid day in life of RAPID CITY. The graduating class the State School of Mines attended in a bo to the number of 42, when the baccalaure sermon was preached by Rev. James Wats M.D., of Chicago. His message on "The premacy of Personality" gripped all hearts. spoke again at the evening service on "God Distributer."

Dr. Watson is a former pastor of this chu He resigned in 1918 to take up war work has since completed a medical course at V million, S. D., and in Chicago. He has b pastor of Millard, Chicago. He is now un a three years' commission to go to Porto R to take charge of the Charles J. Ryder Me rial Hospital. Mrs. Watson will have cha of the Nurses' School. They sailed July 9.

NEW MEXICO

Church Organized at Albuquerque

UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS COMMUNITY, AL QUERQUE, was organized Sunday, May 3, w 29 members. The church will seek to se the entire community in its social, intellect and religious needs. It hopes, by its consti tive religious program, to appeal to those wish to get together on the broad basis Christian neighborliness. Rev. R. R. Sl maker, superintendent of the Congregatio work in the Southwest, will return soon assist in the completion of the organizat Rev. H. W. C. Ainley will be in charge pe ing the formal action of the church.

CALIFORNIA

"New England Evening" at Redlands

By a happy custom, the New Englanders their families gather each year for evening ner and program in the parlors of the R LANDS Church. This spring about 200 sat do at the tables to discuss the menu considered propriate and honorable to the states of Eastern "rock-bound coast," which would course, include Boston baked beans, pump pie, etc., as well as other dishes that people's taste everywhere, even squares of now rare article, maple sugar. There i regular New England Society, of which M C. A. Sanborn will be president for the com year, while there are vice-presidents to re sent each of the states.

In the program Prof. A. N. Wheelock, su intendent of the schools in Riverside, gave appropriate address sketching briefly the tory, the ideas, and the influence of the N gland Founders. There followed a play, e Old Peabody Pew (Kate Douglas Wiggin), cast being trained by Mrs. Frank Sanford y, which brought the company into intimate ch with the folks of that time.

n keeping with their hospitable spirit, the nen of the church recently entertained the ghboring Yucaipa women as guests at one their Wednesday dinners and programs.

Few men in the conference have greater ght given to their judgment than that ac-ded the minister, Rev. Herbert Ide. He was sen as one of a small party, to go as guests the Southern Pacific Railroad to investigate challenge for Christian education and Con-gational work on the great west coast of xico. For three months this summer he goes h his friend, K. H. Field, to England and rmany.

OKLAHOMA

r. A. J. Smith Leaves Manchester

Rev. A. J. Smith closed his pastorate at NCHESTER on June 1. A splendid dinner ved at the parsonage by the women of the rch marked the occasion. A large number e present to express their good will and erest. A cash present of $50 was made the tor, as a token of appreciation for his work. e young woman united with the church that by confession of faith.

During the past three months, the church lding has been painted, the parsonage stuc-d and refinished on the exterior, and other provements have been made. Also a spirit hopefulness pervades the church, and plans l be made after harvest, which is now in l swing, to continue the church work.

OREGON

ew Pastors Add Strength

Our ranks in this state have been strength-ed by the recent coming of several new men. Rev. G. W. Churchill, a graduate of Central llege, Iowa, and the Yale School of Religion, s made a promising start at RAINIER. He nes from Red Lodge, Mont.

UNIVERSITY PARK, PORTLAND, is greatly en-uraged by the coming of Rev. F. W. West-od, a Canadian whose last pastorate was at van River, Manitoba. He succeeds Rev. A. . Bond, who resigned on account of illness rly in January. The pulpit has been sup-d by Rev. E. S. Bollinger.

REV. F. E. CARLSON

WAVERLY HEIGHTS, PORTLAND, with much joicing has welcomed Rev. F. E. Carlson, o did a notable work at First Church, Hel-a, Mont. The former pastor, Rev. O. P. very, went to California for further study in e Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley.

ALAMEDA PARK, PORTLAND, in a beautiful and growing residential district, anticipates steady progress under the leadership of Rev. H. W. Johnson, who has come from Central Church, Salem, Ore. Mr. Johnson has had considerable success with young people and has made an efficient chairman of the state young people's department. He follows Rev. J. M. Williams, whose scholarly preaching has attracted attention. J. F. D.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

ALLISON, J. M., First, Amery, Wis., to Twinsburg, O. Accepts to begin Sept. 1.

BROWN, H. L., Boston, Mass., to assistant pastorate, Alstead Larger Parish, N. H. At work.

JULIN, KARL, to have charge of Finnish churches in New Hampshire, with Troy as center. At work.

MUTTART, W. L., Preston, Ct., to Hampton. Accepts to begin July 15.

PETERS, J. G., Community, Clarksburg, Ind., to Radnor, O. Accepts to begin Aug. 1.

RATCLIFFE, G. E., assistant pastor, First, Detroit, Mich., to Romeo. Accepts.

WEBB, H. W., Wiscasset, Me., to Federated, Greenland, N. H.

Summer Supplies

CLARK, WILLIAM, to Brentwood, N. H.

HUTTON, T. G., to Alton, N. H.

LANGMAID, N. J., to Croydon, N. H.

LEGROW, A. C., to Sullivan and East Sullivan, N. H.

MATHEWS, B. V., to Hill, N. H.

ROUNDY, PAUL, to Erol, N. H.

THISTLE, W. T., to Deering and East Deering, N. H.

WILTON, W. M., to Hebron, N. H.

Resignations

KALORIA, J. B. (Presb.), Brentwood, N. H.

SAYRE, C. E., McPherson, Kan., to accept call to First Unitarian, Wichita.

STANNARD, E. L., Dalton, N. H.

Ordinations

BUTT, GEORGE, o., Johnson, Vt., May 6. Parts by Rev. Messrs. Stanley Cummings, I. C. Smart, and A. B. Ross.

JONES, H. G., o., Roslindale, Boston, Mass., June 22. Sermon by Dean C. R. Brown; other parts by Rev. Messrs. W. R. Campbell, G. W. Owen, W. S. Holland, Sidney Lovett, and F. D. Parker.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
MASSACHUSETTS
Middleboro, Central	67	80
New Bedford, North	27	42
NEW YORK
Buffalo, First	3	7

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Obituary Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

LAURA L. AINSWORTH

In the home of Calvin Ainsworth, one of the pioneer families of Williamstown, Vt., there was born December 28, 1836, a daughter, Laura L., and on April 6, 1925, she fell asleep in the 89th year of her age. In 1867 she was married to James Ainsworth, a distant cousin, a pioneer engineer, who gave his life to the building of railroads and bridges in Iowa and Nebraska. Eighteen years ago she returned to the family homestead in Williamstown. The brightness of her eye was undimmed, the keenness of her mind was unabated, and the worth of her generous spirit was unchilled to the day of her departure. Such in brief is the story of a modest and little known but wonderful woman.

When Mrs. Ainsworth returned to her ancestral home, she was possessed of a considerable fortune and from that time she held fast the hope that she might live to give the major portion of both the income and principal in a beautiful ministry of mercy. Rarely has a like purpose been so faithfully fulfilled and rarely have benefactions been made with greater diversity and wisdom.

REV. MARSHALL M. CUTTER

Rev. Marshall Munroe Cutter died June 5, at Cambridge, Mass., aged 82 years. He is survived by a daughter, Miss Alice Cutter of Cambridge, and a sister, Miss Harriet Cutter of Brookline.

Mr. Cutter was born in Cambridge in 1843, was graduated from Harvard in 1864 and from Andover Seminary in 1867. He was pastor in several New England Congregational churches, his last pastorate being at Hubbardston, Mass. His last public appearance was at the West Medford Congregational Church at the observance of the 50th anniversary of his entrance into the ministry. He was active in the work of the American Tract Society. Mr. Cutter was a man of musical

(Continued on page 63)

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA
Sixtieth Year Opens August 17, 1925
Prepares men and women for
The Pastorate Social Service
Religious Education Foreign Service
Research
Practical Instruction. Opportunities for Self-Support.
Facilities of University of California.
Graduate Degrees. Faculty of Ten.
Modern and Commodious Buildings under Construction.
COME TO CALIFORNIA TO STUDY
HERMAN F. SWARTZ, President

EMPHASIZING COLLEGE PREPARATION
MacDuffie School For Girls
ONE YEAR TUTORING COURSE
SPRINGFIELD MASSACHUSETTS
Post-Graduate Course in Music and Household Arts
PRINCIPALS
John MacDuffie Mrs. John MacDuffie

Bangor Theological Seminary
The 110th year opens Sept. 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor, Maine.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

WALNUT HILL SCHOOL
15 Highland Street, Natick, Mass.
A College Preparatory School for Girls. 17 miles from Boston. 46 Acres. Skating Pond. Athletic Fields. 6 Buildings. Gymnasium.
MISS FLORENCE BIGELOW, Principal

CHICAGO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY 1855 ENDOWMENT
Endowments are lasting. They guarantee the permanence of a worthy work. Without them, Educational Institutions would be almost helpless. The Chicago Theological Seminary is partially endowed, but needs $500,000 more to carry forward its enlarged program. Current Gifts, Annuities and Bequests will greatly help. May we send you further information?
OZORA S. DAVIS, President,
5757 University Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries — Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton — Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton — Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady,
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Henry Smith Leiper, M.A.,
Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.
District Secretaries
Rev. A. V. Bliss, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York
Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, D.D., Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit s plies and Congregational ministers seeking p torates. Maintained by the Congregational C ferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Cov Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chairm

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secret and Missionary Education Secret
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and Ad Education Secret
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Secret
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Educat Program including Social Service, Mission Education, Student and Young People's Wo aids Ministerial Students, University Pasto directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christ Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of denomination for the publication and distribut of The Congregationalist, church school equ ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, teache magazines, children's and young people's wee papers, and books for home and church use, w book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Mana
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregationa
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Congre tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Trea Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERI 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlb Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACI 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W. Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec. S CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSION FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H. Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSION UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasur Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Congre tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY constituent of the Congregational Home Missi ary Society, represents the churches of Massac setts in their home missionary work. The Soci solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditio gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Fr erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; R John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sew Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Boston

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL A Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, a bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Col bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF B TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object is establishment and support of Evangelical Cong gational Churches and Sunday Schools in Bos and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; C. Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Se Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites c tributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annu Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Super tendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasur Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, constituent of the National Society, solicits c tributions, administers Special Trust for Churc and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. R Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Ha ford.

(Continued from page 61)

es and while in college was a member of the Club. He was a man of genial temperament, made many friends. His wife died in 1909.

JOSIAH DAVID GREGORY

or three days the village flag hung at half t and a township mourned when, on June 14, of the oldest and most beloved citizens of ceton, Mass., crossed to the other side. or sixty years an active member of the Congregational Church, and for over forty years one of its deacons, Josiah D. Gregory had moved among his fellowmen a kindly, genial, consecrated soul. Broadminded and public-spirited, he gave hearty support to all movements for civic or moral betterment and served his town loyally and faithfully in many public offices. He was a life member of both Home and Foreign Missionary Societies.

Summer visitors returning to the little hillside church to participate in worship there feel a keen personal loss in the absence of his hospitable greeting and warm handclasp of welcome, which had become a part of the service.

At the annual roll-call of the church, June 18, Rev. J. Seldon Strong conducted a brief but touching service of thanksgiving for these eighty years of beautiful, devoted Christian living in the community. The affection and esteem in which he was held by townspeople and distant friends was indicated by the throng which attended the funeral, by the great floral offering, and by the quantity of notes and telegrams of sympathy received by the family.

"We needs must love the highest when we see it."

MRS. C. E. TAGGART

Mrs. Estella H. Taggart, wife of the Rev. C. E. Taggart, entered the immortal life in her sleep, early in the morning of June 2, at Reed City, Mich. For nearly forty years she had been the strong, wise, faithful helper of her husband in the work of the ministry.

Events to Come

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

ISLES OF SHOALS CONGREGATIONAL SUMMER CONFERENCE, Star Island, off Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 10-24.

NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H., Aug. 10-17.

Northfield Summer Conferences

WOMAN'S INTERDENOMINATIONAL HOME MISSION CONFERENCE, July 6-14.

CONFERENCE FOR WOMEN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETIES, July 14-22.

CONFERENCE OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, July 23-Aug. 1.

GENERAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS, Aug. 1-17.

MASSACHUSETTS CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR INSTITUTE, Aug. 17-24.

RISIBLES

May—"Why are you so angry at Jack?"

Fay—"I told him I was neither pretty nor brainy and the horrid thing said he didn't care—he loved me, anyway."—American Legion.

"Your sister?" asked the kindly old party of the urchin whom he found hauling a little girl along on a sled.

"Say," demanded the youth bitterly, "d'ye think I'm a ladies' man?"—American Legion.

Mirandy—"What's yo' husband meditatin' about?"

Alicia—"Whah at he's gwine to be tonight when Ah finds he is whah he says he ain't."—American Legion.

"You simply cannot find a maid who is honest. That one you recommended just left suddenly and took with her nine of my towels."

"What kind were they?"

"They were those Pullman car towels which I brought back from my trip."—Wall Street Journal.

The husband who had a great habit of teasing his wife was out driving in the country with her, when they met a farmer driving a span of mules. Just as they were about to pass the farmer's rig the mules turned their heads towards the auto and brayed vociferously.

Turning to his wife, husband cuttingly remarked, "Relatives of yours, I suppose?"

"Yes," said the wife sweetly, "by marriage."—Methodist Protestant.

When the colored couple were being married and the clergyman read the words, "love, honor, and obey," the bridegroom interrupted:

"Read dat ag'in, pahson; read dat oncet mo', so's de lady kin ketch de full solemnity of de meanin'. Ise been married befo'."—American Legion.

American Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches. equests and Annuities are solicited in order that e House may be freed from mortgage indebtedss and the Association thus enabled to furnish r Missionary Organizations with business offices minimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. ev. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hubrd, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 eacon Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

Beacon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816

ome visitation and personal missionary service connection with our churches. Emergency re- Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contribus and legacies gratefully received and scrupuly administered.

iam Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. ker, Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

rporated 1829 Boston Reorganized 1922

aman's Friend Society, Inc.

his Society, reorganized 1922, now fully repnts the Congregational rches of New England ts practical, social and gious work among sea- . Has finely equipped els at 287 Hanover Boston, and at Vine- Haven, and Reading ms at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. Society provides dormitory accommodations, ding and recreation rooms, religious services, tables, and games of many kinds, a restau-, a canteen, shower baths, postal and bank- facilities. Donations and bequests solicited. tributions received on an annuity basis. Pres-t, Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., J. Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore Busfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; as., Charles F. Stratton; Chairman of Exec., Franklin P. Shumway; Office 618 Congational House.

merican Seamen's Friend Society

Incorporated 1833

he only American undenominational interna-al and national Society aiding seamen. laintains a Sailors' Home and Institute at West Street, New York City. oan libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing n New York. UBLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00). hipwrecked and destitute seamen aided. UPPORTED by contributions and legacies. OHN B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE NEY WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary. LARENCE C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 79 Wall St., York, to whom contributions may be sent.

American Sunday School Union

ladelphia, Pa. Founded 1817 ational, Interdenominational. Establishes and ntains Union Sunday Schools in the outlying al districts of the country. Publishes and ulates moral and religious literature. Helps churches of Christ by its pioneer and founda- work, not duplicated by any other agency. pported by voluntary gifts. Contributions so-ted. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. tributions and communications relative to k in any part of the country may be sent to New England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder and The Advance

July 9, 1925

Vol. CX No. 28

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers. $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

Editorial—"Thinking Through Our Task" 35
Larger Tasks for Local Churches
Political and Social Fundamentals
Congregationalists and Church Union—An Editorial Message 38
"Jonah," by Charles E. Jefferson 40
The Death of Dr. Adams 41
Christian Workers in South America, by Frank K. Sanders 42
Why I Entered the Ministry, by Carl S. Patton 43
What Kind of Patriotic Education Do We Want?, by Jerome Davis 44
The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches, by Daniel Evans 45
The Parable of the Quarantine Flag and the Blue Peter 46
Good Logic, Poor Psychology, by Fred L. Brownlee 46
Inspiration, by Grace T. Spear 46
Vital Questions for Congregationalists 47
A School of New Ideas, by Henry Smith Leiper 48
Church Vacation Schools 48
First Church, Ansonia, Ct. 49
Our Readers' Forum 50
The Congregationalist's Bible Class 51
Summer Schools of Religious Education 51
With the Schools and Colleges 51
Our Invalid Parish—Squarely and Honestly 52
Closet and Altar 52
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic 52
Among the New Books 53
With the Children—When Patsy Came to Camp, by Daisy D. Stephenson 54
New Light Upon Evolution by Ian C. Hannah 55
The Sea, by Charles B. McDuffee 55
News of the Churches 56

Christian Patriotism vs National Patriotism

"To be 'patriotic' in the old nationalistic way may in reality mean to be a traitor to the real welfare of one's country. We must find an international prophylactic against vindictive hatreds, nationalistic ambitions, and schemes for racial self-aggrandisement," so says Jerome Davis in his article in this issue of "The Congregationalist" entitled "What Kind of Patriotic Education Do We Want?" Consideration of this new Davis and Chamberlin course on international relationships, introduced below, tends towards the development of a Christian conscience.

Christian Fellowship Among the Nations

Prepared by JEROME DAVIS and ROY CHAMBERLIN

A Series of Discussions on International Relationships which bravely faces controversial issues and evades no question of fundamental importance.

Thought-Provoking Questions for Discussion

What is your attitude toward people of other nations and races? How do you acquire these attitudes?

How do you distinguish between news and propaganda? The fate of TRUTH in war time?

Have you a clear and accurate idea of the causes of war? Of its consequences? Of the influence now making toward another war?

What is true patriotism? Should the State be supreme? How shall we observe national holidays?

What part do the schools take in teaching patriotism? Is it history or nationalism that they teach?

Can diplomacy put an end to the war system? By what instrument does diplomacy work?

Do you have a part in American Imperialism? Do you believe in the policies of our government in the West Indies and Central America?

What can the Church do toward getting rid of war? What can you, a Christian individual, do?

Ask Your Group to Discuss These Questions This Summer

THE method by which the course is organized is unusual. Each lesson is introduced by actual incidents which have happened and which, primarily because they are true happenings and are cleverly arranged so as to bring out the different principles on which the discussion of each lesson is to be based, are much more appealing and thought-provoking than any statement of abstract principles could possibly be. We have examples of the war-inspired prejudice which leads professedly Christian people to condemn wholesale the population of erstwhile enemy countries, including suffering children; the warping of news in order to create hatred, so necessary to war morale; the barring from Christian activities in church life of "foreigners" and members of the black and yellow races in typical communities; and even—mirable dictu—the attitude of the sugar profiteers and our imperialists in general! Concrete and helpful suggestions are made for teachers. The lessons are followed by suggestions as to places where informed speakers might be secured to present the subject to the class; by lists of books, pamphlets and articles, and stimulating questions.

It is good to see a pamphlet issued for study of the international implications of Jesus' principles and spirit, which neither evades crucial issues nor presents its material in a one-sided manner.—The World Tomorrow.

Price of the Textbook, 25 cents.

LIBRARY PACKAGE, $1.50. One package needed for each class.

A most valuable and unusual feature of the course is the LIBRARY PACKAGE of pamphlets. Some of the most illuminating and informing material on the subject of war appears in the form of pamphlets. The plan is for each class to buy one of these PACKAGES to be used as a reference library. The total cost of the course is not appreciably increased, and the class discussions are enriched by acquaintance with the facts.

Congregational Publishing Society
(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston
156 Fifth Ave., New York
19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 29 July 16, 1925

Wilshire Boulevard Church, Los Angeles, California

For description and account of the dedication, see page 80

Rev. Frank Dyer, D.D., is the Pastor

AN EVOLUTIONIST'S IDEAS OF GOD, MAN, AND CHRIST

By Prof. Ernest B. Babcock

FROM NOW UNTIL THE MEETINGS of the National Council at Washington in October, there will be discussed in our columns vital problems that must come before that body. To delegates these articles will be of inestimable value and of great interest to every loyal Congregationalist.

The meetings will be reported in careful detail so that to the farthest outposts of the denomination the messages and decisions may be spread.

The Congregationalist

$3.00 per year
$2.75 in Church Clubs

14 Beacon Street
Boston

19 S. La Salle Street
Chicago

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | July 16, 1925 | No. 29

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh — News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D. — Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis, Minn.
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York City
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

r. Francis E. Clark Resigns Active Presidency

S this issue of The Congregationalist is in preparation public announcement has been made of the retirement of Dr. Francis E. Clark from the active presidency the Christian Endeavor after thirty-eight years of rvice. Fortunately, the condition of Dr. Clark's health encouraging and it is a satisfaction to know that s retirement from office will not imply the surrendering service and influence. It will be the hope of all iends that he may have years of health and strength r the encouraging of the movement that he founded id that by his personal influence he has done so much foster. Rev. Daniel Poling, who has served as vice-esident, succeeds Dr. Clark. Fitting recognition of r. Clark's long years of service has been made in the ovision that he and Mrs. Clark shall have during their etime the interest from a fund of $100,000 to be used timately for the extension of Christian Endeavor work. ie Congregationalist in a future issue will make more equate reference to Dr. Clark's retirement, reviewing s term of service and expressing the appreciation of e Congregational fellowship of which Dr. Clark has en an honored member.

lucational Foundation Plans

EXT week's issue of The Congregationalist will contain an account of the inauguration of Dr. G. W. ash, President of the Congregational Foundation for lucation, as President of Yankton College. Dr. Nash gins the duties of his new office on September 1, but ll continue to have official connection with the Founda-n for Education until after the meeting of the Congregational National Council at which he will present the report for the Foundation.

Dr. John N. Bennett, former President of Doane College, will have charge of the Chicago office of the Foundation until a new president is chosen and installed.

The Case of Mr. Lopp

A CORRESPONDENT criticizes The Congregationalist for not taking up and pressing vigorously the matter of justice to W. T. Lopp of Alaska, formerly associated with the American Missionary Association, who was summarily dismissed from the office of chief of the Alaskan Division of the United States Bureau of Education early in the present year. We have had no means of securing first-hand information concerning Mr. Lopp's case, or a knowledge of the facts in detail. The American Missionary for April referred to the case under the heading, Some Alaskan History, speaking in the highest way of Mr. Lopp's character and service, and of his removal as not only a wrong to him personally but a wrong to Alaska.

Mr. Lopp's case would seem to call particularly for thorough investigation inasmuch as his removal was due to a minion of the discredited A. B. Fall. When Fall became Secretary of the Interior he looked about for places for his friends. Lopp's position in Alaska was not protected by civil service and a friend of Fall's, appointed as Commissioner of Education, seized upon Lopp's place for an appointee of his own. The dastardly nature of the thing was further emphasized by the fact that after thirty-five years of faithful service Mr. Lopp was dropped on four days' notice and without just cause. If the present administration wishes to clean up effectually the nasty record of Secretary Fall, it would seem essential that official investigation should be made of Mr. Lopp's case leading either to his reinstatement or to the proper recognition of his long period of service.

Get All the Facts!

THE danger of commenting at long range on matters concerning which one has not first-hand knowledge, or direct information regarding all the facts, was never more forcefully illustrated than in a recent article by Rev. Archibald Fleming, D.D., in the British Weekly on The Disruption in Canada. Though Dr. Fleming subtitled his article, A Plea for Suspension of Judgment, he unconsciously judged the whole matter in the most serious way by presenting, evidently in good faith, figures which were based on an utter misapprehension of the facts. Dr. Fleming assumes that the minority, and not the majority, in the former Presbyterian Church in Canada favored union, basing this conclusion upon the statement which he makes as follows:

> The voting is not yet over, but the final result is fairly in sight. The majority of members are against the Union—the latest figures show a majority of about 5,000 against Union in a total poll of, in round figures, 200,000.

We have already warned our readers against Dr. Fleming's mistake. This summary does not represent the result of a vote in all churches, or on the part of the whole membership. In fact it represents the result of a vote taken in churches only where there was a strong element opposed to union. The enabling legislation, passed by the Dominion Parliament, put upon each congregation that did not wish to enter the union the obligation of voting itself out. Unless a congregation so voted it entered the United Church automatically. Hundreds of former Presbyterian congregations have thus entered the United Church, without a vote, and of course no reference to these is made in the figures which Dr. Fleming has quoted. It is not quite to the credit of the anti-union element that they have persistently represented the results of the voting in the daily press in such a way as to indicate, to one who did not know all the facts, that a popular majority had been registered by Presbyterians against union. The numerical strength of the non-concurring group, as every Unionist admits, is disconcertingly large—probably much larger than was anticipated—but in view of successive votes in the General Assembly, the votes in Presbyteries, and the votes of churches formerly taken, it is preposterous to suggest that the entrance of the Presbyterian Church in Canada into the United Church has not been by the action of a majority and a large majority.

Relative Strength of Union and Disruption

WHILE numerically the situation seems to be just as The Congregationalist has represented it—about 70 per cent. of the membership, 80 per cent. of the ministers, 85 per cent. of the congregations and 95 per cent. of the missionaries, of the former Presbyterian Church entering the United Church—the real strength of the unionist and of the non-concurring groups is difficult to determine with accuracy. Conflicting claims are persistently made by both sides, and only the next few years of actual experience in the churches will reveal the truth concerning practical situations that cannot b represented in figures. Many churches that former had much denominational strength will be so weakene that they will find it difficult to carry on. Churches this type that have gone unionist will probably fi adjustment easier than disrupted anti-union churche as the former may unite locally with pre-union Meth dists and Congregationalists. In some instances, als the voting inadequately reveals the actual situation. A illustration is cited where in a church with a large de in a growing community almost the entire group office bearers and the people chiefly responsible f spiritual leadership voted one way, while the actu majority vote, representing many whose names we on the roll but whose close relationship with the chur had ceased, went the other way. The most seriou phases of the disruption, it might also be said, are n found in the fact that a large group opposes unio but in this breaking up of local churches that but yeste day had substantial membership and historic presti of organization. It remains to be seen what streng and value may emerge through new alignment.

A Distinguished Baptist Visitor

AMERICA is to be favored this summer with a vi from Rev. S. W. Hughes, distinguished Bapti preacher, and successor of Dr. John Clifford in the pul of Westbourne Park, London, England. Mr. Hughes a rived early in July and will fill a number of speaki engagements. He is one of the most outstanding leade in English Nonconformity today, a brilliant debater, well as a preacher, and a champion on the platform freedom in education and progress in temperance refor He visits America under the auspices of the World A ance for International Friendship Through the Church

William H. Anderson's New Role

WHATEVER doubt there may have been regardi the personal guilt or innocence of William H. And son, former Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon Leag of New York, there is no question whatever in o minds regarding the present tactics of Mr. Anderson a the rôle that he is playing since his release from t penitentiary.

While The Congregationalist has carefully refrain from passing judgment upon Mr. Anderson personal we have persistently condemned the methods whi brought him into trouble and which prevented his p senting such a clear and unequivocal record as mig have provided an adequate defense before the court t condemned and sentenced him. There are many w believe absolutely in Mr. Anderson's personal integri but no impartial man who read the evidence could satisfied with the defense, or could say, despite the for of evil arrayed against him, that Mr. Anderson had a fair trial. One came to that conclusion reluctant and fully recognizing that men have been condemn for illegal acts where they were innocent of illegal tention and assumed that they were acting from ri motives.

The Prohibition cause, whatever the temporary seeming gain, can never ultimately profit from the owing of methods inherently wrong, or from the doing f evil that good may come. In this connection we annot fight fire with fire. The strength of the Proibition cause has lain largely in the fact that its strongst supporters have been high-minded men who would ever resort to the tactics of their opponents. It is admitted that Mr. Anderson was in many ways an effectual ghter, but his methods and his own downfall brought reaction that nullified much of the good that he had one.

No one wants to hit a man when he is down, but the ffort in some quarters to rehabilitate Mr. Anderson by he vilification of the present Superintendent and anagement of the Anti-Saloon League of New York is isdirected, and, we believe, unjustified. Particularly s this true in view of the dangerous policy that Mr. nderson is himself pursuing. A part of his rehabilitaion seems to be his alliance with the Ku Klux element, nd his effort to identify Prohibition with Protestantism s against Roman Catholicism. He seeks, apparently, o make a religious issue out of that which is essentially legal and social matter, in relation to which many atholics stand as citizens exactly with Protestants.

This new rôle is indicated in two articles which Mr. nderson has contributed to the Fellowship Forum, for une 20 and June 27, respectively, this publication issung from Washington, manifestly as an organ of the u Klux movement. Mr. Anderson says in this article:

Resistance to Prohibition is not accounted for by hirst, although the dwindling army of alcohol addicts till runs into the millions. It is not fully explained y greed, although there are enough fools, gluttons and respectable" anarchists to make it apparently profitable or thousands of bootleggers to commit perjury, larceny, urglary, robbery, and murder.

There is something deeper. A new element has been njected. Unscrupulous finance and corrupt politics have lways been lined up with the liquor traffic. They have oined in the effort to break down the Eighteenth mendment by a sinister, alien, anti-Protestantism as he third member of a trinitarian tyranny of tarnish. Whether the official, accredited dry "leadership" does ot see or is afraid to tell this fact, I have no means f knowing. Political ambition does not fully explain he anti-Prohibition animus and activity of anti-Protstantism. It goes deeper than that. Religious fanatiism among ignorant aliens and those who exploit them as been invoked by the wets. A so-called "religious ar" has been secretly started and is being secretly and leverly waged in America. It is masked under the retense of a "tolerance" which is a sham and a screen or the ultimate in intolerance. The overthrow of Proibition is but a step toward the real final objective, hich is the destruction of Protestantism.

That there is much truth in what Mr. Anderson ays cannot be doubted, but he has not stated the whole ruth, and in his articles, as a whole, he does use he half-truth to build up a dangerous and divisive ropaganda. There are people in this country who would esort to almost any tactics to destroy Protestantism f they could, just as there are others who would resort o almost any tactics to destroy Roman Catholicism if hey could. We do not underestimate the positive nenace that comes from certain Jesuitical forces in his land, nor do we underestimate the inherent conflict etween hierarchical pretensions and the spirit that emphasizes religious liberty. But the fact is that hundreds of thousands of Roman Catholic citizens share with Protestants belief in free political institutions. A book on civics by a Roman Catholic writer has recently appeared, so wholesome and sound in its moral outlook and interpretation of American ideals that we would be willing to endorse every word of it in these columns. The tactics of Mr. Anderson will not make for the suppression of bigotry and intolerance either Roman or Protestant.

Moreover, some of the most outspoken advocates of Prohibition are in the Roman Catholic Church, just as some of the most violent anti-Prohibitionists are in Protestant churches. We have formerly called attention to the high quality and service of a Prohibition organ published by Roman Catholics in Chicago.

But apart from this Prohibition is primarily a social issue. Its purpose is not to prevent people drinking liquor, but to remove a social curse. The prevention of moderate drinking is incidental. If the social curse could have been removed without interfering with the "moderate drinker," few Prohibitionists would have wished to make such interference. Prohibition is a matter of law, and it will stand ultimately vindicated or condemned as a legal means of dealing with a social menace.

To regard Prohibition in any other light is to weaken its foundation. If it be a religious issue, a "Protestant" measure, the Constitution has been used to gain religious advantage in a way that the Constitution itself condemns. It is not a religious issue in any such sense. Our strength is in appealing to the reason and good judgment of all in the community, regardless of their church affiliation or racial origin, and in the winning of all citizens to the support of the Constitution. If others choose to make the assault upon the Constitution a part of their religion, let Protestants, who favor Prohibition, beware of pursuing from their side any such mistaken policy. The question of Prohibition is a governmental issue, and our chief concern as Protestant citizens is to see that the Government does its duty.

Tragedy in Boston

WHILE Boston has regarded with sympathy the tornado-torn and earthquake-stricken West tragedy has come to our very doors—and tragedy all the more horrible because it lies within the realm of human neglect and frailty and the limits of preventable accident.

Early on the morning of Independence Day while some hundred revelers were engaged in a "night before" celebration in the Pickwick Club, a notoriously disreputable center of Boston "night life," the floor gave way, apparently under the strain of some new, fantastic dance, the "Charleston," in which the participants leap wildly. At the hour of writing forty-three bodies have been recovered from the ruins.

There are things that are worse than death, which in its circumstances may be honorable and noble, and the pall that death hangs over this tragedy is intensified by its sordid and ignoble backgrounds. We do not refer merely to the character of the place and of the revels so tragically interrupted. Nor do we refer to the possible inadequacy of building inspection and provision for safety, which may well have been due to error of judgment, easily perceived after the fact, but of which no one was conscious beforehand. It is claimed that the building had been examined by city authorities a few days before the accident, but the facts in this regard may appear during the jury's investigation.

What we do refer to is the ineffective, or corrupt (we do not know which adjective applies) conditions that permit a club of this sort, notoriously a resort of gangsters and criminals, to operate directly or indirectly under a state charter, and to hold such a dance as was in progress behind locked doors. In justification of these characterizations it may be said that a police officer, a father of six children, lost his life in the crash of the building into which he had gone trailing a suspected criminal. A man who perished in the ruins is reported by the press to have had $1,700 worth of stolen gems, according to information said to have been given by fellow-gangsters, and but a few weeks ago a man charged with a dastardly piece of banditry was arrested at this resort. It is also stated that there was a "trick" lock on the door so effectually intended to prevent intrusion that even habitués of the place could with difficulty open it from within. If the law, which requires theaters to provide and indicate carefully many accessible exits, and which, in many cities at least, requires all doors of public buildings to open outwards, permits dances to be held in an old structure behind locked doors the law ought to be changed. It would appear, however, that this matter was within the province of the city authorities. There is a great deal of talk about the laxity and maladministration of civic affairs in Boston, and this tragedy will not be in vain if it leads to a cleaning up. It is to be hoped that the investigation will be so thoroughgoing that the civic administration will be either vindicated, if worthy of vindication, or so completely discredited that popular sentiment and voting power will demand a wholesome renovation. Whether or not there is added responsibility on the part of the state may appear also during the investigation.

The tendency to speak of this incident as a "judgment of God" may well be tempered by remembrance of the teaching of Jesus and his reference to those on whom the tower of Siloam fell (Luke 13: 4). It may be further tempered by the remembrance that but a week or so previously a tenement collapsed in East Boston in the ruins of which innocent little children, as well as others lost their lives. It is a time for humiliation and heart searching and for the public—even the "good" citizen who leave matters of government to political bounders and ward-heelers—to assess their share in these unfortunate things and their responsibility for the general sordidness of a great part of modern city life.

How Can We Move Toward Christian Unity?

"PRIVATE judgment," wrote Cardinal Newman, in his essay on Private Judgment, "if it is not a duty, is a sin." We are fully persuaded that there have been, and are today, circumstances under which private judgment is a solemn duty, and where the failure to assert and exercise it as a Christian right and privilege would mean the weakening of the cause of truth and the unwarranted surrender of things that are inherently related to large and catholic ends. Unity is never going to be built up in a world of free men by the extension and dominance of external authority, no matter of what sort it be, whether expressed in the decrees of popes and councils or in formulæ representing "majority rule." There is only one ultimate sanction in religion, and that is the sanction of Truth—of truth, moreover, as it exists inherently in the nature of God, man, and the universe, and not as it professes to exist in "authoritative" statements that may or may not be in accordance with real facts and sound principles.

It is a profound mistake for Congregationalists as a body to approach the problems of church unity without the full recognition of this. But having recognized the place and duty of private judgment it is necessary, especially at the present hour, to recognize also the other aspect of the truth that Newman asserts. If Newman failed adequately to recognize the duty of private judgment it is no excuse for our failure to neglect the ideal of Christian catholicity and the duty of working in every just and righteous way for its attainment. True catholicity will never come through a weak, compromising, compliant, peace-at-any-price policy, but neither will it come until there is a clearer recognition of the obligation to seek beyond all else the reconstruction of the entire Christian Church into what it inherently ought to be—a fellowship of love.

Present Opportunities

The right spirit in the matter of unity is ultimately more important than any matter of formal proposal or approach, but Congregationalists are confronted with opportunities that imply immediate privilege and duty. The first duty would seem to be that of asserting for the church at large and in interdenominational comity the principle which among ourselves has been already effective in uniting local churches of varying types into unified fellowship. When the denominations are ready for it there is no reason why they should not get together in much the same way in which local churches have come into fellowship. The trouble is that unity is still too greatly confused with conformity and uniformity. When Christians and churches cease to want to make one another over according to their own pattern, unity of life and action may become as effective in variety of type as it is now proving in the fellowship of thousands of Congregational churches throughout the world.

Nor would this imply for the denominations an acceptance of Congregational polity. We understand that at present official consideration is being given to certain proposals for union which hinge upon the question of whether a group of churches having a bishop could become intrinsically united with the National Congregational Council as an association of churches continuing their episcopal form. Why not? If these churches elect to have that form of government, yet choose to co-operate in practical ways with a fellowship of churches of different type, why should they not be welcomed under conditions that protect their freedom as well as ours? The thing has already been tried out under somewhat different form, for some years ago the United Brethren churches of Ontario united with the Congregational Union of Canada as The United Brethren Association of Congregational Churches, preserving a much more definite connectional bond than exists among Congregational churches but entering fully into the obligations of fellowship. The experiment, it may be said, worked well. In all these matters form must be subordinated to fellowship. The professed freedom of our polity is futile unless our polity can be exercised in behalf of larger freedom.

Strengthening Common Bonds

Another line along which it ought to be possible to achieve greater progress toward unity is in our drawing closer to churches that in organization or spirit approximate to our own. Unitarian churches share our early history and our polity. Sooner or later we shall have to face the question whether it is possible or feasible to heal the historic division, and to establish in local communities and in the wider fellowship such united action as now exists, in certain quarters and on a limited scale. Our impression is that many Unitarians still wish to emphasize their aloofness, and their distinctive beliefs rather than the things that we have in common. But other Unitarians are of different mind. One of the most prominent of Unitarian laymen, for instance, not long ago consulted the Editor of The Congregationalist regarding the most effective way of providing for a permanent work of evangelism in his own community, and another active Unitarian layman in a visit to our office deplored the lack of co-operation, and the failure of local churches to get together—a failure for which he placed much of the blame upon the churches of his own denomination.

Among the Universalists, who also share our polity, are many who would welcome union with Congregationalists. and we can state with some confidence that outstanding leaders in that body believe that such union would be from their standpoint immediately practicable. The conservative-minded possibly preserve a measure of the historic prejudice that in orthodox bodies has existed against Universalists, but it would be folly to assert that the Universalists today in religious views, temper, and outlook, differ in any radical way from large numbers who are now within the Congregational fellowship.

Not necessarily at the other extreme, but at a different angle we touch communions of Christians with whom we have a common bond in free spirit and evangelical purpose. There is, for instance, the Christian Church, very strong in many parts of the country. There are "reformed" churches, union churches, and free, evangelical groups of variety of name and organization. Is it possible to win a larger union in fellowship and service with these, without sacrificing upon their part or upon ours any essential element of Christian faith and love? We think that it is possible if Christian faith can be adequately interpreted and expressed in terms of Christian love.

There is also the great Baptist body with which we have in common the Congregational polity. If the special insistence upon immersion and close communion, which has constituted a barrier of separation became less marked, or practised in relation to a large principle of liberty where others were concerned—as in fact is happening in the Baptist church to which Dr. Fosdick goes as pastor—great progress might be made in drawing Congregational and Baptist churches into closer fellowship—closer even than there has been in England where a minister in a Congregational pulpit has been at the same time Chairman of the Baptist Union.

The Largeness of Union in Christ

It would be a real achievement if the Congregational fellowship could reach out in both directions blending in united action and organization the liberal and evangelical elements that are unquestionably blended in Christ. He who came to save men declared also that he had come to make men free. To many of us it is a tragedy to see liberalism and evangelicalism in any way divorced, for both inherently find their origin and highest meaning in love.

If we can effect these larger unities with those with whom at present, in some directions at least, we have so much in common, will it be possible to progress toward organic union with Methodists, Presbyterians, and Episcopalians, who represent a more highly connectional form of government and emphasis upon authority? The difficulties that arise here are greater, and the United Church of Canada will be no adequate criterion. While the numerically small Congregational group has made a vital contribution to the United Church that organization is connectional and creedal to such an extent that union on a similar basis here would involve for Congregational churches, not a step forward, but a step backward such as it is inconceivable that they would take. But if the spirit of unity becomes sufficiently intense and enlightened it will break through denominational barriers and find a way of reconstruction.

The American spirit has always found a way of achieving the things that it determined had to be done, and the Christian spirit in the church should prove no less effective. The chief need at present is to see the goal clearly. The goal is not mere unity of organization. We can assert most positively that Congregationalists generally are not interested in merely building up a large denomination or a national church. We have no intention of undoing the work that our spiritual ancestors accomplished by faith, heroism, and sacrifice. The Pilgrim spirit establishes no barrier to our advance, or we should let the dead bury their dead. But precisely because that spirit establishes no barrier and no limit upon our freedom we shall advance in and not from that spirit. As we have guarded against building, so we shall guard ourselves against entering, denominational enclosures. We are not concerned about building fences. Our task is that of building highways accessible to all. It is the passion of most Congregationalists to exercise so broad and catholic an attitude that if they have not fellowship with all who profess the name of Christ the fault shall not be theirs. Can there be any better, or more constructive, attitude toward union?

An Evolutionist's Ideas of God, Man, and Christ

With Their Implications Regarding Social Problems

By Ernest B. Babcock

(EDITORS' NOTE—Professor Babcock, of the Department of Genetics in the University of California, is a member of the North Berkeley Congregational Church. The address here published was delivered last year at a meeting of that church, and has come to "The Congregationalist" through the good offices of Prof. John Wright Buckham. While publication has been unavoidably delayed Professor Babcock's statement is as interesting as when it was first delivered. Manifestly it deals with matters that may be approached from various angles, and regarding which, in matters of detail at least, much difference of opinion exists among men of equal open-mindedness and sincerity. Neither Professor Buckham, nor "The Congregationalist," for instance, agrees with Professor Babcock's expression and emphasis at every point, but we recognize, as all open-minded readers will, the immense value of a candid statement of his religious views by an enlightened man of science who has frankly accepted the obligations of membership in a Christian Church. Such personal creeds are both stimulating and challenging.)

I TRUST no apology is needed for the topic on which I am to address this meeting. A Congregational church is above all a church of reverent but independent thinking on all subjects connected with human welfare. This is an age of rapid change in social conditions, and progress in thinking must keep pace, especially on the part of church people, if the church is to hold a place of leadership in working out the social problems of the future. I know whereof I speak because I am working among men of science, some of whom are more actively interested in these social problems than most church people that I know, and they are bending their energies along scientific lines toward the solution of such problems as the social, political, and industrial relations of the nations bordering on the Pacific Ocean.

The solution of this problem is of vital interest to us all. The aid of science in solving this problem is essential; brotherly love alone is not adequate. Along with brotherly love we must have adequate knowledge of the conditions actually existing in these countries; and their potentialities in the support of human life under fairly equal conditions of comfort and opportunity for self-advancement must be estimated as accurately as possible. Then a conclusion may be reached as to what is right and fair for each and all. But these scientists of whom I speak seem to be actuated by the very spirit of Christ; their aim is the uplifting of all humanity regardless of race or creed. The church must recognize this and join forces with these scientists if we are really loyal to our religious professions. I have spoken of this in order to illustrate what I think should be our attitude toward the teachings of science about the history of the universe in general and the history of living things in particular.

AN EVOLUTIONIST'S ACCEPTANCE OF CHRIST

On account of the widespread publicity recently given to those who are opposed to the teaching of evolution I thought you might be interested to know whether one who accepts evolution as a fact can also accept Christ as a fact, how he thinks of Christ, and what effect his ideas of God and man and Christ have on his attitude towards present-day social problems.

It may be well at the outset to explain briefly what I mean by evolution. As used by students of animals and plants evolution means the gradual development of higher and more complex organisms from lower or simpler sorts of living things. Our time will not suffice even to outline the evidence on which this great natural law is based. The evidence consists of the known facts of structure and function of body parts in living things, the laws of heredity and variation, and the mass of evidence which has been accumulated from the study of fossils, the remains in the earth's crust of the countless animals and plants that have lived upon it.

Now a human being considered biologically is an animal. Hence, if evolution is a law of nature, the whole human race has evolved from lower, pre-existing kinds of animals—not necessarily from monkeys—but doubtless from ape-like animals. Most students of biology accept this idea as a matter of course, and most ministers who have considered the evidence carefully also accept evolution as an established law of nature and so admit that the human race of today is the product of a long, slow process of gradual development, reaching back over millions of years, until a period is reached when there were no living beings on the earth worthy of being considered human in the sense we use that term. But then there existed man-like apes from which the human species descended. The so-called "missing links" are being brought to light one by one, and the evidence for the evolution of man from lower animals is growing stronger every day.

WHENCE CAME THE SOUL?

The question often arises, Just when during the course of evolution did man develop those spiritual qualities which characterize him as potentially a child of God? I believe our endowment with these qualities was a part of our evolution—a long, slow process of advancement. It is highly probable that there were different degrees of intellectual and spiritual advancement among different individuals and groups at any given time during the history of creation, just as there are differences in individual and race endowment among both animals and men today. Some persons feel it necessary to assume that there was a definite point in the process, an instant in time, when God "breathed the breath of life" into man and so made him what he is. This savors of the old notion of the catastrophic origin of the universe and is not consistent with the evolutionary conception of creation. Then, too, if we assume that part or all of the potential human beings in the world, at some given moment in the history of creation, were suddenly endowed with spiritual consciousness by the Creator, how about their children and all later descendants? We know that nowadays a child develops his spiritual consciousness very gradually. The history of religion shows that the spiritual consciousness of the race, like that of an individual, was a matter of gradual development. To me the evolutionary conception is not only more reasonable, it is more inspiring, as it deepens our reverence for the Creator to meditate upon the slow but sure working out of the divine plan. After all, however, the important thing for us is not how it was done, but the fact that we are spiritual beings, with all the privileges and responsibilities consequent upon that great fact.

There is no conflict between the teaching of biology about evolution and the teaching of Jesus so far as I am aware. It is not recorded that Jesus ever taught that the stories of the creation as told in Genesis were literally true. The only conflict between the facts of science and the teaching of religion exists in the minds of those who insist that we must accept every word in the Bible as literally true.

SCIENCE AND THE BIBLE

Now I think that any scientist would be willing to admit that the Bible is the one greatest source in literature of divine inspiration and guidance. But he must also assert that the Bible is a human record and therefore limited and imperfect, yet it is a record which reveals the growing revelation of God to man. Considering the Bible in this light, it is not necessary to assume that every word of it is the exact truth, quite the contrary indeed in the light of our present knowledge of the universe. The stories of the creation, especially the older ones, were imaginary accounts of events quite outside the actual knowledge of the story teller. But these are minor matters; in my opinion they are utterly insignificant when compared with the evolution of man's conception of God as found in the Old Testament. You can trace this development from the idea of God as a tribal deity in Genesis up to Isaiah's great conception of a Savior for the whole world. And then we come to Jesus' conception of God, the Father, as related in the Gospels.

Science is simply organized knowledge. Scientists are trained to seek the truth and only the truth, even at the cost of personal opinion or prejudice. This ideal will in time prevail throughout all human thinking and then there will be no conflict between science and religion. Although a scientist and an evolutionist, I find that I can accept the New Testament account of the life and teaching of Jesus and the apostles as in large measure a true account. I believe that vidence, both internal and historical, is so onvincing that it compels us to accept these ew Testament writings in the main even we wished to do otherwise.

Based upon what I have been able to learn bout the universe in which we live, upon ie New Testament record, and upon the vents of history since the year A.D. 1, I ave tried to formulate a statement of my leas about God and man and Christ.

HE VALUE OF FORMULATING ONE'S BELIEFS

The statement does not wholly satisfy me, robably it will not satisfy you either. But o me it seems very much worth while to xpress our own ideas about the funda- entals of religion from time to time as we o along. I believe this is one way to grow nd progress in the Christian life, provided e do not insist on making others subscribe o our own particular way of thinking, and hat, I wish to assure you, is farthest from y thought. With the understanding, then, hat these are my present ideas, which need nprovement and are subject to change in ie light of new truth, I very humbly sub- it them as my declaration of faith.

I believe in God

as the one supreme Being, the omnipotent ne, as the Creator of the universe in the sense f the Mind, Intelligence, or Reason behind all and working through it all,

as the spiritual Father of all men,

as all-good, neither evil nor the creator of vil, as loving, just, and merciful, able and will- ng to forgive the truly penitent, as a spiritual personality, always with us we will but realize his presence—"Closer he than breathing, and nearer than hands nd feet."

I believe in man

as "created in the image of God" in the ense that he is able to imagine, to reason, o reflect, to will, to choose, to create, as "created in the image of God" in the ense that his real self is spirit, soul, which ves on after death, as "created in the image of God" in the ense that to a large degree he can if he will ake his body subservient to the dictates of is real self in conquering fear, weakness, nd with God's help, even disease, and I elieve in man as normally a child of God, as free to choose between good and evil, as capable of returning to a state of son- hip even though he has wandered into "a ar country" and wasted his life in sin.

I acknowledge Jesus Christ as the best man the world has known even hough he was subject to human limitations nd temptations, as master of the human life through being onstantly in harmony with God's will,

as the perfect revelation of the character f God through his life on earth, as the Son of God in the sense that he is piritually one with God, although a distinct ersonality and less than God, as the Savior of men in the sense that his erfect life and crowning sacrifice prove the ternal worth of human personality, awaken ie desire for an ascending life, and through the very faith they inspire, furnish the necessary moral dynamic, and I think of Christ as present in the world today, helping those who are loyally, whole-heartedly serving in his cause.

I believe that Christ's Cause is the realization by every human being that the Kingdom of Heaven is within him if he will get into the right relation with God, and that this does not depend upon being a member of any particular church, or of any church, necessarily, or believing in any particular creed or dogma, but merely upon his own personal relation with God.

These are my present convictions. It is my desire to grow in the knowledge and grace of our Lord. Upon these principles, however, it is possible to take only one certain stand in regard to all the burning problems confronting the people of the world today. One must stand for the consideration of the welfare of all mankind, not merely of one nation or group.

THE SOCIAL OUTLOOK

The social problems which seem to me most urgent are the prevention of war; the need of birth control; and the harmonizing of those elements of society generally referred to as capital and labor.

There are many people who still assert that war is necessary or at least unpreventable. This is not the attitude that makes progress possible. Believing in man as I do and in the possibilities for further advancement through evolution, I foresee the time when wars must cease. But this will come to pass not merely through general adoption of the Golden Rule. Human relations are too complex in this age. Along with a willingness to treat others as one would be treated, there must go the scientific study of social and political conditions both national and international. There must be more people who will take the attitude of Dr. Barrows in his recent expedition to Africa; we must know the actual conditions throughout the world, and the scientific principles of biology and economics must be observed in attempting to improve these conditions. This, of course, is the function of a league of nations, which can employ the necessary experts and arrange for needed reforms. Let us hope and pray that our country may soon unite its strength with that of other world powers in the greatest project ever attempted by the human race, the project of world peace.

My allusion to the need of birth control may come as a surprise to some of you. I believe the time has come when Protestant Churches must speak in no uncertain voice on this subject. The published results of scientific studies made during and since the World War reveal the urgent necessity of birth control among all peoples. Of course this does not mean that all families are too large. In some cases, especially where the physical and mental qualities of the parents are high, it might be better to have larger families. And never should the general need of birth control be used as an excuse for not having children by young married people who are well endowed both physically and mentally. But even in our own country the general average, in mental ability especially, is low, and yet the great mass of working people are handicapped with families too large to bring up properly, and the national average of mental ability continues to decline. It seems certain that it will go on declining until the rate of increase is lowered in the nation as a whole.

But there is another aspect of this problem which must interest all who have any regard for the welfare of their children and their children's children. World population is increasing faster than ever before. It is considered a conservative estimate that the population of the entire world will double in the next sixty years. Yet it is impossible to foresee sufficient increase in the total food supply properly to nourish this enormous world population. During the past, wars have been started by just such conditions and they have wiped out large masses of people and so established a new equilibrium. But now we are striving to prevent wars. As part of our world program, therefore, it is absolutely necessary that sane and proper instruction in birth control shall be provided for all the people. It may still be a divine law to "multiply and replenish the earth," but a still more basic law is also operating, viz., the law of self-preservation and race preservation, and this law requires that the total population of the world be kept more nearly the size it is now rather than be allowed to increase without regard for the welfare of future generations. This, too, is a problem for governments and a league of nations, but it so directly affects each individual that public opinion must be aroused to back this movement for the welfare of humanity. No agency can help more in this way than the church. It is not likely that the Catholic Church will be sympathetic with the movement. Hence it becomes all the more urgent that Protestant Church people become intelligently active in this cause.

THE OUTLOOK FOR INDUSTRY

Finally, what is the outlook for industry, capital, and labor? About twenty years ago I heard Jack London address the students of the University of California on socialism. He stated that a great revolution was imminent in the social conditions of the world. Our country, like others, was being mismanaged. The "rights" of the few were respected, not those of the common man. The revolution in the United States was peaceful because of our laws, but in countries like Russia it would assume the grossest forms of violence. In America our only means of fighting is the ballot box. Socialism is the only clean live thing to go into today. Said London, We are here to destroy present-day society. If you stand for present social conditions, line up! Fight us! Beat us back! We will meet you in a fair field and no quarter to be shown, or something to that effect.

Had London lived in Russia perhaps we can imagine what rôle he would have played in the tragedy of the past decade. At any rate Russia has seen the working out of the inevitable results of the spirit shown by London in that speech of 20 years ago; the spirit of destruction; the will to destroy the present order in the blind hope of finding something better.

The hearts of all true Christians have ached for the down-trodden and oppressed not only in this country and in Russia but throughout the whole world. Thousands of books have been written and millions of sermons preached about the greed and oppression of wealth, the horrors of child labor, and the rights of the working people. But are we any nearer a real solution of the difficulty? I believe we are drawing nearer. It may not seem so when we hear of the wealthy Germans who escape from their responsibility to the Fatherland and lavishly spend their war profits in Italy, while Americans are still sending subscriptions to buy food for starving German children. But we must not be misled or discouraged by the many exhibitions of selfishness with which we are surrounded. It is this very spirit of selfishness that has prompted the conflict between capital and labor. We may as well face the fact.

A Biologist's Solution

But happily there is a solution for the difficulty which seems likely to work because it recognizes the claims of both sides and does violence to neither. This is brought out clearly in a recent paper by Dr. Maynard Metcalf, a biologist of some wealth who has his own private laboratory in Oberlin, Ohio. This paper, entitled "Biology and Industry," was read before the Cleveland Council of Sociology in 1921. I would quote a few paragraphs:

A couple of winters ago, at a dinner of the economic society of Boston, I heard Matthew Wohl, of the American Federation of Labor, speak with force and real eloquence. Among other things he said, in substance: "Labor does not need your pity or your help. Labor can fight its own battles. All we ask of you is to keep your hands off. We can reach our own agreements with capital, satisfactory agreements. Just keep your hands off and we'll put the matter through to a settlement and that, too, without continual warfare between capital and labor. We can get together. We'll reach a settlement if you'll not interfere." And so on. Wohl apparently didn't have any realization that he hadn't touched the real point. He had described a way to abolish industrial warfare, but he hadn't mentioned at all the interests of the most interested party, the general public. He merely showed how capital and labor could get together and mulct the public. There are three parties in industry, those who furnish the money, those who furnish the labor, and those who use the manufactured product, and the dominant interest everywhere and always is that of the consumer. Until this fact is clearly recognized and is made the basis of all our organization and conduct of industry, we haven't really started to solve our industrial problem.

What does this new plan involve? According to Metcalf:

It involves (1) paying fixed returns for capital, (2) paying wages to labor, (3) having the ultimate control of the management in the hands of the public. This in contrast to the present system of turning industry over to capital to manage with carte blanche to get from the job all they can force the public to stand for. It means doing business, at least essential business, on the basis of guaranteed bonds instead of stocks with fluctuating dividends. This is a far-reaching change, one in which many experimental mistakes will be made, mistakes entailing heavy losses. No mind is keen enough to think through the problems which will arise. In this, as in all other fields, the experimental method is the only method that will find the solution. Most of us will see the mistakes and will cry out against the whole idea of experiment and change, desiring to return to the good old ways. But we won't return. The experiments will go on with their seven mistakes and their three successes, and gradually by devious ways we will approach nearer to the goal of a reasonable organization and conduct of society and its chief business, industry.

There were a year ago (fall of 1920) in this country over 300 large business corporations in which labor shared with capital the control of the business. The idea is growing. Mackenzie-King, the leader of the Liberal party in Canada, goes a step further. He advocates the control of essential industry by boards of directors, upon which three parties shall have equal representation—capital, labor, and the community. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in this country is converted to this same program. The Plumb plan for reorganization of the railroads goes further, taking the final step by placing the ultimate control in the hands of the public. . . .

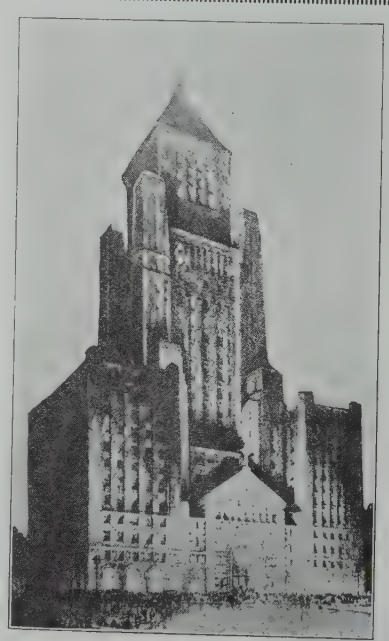
As such public control comes, there will come with it the full sharing by labor in the election of the management of the industries, and such organization of the labor in the shops and the mines as will give them an opportunity and a stimulus to put their real selves, their best selves into the job. How many times greater will then be the efficiency of labor? How much larger will be the product per man-hour?

But this greater product of materials from the mines and of goods from the factories is not the major point. The most real advance will be in the self-respect of the men, in our sense of public service in our job. . . . The desire for self-promotion will then dictate a course in line with that of public service, and the very organization and conduct of industry will itself tend to produce and reinforce the spirit of service.

Is this Utopian? Are we talking of the millennium? Call it what you will. It is coming and it is coming more quickly than we might think. Things move swiftly in these days. Ten years sees as much progress today as a century saw in Renaissance time or several centuries in the dark ages.

And what is our part to play? It is up us to do some clear thinking, some unprejudiced thinking, to see what things tend toward the goal, what things hinder . . . co-operate wherever we can. Even with the spirit rather widely embodied, we may fa In spite of all we can do the explosion ma come. But there are indications that c operation in service may succeed in headi off those who would, from sheer disconten destroy with little or no thought for th fearfully difficult task of rebuilding.

In conclusion I wish once more to em phasize our absolute dependence upon scienc for the very preservation of the human rac not to mention future welfare and happ ness—science combined with Christianity, course, or science as the servant of Chris if you please. Let us not despise the teach ings of science then, rather let us try to dis cover their harmony with religion.



The Proposed Broadway Temple

This Methodist skyscraper church in New York City, under the pastorate of Dr. Christian Reisner, will cost $4,000,000, a quarter of a million of which is given by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The larger part of the building will be rented for commercial purposes.

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Camels

We sojourned in Egypt, I and Keturah and we rode on Donkeys, and also we rod on Camels. Now of all beasts that ever wer made, the Camel is the most Ungainly an Preposterous, and also the most picturesque And he taketh himself Very Seriously.

And we beheld a string of Five Camels that belonged in one Caravan, and they were tethered every one to the Camel in front o him. But the foremost of the Camels had an Halter that was tied to the saddle of a Donkey.

And I spake unto the man of Arabia who had the Camels, and inquired of him how he managed it.

And he said, Each Camel followeth the one in front, and asketh no questions. And I come after, and prod up the last Camel.

And I said, Doth not the first Camel consider that there is no other Camel in front of him, but only an Ass?

And he answered, Nay, for the first Camel is blind, and knoweth only that there is a pull at his halter. And every other Camel followeth as he is led, and I prod up the hindermost one.

And I inquired, How about the Donkey?

And he said, The Donkey is too stupid to do anything but keep straight on, and he hath been often over the Road.

And I said unto Keturah, Behold a picture of Human Life. For on this fashion have the Processions of the Ages largely been formed. For there be few men who ask otherwise than how the next in front is going, and they blindly follow, each in the track of those that have gone before.

And Keturah said, But how about the leader?

And I said, That is the profoundest secret of history; for often he who seemed to be the leader was really behind the whole procession, and at the head was nothing more sensible than a Donkey.

And she said, It must be fun for the Donkey.

And I said, He is so happy to carry no load, but to hold up one end of the halter of the first Camel, that he doth laugh a

(Continued on next page)

Christian Workers in South America

III. The Continental Conference on Education at Montevideo

By Frank K. Sanders

THE attractive city of Montevideo and the little but cultured nation of Uruguay ake an interesting study for the North nerican visitor. Conditions differ considably from those met with in Brazil, and t Uruguay represents the same relative ertness and progress noticed there. Uruay is about the size of all New England. is almost an island, since the great Rio la Plata and the Uruguay, both navigable vers, mark its southern and western boundies, while the broad Atlantic beats against s eastern shore. Its population, small in e aggregate, being about 1,500,000, is, curisly enough, denser to the square mile than at of other South American republics. Conniently compact, enjoying an even, temperate climate, the people of Uruguay, very pure blood, are progressive and promising. They e trying out several noteworthy experients in national organization. The one rought most quickly to the attention of our siting group has been the division of politil authority between two individuals rather an between a president and a congress. ruguay, like all republics, has a president ith the general executive powers of any ational head. But it also elects, by opular vote, a small Council to which entrusted matters of internal administration. The one receiving the highest opular vote for the Council becomes its resident. His status is practically equal to hat of the president of the republic, hence ch jealously watches the other. Our group ad to make, one day, a formal call on the e, the next day, on the other. Politics are ctive in Uruguay. North America has little contribute along such lines to Uruguayans. Uruguay, though relatively small, is recogized as a center of cultural influences. It ends one-seventh of its national revenue n education. Its university at Montevideo as faculties of law, social science, medicine, athematics, commerce, and agriculture. he rector, Sr. Dr. Elias Regules, is a cholar of distinguished presence and unsual culture. He said farewell to our eduational group after a pleasant interview in poetic strain which sounded musical and mpressing, but embarrassed our interpreter.

The normal cultural influence of a center ke Montevideo is limited by the extraordiary spirit of isolation which each South merican nation exhibits. Sr. Ernesto Nelon, an able publicist of Argentina, remarked ecently that his latest book was published n Spain because he wrote it in order to each the influential leaders of all South merica. Had it received an Argentine imrint, it would have found no normal ale, he remarked, in Chile, Brazil, or even Jraguay.

The North American group reached Montedeo on March 24, was graciously handled y the government, and speedily lodged at large summer hotel, facing the open sea, he Hotel Pocitos, of which the Congress vas to have full possession. Since April in Montevideo is September at home, the days and nights were delightful. Aside from an inveterate habit of furnishing pillows made out of cast-iron, and a few other minor backslidings, the hotel was very attractive.

After a day given to settling down, a Continental Conference on Education, arranged by the indefatigable educational secretary for Latin America of the Committee on Cooperation, Dr. W. E. Browning, whose headquarters are at Montevideo, opened on Thursday, March 26, continuing throughout Saturday. This conference was introductory to the Congress on Christian Work, although independent of it. It was distinguished by its wide-ranging membership. Six sorts of delegates took an active part in the program: those representing the staffs of a variety of mission schools, the administrative heads of several important missionary institutions, several Board secretaries to whom the success and influence of these schools is a matter of deep interest, representatives of the missions which control their activities, a small group of professional educators from the United States and another small group of South American educators, wholly unconnected with missionary work.

The presence of the group last mentioned was decidedly novel. In order that they might share in the discussions without embarrassment, it was agreed to emphasize the educational problems from a professional rather than from an evangelistic point of view. These visitors were decidedly friendly to missionary educators and to their work. Yet they were loyal South Americans, not slow to brand economic imperialism or Anglo-Saxon leadership of the Americans as ideas which Latin South America ridicules. A brilliant young local leader, Sr. Julio Navarro Monzó, when discussing practicable plans for Christian unity, made an impassioned denunciation of denominationalism as a perfectly useless element of the Christian message. These men helped to keep the conference in the realm of broad idealism. Dr. Enrique Molina, rector of the University of Concepcion, Chile, sent to the conference by his government, a spare, alert, dignified gentleman, gave a fine address on "Nationalism and Good-will Among Men" in which he declared that a healthy nationalism, for which a man ought to be willing to die, must be in a broad sense unselfish. He referred happily to the atmosphere of the best North American universities which had made him feel so much at home. "The Task of Educators in Advancing World Friendship" was the theme of Dr. Maximiliano Salas Marchant of Chile, the head of the government School of Education. Treaties, he declared, are of little significance unless the contracting peoples can mutually comprehend their purpose. Education can encourage human solidarity and the social spirit, so that men will learn to live for others. A good Congregationalist might have shut his eyes and imagined himself at a National Council session.

It was interesting to realize the fine caliber of the missionary leaders in education. Only two can be mentioned. Dr. W. A. Waddell is President of Mackenzie College, São Paulo, Brazil. He is an old fashioned rule-of-thumb educator, but a remarkably able one, wielding through his friendly, shrewd personality an influence not readily estimated. In all debates it was his cool common sense that came to the rescue of enthusiasm. Dr. John C. Mackay of Lima, Peru, represented a growing type today. An Oxford graduate, with a fluent command of Spanish and broad sympathies, he is in very close touch with many of the intellectuals of South America. In an address on "Educational Ideals" Dr. Mackay recognized the fact that each great country has fundamental elements of culture which it should sedulously conserve through a national system of education, but argued that certain accepted educational principles should be grafted into any such system. One of these principles was that no life should be dedicated to a nation absolutely. That means opportunism. It must be dedicated to the nation and to God. Such education progresses most rapidly through contact with a developed personality and demands choice teachers.

To report such a conference adequately is impracticable. Enough to say that the possibility of holding it was a happy indication for the future. Missionary education seems forward looking today. It realizes its duty to each nation and sincerely is setting itself to co-operate with national forces as never before. Such men as Dr. Browning throughout Hispanic America and Professor Hunnicutt, the agricultural expert of Brazil, are highly respected by national leaders and receive their sincere co-operation.

The findings of the conference were in line with the spirit of it proceedings. They emphasized the purpose of making better and more useful citizens for each community and state, alive to its needs and able to sustain the institutions which assure national progress; and affirmed the conviction that a Christian foundation was the essential basis of every normal life. Such conclusions may seem commonplace in North America, but they, taken together, mark a new and broader era in education in our neighbor continent.

Parables of Safed the Sage

(Continued from preceding page)

great Haw-Haw at the folly of the whole world except himself.

And this was a little severe; but I have often mourned the lack of Wise Leadership among men, and the String of Camels led by an Ass is worth a moment's sober thought.

For so long as the world is content with the kind of leadership that doth guide the fashion in Clothes, and Politicks, and much beside, the Donkeys will not lack for occupation.

How to Remain Thirty Years in One Pastorate

Observations of a Veteran in the Service

By James M. Lewis, D.D.
Sandwich, Illinois

WHETHER a pastorate is long or short is purely a matter of comparisons. As compared with the pastorate of Rev. Edmund Dowse, who in 1905 closed his pastorate of sixty-seven years at Sherborn, Mass., as compared with First Church, Concord, N. H., which had but six pastors in 195 years, or as compared with the church at Danvers, Mass., which had but five pastors in 196 years, a pastorate of thirty years seems short; but when compared with the average length of pastorates it is of quite unusual length. There are so many factors that enter into making a pastorate of thirty years that when one does occur, it is largely accidental, or co-incidental.

Why Short Pastorates?

There are several reasons why pastorates, as a rule, are short rather than long. Many churches are restless. They want a change for the sake of having something different. The members differ in their tastes, their likes and dislikes. Some wish to specialize in a good preacher, others in a good pastor; some want a conservative preacher, others a liberal. Some want a minister who will please all the people all the time, and some ministers want a church, all of whose members will please him all the time. Some ministers can do their best work in short pastorates, while others can do their best work in long pastorates.

If a minister wants a church where he may stay for thirty years it will need to be selected with great care. Here are some suggestions. One of the most important is that the church have both common sense and religion. If it hasn't both it had better be common sense rather than religion. A Methodist Bishop at one time was giving some advice and instruction to an incoming class of young ministers. He said, "My brothers, you should get married, for every minister should be the husband of one wife. Get a wife that has both common sense and religion, but if you cannot find one that has both, get one that has common sense rather than religion; for if she has common sense she will get religion, and then she will have both, but if she has religion and not common sense she will likely lose her religion and then she will have neither, and then may God have mercy on your souls." Also be sure that the church is free from religious cranks and cantankerous saints, for these are fatal to long pastorates. Get a church, too, that will grant its minister a reasonable freedom of utterance. Soon after coming here I preached a very liberal sermon, in which I dared to make the statement that the gulf that separated Dives and Lazarus was likely not a material gulf like some grand canyon, but a moral one indicating a difference in their characters. It occasioned quite a little talk. One of the good deacons of the church told me about it, and said, "You will find that we do not put a minister in a strait-jacket."

It is a big advantage if the church has those who have initiative, will make suggestions, and accept responsibility. The minister cannot do it all, should not if he could, nor can he think of all that should be done. Some of the best things undertaken by this church have been at the suggestions of its members. Here we have a competent board of trustees who take entire oversight of the property, without even consulting the minister.

A Peaceful Disposition and Other Traits

But a church possessing all these necessary qualifications is not a guarantee of a long pastorate, for there must also be a minister who will fit into these conditions and not all are able to do so. The most important of all qualifications is that he be a man in the noblest sense of that word; a man of good Christian character. A lack of manhood is the one unpardonable sin in a minister. He should be a man interested above all else in people, in the religion of Christ, and the common good of mankind. He should be a man of common sense, and of an irenic rather than a polemic disposition.

Here are some specifications. He should be a man of truth, in the sense that Christ had in mind when he said, "Every one that is of the truth heareth my words." He must tell the truth, in the pulpit and out of it, and be sure of his facts, especially when speaking on subjects over which there is controversy. He must keep his credit good. A minister ought to be able to go to his banker at any time and borrow all the money he wishes, for he will ask for none that he is not sure that he will be able to pay back. He should live in such a way that he is not afraid of either God, man, or devil. He should live so near to God that fear is cast out by love, there there is no occasion to have fear of man, and to live so far away from the devil, if there is such a being, that they have nothing to do with each other. He should keep himself at the maximum of his physical, mental, and spiritual strength. He should have a high ideal for his sermons, and try to satisfy himself and God, for only in this way can he hope to satisfy his people. He should be a student of the Bible, of course, and of the best theological and religious literature. He should read much, but the quality and not the quantity is what counts.

He must be a growing minister; one who grows in grace and the knowledge of the truth; if he is not he is sure to become stale and has people dissatisfied. But there is a danger; he must grow but not too fast. He must grow fast enought that his people will want him to stay with them, but not so fast that some other more important church may want him. I have often been asked how it is that I have stayed with this church so long, and the answer that I give is that the people here have been willing for me to remain, and no other church that I might have preferred to this one has seemed to want me.

The minister should cultivate a reverence for personality; not in the abstract, but in the concrete and wherever found. The creation reaches its finality in personality; that is the only thing that permanently counts. He should be a special friend to all who need his friendship and help. A few years ago I was surprised to find an implication of the two great commandments of our Lord. The commandment is that we love God and our neighbor, and these are persons, so the command is to love persons above everything else. That unifies his life, and should explain all his conduct.

The minister should be a leader of his people; the churches want leaders but our Congregational churches will not tolerate dictators.

No Factions

We have not always agreed as to policy and method, but there has never been any friction between pastor and people, nor among the people themselves. Factions have never been known in this church, and a minister is not likely to remain long with a church where factions exist. I have not pleased any of the people all the time; nor have they all pleased me all the time. But differences have not interrupted either friendship or confidence on either side. It is useless for a minister to expect a church whose members please him all the time, or for a church to expect that a minister will please them all the time. However, both can be sincere, and be charitable in their judgments, and show a Christian spirit even in their disagreements.

Should Preach Truth Above Everything

Now a word as to substance of the preaching. It seems to me that a minister should not seek to be either orthodox or heterodox, either to be conservative or liberal, but that he should seek to be true, and to know the truth, and to preach the truth, after sincere and earnest effort to find it. The truth needs neither argument nor advocate, for it can be known by those who have a truthful mind, and only by those, and will be known when clearly seen.

It goes without saying that a minister should seek to cultivate the spirit of Christ in his own inner life, to get as clear an understanding of Christ's message as possible, to know its meaning for this life and the life to come, and to show its application to the present world situation. The responsibility and opportunity of the minister can hardly be overestimated. The people ought to be able to look to him and to depend on him for leadership and instruction. They will soon learn whether he is dependable or not, and he must prove himself to be such if his pastorate is to extend over many years.

He must know the truth before he can teach it to others. He must know the truth, not merely as it is recorded in the Word of God, but also as it is verified in his own life. Christ as the Savior of men must have been put to the test in the salvation of his own

The Christ of the Gospel must be to also the Christ of experience. He must ble to say, "I know Him in Whom I believed." The burden of his message ld be the essentials of salvation, those truths, great but few, without which tion is not possible. It is Christ that s, and not the recorded facts about st. He is the one subject that is perenly new and inexhaustible. If the mesrings true here, it may generally be n for granted that his congregation will him all the freedom he wishes in the pretation of the recorded facts about st. The acceptance of the five points of Fundamentalists may be necessary for to be traditionally orthodox, but they not the essentials of salvation. Those fs that are generally accepted by all believers in Christ are the essentials of ation, and those dogmas that are quested, denied, or doubted by any large por- of Christian believers are not essentials. may be a genuine follower of Jesus st and not believe in the inerrancy of Bible, nor in his Virgin Birth, nor in miracles, nor in his bodily resurrection, in his Second Coming. Over against e five points of the Fundamentalist odoxy, I put the five points of my odoxy, and these are the things that e been emphasized from the pulpit. They as follows: Repentance for sin, spiritual regeneration, the acceptance of Christ as a personal Savior and Lord, and the love of God and all mankind. Personally I may say that I do not believe in the inerrancy of the Bible, for I find errors in it, many of them; I do believe in the Virgin Birth; I believe in nearly all of the miracles; I believe in the bodily resurrection of Jesus; but I do not believe in the second coming of Christ as it is generally believed in, though on this subject I do not dogmatize, for I do not know anything about it; but I believe that I know as much as any one knows or can know, and that is nothing.

A Teacher as Well as a Preacher

If a minister would have a long pastorate he must be a teacher as well as a preacher, and to be a teacher he must know something of the principles of pedagogy. He must know that the human mind rarely passes from one belief to another, likely inconsistent or contradictory to the former belief, by any sudden leaps or bounds. The transition will be gradual. The mind cannot be forced from one belief to another, but it may be lead. Open antagonism is sure to weaken, and may destroy, the efficiency of the preacher. Scriptural support is necessary, but often it is not sufficient, for Scriptural passages are so variously interpreted. If in addition to this he can bring to his support the statement of some distinguished Christian scholar, whom the people know, and in whom they have confidence, he is likely to achieve his end, and without any disturbance in the minds of his hearers. We are very fortunate here in having just such a man in President King of Oberlin College. The college is very popular here; many of our young people have been going there for their education for more than a quarter of a century, and its distinguished president is known personally to many of our people. If to any one his endorsement is not final, it at least opens the way to a sympathetic consideration.

So far as I am able to tell it, this seems to be the reason why I have been here so many years. Somehow we have seemed to fit. I have not had the wanderlust, and the people have not craved for something new and different. The people have not expected perfection in me, and have not been surprised and disappointed when they did not find it. I have not had from the people here all that a pastor might wish, and I know that such is rarely found, but I have had all the freedom of expression and action that one could wish, and a more generous response to my requests than ministers usually receive. Now for thirty years we have lived and worked together in the interests of the Kingdom of our Lord, and it has been on terms of intimacy, confidence, and affection.

The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches

III. The Catholic and Protestant Methods of Salvation

By Professor Daniel Evans, D.D.
Harvard Theological School

NCE the Catholic Church holds that it alone is in possession of the truth of and infallible in its teaching, and it e can administer the sacraments as the nels of the Divine Grace, it is not nge that it should also think it alone the divine secret and uses the right nod in the salvation of men, and that ide the church there is no salvation. ll these matters, it is quite certain, and eriences no hesitation when confronted the difficult problem of saving the soul. he greatest and most poignant question ch a man can put to himself, or ask ther person, or a religious institution "What must I do to be saved?" The holic Church has its ready answer to question. Since it has the truth of God is its infallible teacher, it answers this stion by declaring and demanding that person who desires salvation must ac- this truth at the hands of the church, licitly, unquestioningly, unhesitatingly. re must be assent and submission of the d to this infallible teaching. And since possesses the sacraments, they must be eived as administered by it, otherwise re is no impartation of grace.

'wo things impress one in this way of vation. The one is that it is very intelualistic. It conceives faith as an as- t and submission of the mind to the ching of the church. It takes for truth at is given. There need not be much, if , understanding of the truth. It is enough that it is accepted and assented to. It is faith on authority. And the other thing is that the grace that comes through the sacraments has an almost magical power in its working in the very substance of a man's soul. There need not be a vivid spiritual realization of the Divine Spirit working to will and do in the conscious mind, but the passive susceptibility to the working of the grace.

To secure certainty or assurance of salvation, one must do many things beside; do good works, practice penance; lay up, or participate in, a store of merit. This method failed signally in one outstanding historical instance, which revealed its essential defect. Luther felt and raised the question: "What must I do to be saved?" No man tried the Catholic method more sincerely, wholeheartedly, and thoroughly than he. He sought the cloister; he became a monk; he had recourse to the Catholic method and all its auxiliary means; but he could not get his answer. There was no release from the burden of sin; nor assurance of salvation; nor sense of divine forgiveness. The method failed with this man. A similar method had failed in other religions, and with St. Paul, and it has failed in millions of cases. He and they discovered a new method of salvation.

The new method is simple, effective, Christian. The attention of the soul is directed to the Christian gospel. It is the gospel of the revelation of God in Christ Jesus. He is the God of Love, with a passion to save, a willingness to forgive, a readiness to restore the wayward or lost soul. He moves out to man first before man moves toward him, or even desires to. He is the explanation of all that Christ is and does in his redemption of man. And he is the end of a man's salvation with whom he has fellowship, and in whom he finds his abiding satisfaction. The God revealed in Christ Jesus is the object of the Soul's attention; not the church, nor the creed, nor the sacrament, nor any man.

And this Gospel awakes and produces the faith which brings the soul into filial fellowship with God. The sinner does not have to create his own faith; he does not have to work it up; nor even put himself by strenuous effort in a submissive mood. The faith that saves is quickened in the soul by the very Gospel that brings God near to us in and through the Christ. The sun awakes, and quickens the plant and sets into activity its climbing nisus or urge. The plant does not have to arouse its own life, and begin its climbing in its own strength and by its own action. So this Gospel of Christ awakes, quickens, strengthens, and sets the soul to climbing.

Moreover, the distinctive character of this faith thus produced is personal trust, or confidence. It is not a matter of assent to infallible teaching or receiving the sacramental grace, but the direct and complete trust in the God disclosed in Christ, and confidence in his love, power, forgiveness. It is the soul's confiding attitude towards him. It rests in him, and sets its mind upon him. It is absolutely certain of his forgiveness and finds the peace which neither the world, nor man, nor church can give, or take away from it.

Since faith is thus personal trust, it is an individual matter. It is the soul's own attitude. It is the man's own commitment. There is no possible proxy, or substitute. No one else's faith can save a man. It must be his very own. There can be no vital, profound personal faith on any one's authority. It must be the faith of one's own Soul awakened and produced by God as he comes to one, in and through Christ.

Such a saving faith as this has a vital character. It affects the whole life. It becomes a power that changes a man's whole attitude. He becomes free to live and serve; courageous in the presence of the wild forces of the world, and the wilder forces of hostile human beings; sincere in all his inner life; unselfish in his personal relations; effective in doing his part of the world's work; joyous in his appreciation and use of all good things, and mindful ever of the transcendent interests of life.

Movements in Scotland

By James Stalker, D.D.

This is the time of year when, after the meeting of the ecclesiastical courts are over, it is my custom to send you a letter, describing the situation in Scotland and the progress of the movements which are there occupying the public mind. But on the present occasion I have been out of Scotland, spending the winter in Italy, and I have just arrived in my new home, in Crieff, Perthshire. I may add that I met in the course of my travels abroad some readers of The Congregationalist, and that they and I spoke of the paper and its editor with interest and congratulation.

Rome is, in my opinion, at all times the most interesting place in the whole world, but this year the interest has been intensified through this being what is called the Holy or Jubilee Year. Every five-and-twenty years the Pope invites all the faithful throughout the utmost limits of his authority to come to the Eternal City, where, through himself and the other high officials of the church, privileges of an exceptional character, including especially plenary indulgence, which means practically deliverance from purgatory, will be bestowed on all who visit for ten days in succession the four leading churches in different quarters of the city. This involves, of course, enormous preparation beforehand, so that everything, down to the smallest detail, may be overhauled and brightened up, and it means enormous labor for the Pontiff himself and those by whom he is immediately surrounded, in welcoming, confessing, and blessing the pilgrims who come streaming from all the ends of the earth. About this Holy Year I could easily tell much more, but it is not unlikely that you are receiving more direct communication on the subject from some correspondent on the spot, so that I had better turn to my usual theme; for although I have been absent from my usual place I have been keeping a watchful eye on every move of the game, and I have been in communication with friends who have kept me informed about every step which they have been taking.

The Established Church has been fortunate this year in having a moderator of distinction, whose personality has dominated the proceedings in an unusual degree—Dr. John White of the Barony Church, Glasgow. He has been clerk of the Established Church Union Committee from the beginning, and in that office he has visibly expanded, intellectually and spiritually, from an ordinary minister of the State Church into an ecclesiastical statesman, capable of appreciating the point of view of the opposite side and working for the good of the whole country. Naturally his theme, at every appearance, was the future union. He delivered two great speeches—one on the proceedings in Parliament connected with the bill, just passed, for the disposal of the endowments, and the other, his closing address from the chair, on efficiency in the church of the future.

Another notable figure in the same assembly was the King's Commissioner, who received an uncommon amount of attention, because the public was curious to see how he would compare with the same official of the preceding year, who was sent by the Labor Government, but had been a working miner. This year's commissioner was a lord—the Earl of Elgin—but the earl of this year, in his Christian testimony, did not come short of the miner of last year. Both are elders of the Presbyterian Church.

In the other assembly—that of the United Free Church—the Moderator, Dr. Harvey, of Edinburgh, an old student of my own College of Aberdeen, was able, from long experience as convener of what is called the General Interests Committee, to give most interesting details about the unions of congregations effected in consequence of the union of the two non-established churches a quarter of a century ago, these supplying a happy indication of what may happen on a larger scale after the union at present endeavored has taken place. The most interesting topic, however, next to union, in the United Free Church Assembly, was the issue of a new hymnbook, in the preparation of which not only the Presbyterian churches of Scotland but those of Ireland, Wales, and England have collaborated. The formation of a hymnbook by a committee, and especially by a number of joint-committees, is usually a ticklish business; but so successfully, on this occasion, have the joint committees labored, and so adroit was the recommendation to the assembly of the product of their toil by Mr. Cowan, the convener, that the new book was adopted there and then.

Two appointments were made which may be interesting to readers even as far away as America—the one to the Chair of New Testament in the New College, Edinburgh, to which a young professor in Canada, Dr. Manson of Toronto, was appointed, and the other to the Secretaryship of Foreign sions, for which Dr. Donald Fraser, known throughout the whole Chris world as a leader in the Student Chris Movement, is to be brought from his w in Central Africa. This removes from mission field one of the most distinguis of modern missionaries, but the gain stimulating enthusiasm among the youn home, will, in the judgment of the assen more than compensate for the loss.

Our Readers' Forum

Seconds Dr. Mills' Nominatio

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

I second Dr. Stocking's nomination of Charles S. Mills, D.D., for Moderator of National Council. By his record as pasto most important churches, as the efficient le in the reorganization of the Home Missio Society, as a wise and tactful servant at v ous times, as a member of the boards of rectors of our national societies and, above as the General Secretary of the Minist Boards, Dr. Mills has revealed unusual q ties of administration and leadership, w show his fitness for the moderatorship of coming session of the Council in the nati capital.

Dr. Mills, at personal sacrifice, has been is carrying forward one of the most const tive enterprises in our Congregational fel ship. Our church and ministers, and the w of our ministers, are indebted to him for leadership in building for all the futur foundation for the blessing and encouragen of the entire denomination. We hope his sociation will elect him a delegate to the C cil that he may be in legal line for this honor.

Worcester, Mass. Wm. A. Ric

Lewis T. Reed Nominated

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Now that nominations to the moderators of the National Council are in order, I ask privilege of bringing the name of Rev. Le T. Reed, Flatbush Church, Brooklyn, N. before the thought of the denomination that office. Facing as we do the import and divisive problem of the reorganization our societies, the coming Council require clear brain, a warm heart, and a strong h in the chairmanship. Those who know of steady growth of the Flatbush Church un Mr. Reed's leadership, of his effective work connection with the Pilgrim Fund, of his stinted service through the national socie and those of Greater New York, are convin that Mr. Reed possesses the poise and exp ence for the hour. Holland had in mind with qualities like Reed's when he wrote:

"... The time dema
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith, willing hands."

Rocky Mountain Rusticus

Child Labor

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Your usual good judgment is, I feel cert at fault in your comment on the so-called C Labor Amendment in the issue of June 25. have no word to say against the proper pro tion from factory slavery, whether caused the employers' greed or domestic necessity, I am proud to be a resident in a state wh has efficient laws to that end. On the p of that state, two years ago made the tar of attack by Mr. Lovejoy and his natio

(Continued on page 95)

The Church and Its Affiliated Institutions

A Partial Survey of the Field

By G. W. Nash, LL. D.

President of the Congregational Foundation for Education

STABLISHED by the National Council to make available to the colleges the re-rces of the denomination in fellowship and ney," is a statement concerning the Congre-ional Foundation for Education that has n repeated weekly in The Congregational- for, lo, these many months. Yet denomi-ional resources of "fellowship and money" e not swept in upon the colleges with suf-ent volume to alarm any of the presidents boards of trustees.

New movements are likely to gather strength wly, and especially so when these move-nts are revivals of former endeavors. There-e, the Foundation idea has been slow to ke" with Congregationalists. It was com-ined that a new society had "edged in" on portionment receipts at a time when efforts re being made to reduce the number of our sionary agencies. Some, yes many, churches church members exercised their Congre-ional right to revolt and withhold support. most instances there was no quarrel with institutions, but there was vigorous pro- against added machinery with which to the work of the denomination.

Meantime, the institutions were cut off from Education Society and had no succor save ough the Foundation. Had the Foundation n strangled as an unwelcome member of Congregational family, an important ele-nt in the educational life of the church uld have been slighted or altogether ignored. e church, also, would have drifted farther farther away from the schools of its nting. Although handicapped and embar-sed, the Foundation had no choice but to forward, "making bricks without straw," the hope that ultimately there would come understanding of the situation and a general position to help.

Progress has not been alarmingly swift, but gress there has been. Most certainly the rch and its institutions have been drawing ether in spiritual union.

Sacrificial service on the part of the Found-on trustees has helped many a hard-put titution to meet in a more satisfactory way difficult situations. Weeks and months of ient study have been given to the more dif-lt educational problems of the church, with ulting benefit to all concerned. Quietly, without blare of trumpet, the services have n so rendered as to improve the character our institutions, to open the way for their ger support, to assist them in effecting nomies in administration, and to inspire m with the necessity of being strongly and compromisingly Christian.

Record of Service

n a brief record only a few pictures of the undation's activities can be shown. But se should be sufficient to impel Congrega-nalists to revive their study of geography respects their educational enterprise.

Beginning in New England, we find the mis-nary work of the Foundation centered in o schools, namely, Bangor Theological Sem-ry and the American International College. th institutions have been aided with funds t have gone through the Foundation treas-y, the former having received practically the tire apportionment to institutions from the tes of Maine and New Hampshire. Support American International has of necessity been very modest and has been given through direct grants. Both institutions are carrying forward important enterprises. Bangor, es-pecially, is doing and for many years has done an unusual piece of work and on a very econom-ical basis. Increased endowment funds are imperatively needed for salary increases and physical requirements. It would be simple jus-tice to rally to Bangor's support in a generous way, and thus repay the debt the denomination owes this noble institution for its more than a century of splendid service.

Among the strong and independent institu-tions of Congregational planting in the New England area is Amherst, and today we are particularly grateful that this school trained for exalted service The Honorable Calvin Coolidge,—man of character, business sense, and high idealism—present President of the United States. Middlebury, a unique and up-standing institution of Pilgrim birth, also lo-cated in the New England field, has given to the nation Dr. Axton, chief among our army chaplains.

Missionary Training

In the Buckeye state is Oberlin College which has furnished one-sixth of all the Amer-ican Board missionaries in the foreign field today. Here also is Marietta that has given us General Charles G. Dawes, vigorous Vice-President, and Dr. Scott, chief chaplain of the American Navy. But the main work of the Foundation in Ohio has centered in Schauffler Missionary Training School, located in the heart of our great industrial area and dedicated to the work of training up women workers for the foreign groups. Many con-ferences with Schauffler's officials have been held with a view of encouraging the institu-tion in the proper development of its work. Cordial endorsement has been given to the movement now being carried on by the State Unions in co-operation with the Woman's Home Missionary Federation to provide the school with a much needed dormitory building. Schauffler has received through the Founda-tion apportionment, these past three or four years, upwards of $12,000.

Under the skilled leadership of President Paul F. Voelker, Olivet College has had a re-markable "come-back." The school was closed for a year, and all but abandoned. Mistakes of the past are now being corrected, endow-ment funds are being enlarged, and a college morale is being developed that promises per-manency for the future. One who is doubtful of the wisdom of maintaining the Christian colleges where tax supported schools have grown great, needs but to visit Michigan and Olivet to be convinced that the "Pilgrim Adventure" is not yet ended and that the work of training up Christian leaders in a distinc-tively Christian environment is still our task. Foundation officials, as representatives of the church, have been happy to aid in a small way the heroic struggle at Olivet.

Chicago Seminary

In the City of Chicago we have three theo-logical institutions—the Chicago Theological Seminary, the Union Theological College, and the Congregational Training School for Wo-men. Some of our people have had the temer-ity to suggest an amalgamation of the three under one board of trustees so as to avoid altogether any overlapping or duplication. While the spirit of "consolidation" is abroad among Congregationalists, the Chicago prob-lem may well have serious and earnest con-sideration at the hands of the denomination's educational agencies. But these institutions, as we have them today, are designed for dis-tinctly different types of service. The semi-nary has gone ahead in a really remarkable way these past two years. If doubt ever ex-isted concerning the wisdom of affiliated re-lations with the University of Chicago, that doubt has been completely dispelled. The ad-vantages of the arrangement altogether out-weigh its disadvantages. The new dormitories recently erected on the seminary campus and the new facilities about to be added by the university provide a center of training for our ministry that is attractive to the point of being termed ideal. College and training school are making substantial gains and are giving to the church correspondingly better and more far reaching service. The Founda-tion has aided these two schools in a small way with grants of money as funds were available.

Kansas Colleges

In Kansas we have two Congregational col-leges, and at the state conference two years ago one of the ministers spoke his enthusiastic endorsement of the two, combining schools and presidents in alliterative terms as "Washburn and Womer," and "Fairmount and Finlayson." The college with small purse and big worry is Fairmount, which has been running to ca-pacity for some time but it is serving a non-Congregational constituency. Because Fair-mount lacks adequate endowment, it has had unfavorable relations with accrediting agencies of the country. In the hope of making Fair-mount College the heart of a municipal uni-versity, a campaign was waged in Wichita this spring, but this proved unsuccessful. By a narrow margin the municipal university idea was rejected. Fairmount is, therefore, forced to go forward as usual in 1925-26, look-ing to one of four future possibilities, namely: (1) Increasing the endowment to approxi-mately a million dollars, (2) consolidating with Washburn College, (3) liquidating assets and establishing a foundation at the gates of the State University, or, (4) resubmitting the municipal university question with the hope of a more favorable result. Prior to the re-cent vote in Wichita, the Congregational Foundation for Education approved the mu-nicipal university idea, expressing the desire that in this move the ideals of the Christian college be preserved. The financial aid ex-tended to Fairmount through the Foundation during these recent years has been utterly in-adequate to the needs of the situation.

Northland, Redfield, and Pacific

Missionary aid to Wisconsin institutions, of which we have five, has been centered in Northland, the school of the open spaces around Lake Superior. Here, again, Founda-tion support has been meager and has had to be supplemented by the gifts of generous friends whom Dr. Brownell has found scat-tered throughout the country. The press of current needs has forced Northland to post-pone for the present the completion of the campaign for endowment and building expansion. Yet the school is just closing its most successful year.

Redfield College in the Dakotas is the only one of our institutions that is peculiarly the child of the German congregations. The German churches give loyal support to Redfield and are proud of the fact that the school is making improvement in educational standards and physical equipment. Friends of the institution are determined to make Redfield a high class junior college and theological school.

Pacific University has had serious difficulties to overcome during recent years, but has shown recuperative powers under the fine leadership of Superintendent Harrison, Dr. Clarke, and other trustees of the institution. Current deficits have been covered and foundations have been laid for more permanent support for the institution. Recently Rev. John F. Dobbs, D.D., of Malden, Mass., has been called to the presidency and enters upon his new term of office with every prospect of success. The Foundation has partially matured a pledge of support to Pacific covering a period of three years.

Other Service

Space prevents mention of the determined efforts of Fargo and Kingfisher alumni to revive their institutions; discussion of the hopeful situation with reference to securing cooperative Baptist and Congregational support of Billings Polytechnic Institute, "the school of the open door"; report on the favorable outcome of the study of Piedmont College which was conducted under Foundation auspices; plea for Thorsby Institute that would aid in replacing the school's central building, recently destroyed by fire; and study of a score of other situations intensely interesting and worthy the attention of Congregationalists. Nor can pride in the developments at Beloit, or Carleton, or Grinnell, or Knox, or Drury, or Colorado, or Pomona, or a number of our other affiliated schools be voiced. The picture is defective and incomplete. But enough has been shown to make clear that we have an important church task that we must in good conscience perform.

During the short period which has elapsed since July 7, 1922, the date when the Foundation was established by vote of the Los Angeles Council, officers of the organization have used such resources as were available for forwarding the important denominational work committed to them. As intimated already, chief aid to the institutions of Congregational affiliation has been through the avenue of personal service. Members of the board have given much time to problems that have weighed heavily on the struggling institutions but have had to leave practically untouched the fruitful field of service to the more permanent and prominent colleges and seminaries.

If society reorganization is effected, the Foundation idea must live on in some form. The schools, strong and weak alike, deserve large support from church and church people. When once this is understood, the resources that four years ago were presumed to be at hand for support of our educational enterprise will come to the surface and bring to realization the dreams of the strong men who proposed that the Congregational Foundation for Education be established.

Chicago, Ill.,
June 1, 1925.

They were talking of a sunny visitor who had just departed and of her courage and cheerfulness amid so many trials, when the small boy added his comment, "Yes, I like her! She just goes over bumps as if her heart had rubber tires."—Christian Register.

Wilshire Boulevard Church, Los Angeles

By Chester Ferris

"That's the Wilshire Tower." There it stands, its shoulder forward boldly, at night illumined, surmounted by a cross which leads the eyes heavenward. For miles the throngs hurrying along that crowded inter-city boulevard must consider it. Day by day, night by night, none can escape its challenge.

Twenty-five years ago, no building so mean, so ugly, so contemptible as the churches in Los Angeles, said Dean MacCormack. In the downtown district, thirteen story business houses and palaces of pleasure continue to dominate, but in this broad area of fashionable homes, the cross of Christ crowns the Church of God supreme above all competing claims.

Audacity—their history spells it out. Our Los Angeles Extension Society was allured by the large unchurched field. Were they welcomed? Far from it; refused, combatted. Yet they came. Lots were purchased; Dr. Frank Dyer was secured to lead the daring enterpise, his salary, the expense of the project borne by the fellowship. No call to preach the gospel to the poor; a display of the riches of Jesus to the families of the well-to-do. In the theater of the Ambassador Hotel, where throngs come and go, a congregation was gathered, the church was organized. A few months ago, Dr. Charles Aked came from Kansas City to lift his voice in the Forum Theater and add his might to the pulpit leadership. In all the annals of church extension where can there be found so stupendous a material achievement? An enrollment of 550 names; wealth and ability enlisted, sufficient to erect an auditorium to seat 1,400, housed in a structure excelled for stability and beauty by none in this city of colossal ambitions; and all in four years! That is Congregational statesmanship, that is an effectual leadership which marks the heroes of the faith.

As from the first, the preaching has received the emphasis, so now the first unit is the house of worship and proclamation. Two later units are contemplated, the Frank Gunsaulus building and the parish house. Not that other departments have been forgotten, such as a Church School, the League of Youth, the Women's Society, the Brotherhood—all flourishing. And in the present structure, there is included a lobby, and large social hall and assembly room with ample kitchen; also pastor's study and church office, and a choir room. Of romantic interest also is a charming little marriage chapel at the right of the foyer, the donor being Mrs. M. M. Beeman. The material is concrete, with the exterior softened and warm in tone. The architecture predominantly Gothic, the other elements mingle. A chime of bells, the gift of Mrs. R. A. McCormick, will ring out the message of aspiration. The cost of the first unit is about $250,000, while the land held by the church is valued at a full $100,000. There is keen desire for the other units of the magnificent structure, that the social and educational ministry may soon be given this large neighborhood.

The auditorium abounds in serviceable excellences which are worthy of study. Its length, with a gallery over the foyer, demands a voice of range and distinctness. The outer sides of the two lines of pews are bordered with pillars, beyond which are aisles that afford quiet entrance for people passing forward. As one enters the door, the eye is held by the silver cross at the far end, pulpit chairs behind it, long choir seats on the sides of the spacious platform, with a pulpit at either side near the congregation. The walls are light hued, pews in mahogany, ceiling bright with mingled colorings, side windows in somewhat brown effe memorial windows signifying the Ascens lifted up in the front wall, and a rose win over the gallery. Over the transept at the ri is a pipe organ of sweet tones.

An unmistakable universalistic note is ev where. You see it in the names of the sa enrolled on the borders of the ceiling, which clude Darwin, Pasteur, Brooks, Gunsau Monica, with others ancient and modern. is found in the wise sayings engraved on walls: by Jefferson, Aked, Brooks, Cadm Dyer, Jordan. There is a Shakespeare win dedicated to Frederick Warde, actor; a tal to Peace. Emphatic is the devotion to Pilgrim spirit; a window to John Robins even a boulder on the lawn at the front symbolize Plymouth Rock; a score of repli of the Scrooby pews.

Services of occupation and dedication be May 24, and continued through June 21. first day began with an early morning h Communion service; and beside the two us meetings for worship, there was an orato service in the afternoon. On May 31, th was included for the afternoon a musical f tival, and "Saint Cecilia Mass," by the Pom College Choir. That evening there was an unv ing service: (a) The Frederick Warde Shak pearian Window; (b) Bronze Tablet to Day when War shall be no more and to Edward B. Rhodes and Capt. Wilfred Lew (c) Bronze Tablet to the First Five Hund Members.

June 7 was known as Dedication Sund with Dr. Jason Noble Pierce of Washingt preaching morning and evening. In the aft noon there was a dedication of the Civic P pit, the gift of the Optimist Club, Los Angel with an address by Dr. David Starr Jord

The day of dedication was June 9, a we day chosen that there might be participati by the widest fellowship. There was a la attendance of ministers and delegations fr over the state. At 3 P.M. a Service of Frie ship. "Adventures in Understanding" were pressed by Dr. W. A. Brown of the Method Ministerial Union; by Dean MacCorma Episcopal; by Dr. David Starr Jordan, by D tors Aked and Dyer, while the venerable Jam M. Campbell offered the closing prayer. The was a delightful dinner. In the evening, vis ing ministers moved in processional to places the platform; Dr. Pierce gave the sermon; a formal delication was made by the two pasto Dr. Kenngott, Superintendent of the Conferen visiting clergy, and the congregation.

A dedication of childhood and youth was served on June 14; with a dedication of t organ in the evening. The next Sunday w made a service of consecration: the consecr tion of members; reception of members a Communion service; a missionary offering Thanksgiving; and in the evening a sermon Dr. Aked.

Meanwhile parallel to the use of the chur building continues the public services, Sunday in the Ambassador Theater. At this centr point, about a mile from the church are a gre assemblage for the evangel, and which m continue to build up the organization. A pro lem worthy great powers of leadership is t transfer of the congregations in the tw theaters to the church edifice. A great buildin too, with yet a modest membership to man A vast neighborhood needing the ministrie only as yet slightly convinced of that need.

The Pastor Says: In the warfare for th conquest of truth the intellect must continuall consolidate its positions, preliminary to furth advance movements, by bringing the whole li up even with itself.—John Andrew Holmes.

Vital Questions for Congregationalists
To Come Before the National Council

More Emphasis on the Spiritual have a growing conviction that the expres-ial endeavors of Congregationalism have out-the spiritual experience. In other words good works have gone beyond the place ere they are actuated by personal spiritual erience. I believe that manipulation and ead lift of institutional loyalty are the basis nuch of our activity today,—using the term nean the activity not only of the promoters of those who respond, as well. In other rds, it seems to me that we are trying to do much of an objective nature for the amount subjective spiritual experience which is curt in our constituency.

Believing this, every question propounds it-into a question of spiritual rather than prudential import. What will bring men personal experience with the Spirit of d? Will this man as moderator or that prove greater spiritual force? Will the representan of women on the Council move the Council the constituents to hunger and thirst after nteousness? What words can Congregation-ts speak which will cause a searching of rt among the Congregationalists themselves, the end that they may find Jesus? And so se questions reframe themselves in my mind.

feel so surely that a revival of personal re-ous experience is so essential that the speciadjustments of the machinery do not seem terrific importance. But in so far as they st be answered on their own merits I should that whatever led towards simplification uld in the end prove a clearer channel for moving of the Spirit of God into the rts of men.

May I refer to two questions specifically.
You ask, "What should Congregationalists on public questions? For example, social orm, interracial, international questions?" I almost tempted to answer, "Nothing—in sense of passing a resolution which pur-ts to be something which it is not." Coun-are inordinately fond of passing pronuncia-ntos in the name of this constituency or t, which pronunciamentos do not represent opinions held by large sections of the conuency which is claimed to be spoken for.
ngregationalists are so divided upon these estions that there can be no truly representae utterances which espouse this or that at-ude towards these vexed and dividing sub-ts. The "Resolution" business is getting y weak because it has been so loosely, not say unmorally used.

"How can the energies of our laymen be re largely utilized?" Again I find myself de-edly in a negative attitude towards the im-cations of this question. Instead of the word tilized" I should substitute the word "manip-ted." And if anything has tended towards sterile heart of much present-day religion is the manipulation of the laymen beyond the lm of activity which rises from reaction to rsonal experience of God in their hearts. And ainst further manipulation, until there be ch a revival amongst all of us that will make ward movements the resultant of inner spiral dynamic, I should take my stand.

Denominationalism as a machine has, in my nion, already gone beyond the limit of safety relying upon prudential incentives for its pport. The terrible need of the hour is to fill t the form which we already have with the irit. And this means personal religious ex-rience of the subjective type,—feeling the rstic Presence in our hearts.

You will not misunderstand, I am sure. I do not underestimate the part of religion which "good works" are. Nor do I underestimate the thrill which comes with a forward moving concern. Least of all do I impugn any of our devoted leaders—I respect them all.

But these are not substitutionary for the emotional element of mystical communion which we usually call personal religion. It is the lack of this personal religion which characterizes Protestant religion in America today. And it is the indispensability of this which to my mind stands across the way of all such considerations as those which you raise in your letter.

Rutland, Vt. EDWARD C. BOYNTON.

Continue Congregationalist as Separate Paper

The question of uniting the Missionary Herald and the American Missionary into one magazine, or uniting with The Congregationalist interests me greatly and after thoughtfully considering the matter would prefer to have the two missionary magazines united, continuing The Congregationalist a separate paper, as it is at presnt.

My mother loved The Congregationalist and was a constant subscriber and reader for many years, until she passed to the higher life in 1919, aged 95 years, 11 months, 20 days. And I look forward to the inspiration it never fails to bring, as it comes to my home week by week.

Most sincerely a friend to the best interests of all connected with the invaluable paper and its hosts of readers,

Holyoke, Mass. FLORENCE E. T. TOWNE.

The World Federation of Education Associations

Two thousand scholars from over 50 countries are about to assemble in Edinburgh to show how world peace and security can be reached in a far more effective way than by "preparedness." Were parliaments and local bodies or the world's capitalists to endow them with a tenth of the fabulous sums now devoted to war preparations, their work would soon reach the 5,000,000 teachers of the world and speedily change civilization. The misunderstandings, fear, and suspicions which breed wars would not be fomented by such history textbooks as German and French children are now studying, which give diametrically opposite stories of the origin of the World War. The vicious anti-Japanese propaganda of our yellow press and the war-scares everywhere would rapidly diminish. War, as scholars well know, is not an evil which is a biologic or economic necessity, but is a product of crooked thinking and false premises.

The World Federation of Education Associations had its origin in the World Conference held in 1923 in San Francisco attended by representatives from over 50 nations and called by the Committee on Foreign Relations appointed by the National Education Association in 1921. This had been preceded by various efforts toward international organization by European bodies and latest of all, by the action of the Netherlands Government at the suggestion of our government to call an official body for conference on education to meet at The Hague in September, 1914. Sixteen of the nations of Europe and Asia accepted the invitation, including all the great nations except Germany. On the day when the Conference should have opened, the German army had marched through Belgium and the world conflagration had begun to spread.

The federation will profit by the various preliminary steps that have led up to it and by the practical plan of work presented by the prize winner of the $25,000 prize offered by Mr. Raphael Herman of Washington for the best essay presenting an educational plan calculated to produce world peace. Dr. David Starr Jordan, it will be remembered, received this prize last January, and it was presented with great éclat at a notable public gathering. Dr. Jordan's plan was simple and consisted largely of outlining a large body of committees with suggestions as to how they were to carry out plans that could be adopted in every land with the necessary local emphases and modifications. It was an effort toward getting impartial truth presented where prejudice, tradition, and patriotic fervor have made for misunderstanding and rivalry. The Herman-Jordan plan will be presented to the biennial meeting of the Federation for incorporation into its plans.

Among the most interesting of the delegations will be that of thirty East Indian university men with Rabindranath Tagore, the eminent philosopher, teacher, and poet. Among the British notables will be the British Premier, Sir Michael Sadler of Oxford, the principals of the Glasgow and Edinburgh Universities, Lady Astor, H. G. Wells, and Patrick Geddes, biologist, architect, and perhaps the leading city planner of the world. He has brought geography and every science to bear on the human problem, beginning a generation ago by going to live with the whiskey-drinking, rough tenants of the slums near the Edinburgh castle, helping to transform them, rebuild or modify their dark, congested quarters, and doing such beneficent work that he was summoned to India to reorganize her cities.

Among the American delegates are President MacCracken of Vassar College and various other college presidents and superintendents of schools in great cities, Dr. Fannie Fern Andrews, Secretary of the American School Citizenship League, Miss Olive Jones, and other former presidents of the National Education Association. Dr. Arthur Dunn of Washington, D. C., will report progress on world civics. This will include the study of international contacts, of how far it is advisable to teach in elementary and higher education about World Courts, the League of Nations, etc.; how far literature and art may be of universal application, how geography should be taught to make different races interested in each other and how radio, victrola, and aeronautics may assist.

One of the most important sections of the biennial will be that on international relations and this will be discussed in relation to the teacher. The most important work of all will be the drafting of a permanent constitution and determining the policy of the Federation. The presiding officer will be Supt. Augustus O. Thomas of Maine. It is probable that American ideas will play a large part in fixing the chief outlines that this great influential body will follow. Its influence on Oriental as well as Occidental policies will be profound. Two of the ablest of its members are President Kuo of the Southeastern University, Nanking, and Dr. M. Sawayanagi of Tokio.

LUCIA AMES MEAD.

Anybody can be old and happy if he once learns the secret that happiness is not a matter of age but a state of mind. Enjoy things as they are.—Chauncey M. Depew.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

The Way Out

"Oh, forget it!" says one glib adviser. "Well, don't worry!" jauntily says another. But what can be disposed of so easily by his mentors, is a different matter for the sufferer. It is a burden on his soul, or a grievous unsolved problem through which he cannot see his way.

Forgetting, whether by any act of will or by plunging into excitements, is not the thing that is needed. Very frequently it only gives the unpleasant and perplexing things of life a chance to fester in the depths of the mind, as a forgotten sliver may fester in the flesh, and in time produce surprising and disastrous results. For to put a thought out of consciousness is not to put it out of mind.

If problems can be solved, then the occasion for worry has been removed. But if that cannot be done—if, on the contrary, a long uncertainty must be faced there is still a way out. You can get free from worry by lifting your mind and soul to a plane on which they will not be troubled by whatever life can bring. Worry is a state of mind.

In order to endure what we must, day by day, and to endure with triumphant spirit, we need to do more than believe in God. We need to practice the presence of God, to use again Brother Lawrence's memorable phrase. We need to bring ourselves to a realization of the fact that we live in God's surrounding and enfolding presence; we need to link up our lives, our fortunes, with the eternal life and fortune.

If you would cultivate this realization, set aside special times for giving your spirit deliberately and definitely to the seeking of personal relations with God's Spirit. Taking a time when you can be alone by yourself and free from interruptions, relax both body and mind. Assume, for this, a position of repose. A good way is to lie down on your back. Even though you have only five minutes, get rid, for those minutes, of the idea of hurry and give yourself over to the feeling of leisure. Relax all your tenseness. And then fill your mind with the thought that God is not far off: His Spirit is round about you.

It may help if you put the thought into words. Take some of the great sayings of the Bible, and say them over to yourself slowly and thoughtfully, changing an occasional word in order to make them entirely your own, and bringing the sublime thoughts together into brief sentences. I mean, make such sentences as these: The eternal God is my dwelling place, and underneath are the Everlasting Arms. . . . In him I live and move and have my being. . . . His grace is sufficient for me, for His power is made perfect in weakness; and I have given to Him my weakness, for whatever He will have, and whatever He will do. . . . My God is able to supply my every need. . . . I can do all things in Him that strengtheneth me. . . . I want to be filled with the peace of God that passeth all understanding, and with the joy of the Lord Jesus who was made perfect through suffering.

When you keep such thoughts in your conscious mind, and buried deep in your subconscious mind, not only in those chosen moments of quiet and repose but all through the day as you are at your varied tasks and in your differing situations, then, behold! fear and worry take their departure, and you find your life filled with a new peace and wondrous joy.

Closet and Altar

SOME MEANINGS OF ADVERSITY

For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.—2 Cor. 4: 17.

Whatever other functions pain may have, one is that it serves to fix attention. . . . We shall never grasp some of God's dealings with us unless we class them with that call of pain. Sometimes it were cruel to let us sleep; sometimes the only kindness is to wake us. And there are sorrows and failures and bitter disappointments which we can never hope to understand, until we realize they are God's stratagems to fix our attention on the things which matter.—G. H. Morrison.

If with sore affliction
Thou in love chastise
Pour thy benediction
On the sacrifice;
Then upon the altar
Freely offered up,
Though the flesh may falter
Faith shall drink the cup.

When in dust and ashes
To the grave I sink,
While heaven's glory flashes
O'er the shelving brink,
On thy truth relying
Through that mortal strife,
Lord, receive me, dying,
To eternal life. —John Bowring.

The simplest and most obvious use of sorrow is to remind us of God. It would seem that a certain shock is needed to bring us in contact with reality. We are not conscious of breathing till obstruction makes it felt. We are not aware of the possession of a heart till some disease, some sudden joy or sorrow, rouses it into extraordinary action. And we are not conscious of the mighty cravings of our half-divine humanity; we are not aware of the God within us, till some chasm yawns which must be filled, or till the rending asunder of our affections forces us to become fearfully conscious of a need.—Frederick W. Robertson.

Some things can only be got at by fire. There are depths in our consciousness that nothing can sound but pain, anguish, bitterness, sorrow. And these are not all bad; sometimes pain works its way down to our better nature, touches into gracious activity our noblest impulses, and evokes from our dumb lips the noblest prayer. Sometimes we see farther through our tears than through our laughter.—Joseph Parker.

We give thee thanks, Almighty God, for the bread of the body that perisheth, and we beseech thee to give us that bread by which man's higher life is fed, that we, laying hold of the life that never dies, may thereby be fitted for the troubles and burdens of this life, and look forward with joy to the higher and better life. So may we live in constant childlike trust in thee, as to believe, though we behold it not, that the end of all things is divine, and to catch the music to which this world is set by thee. Lead thou us from the lower life to the better life, that little things may lose their power to vex us, and in the midst of the troubles of this life, we may have the peace of God that passeth all understanding. Of thy loving-kindness and tender mercy hear us, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

George Dawson.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

The Way of Christ in Race Relatio

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic for July 26-August 1

BY HARRY THOMAS STOCK

Topic: The Progress and Achievements the Negro in America. Ps. 40: 1-5; Pr 22: 29.

1. In 1910 the Negro constituted about o seventh of the working population of Ameri How much of the hardest and most essent work is done by our black brothers?

2. One of the most apparent signs of pr ress is that which shows itself in more c for health conditions on the part of Negroes themselves. Hospitals are increasi young women are being trained as nurses, a Negro "quack" doctors are being replaced well-educated physicians.

3. A sign not only of material prosperi but of better moral conditions is the incre ing number of homes owned by Negroes b North and South.

4. "In community life and citizenship, N groes have made four steps in progress. Th have learned to develop effective organizatio of their own. They have grown rapidly community consciousness and consciousness social responsibility."—G. E. Haynes.

5. The Negro has always expressed his ligious life in song and in church membersh White people have often made fun of the N gro songs which seem somewhat weird a exuberant. But they express a real joy a trust in God which many white Christians la

6. There is a great change in the type ministers the Negroes are developing. The are hundreds of well-trained Negro ministe who measure up well with their white co rades. Certain large Negro churches carry as complete a round of church activities their white neighbors.

7. What the Negro wants is indicated the following extracts from The Trend of t Races, by George E. Haynes:

a. They have a yearning for educati which has not been satisfied.

b. They want to work and to hold th jobs on the same terms as other peop For equal work done they want to ceive equal pay with white men.

c. They desire a chance to play. Th are a happy people. This means go homes, some of the luxuries of life, go public opportunities for recreation.

d. They want a chance to vote and participate in government. In Chica one of the new municipal judges is Negro.

e. They want justice in a law court. Th want the same chance for a fair tri that a white man could get.

8. A most interesting meeting may be h by assigning in advance to various members the society parts of the Survey Graphic f March, 1925. Be sure to have some one t the story contained in the article by Dr. W E. B. DuBois, "The Black Man Brings H Gifts."

9. What can we do to help the Negro a vance further? Do we want him to have t same chance that we have in school, in bu ness, in a profession, in politics?

10. Discuss frankly: A public school o tained permission to use the swimming pool an athletic association for honor pupils. T association later refused to let a Negro b (one of these honor pupils) use the po Thereupon the white boys said, "George is o of us; if he doesn't swim, nobody swims Which was right?

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

The Council at Jerusalem

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for July 26
Acts 15: 1-11

The quibbler and heresy hunter began their rk at a very early stage in the life of the ristian Church and their trail has followed ough all its course like the vultures that vel in the path of civilization. Wherever a at and good work has been accomplished stickler for doctrine and form almost in- iably appears holding everything up to the t of his narrow ideas. Have converts been otized in the approved manner? Have they ctly the right conception of the atonement? ve they been scrutinized and search-lighted ore being admitted to the church—in an ndred and one ways the petty theologians l formalists ignore the glorious work of e and grace and establish new barriers to ritual progress. If these words be considered strong, if anybody doubt their truth, let n examine the history of the Christian urch in the light of this particular lesson.

A mighty work had been going on at Antioch l in the regions beyond. The apostles had oclaimed the Gospel as the power of God to salvation, and men had believed and had nd in their own hearts the witness to the perience of the new life in Christ. Surely t should have filled any normal person with , but certain people came down from Judea, ose religion consisted largely in form and nvention, and they immediately criticized this eat experience according to their small prej- ces. "Except ye be circumcised after the stom of Moses," they said, "ye cannot be ed." The sadness of this business was not rely its ignorance and narrowness but its esumption. That is always the trouble with norance and narrowness, they presume too ch. Surely Jesus was right in teaching that nility is the gateway to truth and the right ion and attitude. What right had these daizers to say who could be saved and who uld not be saved? Above all, how could they esume to limit salvation? But before we ndemn this too hastily, let us remember the ormous company of people who have followed em in this practice all through history and o are doing the same thing today.

What was to be done about the situation? was decided that Paul and Barnabas should up to Jerusalem and should consult the ostles and elders about the matter. The con- ation that had appeared at Antioch was mani- t also in this council. There were Pharisees o were sticklers for the details of the law of oses and who apparently found it impossible conceive the glory of the religion of the irit and the nature of the freedom that is Christ. Peter, who seemed to be himself at nes something of a Judaizer, spoke out very ainly and unequivocally upon this occasion. ry clearly and in the language that Paul nself might have used he put salvation for th Jew and Gentile upon the basis of the ace of the Lord Jesus. Where else can sal- tion be based? How difficult, however, it is r people to see that salvation is of the free ace of God! How hard it is to free the urch, in practice at least, from the idea that eeds, rituals, and forms are of primary im- rtance! This, of course, may be of great im- rtance as expressions of the Christian life, but surely we ought to be careful not to put secondary things in the place of the one great foundation and source of salvation and Christian life. The teachings of this lesson would revolutionize the life of the church in many ways if people would dare frankly to receive them and apply them.

At present Dr. Fosdick and others who share his outlook and opinions are being denounced in various quarters because of their refusal to regard the form of baptism as essential to Christian fellowship and church membership. We have no wish to enter into a controversy that primarily concerns our Baptist brethren but many people will find it impossible to see in such a question anything inherently different from the issue that these men from Jerusalem raised when they sought to make circumcision essential for Christian discipleship.

Is it not time that Christians everywhere began to get as far as possible from such emphasis upon forms and symbols as tends to obscure the living realities of truth and experience? Surely the only value of forms and symbols is in making the essential truths and experiences more real.

Church Union Coming

By Frederick L. Fagley

When the National Council meets at Washington, D. C., on Oct. 20, it will have before it the proposal to accept into its membership the representatives of the Evangelical Protestant Churches of America. If the Council votes to accept these representatives the churches of the Evangelical Protestant Church of North America will become to all intents and purposes Congregational churches in good and regular standing. The Executive Committee of the National Council has unanimously voted to recommend that this union take place and there is no prospect but what the vote will be unanimous.

This union of churches will be unique in American church history, for in entering the union neither body gives up anything it now possesses either in doctrine, practice, or worship, for each will retain in the local congregations the same freedom of belief and worship that they each have enjoyed in the years gone by. But each body will have the wider fellowship of the entire united body and each will draw from this larger fellowship inspiration and help in all the various lines of church work.

Dr. Carl A. Voss, pastor of the Smithfield Evangelical Protestant Church, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and one of the prime movers in bringing about the union, says that "Our churches, as non-creedal churches have been intent on safeguarding the self-government of the congregations and the freedom of their people in matters of faith and conscience. It is a matter of great satisfaction that our churches can avail themselves of the privilege of choosing their affiliations voluntarily and intelligently rather than being forced in association they did not desire."

This union will be the more easy because of the nature of the Congregational church fellowship.

Congregationalism in its historic development is co-extensive with the sincerest endeavors during the past three centuries for a higher culture and a nobler civilization on American soil. So successful have been the efforts of the leaders of these churches that the National Council is now composed of almost 6,000 congregations with approximately 800,000 souls to whom the Gospel is being preached in 22 languages. Ten theological schools and 40 colleges and seminaries, including some of the largest and most successful, are educating the young people and imbuing them with a keener sense of responsibility toward the church, the nation, and humanity. On the other hand, organized boards seek to promote religious life among all classes by building new churches, strengthening weakened ones, assisting congregations to pay their ministers adequate salaries, pensioning those who have become infirm, and functioning among the young and old by issuing publications of recognized standing.

The spirit of Congregationalism, like that of the Evangelical Protestant Churches, is not one of domination, but rather co-operation. Emphasizing independence of each congregation and holding sacred its rights of self-government, Congregationalism grants freedom in the choice of ministers and liberty in the development of religious views, but at the same time offers unbounded opportunities for mutual counsel and united service. The word Congregational is explanatory of its method of organization. It has no bishop like the Episcopal Church, no controlling presbytery like the Presbyterian Church, no dictatorial law-making body like the churches with synodical organizations, but at all times recognizes the individual congregation as the supreme body in authority. Eager to maintain these traditions, the congregations when united in associations, conferences, or even the National Council, never pass resolutions except in the spirit of advisory recommendations. Having within its circles groups of varied traditions, we find conservatives and liberals working harmoniously for the general good. Tolerant, free, truth-seeking, but with evangelical fervor they labor together for the establishment of the Kingdom of God.

Dr. Charles E. Burton, the General Secretary of the National Council, in speaking of the proposed union, says:

There are about 10,000 communicants in the Evangelical Protestant Churches, which are located in two centers, for the most part, namely, Pittsburgh and vicinity, and Cincinnati and vicinity. It happens that in both of these regions Congregational churches have been few. These churches will add strength to the Congregational body. They will bring an enrichment of life in their thought and religious devotion. Moreover, there is cheer and inspiration connected with the simple fact that another group has chosen to be a part of our free association of Congregational Churches. Incidentally, this denomination has chosen a step which might well serve as an example. There are many small denominations which might seek organic unity with some larger body of similar polity. This can be done in a way which will surrender no part of the values of past history and life but which will add much through the wider association. Why should not many another small denomination retain its own name and at the same time attach to it the name of another, thus finding its larger self in giving itself to wider fellowship?

To Port

By G. Harrison Riley

Though seas run high, my barque be frail,
Uncharted seas serene I sail.
I cannot see the harbor where
The water smooth, the sky so fair
Is waiting overseas for me,
Yet well I know that it must be.

Headwinds and storms are as a test
To prove the sailor's very best;
So on I sail by Faith upheld,
By mighty force of Faith impelled,
Though seas run high, my barque be frail,
Uncharted seas secure I sail.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Biography and Autobiography

WOODROW WILSON, by WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE (Houghton Mifflin. $5.00). Mr. White has written an entertaining book which has the serious purpose of presenting a frank and impartial appraisal of Woodrow Wilson, "the man, his times, and his task." Probably the book has been written and is being read too near to the lifetime of Mr. Wilson fully to satisfy most readers. Those who idealize him as an infallible superman will not enjoy the numerous passages which record his faults, his mistakes, and his failures. His enemies are not likely to applaud the pages, which are many, that present Woodrow Wilson as a man of so much ability, so many virtues, such high ideals, and such personal charm that, if one takes it all in as literal truth, one does so with a sense of awe. Men have hated and idealized that mixed and amazing personality too intensely and too blindly to appraise him fairly in this generation.

Mr. White admits that, influenced by those who praised Mr. Wilson most, he has presented him personally in a more favorable light than he could have done had he followed his own personal impressions of the man. But Mr. White has made a valuable contribution as a reporter of facts—by no means a complete record, but a broadly illuminating one.

It is significant that he finds so much to say both for and against Mr. Wilson, and that out of it all he raises a figure that stands as an interpreter of government, a crusader for progress, and a spokesman of humanity's longing for justice and international peace.

He does not say it, but Mr. White helps us to see that after a man has passed away we do well to note his faults only to understand his failures and to avoid them in ourselves; and that we do well to exalt his virtues and his contribution to the advancement of mankind, for the purpose of conserving the gains which the man has achieved in vision and in progress.

REMEMBRANCE OF THINGS PAST, by JOHN R. HOWARD (Crowell. $3.25). Here is a book that in addition to its inherent appeal will have peculiar interest for the Congregational constituency. The story of a veteran editor and publisher, who was intimately associated with Henry Ward Beecher, it contains much authentic light and revealing anecdote concerning the great preacher and the background of his ministry and career.

Born in Brooklyn, in the days before the Civil War—in 1837, to be exact—the author's memories cover a period of over four score years of amazing changes and developments and most interesting contacts. His father was one of the chief founders of Plymouth Church, and relations with the Beechers, both Henry and Harriet Beecher Stowe, were intimate apart from the publishing relationship of later years. The author was also closely associated with General Fremont, and has much interesting comment upon that soldier and Presidential candidate. He served as Fremont's aide and vigorously defends the military and administrative prestige of his chief.

We commend this volume for summer reading. Its 400 pages will afford their greatest delight if read leisurely and re-read at random. It is the sort of book that one can pick up and open at any page only to become immediately attracted, and it is as instructive for its naïve picture of a period that it is becoming increasingly hard to visualize as for its enchanting glimpses of notable personalities.

MY DUEL WITH THE VATICAN, by ALFRED LOISY. Authorized translation by RICHARD WILSON BOYNTON (Dutton. $3.00). Alfred Loisy's name is permanently added to the list of those who have attained distinction in the battle with ecclesiastical intolerance. The significance of this Autobiography of a Catholic Modernist, which first appeared in France in 1913, is, as the translator indicates, not merely in its relation to the Roman Catholic Church, but in relation to the struggle everywhere between religious freedom and intolerant authority. The bigoted and narrow fundamentalism that makes illegal the teaching of evolution in Tennessee, Protestant though it profess to be, is not inherently different from the Roman intolerance and persecution that drove an honest and high-minded scholar like Loisy beyond the pale. The question primarily is not that of Loisy's views, but of his character as man and scholar, and of his freedom. He loved and reverenced all that was good in the church that drove him out.

In his duel with the Vatican Loisy temporarily lost. In fact the Roman hierarchy seems in the ascendancy now in many lands and Roman Fundamentalism seems to have all the power of Protestant Fundamentalism reinforced by the power of unity of organization and ability to enforce its decrees. But the duel has not ended. Loisy's struggle will not be in vain, any more than the struggles of others whom Rome has striven to suppress. If Protestants could only be made to see the folly of fighting Roman assumptions of authority and Roman intolerance by Protestant intolerance, and could adequately champion the full freedom of scholarship and inquiry in religion we should be a great deal nearer the triumph of simple goodness and the sincere love of truth.

Critical discussion of Loisy's opinions is not possible here, but one must pay a tribute to the man himself. He appears as a man of simple candor and dignity, with the courage and honesty of the scholar, rather than the vindictiveness of the rebel, or the undue assurance of the extreme individualist. He has at once the modesty and the boldness of the man whose deepest quest is truth. His autobiography will be recognized as a book of permanent value.

Books of Self-Revelation

WHY I AM A SPIRITUAL VAGABOND, by THOMAS L. MASSON (Century Co. $2.00). The humorist is oftentimes found to be a man of intense religious spirit. Life has seemed at times one of the most truly religious papers in America, and particularly was this true during the many years that Thomas L. Masson was its editor. Latterly Mr. Masson has been an editor of the Saturday Evening Post. It is a significant and hopeful sign that a man whose place has been so important in journalism should be moved to write a book so wholly dominated by religious interest and experience as this of Mr. Masson's.

Basil King in discussing Mr. Masson's book in the New York Post has remarked that there is a slight lack of correspondence between the title and the contents. He points out that spiritually the author is anything but a vagabond, that in reality, far from being a wanderer or irregular, Mr. Masson has a very explic experience and definite ideas and that he know exactly where he is going, and cares very muc about it.

Mr. Masson probably describes himself as "vagabond," because he feels that the individu ality of his views and experiences marks hi as a sort of irregular. But this overemphasi on "vagabondage" seems to us a weakne rather than a strength. It manifests itself i a rather artificial bit of by-play in which th author is represented as writing on behalf the "Committee for America" the "Society Spiritual Vagabonds," and it gives an unfavo able impression at the outset that fortunatel is in contrast with the solid value of the boo When one finds an author announcing that hi book "is not for mollycoddles, cowards, inte lectuals, or egoists," he is apt to expect some thing flamboyant and self-conceited rather tha a record of quiet conviction and of the attain ment of peace. Conventional, dead-level, tru to-type experience is the sure sign of stagnatio in religion. Vital religious experience is a ways dynamic. We welcome such books a Mr. Masson's. Spiritual "vagabondage" of thi sort has a symbolic, as well as an inherent value.

UNMAILED LETTERS, by JOSEPH H. ODEL (Dutton. $2.50). When Dr. Odell attained con siderable popular fame by his much-quote article in the Atlantic Monthly during the wa entitled Peter Sat by the Fire Warming Him self, he was already known to a more intimat circle as an essayist of marked individualit and literary skill. These Unmailed Letter have a peculiarly personal aspect. At least the reveal the author's personality in many judg ments and relationships. Men, books, events settled convictions, and impressions of th moment, are all discussed in the leisurely an unconventional way that one would expect i good letters. It is a book to be read in muc the spirit and manner in which it has bee written, and its value will be appreciated b those who recognize that good judgment an the right attitude toward life are develope most surely by contact with those whose judg ment and attitude are sound.

A YEAR OF PROPHESYING, by H. G. WELL (Macmillan. $2.00). Fifty-five articles on cur rent events, questions of the day, and othe matters, representing a year of journalisti writing by Mr. Wells. Strange to say the nov elist-historian whose readiness and versatilit have seemed unlimited, has been somewha stumped by this journalistic stunt. "I ha never realized before," he says, "the tremendou hardship of periodicity." In the concludin article, which Mr. Wells suggests may be re garded as a preface, will be found some inter esting criticism of the present and of Mr. Wells own literary product. No preacher ever em phasized more the transitoriness of life and th hope of a better world. Incidentally Mr. Well abandons his year of journalism with the re flection that if there is anything worse tha periodic journalism "it must be preaching an having to go into a pulpit with half an hour' supply of uplift fresh and punctual every Sunday."

Any book mentioned in these columns may b obtained through the Pilgrim Press Book Stores Boston or Chicago.

Essays and Fiction

AYS IN THE ROMANTIC POETS, by SOLO-RANCIS GINGERICH (Macmillan. $2.25). ngerich is Associate Professor of English University of Michigan. In this volume says on Coleridge, Wordsworth, Shelley, yron, with an excellent introduction in the author discusses the nature of the oet and his function in expressing truth. o defines the terms necessarily used in ing the philosophical tendencies in the studied. Much the greater part of the is devoted to Coleridge and Wordsworth, ne entire work is characterized by the that comes only from mastery of the and power of sympathetic interpretation.

ND PAT, by ANSLEY BAKER BLADES ford Co.). Reflections upon state and from an anti-stand-pat point of view. chapters on Politics, The Public Press, usiness, The Social Gospel, etc., we like nat on The Hierarchy. It is an effective ent of the problem of the church, and will be wide agreement with the author's ent that "the greatest question for the tant Church to solve today is how to sh an effective organization and at the time eliminate the evils of the stand-pat chy."

GREAT GATSBY, by F. SCOTT FITZGERALD oners). While creating the character of y, Mr. Fitzgerald has done something than portray a character that will in-ly remain in the mind of his readers. He with a few deft strokes, also presented pleasure-loving people in a most un- revealing light. "They were careless —they smashed up things and creatures hen retreated back into their money or vast carelessness—and let other people up the mess they had made." About such and those others who attended, in droves, ay parties of a spender like Gatsby but whom none could be found to attend neral, this book is written. From them out the figure of Gatsby. He is a man nably wealthy from ill-gotten wealth, who ains at bizarre parties hordes of people, of whom do not even know him, who has about himself a tale of family and educa-vhen he is really the son of shiftless farm But whatever else he lacked he had nation. This creates for him a wonderful ace of which one of the daughters of the ss rich is the central figure. It seems nly real thing in the fantastic events lead to the final tragedy of the story. sual Mr. Fitzgerald has written exceed-well about people it hardly seems worth ng about at all.

ST YEAR'S NEST, by DOROTHY A. BECKETT ELL (Appleton. $2.00). That youth will to youth and that a barrier of years can be overcome are the conclusions reached is well-written novel in which the author sses the marriage of a woman with a man y years younger than herself. Youth as-itself when the man falls in love with ife's daughter and this creates an unlovely tion which is handled with frankness and unpleasant realism, but which has a what wholesome ending.

E SKYROCKET, by ADELA ROGERS ST. S (Cosmopolitan). This is a novel of wood and its heroine is a star in the world. A most extraordinary world it the inhabitants are half as stupid, as ex-gant, as showy, and as egotistical as the or portrays them.

E NINTH OF NOVEMBER, by BERNARD KEL-ANN (McBride Co. $2.50). This transla-of a book by an able German author leaves s readers a remarkable impression of Ber-lin during the last of the war. Its style is a disjointed, staccato flashing of a series of pictures, admirably adapted to show as the author wishes whole series of events and persons marching forward during those awful days. Horror and pity for the common people of Germany accompany the reading.

THE COBWEB, by MARGARETTA TUTTLE (Little, Brown. $2.00). The author of this book, herself the daughter of an editor, has given us the daughter of an editor as the heroine of her story and the editor himself as one of the principal figures in it. These and a young woman reporter are much more alive than the other folk in the tale which will be found interesting but not of unusual merit.

CHOICE, by CHARLES GUERNON (Lippincott. $2.00). The title of this book suggests the importance of decision. It is somewhat surprising to find that the characters in it seem rather to drift or be driven. However, Mr. Guernon knows how to tell a story. Helen, the heroine, leaves home to study music in Italy because she finds she is about to become a mother. She also lives for a time in the Latin Quarter of Paris and marries an English lord. Experiences in these environments are described in an interesting way.

THE MYSTERY OF REDMARSH FARM, by ARCHIBALD MARSHALL (Dodd, Mead. $2.00). The mystery of this story centers about the disappearance of a child. But for most readers who love mystery stories it will be found much too long and to move much too slowly. The author is a novelist of distinction whose work may be commended to those who still take time to read novels of substantial length.

THE SLEEPER OF THE MOONLIT RANGES, by EDISON MARSHALL (Cosmopolitan. $2.00). The lure of Alaska and adventuring are well exemplified in this book and make the reader almost forget the peculiar unconvincing plot about which the story is woven. Two men in love with one girl and the testing of their manhood by the frozen Northland, by contact with the Indians and by their experiences during the eruption of a volcanic peak in Alentian Range form the basis of the story.

Historical Studies

THE NINETEENTH OF APRIL, 1775, by HAROLD MURDOCK (Houghton Mifflin. $2.00). It is unfortunate that this volume was not reviewed prior to the recent celebration at Lexington and Concord of the 150th anniversary of the events which it discusses. It is, however, a book of permanent historic value consisting of three chapters: (1) Historic Doubts on the Battle at Lexington, (2) The British at Concord, and (3) Earl Percy's Retreat at Charlestown. The first two chapters were read before the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1916 and 1922 respectively, and the third before the Colonial Society in 1921. The volume is beautifully produced and finely illustrated.

THE CONQUEST OF THE SOUTHWEST, by ELTON RAYMOND SHAW (Shaw Pub. Co., Berwyn, Ill. $1.50). This book discusses the charges that the colonization of Texas and the revolution against Mexico were the results of a movement to increase slave territory. The question hinges largely on the actions and motives of President Andrew Jackson, and the author's conclusion is that Jackson, though utterly unscrupulous in pursuing his ends, was in fact moved by the desire for expansion and the fear of European influence in seeking the annexation of Texas and not by the purpose of extending slave territory. But is it not possible that Jackson's motives were mixed, and included the latter? The author gives a survey of views pro and con and adds to his work a useful bibliography.

Books for Boys and Girls

LITTLE AUNT EMMIE, by ALICE E. ALLEN (Lippincott. $1.75). Only the title of this book prevents it appealing as much to boys as to girls, for while "Little Aunt Emmie" will delight the hearts of girls her nephew "David" measures up to a boy's requirements in a hero. Their life and adventures in the Adirondack mountains and the Indian legends which become a part of the story itself make it a book alive with interest for imaginative children. An unusually good book for children of from eight to fourteen years.

TOUCHDOWNS, by LAWRENCE PERRY (Scribners. $1.75). A reprint of a series of football stories which seem to have attained a very wide reading.

STORMIE THE DOG STEALER, by ROBERT F. SCHULKERS (Appleton. $1.75). Another of the books in which "Seckatary Hawkins" and his boys' club figure. The disappearance of the dogs of the neighborhood makes a mystery the solving of which is attractive for boys.

BASES FULL, by RALPH HENRY BARBOUR (Appleton. $1.75). A capital boys' story of boarding school life and sports. Three boys, who call themselves the "Triumvirate," join forces and some interesting exploits result. Baseball excitement runs through the story and the disappearance of the father of one of the boys is a mystery.

THE WHITE GIANT AND THE BLACK GIANT, by ANNIE W. FRANCHOT (Dutton. $2.00). An attractive book for little children with quite enchanting illustrations by James Gamble.

TOM OF PEACE VALLEY, by JOHN F. CASE (Lippincott. $1.50). The author who is the Editor of the Missouri Ruralist has dedicated this book to "The Farm Boys of America" and surely no one else could make a contest in the growing of corn of quite such absorbing interest. No farm boy, or any other boy, could help but be intrigued by the adventures he has woven about it. The book doesn't get off to a flying start but after the first few pages the interest never lags.

ANN OF SEA CREST HIGH, by ISABEL HORNBROOK (David McKay Co.). A lively story of high school life in which Ann is a leading spirit. There are some thrilling adventures on sea and land. The Halifax explosion disaster comes into the story, and some of the incidents are in and around Gloucester, Mass. A wholesome, interesting story for older boys and girls.

Children in Mission Lands

LITTLE CHILDREN OF MISSION LANDS, by MARY ENTWISTLE (Doran. $1.75). The author of this charming collection of tales for young children has previously written many stories for the missionary education of children, some of which reappear in this volume, along with many new ones. The primary leader will here find stories with which to introduce her hearers to the children of all the world. The stories are grouped in three parts: Babies of East and West, Babies of North and South, and Island Babies. Miss Entwistle has woven a multitude of interesting facts about the lives of these far-away children into stories that will both delight and instruct her readers, or those who listen to the tales as told. This is one of the best books of its type we have seen for home reading or class work.

THE LOST TREASURE OF UMDILLA, by ANNIE M. BARNES (Revell. $1.50). Mollie and Billy are taken by their father, a missionary secretary, on a trip to Africa. What they see there decides Molly to become a missionary herself. The story has a dark background of primitive savagery and degradation which is made the basis for the missionary appeal.

WITH THE CHILDREN

When Patsy Came to Camp

By Daisy D. Stephenson

PART II

While Connie tearfully searched for her treasured wrist watch, Judy and Pinky quarreled as usual while on a botanical stroll up the creek. Judy turned her ankle and started a rock slide, doing a Humpty-Dumpty that resulted in a skinned nose and ditto feelings. Cherry Bounce groaned with the jumping toothache, looking so depressing with her bandaged jaw that the Angel was busy ministering and comforting.

The girls took the responsibility of supper, which was no merrymaking whatever. Judy slopped hot grease over her right hand and was adorned with a bandage similar to Cherry's. Jane, head cook, elected an easy repast of beans and cold salmon, though every one knew Pinky loathed salmon; but, as Judy coldly hinted, it would do Pinky no harm to diet overnight.

"I feel so queer," sighed Eve as they gathered listlessly about the improvised table under the trees. "Maybe it's a premonition, or maybe I'm sort of homesick. Ooh, the vile thing!" she shrieked, jiggled the table, and spilled hot tea on Judy's remaining good hand, as a queer spider dropped from the ozone into her beans.

"I'd thank you to control yourself a little when you're sitting next a cripple!" flamed Judy, nursing her new wound. "I wish I'd never come to camp! I wish—"

"Hello, everybody! Anything left for a hungry hobo?" The clear, gay voice worked like a charm on the sick and sad. Up sprang the campers en masse, and with squeaks of surprise and affectionate outbursts welcomed the newcomer with acclamation.

"Patsy Price! You're an answer to prayer!"

"Patsy de-ear, where did you drop from?"

"You didn't come on the morning train, darling?"

"What a perfectly stunning blue suit. Made it yourself, of course!"

All these exclamations and interrogations were powerless to eclipse Patsy, who hugged them severally and collectively, beaming on them with her happy smile, blue eyes seeing everything and everybody at its best as usual.

"What a heavenly place to camp! You lucky things, to have it two weeks ahead of me. No, I didn't ride the rails. I motored up, if you please! The loveliest thing happened, proving Friday the thirteenth is all silly superstition." Patsy had said this while greeting the Angel and then Cherry Bounce, who had forgotten her acrobatic tooth at sight of her old favorite.

"Beans!" Patsy glowed over her plate as though it had been filled with caviar or even ambrosia. "And I just know Jane made these popovers."

Jane tried not to look prideful. "You taught me, but mine don't pop like yours."

"They're perfect," and Patsy buttered another while the rest hung on her every motion. "But I was telling you how I happened to motor up instead of lassoing that sunrise train tomorrow. One of our nicest neighbors happened to mention that her nephew was coming to take her up Storm Canyon to a ranch, and in about five seconds I was as excited as a pinwheel. I knew the Double B ranch must be close neighbor to Amadahi Camp. And when young Mr. Jarboe came, he insisted that I flivver along with them—what's the matter?"

A sort of villain's "Ha!" had escaped the Infants, and all the rest reflected their feelings silently but plainly. Only Patsy could have gleaned details from the chorus of disgusted enlightenment; but far from being dejected over the facts as set forth baldly, she appeared still more radiant.

"Oh, that's all in the past!" she assured them. "Old Mr. Jarboe had good reason to feel sore at city campers. The way that crowd of girls imposed on them last summer! Left their camp looking like a dump, put on airs, and ended up by carelessly setting fire to a cabin by the lake,—oh, an accident, of course."

"But that sign—" began Jane who dared not hope yet.

"It doesn't mean us," shrugged Patsy lightly. "I told him my friends were birds of a different feather and he said he'd take my word for it. You see Andy, the son, has been taking an extra course at the college and is quite a pal of Mother's, so—"

"Who is the ghost girl?" demanded the Infants.

"You mean Harmony. That's the orphan cousin of Andy's. Old Mr. Jarboe adopted her and adores her. She has been very sick and is just beginning to want to ride her pony again. Then there's the housekeeper, a sister of Mr. Jarboe—"

"My conscience!" gasped Connie. "How did you get all their family history?"

Patsy's blue eyes widened. "Well, Mrs. Fields, our neighbor, often talks about them, and we arrived at the ranch at high noon, and they wouldn't let me go without dinner. So I felt quite acquainted when I left. I told Harmony we'd come over in a body and visit her—"

"Did you actually get by that Cerberus dog?" Theo almost whispered.

Patsy absently reached for the marmalade. "What—oh, that handsome big police dog! Senator! Once he got rid of a few bass barks, he was a real wagger. Of course, you need a good watch dog on a ranch." Trudie murmured something about "Senator being the speaker of the house."

Pinky was inquiring with a lift of golden eyebrows, "But you haven't been coming from the horn—Double B ranch all afternoon, Patsy! Did you get lost?" Patsy's sweet face was the hue of wild roses in a mountain glen. "On purpose," she confessed guiltily. "It's something I've been dying to do all summer, girls! Just stray off and make believe I was a gypsy! I've dreamed of cool mountain streams and trails through slim, cool aspens, and rocks trimmed in gray lichen these hot days till I was sort of obsessed, I suppose. Ferns washing their faces in brooks that went singing over mossy stones —sounds silly," she owned, though the Angel hugged her understandingly.

"Well, Andy said he'd bring my suitcase over after supper, so I started on my quest as free as a squirrel that's been in a cage. And I found a fairy trail in a twinkling. I knew I would! Of course it simply said 'Woodland Park' but that didn't fool me. The minute I heard a hermit thrush singing way off—I knew I was in the Never-Never Land."

Theo and Trudie had abandoned food and were holding hands and feverishly trying to keep still.

"Sure enough, the path tiptoed through aspens and Mariposa lilies and I came s on Peter Pan's tree house!" Patsy's eyes dancing stars. "I heard 'peck peck' abov I called softly, 'Hello, Peter Pan!'" She pa to sip the cool spring water and Theo a in a hushed tone, "What happened?"

"Peter wasn't in, but Wendy was, and a me to come up. She said Peter and the Lost Boys were off on a pirate hunt (car campers, probably), and she was typing a story of their adventures. She was so de looks a little like Mother. So I climbed u the adorable bird-house, and what do think? We had tea together and she act let me hold the last pages of the new book, when I told her how wild you all are over beautiful stories for girls—"

The Infants had to interrupt or e "Patsy! You don't mean Margaret With author of 'Fay of Forest Castle?'"

Patsy assured her fascinated audience it was not too good to be true.

"The Jarboes and the ranger worship and they built that little house to surprise when she came from abroad in June."

Judy clasped her wounded hands wit pain. "Patsy, you darling of the fairies! you suppose I could kiss the spot where she trod or look at her through Linda's field gla

"Lots better, Judy," laughed Patsy. "W I told her how we made a play of her Co bine Cabineers, and acted it in the sprin help establish that camp for the poor child she simply gave me the keys of the cou just as the Jarboes did. I told her we'd p tice up a little and give the play in her hon announced Patsy serenely. "There's a pe setting for it near her tree house. Think of senting it outdoors to the author, girls! Ch could I have another curly cruller? They're licious."

When Andy Jarboe and his moon-fl cousin rode over at dusk, they found a jo bevy gathered about a cherry campfire, an irresistible was the combination that the cir circumference widened to admit two more. tunately for the lone man, "that tall, g looking Scout with the manners" appe astonishingly to inquire whether anyone lost a wrist watch. As Connie claimed property amid a hubbub of congratulation, Eagle Scout spied the most recent arriva camp.

"Patsy! When did you blow in?"

Smilingly Patsy introduced "my small cou Dick, of Fort Collins" to her amazed rades. "Only going to stay a week?" ejacul Dick in dismay. "Well, we'll cram a lot int How would you all like to have supper wit tomorrow evening?" Dick was hospitality self, even extending the courtesy to the r visitors, and there was not one regret to the unanimity of an animated acceptance.

"Takes Patsy to smooth out the lines of ca decided Pinky as she and Jane groped a their tent for a flashlight at bedtime. P had been urged to share all sleeping quar so the Angel had offered her snug slee porch by way of compromise.

"She'll be equi-distant, so we'll all have h pointed out the Infants sleepily.

"Isn't it grand to have so many good t to look forward to?" Connie was daubing the cold cream. "A regular Forest of A with a live author in the foreground, a at Scout camp—"

nd horseback rides with the Jarboes," put dy, who had never laid a hand on a horse r life, but whose ambition—to "mount a er"—was nearing realization.
urry up and go to sleep!" ordered Jane the last tent that stood "Tit, tat, toe, three row." She added, "Because the alarm is set for six, and I'm going for a plunge rboe's lake, sink or swim, solo or in a
."
e're with you, Jane!" came back Patsy's
oice from the State House porch.
less her heart!" Cherry Bounce was eas-erself into her cot at the rear. "Took that to poultice my jumpy tooth so a body leep."
's so different with Patsy in camp," wrote ngel in her home letter that night. "Her face is an index to her nature—good will
. She wins them all from grandpap to ose with her magnetic smile that reflects for all the world. And after all, what is a more wonderful Open Sesame to human s?"

(All rights reserved)

rthern New England School of Religious Education

e 10th annual session of the Northern New nd School of Religious Education will be at the University of New Hampshire, am, Aug. 10-17. As this year marks a tone in the school's history, the strongest am of the decade has been planned. The culum offers over 30 courses: five in Bible
o Biblical Geography—nine in Methods, in Missionary Education, two in Music, in Psychology, Week Day Religious Education, Daily Vacation Bible School, Story Telling, Drama and Pageantry, Social and Recreational Leadership, Supervision and Training of Teachers, How to Teach Religion, Modern Church Organization, the city end of it being taken by Prof. Gaylord S. White of Union Theological Seminary, and the rural by Malcolm Boyd Dana, son of Rev. Malcolm Dana, Superintendent of Rural Work for the Congregational Home Missionary Society. These two courses, as well as one on "Helping the Church to Greater Missionary Activity," are of interest to pastors and church officers. Emphasis will be placed on the women's organizations, new plans for service and courses of study being offered.

A new feature of this year is the two-year preparatory course for the younger teen age. This group will have its own leader for recreation.

The special tenth anniversary observance takes place on Friday, Aug. 14. An alumni luncheon, reunions of all the classes, short addresses by class representatives, a resumé by the dean of the ten years of progress, and the principal address by Dr. M. S. Littlefield of New York City, for six years a member of the faculty, will be the features.

Other Congregationalists on the faculty besides those mentioned above are Dr. C. W. Dunham, Rev. C. B. Bare, Mr. A. H. Merritt, Rev. F. H. von der Sump, and Rev. W. D. Hoag. The New Hampshire Congregational Conference has strongly commended the school.

Of the student enrollment last year 209 were Congregationalists from New Hampshire and the other New England and Middle Western States. Of the board of 18 trustees, 12 including the dean are Congregationalists, and more than one-third of the faculty are of that fellowship.

The University of New Hampshire, with its beautiful surroundings, spacious campus, and well-equipped buildings makes this an ideal place for holding the school. The proximity to the famous scenic New Hampshire seacoast makes it possible to combine pleasure with study and the small expense, $13 covering room, board, and tuition, brings it within reach of all. Applications for enrollment and for fuller information should be addressed to the dean, Nellie Towne Hendrick, Nashua, N. H.

Bross Prize to Dr. Macintosh

The Bross Prize of $6,000 has been awarded by the trustees of Lake Forest College to Dr. Douglas Clyde Macintosh of Yale for his book on The Reasonableness of Christianity. The judges were Hugh T. Kerr, LL.D., pastor of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh, Pa., John Macintosh, D.D., professor of the Philosophy of Religion in McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago, and Shailer Mathews, Ph.D., professor of Historical and Comparative Theology in the University of Chicago.

Matins

By Vlyn Johnson

Dear Christ, this dawn I ask of thee
To walk this coming day with me;
To be the honored, trusted guide
Who keeps so closely to my side
That I shall give most gentle heed
To every thought and word and deed.
Then every life that touches mine
Thine Unseen Presence will divine.
And so in turn will seek to share
This nameless glory in the air.
And each will leave a shining path,
A glowing, loving aftermath,
Because this day, with Christ, my Lord,
My soul walked forth in sweet accord.

Northern New England School of Religious Education

Tenth Anniversary Session, August 10-17, 1925

University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H.

A SCHOOL GROUP

Thirty Courses of Study, Expert Instructors, Christian Fellowship, Delightful Recreation. Total Expense Thirteen Dollars.
For Information, Programs, etc., write to the Dean, Nellie Towne Hendrick, 18 Wellington St., Nashua, N. H.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

From West to East

CALIFORNIA

Rialto Travels Alone Again

Rialto is a prosperous little city among the orange groves. But there are several churches, and our own thought they might go more strongly in co-operation with some of the others. So they federated with the Baptist and Christian folks. However, the elements were too diverse to blend, the effort proved weak, and the Congregationalists are glad to settle down again in their own building. Also the minister, Rev. A. B. Roberts, who had been the last leader in the federated group, continues with them. Federation of churches in communities has not generally worked out well in this conference—at least not well for Congregationalism.

Dr. Fox Preaches to Married Couples

In his 15 years at FIRST, PASADENA, Dr. D. F. Fox has married many couples. A service was arranged for all these people one Sunday evening. A formal note was addressed to each couple, and the center of the church auditorium reserved for them. Response was made by hundreds. At the proper time, to the tune of "Lohengrin's March," a procession of girls in white and pink, proceeded down the aisle to the altar as to a wedding—but, it was for the purpose of taking the offering. In his sermon, Dr. Fox presented matters of warning and of encouragement, his theme being phrased, "Wedding Bells—a Doxology or a Dirge." Following the service there was a reception in the parlors for the purpose of mutual acquaintance.

In the preparation for the ingathering at Easter, the churches emphasized their union meetings, holding them in down-town gathering places culminating in great services in Passion Week. Dr. Fox wrote a daily column to the Star News on "The Greatest Man in History." Full emphasis having been given to Fathers and Sons, in May there was an elaborate Mothers' and Daughters' Week program. It included a "Confidence Evening," a great banquet served by men and boys, a "Mother and Daughter Go-to-Some-Place-Together" evening, and a morning service at which an address was given by Mrs. James Lash of Hollywood.

Dr. Charles F. Aked of Los Angeles was secured to give four notable Sunday evening addresses in May: "What Does the World Owe to the Genius and Greatness of: (1) England, (2) France, (3) Germany, (4) Ireland?"

Japanese Seek Preaching in English

In their splendid new plant, JAPANESE UNION, LOS ANGELES, has developed a strong work with an everyday ministry. Yet among the unchurched there were found great groups of young people. Through an English service on Sunday morning, large numbers of them have become interested and the attendance has trebled. Rev. Paul Waterhouse, Extension Secretary—particularly among the Orientals—is the much loved preacher at this hour.

Another interesting work of the Japanese is in a colony near Chula Vista, San Diego County, where there are 100 children. They have asked help to be given through their neighbor, the Chula Vista Church, in the forming of a church school and other forms of Christian service.

Competing Church Withdraws

When a quarter century ago, into the new field of Pico Heights, Los Angeles, where our Congregational Church had pioneered, a Methodist Church was about to enter, protest was made by the pastor, Rev. J. M. Schaeffle. But the Presiding Elder made answer: "We do not take counsel of anyone; we go where we please." Now the Methodist Church, feeb and in debt, unites with another church ar leaves the field. In this section, which h become "down town," our church is left wit out competition, to their great encouragemen

The building has recently been painted. C Easter Sunday, Mr. Schaeffle, who has been t minister for 35 years, led in the swift raising a fund of $700 to meet an extra expense.

OREGON

Klan-Blighted Community Restored to Sanity

From a remarkable piece of work in Condo Ore., Rev. J. H. Pendleton goes to PARKROS PORTLAND. The Condon field was recently su veyed by the national Institute of Social ar Religious Research. The survey secretary, D E. deS. Brunner, describes Mr. Pendleton work as heroic—"one of the most amazing fie reports which has ever come into this offic In Condon he found a community in whic the churches had been split wide open by Klan war and from which two pastors ha fled. We have run across a number of con munities in which the presence of the Klan ha been responsible for serious church quarrel We have never found a community in whic so speedy a return has been made toward sa ity under the tactful and persuasive leade ship of a sweet-tempered but determine Christian gentleman. Mr. Pendleton has don marvelous work with the young people an one of the Sunday schools which he started 1 miles out in the back country is one of th livest that our field workers have ever visited.

When Mr. Pendleton went to Condon in O tober, 1923, he found that the church had bee wrecked by the Klan activities of the forme pastor, who later was sent to jail for embezzl ment and kidnaping. Even the Sunday scho was closed. The Sunday school superintenden with some of the deacons and trustees, wer into the organization of a Klan church. I spite of this handicap, under Mr. Pendleton' leadership the church was rapidly revive Sixty-two new members were received, man improvements were made in the property, a extensive young people's program was orgar ized, and in the face of great financial depres sion the church budget was largely increased

J. F. D.

MISSOURI

Kansas City's Youngest Church Starts House of Worship

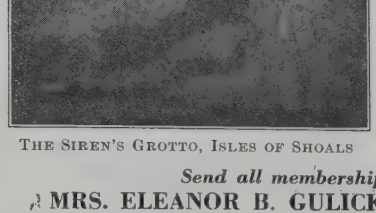
The corner stone for the house of worship o COUNTRY CLUB, KANSAS CITY, was laid Jun 14. Those taking part were Rev. Clarenc Reidenbach, Rev. C. B. Moody, Mr. E. I Adams, Chairman of the Board of Trustee Mr. M. D. Woodling, Chairman of the Build ing Committee, and Rev. T. Y. Williams an Roy W. Merrifield. This new edifice which i being erected at 65th and Wornall Road is th newest factor of Congregationalism in Missour The community surrounding the new building i a promising one. Rev. Robert Porter is pasto

IOWA

New Members Enter Charles City Churches

As the result of a co-operative membershi campaign held in the spring under the directio of Mr. Kernahan of the Methodist Church large number of people have been received int the churches of Charles City. The Congrega

Isles of Shoals Congregational Conference, Aug. 10-24



THE SIREN'S GROTTO, ISLES OF SHOALS

What could be more delightful than a few days of intimacy with Old Ocean, in the company of congenial friends, sharing inspiring and informing addresses by experts in thought and life, between times enjoying to the full the charm of historic and literary associations, and building up health by such recreations as tennis, boating, fishing, clockgolf, climbing the rocks, and daydreaming to the music of the surf.

This only suggests the varied enjoyments of the ever remembered days at Star Island Conference. The program of addresses will be a rich one. Professors Dinsmore and Dahl of Yale, Professor Wild of Mt. Holyoke, Mrs. Mead, President White, the veteran educator of Anatolia College, and Dr. William E. Barton, are among those who will guide our thinking.

The Hotel Oceanic, with its broad piazzas, homelike table, choice music, and great fireplace, assures good cheer. The number of applications and reservations for the Conference is unusually large. EDWARD DWIGHT EATON, President of the Conference.

Send all membership dues and inquiries to

MRS. ELEANOR B. GULICK, Box 32, WELLESLEY, MASS.

onal Church has received about 100, most of hese coming during one month. This campaign was carried forward systematically without the use of the usual emotional elements of revival.

MICHIGAN

enzonia Pastor Studying at Chicago Seminary

The BENZONIA parish is an open-country eld 50 square miles in extent. It has three unday Schools and four preaching points. The ome industry is mainly fruit growing. It is lso situated in a fine summer resort district, ine miles from the Congregational Summer Assembly. Dr. Ernest Bourner Allen of Pilgrim, ak Park, Ill., who has a summer home near enzonia, has offered to supply the pulpit two undays this summer and to secure other men rom the assembly to do the same, gratis, hrough July and August in order to release he Benzonia pastor, giving him the opportunity o take a quarter of work at Chicago Seminary. his plan is being carried out with the help f laymen who will supply the other points in he parish with the board of deacons in charge f the arrangements made by the pastor. Rev. D. Fales, the pastor, believes this a high ype of Christian fellowship on the part of Dr. llen and other ministers, and that it will urnish lay service that is worthy of both comendation and emulation.

WISCONSIN

ron River Outlook Encouraging

Work in IRON RIVER progresses satisactorily. The church school enrollment of 114 larger than at any time in the history of he church and the attendance remarkably good. he ladies' aid society, the woman's missionary ociety, and the Senior and Junior Christian ndeavor Societies are all active and heartily o-operating in the work of the church. Seven-een were received into the membership of the hurch at the Easter Communion. Rev. A. G. oung is pastor.

OHIO

lew Members for First, Painesville

Last winter PAINESVILLE indulged in a series f tabernacle meetings led by Dr. George Wood nderson. The most satisfactory results have een attained in the new life for members of he churches. The Sunday school of First hurch has increased one-third. This church as since Jan. 1 received 91 members by conession, 34 by letter. The choir loft and pulpit latform have been enlarged and new carpets ave been laid in the auditorium. Fine preparations are being made for the entertainment late October of the State Woman's Board of he Interior and the Ohio Woman's Home Misions Union. Rev. W. A. Warren is pastor of irst Church.

ctivities at Canton

Rev. W. H. Longsworth, pastor of FIRST, CANON; with one of his trustees, Mr. David L. 'chantz, sailed on the Homeric, June 27, from lew York for an extended tour of Europe and he Holy Land. They will start their return oyage from Southampton on Aug. 26. Mr. Luther V. Hay, one of the young men of First, will ave oversight while Mr. Longsworth is away. everal noted ministers and laymen will occupy the pulpit during the summer.

This young and vigorous church is making apid strides. Last year 372 were received into membership, 149 having been added this year. The church has a fine Bible school and it began s daily vacation Bible school on June 22. irst Church has four C. E. Societies, a Junior, wo Intermediates, and a Senior, with an enollment of young people of 172.

While in Europe and at the end of the tour Mr. Longsworth is planning to spend a week visiting the battle fields of France and Belgium. He spent 10 months during the World War with the American Army.

All the activities of the church will go forward as usual. First Church carries all her services throughout the year. The evening service for the past five years has been a great success, with probably twice as many in attendance in the evening as at the morning service. At times the great auditorium has been taxed to its capacity.

When Sunday Comes
By John Andrew Holmes

Some ministers "collect their thoughts" before preaching, others select them.

FLORIDA

Dedication and Farewell at Jupiter

Rev. H. H. Jones closed a six-year pastorate at JUPITER, June 14, on the occasion of the dedication of the house of worship. Mr. Jones entered this abandoned mission field, reorganized the little church, held services in the school house for several years, supporting himself by engaging in business in Jupiter. The Congregational organization was the only church in the village and Mr. Jones has been the only resident pastor in the village. As the work prospered the pastor led the church in the erection of a house of worship. The building was dedicated on June 14 with all bills paid. Mr. Jones was the largest contributor. The church has never received aid from the Home Missionary Society. The church surprised Mr. Jones and his family by calling at the parsonage and presenting valuable expressions of the esteem and love in which the pastor and his family are held by the entire church and community. The pulpit will be supplied during the summer months by Rev. C. B. Drake of Interlachen. A successor to Mr. Jones will be called to begin work in October.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Progress at Mount Pleasant, Washington

Handicapped by an inadequate plant in a most obscure situation, MOUNT PLEASANT, WASHINGTON, has made great progress during the past few years under the leadership of Rev. W. A. Morgan. When he became pastor the church was heavily in debt, the people were discouraged, and the outlook was far from bright. The church has been reunited. Many new members have been added, among them being a great group of the leading scientific and literary men of Washington. The debt has been removed, and a beautiful new parsonage facing Rock Creek Park has been purchased and the last payment will be made this year. The benevolences have been increased threefold. The church has just given an extra thousand dollars to the American Board, to be one of 25 churches in America representing 25 states to build the new chapel at American College, Madura, India.

At an enthusiastic meeting held June 11, several forward steps were taken. The church voted to recarpet the auditorium, and redecorate the auditorium as well as the entire interior of the church. The trustees were instructed to build three new classrooms for the church school and to enlarge the kitchen, provide a new robing room for the large vested chorus, add an extra room to the pastor's study, and secure a new electric sign for the front of the church. Eight new stops are being added to the organ.

A further advance was made when the church instructed the pastor and a committee to secure a director of religious education to begin work in the autumn. The plan is to find a young man who will take over the leadership of the work among the young people.

In spite of the fact that the church is obscure and surrounded by the finest church plants in Washington, several of them costing well on towards a million dollars, the work of the church has prospered and the future is promising. If Mount Pleasant could be equipped with an adequate Colonial edifice such as are to be found in many New England cities, it easily could become one of the great churches of the denomination.

CONNECTICUT

Pastors' Conference

Invitations have been sent to the ministers of various denominations in Connecticut, especially the northern part, and in western Massachusetts for a Pastors' Conference under the auspices of the Hartford Seminary Foundation

The Congregational Year-Book for 1924

is ready for distribution

A copy has been mailed to all pastors and to church clerks on request. If any pastor has not received his copy in a reasonable time, a request sent the Council office will bring a copy free, postpaid.

This Year-Book contains the statistics of our Congregational Churches for the year 1924.

A complete record of all churches, their officers, contributions, membership and records for the year.

A few extra copies are for sale. These will be sent postpaid; cloth bound, $1.50; paper bound, $1.00.

Send your request to

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES
287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

and the Pastoral Union to be held in the Chapel of Hartford Seminary, Sept. 14 and 15. The leader this year is Prof. Raymond C. Brooks of the Department of Religion in Pomona College, Claremont, Cal. He has taken for the theme of the conference the query, "Is Christianity Sufficient for Our Modern World?" Professor Brooks' success as a preacher and pastor in Berkeley, Cal., shows that he is informed and abreast of modern thought, and his admirable work in leading similar conferences warrants the expectation that this gathering will be unusually rich.

Resigns from Second, Manchester

Rev. R. A. Beardslee has resigned the pastorate of SECOND, MANCHESTER, finishing his work July 1, after three years' service. At a farewell reception, the people presented him with a purse of $600, and Mrs. Beardslee received a pearl necklace. After a vacation at Newbury, N. H., on Lake Sunapee, Mr. Beardslee will be available for supplies or for a settled pastorate.

FIRST MORTGAGES
and REAL ESTATE BONDS
Interest 7% Semi-Annually
On Improved Income Florida Real Estate
Loans confined to
Tampa and South Florida
Principal and Interest Guaranteed
Write for booklet and information
GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

Centerbrook Two Hundred Years Old

CENTERBROOK celebrated its 200th anniversary Sunday, June 21. Dr. B. W. Bacon of Yale gave the historical address, and Rev. J. R. Danforth of New London preached the sermon. Representatives of Old Saybrook, Chester, Deep River, Ivoryton, and Essex took part in the commemoration.

Golden Jubilee of Ridgefield Women's Society

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of RIDGEFIELD recently celebrated its 50th anniversary with an afternoon service and program. Invited guests were present from the neighboring churches of Danbury, Bethel, Georgetown, New Canaan, and Wilton; also from the local Episcopal and Methodist and the South Salem, N. Y., Presbyterian Churches. Miss Jennie E. Holmes, the beloved secretary, the only one who could remember the meeting of April 29, 1875, when the society was organized, read "Gleanings from the Last Half Century." Another charter member and long-time officer was Miss Sarah Northrop, sister of President Cyrus Northrop of the University of Minnesota. The original group found opposition but struggled on, though their chief boast for eight years was that they supported a child by a scholarship of $30 yearly and a native Bible reader, both in India. Progress since then is noted in the collecting of $250 in mite boxes as part of the day's program and in a message from the Young Ladies' Auxiliary. The address of the day by Dr. Cornelius H. Patton of the American Board was virile, stirring, and prophetic. The neighboring churches, as well as the home church, received missionary impetus from the well-planned and carried out program.

Love for the secretary, Miss Holmes, and appreciation of her 50 years' devotion was expressed in the presentation of a bouquet of roses. Gratitude for the six years' leadership as president of Mrs. E. J. Reed, mother of the pastor's wife, and her willingness to continue is marked, and acknowledgment of the work of the pastor's wife, Mrs. Hugh Shields, in organizing the Young Ladies' Auxiliary was freely voiced. The pastor's backing of the work and his building of a broad missionary program for the whole church is noteworthy.

E. O. M.

Hartford Summer Services

During the summer, as has been the custom for several years, ASYLUM HILL, HARTFORD will hold union services with Immanuel Congregational and Asylum Avenue Baptist Churches as follows:

At Immanuel: July 5, Dr. C. F. Carter, the minister; July 12, Rev. T. A. Greene, First New Britain; July 19, Rev. J. H. Grant, Fairfield; July 26, Rev. A. B. Coe, Waterbury.

At Asylum Ave. Baptist: Aug. 2, Rev. C. A. Decker, Bridgeport; Aug. 9, Rev. E. S. Farley, Suffield; Aug. 16, Rev. F. F. Foshay, Willimantic.

At Asylum Hill: Aug. 23, Dr. E. M. Noyes, Newton Centre, Mass.; Aug. 30, Dr. J. C. Goddard, Salisbury; Sept. 6, Dr. J. N. Pierce, Washington, D. C.

At CENTER, HARTFORD, the minister, Dr. R. H. Potter is preaching June 28, July 5, and July 26. On July 21 the pulpit will be supplied by Prof. L. B. Paton of Hartford Seminary; on July 12 by Dr. J. C. Goddard of Salisbury, and on July 19 by Rev. C. A. Lincoln of Reformed, Newark, N. J.

MASSACHUSETTS

With the Worcester Churches

CENTRAL, WORCESTER, Dr. Shepherd Knapp, pastor, has called Herman E. Worman, recently director of religious education at the First Presbyterian Church, Akron, O., to the same position at Central and he has accepted. Mr. Worman is a graduate of Teachers' College, Columbia University, and of Union Seminary. Miss Annie May Hanchett, whom Mr. Worman succeeds, has been given a vacation of six months after which she will take up her duties as assistant to Prof. Stooker of the School of Religious Education, Auburn, N. Y.

UNION, WORCESTER, Rev. B. F. Wyland, pastor, has engaged Miss Madeline B. Walker to be assistant to the pastor and assist in the leadership of educational and young people's work. Miss Walker is a graduate of Boston University, class of 1924, and this year received an A. M. degree from that institution. Her home is in Framingham where she was brought up in Grace Congregational Church. She has had experience in student summer work among the Mountain Whites of Tennessee under the Congregational Sunday School Extension Society, and in addition to other work has specialized in the conduct of daily vacation Bible schools. This summer she is in charge of such a school at Bridgewater, conducted by four denominations. She will begin her work at Union Sept. 1.

During the months of July and August UNION, PLYMOUTH, and FIRST UNIVERSALIST, WORCESTER, will join in union Sunday services. The first three Sundays Dr. V. E. Tomlinson for 25 years pastor of First Universalist, will preach in his own church. At Union Dr. C. H. Dickinson will preach July 26, Dr. E. D. Eaton Aug. 2, and Dr. Ernest Riggs Aug. 9. At Plymouth Rev. H. W. Kimball of Needham

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.
THE LESLIE
A quiet, cosy little House by the sea. Now open.
Private baths. Descriptive booklet. 21st season.
The best and nearest view of the President's yacht.

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

CAMPS AND VACATION PLACES

Quinneh Tuk—Spend August vacation at Quinneh Tuk, Northfield, Mass. Cottages and tents. Modern conveniences.

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., in the vicinity of the White Mountains. We offer the comforts and conveniences needed for a successful vacation and rest. No hay fever. Lower rates to those who come in June and July. Booklet. A. J. Newman, Prop.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, homelike rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large, brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

Best place for vacation, mountains, New Hampshire, 100 miles from Boston. Board or rent bungalow. Moderate rates. Howard Brown, Alstead, N. H.

White Mountains, North Conway, N. H. Would you enjoy a mountain vacation, grand scenery, home cooking, all conveniences, golf, movies, etc.? Write Arthur H. Furber.

PASTOR WANTED

Liberal Community Church desires pastor. Must be effective in pulpit, energetic, liberal and progressive. Splendid opportunity in city of 60,000. All communications in strict confidence. Address "Liberal," Congregationalist.

PASTORATE WANTED

University trained minister with ten years' experience desires change of pastorate. Recognized pulpit ability and success in the field of Religious Education. Will supply during August in Massachusetts or Connecticut. "X. Y. Z.," Congregationalist.

POSITION WANTED

Organist and choir director desires position in Michigan. W. J. S., 313 South Fourth Ave., Ann Arbor, Mich.

TEACHERS WANTED

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wasteless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

Good printing, paper covered books, pamphlets, sermons, no hurry orders, etc. Stationery,—500 six-inch envelopes and 500 letterheads, billheads, or statements for $5.00, 1,000 for $8.50, all excellent bond paper. Religious work solicited. The Print Shop, E. Northfield, Mass.

For Sale—A church bell, good tone. Forty-eight pews, oak, comparatively new. Will seat 240 persons. Apply to W. H. Jordan, Orono, Me.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

Vacation and Sunday Schools find twelve Scripture Crosswords on separate cards for individual pupils valuable for interest and instruction. $2.00 hundred. First Congregational Church, Gardner, Mass.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

For Sale—Parker's "People's Bible" in 28 volumes; good condition. Levi Blandford, 1320 Jefferson St., Waterloo, Iowa.

will preach Aug. 15, Dr. C. A. Lincoln of Newark, N. J., Aug. 23, and Dr. C. H. Rust of Pittsburgh Aug. 30.

FIRST (Old South) and FIRST BAPTIST, WORCESTER, will unite with preaching in Old South as follows: Aug. 9, Dr. J. S. Durkee, President of Howard University, Washington, D. C.; Aug. 16, Dr. W. A. Morgan of Mount Pleasant, Washington, D. C.; Aug. 23, Dr. W. W. Bustard of Euclid Ave. Baptist, Cleveland, O.; Aug. 30, Rev. E. M. Noyes of First, Newton Centre. F. D. T.

Mortgage Burning at First, Bradford

At FIRST, BRADFORD, there was a fire on the night of June 11, but no alarm was sounded and no alarm was felt. The fire was also an incendiary fire, but those who applied the matches received commendation for their work, and an approving congregation gazed on the proceedings with gratification. Thus a reporter for a local daily paper began his account of the burning of two mortgages.

One, carried since January, 1924, was placed upon the church in order that money might be procured for the purchase of land in the rear of the building. The money was furnished by two members of the church, so that the land could be immediately acquired for future development. Bonds were sold, many of them being taken by various classes and organizations connected with the church or closely allied with it. More than the amount needed was raised in this way. The land will eventually be developed, with tennis courts and garden. Dr. Clifford Richards, treasurer of the land committee, was called to the platform, and to him was given the honor of burning the mortgage.

The other mortgage, carried since March, 1922, covered the cost of installing a new Skinner organ in 1919. Since January efforts have been made to wipe out the balance of this indebtedness. The sum of $3,300 has been raised by means of entertainments and a few special gifts. The last payment on the mortgage, amounting to $150, was made June 8. The pastor, Rev. G. E. Cary, said that no one member of the church was any more worthy to burn the mortgage than Mrs. H. Parker Williams, whose courage had buoyed them up and whose enthusiasm had kept them going. Mrs. Williams was called to the platform to touch the match to the paper.

The service ended with an organ recital by Frederick Johnson, F. A. G. O., organist of the church and head of the music department of Bradford Academy.

From Roslindale to North Dakota

Exercises of unusual character attended the ordination of Harold G. Jones at ROSLINDALE, June 22. Five years ago the Suffolk South Association of Ministers instituted a class of sublicensure and Mr. Jones was the first to be approved as a Christian worker. Later he was made a licentiate and by council he has now become fully recognized as a Congregational clergyman. Meanwhile he pursued his studies, graduating at Yale Divinity as one of the four commencement speakers; he also carries a degree from the Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service. Several institutions have had a share in his career which they are eager to claim: Dedham and Roslindale, where he grew up, and the Boston Y. M. C. A., Old and New Eliot and Mount Vernon Churches, in which he served as leader of boys' work or director of religious education. In addition he has had pastoral service in rural Connecticut and North Dakota. In the latter state his experience became so notable that Plymouth Church, Fargo, has called him to assume its pastorate. There a modern new plant, erected in 1924, with a student body from North Dakota and the Agricultural College as a part of the congregation, awaits his coming with high expectations. He will assume his new service early in July.

Few councils have been more unanimous in their favorable conclusions or more ready to express fullest satisfaction in the candidate. At the evening exercises Dean C. R. Brown of Yale preached upon "What Men Live By," voicing Yale's approval of Mr. Jones. Other parts were by Dr. W. R. Campbell, invocation; Rev. G. W. Owen, scripture lesson; Rev. W. S. Holland, pastor of Roslindale, ordaining prayer; Rev. Sidney Lovett, charge to the candidate; Rev. F. D. Parker, hand of fellowship; Rev. C. W. Dunham, moderator; Rev. W. P. Landers, scribe.

Memorial Baptismal Font at Somerville

A new baptismal font, the gift of the pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. S. C. Lang, has been placed in FIRST, SOMERVILLE. It is given in memory of Stephen Arthur Lang, the first-born child of Mr. and Mrs. Lang, who died last December just before Christmas, only a fortnight before he would have been five years old. He was born in January, 1920, after Mr. Lang began his present pastorate on Dec. 1, 1919. The boy was an active, sturdy, cheerful, companionable little fellow, and his sudden death from acute acidosis shocked the entire parish.

The baptismal font is a silver bowl set in black walnut in a design that harmonizes with the beautiful Gothic interior of the church. It was used for the first time on Sunday, June 28, for the baptism of about 12 infants, and also for the baptism of adults who were admitted to church membership on that day. With the baptisms of June 28 First Church has had 68 baptisms so far in 1925.

New Pastor at Winter Hill, Somerville

Rev. Klein K. Haddaway, recently called to the pastorate of BROADWAY-WINTER HILL, SOMERVILLE, is a son of Rev. G. W. Haddaway, D.D., for many years pastor of Starr Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, Md. He is a graduate of West Maryland College, and for a year was its dean and preacher. After leaving college he took a course in law and was admitted to the bar. Almost immediately following his law course he entered Drew Theological Seminary, from which he graduated. He has been pastor of a church in Pittsburgh, Pa., five years. The past two years have been given to philosophical courses at Yale and Johns Hopkins.

Following one Sunday in the pulpit of the Broadway Winter Hill Church in March, a unanimous call was extended Mr. Haddaway, which he at once accepted, his pastorate to begin May 17. His marriage to a Miss Bryan of Philadelphia, daughter of a clergyman of that city, was celebrated in April last. Mrs. Haddaway was graduated at West Maryland College, has studied music, and has had experience as a high school teacher of history and English. Mr. and Mrs. Haddaway have established their home at 399 Broadway, Winter Hill.

West Springfield's New Parish House

A little over a year ago the members of FIRST, WEST SPRINGFIELD, began to make plans for a substantial addition to their plant. In October, 1924, sufficient funds had been pledged to assure the committee appointed by the parish that a $40,000 addition in the form of a parish house could be financed. Ground was broken for the building in that month, and in that same month the church called as its pastor Rev. H. L. Oldfield of New York City. Mr. Oldfield came to the church out of 15 years' experience in one of the most difficult fields in the great city. Through the past winter the work at West Springfield was car-

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

The Fisk Teachers' Agencies
120 Boylston St., Boston 225 Fifth Ave., N. Y.
Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Birmingham, Chicago, Kansas City, Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles. Everett O. Fisk & Co.

Walker's Concordance
Over 50,000 more references than any other low priced concordance to the Bible. 980 pages. Cloth $3.00. ½ leather $3.75. Postage 20 cents.
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New York 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

(Copyright—The Bookstore)

What Makes a Good Vacation GOOD?

Plenty of rest and outdoor life, abundant recreation, new environment, ample food fresh from the farm, rooms that promote sound sleep, true hospitality, and genial companionship—these make a vacation good; these our guests enjoy. Recreation is featured by Golf, Tennis, Croquet, Motoring, and Mountain-trail Tramping. The Northfield Conferences continue to August 24. Write for Illustrated Booklet.

THE NORTHFIELD
EAST NORTHFIELD, MASS.
Ambert G. Moody, Mgr.
F. W. Kellogg, Asst. Mgr.

ried on under great difficulty because of the construction which was under way.

By Easter time, however, the minister and people began to see the light, and on that day one of the largest Easter congregations in the history of the church was present. The following Sunday, April 19, the parish house was dedicated. The Scripture and prayer were taken by Dr. Henry L. Bailey and Rev. Arthur Rudman, who had supplied the church previous to the coming of Mr. Oldfield. Messages of encouragement were read from Revs. G. W. Love, W. A. Thomas, G. R. Hewitt, S. K. Perkins, W. H. Webb, D. D. Gorton, former ministers of the church. Mr. G. Stanley Lee and Dr. E. H. Knight brought personal messages. Rev. F. G. Morecombe, Ph.D., brought greetings from the Protestant churches of West Springfield. The minister of the church preached the sermon of dedication from the text, "Know thou the God of thy father and serve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind." The prayer of dedication was given by Dr. Knight.

Since this service of dedication the parish house has been widely used. Its principal use is to house the church school which has been reorganized during the year. Among the social activities held in the house have been a minstrel show given by the men's club, a May party, a fashion show, and a birthday supper under the auspices of the woman's guild. The young people of the church held open house for the young people of the other churches. The church has invited the other churches of the community to feel free to use the building and already a group from the Baptist Church has used it for an entertainment. It is the hope of the committee, of which Mr. Arthur W. Lamson was the chairman, which planned the building, and of the parish committee, which now has charge of it, that the parish house will become a real community center.

The building is equipped with a fine auditorium in which is a good stage. Provision is made for the men in a large men's club room. The woman's guild also has its separate rooms. The architect has harmonized the architecture externally and internally with the Gothic of the original church. He has also made use, in the manner in which he has attached the addition to the old building, of the chapel and the kitchen.

This summer the congregations of First Baptist and First Congregational are to hold union services. In the meantime the various departments of First Congregational are organizing their work for an active fall and winter in 1925 and 1926.

From Middleboro to Milton

FIRST, MILTON, has called Rev. William G. Fagan (Methodist), who has been acting pastor at North Middleboro since 1922, with previous pastoral experience in Canada. He is a native of Ontario. He received his bachelor's degree in religious education from Boston University in 1923; his master's degree in 1924, and from the graduate school of the university an M.A. diploma last June. He is specializing in psychology. The pastorate will probably begin Sept. 1.

Main St., Amesbury, Planning Fall Program

MAIN ST., AMESBURY, Rev. John Moore, minister, is making sundry internal and external repairs to its house of worship. New cushions are to be put in during the vacation season. A new walk is being laid and the approach to the church otherwise beautified. The entire parish has been organized in group units under captains and a centralized leadership to raise the funds for these repairs.

The work of the church and parish for the ensuing year, beginning in the fall, is being laid out. Vespers, special occasions, and the pulpit work for the whole year are being planned and printed. The program for the year promises to be the best ever attempted. It is expected that this church will unite with the other Protestant churches of the town in holding vacation services.

VERMONT

Fire Damages Bennington Church Building

The edifice of SECOND, BENNINGTON, caught fire at about nine o'clock in the morning, June 13, and the fire was extinguished in about two hours. It caught up in the space between the ceiling of the church parlor and the roof of the chapel, and because the fire was in a place hard to get at, a great deal of water had to be used, which caused some additional damage. But the large auditorium was not burned, nor very much injured, although it will need to be redecorated. The choir loft is in bad shape and the organ, possibly, beyond repair. The worst condition is in the south end of the chapel, which joins on to the church proper. The damage has been estimated at $10,000 fully covered by insurance.

The Church Aid Society has thoroughly renovated the parsonage, to be occupied Sept. 1 by the new pastor, Rev. Stanley Cummings, formerly pastor of St. Albans.

During the month of July, Second Church unites with the Baptists in the Sunday morning services; in August the Baptists unite with the Congregationalists. Rev. F. B. Richards, formerly pastor of North, St. Johnsbury, will be acting pastor for August.

Rev. G. S. Mills, who resigned from Second April last, has become pastor of Wellington Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Pilgrimage to Rockingham

The 19th annual Pilgrimage to the Old Rockingham Meeting House will take place on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 2, at four o'clock. Hon. John Spargo of Bennington, Vt., will give the address and Dr. Samuel Eliot of Boston will deliver the sermon. The executive committee are to be congratulated in having secured such able speakers for the Pilgrimage. Gov. Franklin S. Billings expects to be present to offer his felicitations. The old meeting house is certain to be packed this year as in years past.

MAINE

Dr. MacQueen Memorial

A beautiful Barre granite monument, a memorial to the late Dr. Peter MacQueen, was recently set in the Ocean View Cemetery in Boothbay Harbor. The monument is of rough hewn stone edges, with squared sides and top.

Church Furniture
Pews · Pulpits · Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
Dept. D.
CHICAGO 14 E. Jackson Blvd.
BOSTON 69 Canal St.

Church
EMBROIDERIES, ALTAR LINENS PULPIT GOWNS, CLERGY AND CHOIR VESTMENTS, CLERICAL CLOTHING Estimates on Request
J. M. HALL, Inc.
9 East 35th St., New York
Tel. Caledonia 8648

ESTEY
PIPE AND REED ORGANS
Estey Organ Co.
Brattleboro Vermont

Pulpit Gowns
and Choir Vestments
CUSTOM TAILORING
FOR CLERGYMEN
Pulpit Hangings & Bookmarkers
Cox Sons & Vining
131-133 E. 23rd Street, New York

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
79 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1114 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

OCEAN GROVE NEW JERSEY
The famous sea-shore and camp-meeting resort of America has ordered many thousands of our new hymn book for this season.
Hymns of the Living Gospel, No. 3
Nothing like it. Hymns for the Church—80 of them; Gospel songs—30 new and 54 best known favorites; Invitation Hymns; Responsive Readings; Worship Services for Sabbath Schools prepared by REV. E. H. BONSALL, JR., Sup't Young People's Division, Pennsylvania State S. S. Association. High-grade but not expensive, $15.00 the hundred. Send for returnable sample.
HALL-MACK CO., 21st and Arch Sts., Philadelphia

CHURCH WINDOWS
AND
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
BRONZE AND MARBLE
Jacoby Art Glass Company
Dept. 54 2700 St. Vincent Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Individual Cups
Over 50,000 churches use Thomas Service. Self-collecting Tray saves one-fourth cost of others. Catalog and Trial Free.
Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 5 Lima, Ohio.

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND 220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B.

The design was selected for its simplicity but in its simplicity is great beauty. The inscriptions are deep cut, the word MacQueen being across the face with the words "Wanderer—Lover of Man and Nature" beneath. On the reverse side is the name Peter MacQueen and the dates.

This memorial has been raised in the cemetery by friends of the late Dr. MacQueen in this vicinity, summer friends at Murray Hill and old friends all over the world. It is designed as a permanent memorial of one who was loved by all. Dr. MacQueen, long a summer resident at Murray Hill, became pastor of the Congregational Church at Boothbay Harbor in 1923 and died there in January, 1924.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

BISSELL, F. A., Sunnyvale, Cal., to Angels Camp. At work.

CLEAVES, C. H., Reno, Nev., to Boulevard, Oakland, Cal.

FAGAN, W. G., North Middleboro, Mass., to First Evangelical, Milton, Mass.

MANDERSON, F. R., Paradise, Cal., to Adin. At work.

WORMAN, H. E., director of religious education, First Presbyterian, Akron, O., to be director of religious education, Central, Worcester, Mass. Accepts.

Resignations

BEARDSLEE, R. A., Second, Manchester, Ct. Effective July 1.

ROWLEY, H. L., Richmond, San Francisco, Cal.

Ordinations

CARROLL, W. D., o., Northfield, Weston, Ct., June 25. Sermon by Rev. J. M. Deyo; other parts by Rev. Messrs. F. R. Bunker, E. O. Mead, E. F. MacGregor, and M. F. Clark.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
MASSACHUSETTS
Marblehead, Old North	5	10
MICHIGAN
Benzonia	15	17
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Hampstead	3	4

Personals

BARE, REV. C. B., South, Concord, N. H., was recently presented with a Nash sedan by his parishioners.

DENNEY, REV. and MRS. O. H., New Port Richey, Fla., left June 30 for Cincinnati, O., Cleveland, Seneca Falls and Elmira, N. Y., visiting friends. Mr. Denney will preach in the First Presbyterian Church, Seneca Falls, July 19. Mr. and Mrs. Denney expect to spend the month of August at "Ge-Ha-Da," their summer home on Keuka Lake, near Penn Yan, N. Y., returning the second week in September to Florida by auto, in company with Dr. Clarence A. Vincent of Winter Park.

JOHNSON, REV. G. E., pastor of Swedish, North Easton, Mass., graduated from Gordon College this month. On a recent birthday the church presented him with a purse of gold.

MAYLOTT, REV. W. F., for the past ten years pastor of First, Derby, Ct., has been honored by the International Y. M. C. A. College of Springfield, Mass., which has conferred upon him the degree of Master of Humanics, the highest honor in the gift of the college. This is in recognition of Mr. Maylott's 30 years of successful religious leadership in difficult fields.

MCINTIRE, MISS BEATRICE L., Needham, Mass., a senior at the Boston University School of Religious Education, is to be pastor's assistant at Rollstone, Fitchburg, succeeding Miss Dorothy Sawyer, who has resigned.

PRINCE, REV. J. C., Topeka, Kan., secretary of the Southwestern District of the Congregational Education Society, has been transferred to San Francisco, Cal., as secretary of religious education and young people's work for Northern California. His office will be at 421 Phelan Building.

RADER, REV. WILLIAM, after concluding nine months' ministry as stated supply of North, Berkeley, Cal., has gone to England and Scotland for the summer and fall. This will make the third preaching trip that Mr. Rader has made to the British Isles. He has been invited to preach under the auspices of the Committee on Interchange of Preachers between America and England. One of his preaching engagements is scheduled for Christ Church, Westminster.

SAMPSON, C. C., Tilton, N. H., who is just completing a pastorate of 40 years there, was presented a purse of $100 by the local Chamber of Commerce at a dinner given in his honor.

SMITH, MRS. MOSES, well known to all Chicago Congregationalists as a great missionary and religious leader, received the degree of Master of Arts at this year's commencement at Mount Holyoke College. She graduated there in 1858. She is 90 years of age, but has such vigor of mind and body that she traveled to Mt. Holyoke alone from Chicago and remained over to visit numerous friends and relatives. Her late husband, Dr. Moses Smith, was pastor of Leavitt St. Church, Chicago, and was for many years an outstanding leader in this district.

Events to Come

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

ISLES OF SHOALS CONGREGATIONAL SUMMER CONFERENCE, Star Island, off Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 10-24.

NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H., Aug. 10-17.

Northfield Summer Conferences

CONFERENCE FOR WOMEN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETIES, July 14-22.

CONFERENCE OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, July 23-Aug. 1.

GENERAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS, Aug. 1-17.

MASSACHUSETTS CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR INSTITUTE, Aug. 17-24.

Gratitude links the past with the future, the debt incurred with the duty to be performed, the service received with the service rendered. The question, "What ought we to do for others?" cannot receive a proper answer until pains have been taken to weigh and value all that others have done for us. Benevolence is largely an affair of memory and of the gratitude that memory inspires.—L. P. Jacks.

MILWAUKEE-DOWNER COLLEGE
Milwaukee, Wisconsin
A standard College for women.
Full four-year courses leading to B.A. and B.S. degrees. Academic programs, Home Economics, Music, Art.
MISS LUCIA R. BRIGGS, President
For catalogue address the Registrar

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA
Sixtieth Year Opens August 17, 1925
Prepares men and women for
The Pastorate Social Service
Religious Education Foreign Service
Research
Practical Instruction. Opportunities for Self-Support.
Facilities of University of California.
Graduate Degrees. Faculty of Ten.
Modern and Commodious Buildings under Construction.
COME TO CALIFORNIA TO STUDY
HERMAN F. SWARTZ, President

KIMBALL UNION ACADEMY
A Congregational preparatory school with a moderate tuition. 113th year opens Sept. 16th. High elevation. Nine buildings. 100-acre farm. Separate dormitories for boys and girls. Gymnasium. Playing fields. Outing club. DR. FRANCIS E. CLARK, President of Trustees. CHARLES ALDEN TRACY, A.M., Headmaster, Meriden, N. H.

HARTFORD
W. Douglas Mackenzie
President
Theological Seminary
Dean, M. W. Jacobus
School of Religious Pedagogy
Dean, E. H. Knight
Kennedy School of Missions
Dean, E. W. Capen
Through these associated schools Hartford offers full training for:
1. The Christian ministry.
2. Religious education and social service.
3. The foreign field.
Each School has its independent faculty and its own institutional life, and together they form one interdenominational institution with the unity of common aim and spirit.
HARTFORD SEMINARY FOUNDATION, HARTFORD, Conn.

DO YOU LIKE TO BUILD?
The Chicago Theological Seminary is building a new home. Its Residence Halls and Social Rooms for eighty students, are finished. It still needs a Library, Chapel, and Assembly Hall, which will cost $300,000.00.
Would you like to make your name enduring in its influence? Help The Chicago Theological Seminary to complete its home for the training of Christian ministers.
OZORA S. DAVIS, President,
5757 University Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

SEA PINES School of Personality for Girls
THOMAS BICKFORD, Founder
Outdoor life. Training in self-discovery and self-direction. Stimulating ideas of health, responsibility. Christian influence. One hundred acres, pine groves, seashore. College Preparatory, Cultural, Secretarial and Athletic courses. Arts. Crafts. Dramatics. Music. Corrective Gymnastics. Recreation Camp July and August. Summer Courses and Counselorship Training for older girls and young women.
Miss Faith Bickford, Miss Addie Bickford, Directors
Box V, Brewster, Mass.

GRINNELL
A College of Liberal Arts for Men and Women.
Applications for admission in September, 1925, are now being received.
An illustrated booklet will be sent on request.
Address:
Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, (Dept. C.)

Bangor Theological Seminary
The 110th year opens Sept. 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor, Maine.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East
Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations
Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service
Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service
Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement
Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work
Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.
G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries - Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton — Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton — Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong
Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady,
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Henry Smith Leiper, M.A.,
Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.
District Secretaries
Rev. A. V. Bliss, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York
Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, D.D., Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies and Congregational ministers seeking pastorates. Maintained by the Congregational Conferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chairman.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secretary and Missionary Education Secretary
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and Adult Education Secretary
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Secretary
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service, Missionary Education, Student and Young People's Work; aids Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of the denomination for the publication and distribution of The Congregationalist, church school equipment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, teachers' magazines, children's and young people's weekly papers, and books for home and church use, with book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Manager
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregationalist
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Congregational House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIOR, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIFIC, 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W. C. Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec. Sec.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H. H. Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Congregational House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; Rev. John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BOSTON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Sears Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, a constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trust for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

Our Readers' Forum

(Continued from page 78)

child welfare organization, I wish to call attention to the flattening of his charges here.

I am opposed to the so-called Child Labor Amendment for fundamental reasons which should appeal to every follower of the principles of true democracy, first of which is that it takes from the state a prerogative vested in it from the beginning, without cause, inasmuch as most of the states already have adequate child labor laws. The hidden purpose of the amendment is militarism through the centralization of power, the gradual masculation of state sovereignty, and the creation of an autocracy.

A strong reason for opposing the amendment is that it invades the rights of parenthood, in that it aims to direct child education. It is another attack on parochial and private schools, and every bigot who seeks the destruction of these agencies is with you.

I object to writing statutory law into the Constitution.

I object to the nationalization of children.

I object to further concentration of federal power.

You speak of selfish opposition. Is there none on your side? What of organized labor, some of whose leaders are pushing for the amendment, at the same time protesting, as they should, at unfair treatment from similar causes?

If the same time and energy and money were put in a battle against specific cases of "child slavery," or used in securing legislation in delinquent states, greater results would follow.

Economic science will bear me out in the statement that labor is not cheap because wages are small; but that results are best where the children in factory work have sanitary environment and means for educational advancement. The employer is blind who fails to see his own interest in a childhood steadily advancing to sturdiness and intelligence in adult life.

Constitution tinkering is not needed to abolish child slavery—where it exists.

Dearborn, Mich. MARCUS T. WOODRUFF.

(EDITORS' NOTE—Though published with full editorial responsibility the editorial to which Mr. Woodruff refers was not written by a member of our staff. It came from the pen of one of the most careful and competent economists in the Congregational fellowship. Its special value at the present moment seemed to us to lie in the fact that it specifically avoided doing what Mr. Woodruff makes the chief basis of criticism. It seemed to us to deal directly with the question of child labor itself, and not at all, or only indirectly, with the advisability or non-advisability of a constitutional amendment as a proposed remedy.)

American Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches. Bequests and Annuities are solicited in order that the House may be freed from mortgage indebtedness and the Association thus enabled to furnish our Missionary Organizations with business offices at minimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Rev. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hubbard, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816

Home visitation and personal missionary service in connection with our churches. Emergency relief. Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contributions and legacies gratefully received and scrupulously administered.
William Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. Parker, Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

Incorporated 1829 Boston Reorganized 1922

Seaman's Friend Society, Inc.

This Society, reorganized in 1922, now fully represents the Congregational Churches of New England in its practical, social and religious work among seamen. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Rooms at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. The Society provides dormitory accommodations, reading and recreation rooms, religious services, pool tables, and games of many kinds, a restaurant, a canteen, shower baths, postal and banking facilities. Donations and bequests solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis. President, Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore E. Busfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. Com., Franklin P. Shumway; Office 618 Congregational House.

American Seamen's Friend Society

(Incorporated 1833)

The only American undenominational international and national Society aiding seamen.
Maintains a Sailors' Home and Institute at 507 West Street, New York City.
Loan libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing from New York.
PUBLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).
Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.
SUPPORTED by contributions and legacies.
JOHN B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE SIDNEY WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary.
CLARENCE C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 79 Wall St., New York, to whom contributions may be sent.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday Schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps all churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

RISIBLES

Applicant—"I hear you need a bright, industrious, good-looking young man."

Employer—"I do. Whom do you suggest?"—Pelican.

"What's the matter?"

"Why, I wrote a long, flowing article on milk, and the editor's condensed it."—London Mail.

Adelbert (passionately)—"The more I look at you, dear, the more beautiful you seem."

Adeline (expectantly)—"Yes?"

Adelbert (brutally)—"I ought to look at you oftener."—Tiger.

Owner—"Here, what are you doing? Don't you know you're not allowed to take fish out of this water?"

Mr. McBride (three hours without a catch): "I'm not taking them out. I'm feeding them."

Little Jackie took the church collection very seriously, and every Sunday morning he saw that his penny was ready.

One day, just as the usher began to take the collection, Jackie noticed that a guest in the family pew was not duly provided. Sliding along the seat he whispered, "Where's your penny?"

"I didn't bring one," replied the woman.

Time was short and the matter was urgent, but Jackie came to a decision with great promptitude. Thrusting his penny into the woman's hand, he whispered: "Here, take mine! It'll pay for you, and I'll get under the seat."—Pittsburgh Sun.

The vicar called on a parishioner, a widow who had ten children, all of whom except one daughter had married and left her. Now this daughter also was about to be married. The old lady would be left quite alone, and the clergyman endeavored to sympathize with her.

"Well, Mrs. Higgins," he said, "you must feel lonely now, after having had so large a family."

"Yes, sir," she said, "I do feel it lonesome. I've brought up a large family, and here I am living alone. An' I misses 'em, an' I wants 'em. But I misses 'em more than I wants 'em."—Christian Register.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder and The Advance

July 16, 1925

Vol. CX No. 29

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook	67
How Can We Move Toward Christian Unity?—An Editorial Message	71
An Evolutionist's Ideas of God, Man, and Christ, by Ernest B. Babcock	72
The Parable of the Camels	74
Christian Workers in South America, by Frank K. Sanders	75
How to Remain Thirty Years in One Pastorate, by James M. Lewis	76
The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches, by Daniel Evans	77
Movements in Scotland, by James Stalker	78
Our Readers' Forum	78
The Church and Its Affiliated Institutions, by G. W. Nash	79
Wilshire Boulevard Church	80
The World Federation of Education Associations	81
Our Invalid Parish—The Way Out	82
Closet and Altar	82
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic	82
The Congregationalist's Bible Class	83
Among the New Books	84
With the Children—When Patsy Came to Camp, by Daisy D. Stephenson	86
News of the Churches	88

Three Significant Religious Plays

SAINT CLAUDIA

The religious prize play of the 1924 Religious Drama Contest of the Drama League of America

By MARSHALL N. GOOLD

This drama, which is in three acts, shows the effect of the life and death of Christ on the Roman mind. Written in blank verse, the series of dramatic incidents leading up to and following the crucifixion of Christ, are made more effective by the glorious rhythm and sweep of the lines, carrying audience and reader alike to the greatest heights of emotion.

According to tradition Claudia, the wife of Pontius Pilate, was long a student of Hebrew literature and religion. Upon learning of the beneficent works and teachings and life of Jesus, she came to regard him as the fulfillment of the Messianic prophecy, and tried her utmost to influence Pilate's judgment.

> "While Pilate was sitting on the judgment seat, his wife sent unto him, saying: Have thou nothing to do with that righteous man, for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him."—Matthew 27: 19.

Full directions for production are given—staging, lighting, costuming, etc.

Paper cover, 65 cents. Gift edition, $1.00

A LEGEND OF THE GRAAL

By DOUGLAS HORTON

Arranged so that it may be read as a story or acted as a play. This drama is clothed in the picturesque and reverent symbolism of the Middle Ages, and is built around the Parable of the Good Samaritan.

Long ago in the bygone age of Chivalry a young Squire comes to the Chapel of the Holy Graal to hold the customary night watch before admittance to knighthood the following day. While meditating solemnly upon the duties he is to assume the young Squire thinks so dearly of the deeds of tomorrow that he almost misses immediate opportunity for service.

Full directions are given as to scenery, costumes, properties, lighting, etc. 35 cents

THE ROCK

A Biblical Play in Three Acts

By MARY P. HAMLIN

Another prize play of the Religious Drama Contest of the Drama League of America. It shows the character development of Peter. In the first act, Simon, a poor fisherman, points out to his little wife, Adina, his ambition to become a great merchant. But he is soon fired through the influence of a strange teacher from Nazareth, with enthusiasm for a far greater future than that of a merchant. Believing in his own strength, Simon accepts with calm assurance the name of Peter, the Rock, and in the second act is flung from the heights of hope to the depths of disillusionment when the Nazarene refuses to take advantage of the chance for popular leadership which his miracles have opened to him. Although brought back to his old loyalty with redoubled enthusiasm, the last act sees him denying his Master. Finally, however, in the glory of the Resurrection, Peter begins to see the true meaning of his name. Through this vivid and heart-stirring portrayal of character-development, the play helps us to feel that in truth life may "succeed in that it seems to fail."

Full directions are given as to scenery, costumes, etc. Paper, 50 cents

The possibilities for religious education through the drama is just beginning to be realized. Here are three plays—beautifully constructed, historically accurate, wonderfully impressive—which we hope your group will decide to present during the current year. Send for returnable copies for examination.

Congregational Publishing Society

(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston
156 Fifth Ave., New York
19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 30 July 23, 1925

Congregational Church, Olivet, Michigan

Rev. Charles C. Smith is Pastor

THE SITUATION IN TENNESSEE

THE ANGEL OF HELL'S HALF ACRE

DR. NASH INAUGURATED AT YANKTON

Full of Good Things From Cover to Cover

The Finest of All Papers for Your Library Table

Current Events with a broad Christian interpretation.

Timely articles on the problems of the day by men and women with a world vision and a constructive program.

Interesting Reviews on the latest and best Books.

Helpful suggestions to women, especially mothers and those who have the great responsibility of training the younger generation.

Good Stories which delight the young people.

Modern Methods in religious education suggested by specialists in this important work.

Comments and helps for leaders and students in the Church School and Christian Endeavor.

News from our churches from the Atlantic to the Pacific which unites us in common interests and service.

$3.00 per year
$2.75 in Church Clubs

The Congregationalist

14 Beacon Street
Boston

19 So. La Salle Street
Chicago

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | July 23, 1925 | No. 30

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh — News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D. — Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van-Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

The Nation's Sixtieth Birthday

CONGRATULATIONS to the Nation, which has just celebrated its sixtieth anniversary in its issue of July 1! Its special number is dedicated to the memory of Edwin Lawrence Godkin, Wendell Phillips Garrison, Henry Villard, Horace White, Gustav Pollak, Hammond Lamont, Fanny Garrison Villard, Paul Elmer More, and Harold DeWolf Fuller—a notable company. People who think that journalism ought to be complacent and compliant do not like the Nation. The Nation itself refers to "many who still think it bent on overthrowing our glorious Republic, our glorious self-satisfaction, our glorious belief that everything in America is perfect beyond all cavil." But people, who realize that criticism assumes as large and important a place in the building of good government and great nations as it does in the building of good literature and great art, appreciate the value of a free-minded and outspoken organ of opinion even if they do not always agree with its standpoint or the opinions that it expresses. The Nation shares the defects of most of the radical criticism of today. In its attitude toward President Coolidge, for instance, it has been fully as unsympathetic and unfair as the conservative press has been toward Senator La Follette. But organs of criticism will not always be right in the things they attack any more than conservative organs in the things they defend. It is better to have frank, outspoken criticism, even if it is not always justified, than to have no criticism at all. The Nation always presents its point of view in a way to be reckoned with, and there is immense value in a searching investigation of the activities of our national life, political and social, and in criticism of the underlying motives and ideals, as well as of the effects, of political and social action. The fear of criticism is the deepest weakness in the life of America today. A free nation thrives upon the variety and openness of discussion, for only by that are sound principles and action determined. All great eras prove this; and only dead and lifeless epochs result from periods of stagnancy in criticism and of dead-level opinion. The Nation has performed its part in saving this country from such stagnation of opinion. Long may it continue to serve the same end!

A Notable Record

IN officiating at the ordination of his son, Edwin Holt Hughes, Jr., which took place recently at Hingham, Mass., Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, formerly Methodist Episcopal Bishop of New England, and now of the Chicago area, mentioned the fact that members of their family in three generations had given one hundred and sixty-four years of service to the Methodist Episcopal Church. If the Bishop and his son live to fill out the natural period of service this will be increased to a quarter of a millennium.

A Negro Hero's Memorial

A COLORED porter is going to have a Pullman car named after him, but it cost him his life to achieve this honor. When the Pullman Sirocco emerges from the repair shops, where it was taken after a wreck near Rockport Sag, N. J., on June 16, it will bear the name of Oscar J. Daniels, in tribute to the porter of that name who gave his life in the wreck to save the lives of his passengers. Daniels went through clouds of steam to close the door of his car when it left the rails and stopped near the engine. He closed the door but was mortally injured. He was still alive when rescuers found him and carried him out of the car, but he insisted that the doctors should leave him to attend first to a little girl. When they returned they found him dead. Yet some people—even people who take to themselves the sacred name of Christ—will continue to talk about "Nordic supremacy" and an "inferior race"!

The Parson's Overhead

UNDER the above heading Walter A. Dyer, of Amherst, Mass., has sent to The Congregationalist a pointed survey of the salary and expense problem as it confronts the minister of low salary. While the items seem high in one or two instances—cost of telephone for example—they are very low in other instances. The minister, wherever he is situated, anywhere in localities where the thermometer goes down to zero, is fortunate if he gets by with $100 for fuel. Most ministers, also, would add several legitimate and necessary items to Mr. Dyer's list of strictly overhead expenses, and most ministers of proportionately higher salary would find their overhead expenses increased in proportion. Statements of actual overhead expenditures, such as Mr. Dyer has drawn, would be of value for comparison and for their practical comment on the situation which has led Mr. Dyer to make his survey, viz., the reason why so comparatively few college men are preparing for the ministry. Mr. Dyer's statement is as follows:

Of the graduates of an Eastern college which was founded a hundred years ago for the express purpose of educating students for the ministry, only two or three finish each year with the avowed intention of becoming clergymen.

Why is it that so few young men of promise are today preparing themselves for the ministerial profession? Many answers have been given which shed light on the subject without solving the problem, but none has been more convincing than that of a Massachusetts pastor who stated his problem in simple terms of domestic economy. Leaving out all considerations of service or religious idealism on the one hand and the desire for material prosperity on the other, it is almost impossible for many clergymen to support their families on the net returns of their profession.

Because the salaries are too small? Partly that, of course, but chiefly because the overhead and current expenses are disproportionately large. This man's salary is $1,200 a year plus a rent-free parsonage. Not so good, and not so bad, perhaps. But here is where the rub comes:

Lighting	$75
Fuel	100
Books	100
Periodicals	50
Telephone	60
Wedding certificates	10
Baptismal certificates	3
Parish Christmas cards	10
Convention expenses	50
Postage on church letters	25
	$483

This minister maintains that the parsonage is his business office and that these are all legitimate business expenses, amounting to 40 per cent. of his income. He asks what man would accept a $1,200 position in a business office if he were expected to pay out of his salary all the expenses of heating, lighting, travel, postage, entertainment, telephone, printing, and stationery.

Well, what's the answer?

The "Good Old Days" Again

AS in almost every excursion into "the good old days" there is a great deal in the backgrounds of life sixty years and more ago, as they appear here and there in Paul Revere Frothingham's Life of Edward Everett (reviewed elsewhere in this issue) to shake the confidence of those who complain of the times, of youth, and especially of the colleges.

It is interesting to discover that Holworthy Hall at Harvard was built back in 1813 out of money raised by means of a public lottery. Later, in the forties when Everett became president he was appalled at the situation that confronted him in the moral laxity and undisciplined character of student life. During the first month of his presidency, and before his inaugural address, which Emerson described as "chilling and melancholy," Everett had come to the conclusion that the University was "in a condition bordering on complete disorganization; its discipline a mere shadow; of religious influence not even a pretense, and the whole state of morals frightful beyond anything I could have believed possible." The details of this situation are sufficiently set forth in the chapter dealing with Everett's presidency. Incendiarism, intoxication, rowdyism, thievery, sexual immorality, and shocking indecencies are in the record made by the president himself, and if Percy Marks had had the portrayal of that time, The Plastic Age would be sufficiently mild in comparison.

In view of the fact that drinking among students is one of the things commonly declared to be prevalent today, and that the carrying of pocket flasks is charged to Prohibition, it may be worth while to compare conditions today with those of this pre-prohibition era. Drinking then was "one of the most persistent abuses of college life." Thomas Wentworth Higginson had described some of his classmates as "boozy," and as disturbing chapel service at six o'clock in the morning. The situation was such that President Everett gave up the use of wine himself, ceased to serve it at College functions, and "procured the passage of a College law excluding wine from all entertainments provided by the Corporation."

That journalism, public services, and other agencies in Everett's day were marked by no higher-mindedness than prevails at present is evident in many pages. Thurlow Weed's utter, and apparently malicious, misrepresentation of Everett's equipage, in a letter from London describing the Ambassador's part in the pageant attending the prorogation of Parliament, is a sufficient reminder that a journalist of eminence could be yellow even eighty years ago.

Also if present-day statesmen—as Secretary Kellogg, for instance, in his recent dealing with Mexico,—are inconsiderate of the interests of peace and of the obligations of the highest diplomacy in their relations with other nations, one may turn to the entry in Everett's journal (page 433 in Dr. Frothingham's biography) in which Sumner reports Seward's unrestrained and unprintable—in these columns at least—references to France and Britain. The provocation was great, but Lincoln had a much better, and more effectual way of dealing with individuals and nations, and, fortunately, Lincoln, contrary to the belief of some of his associates, was the strong man, and in a quiet, effective way the ruler, in his Cabinet.

All in all, history, even of recent generations, does not entirely destroy respect for the present, or hope for its achievement in character and service.

Will It Be Necessary?

DR. JAMES L. BARTON has gone to the Near East. It is no secret that one purpose of Dr. Barton's going is as Chairman of the Near East Relief to examine carefully into the whole work and discover in what way the budget can be reduced for the coming year. The amount of the proposed reduction is appalling in view of the nature of the work and the uncompleted tasks. One cannot contemplate the continued need and opportunity and the proposed—and seemingly inevitable—retrenchment, without exclaiming, Will it be really necessary?

We feel all the more like raising this interrogation having sat in recently with a group of writers and journalists to whom the facts concerning the Near East and the present conditions were laid bare with considerable detail. Has there been anywhere in history a more glorious undertaking? Or one more expressive of the noblest aspects of American ideals? We doubt it. Apart from the actual saving of life, the type of idealism, reinforced in sheer grit and courage, displayed by young Americans in the Near East has been unsurpassed in the annals of war or peace. It is not simply a creditable record; it is a page of history illuminated with pure gold.

To leave such glorious promise unfulfilled is in a measure a betrayal of those who have served, and who have carried the work through days of horror and despair. The task is by no means finished. The marvelous organization and efficiency that have been displayed in the rescue of thousands of orphans are being further exemplified in the bringing of these orphans to self-support. The establishing and upbuilding aspects of the Near East Relief's work are no less amazing than the actual feeding of the starving. Apparently not a dollar of Near East money is going to the encouraging of idleness or indifference. There is no futile or indiscriminate "charity," but everything is related to sound development in individual and social reconstruction.

Any such retrenchment as is contemplated will be directly at the expense of a great task. Near East workers fully realize this. They know that the garment ought not to be cut as proposed, but they are face to face with the fact that they must cut according to their cloth. They cannot continue to assume heavy debts and obligations without assurance of continued support.

Cannot full support be continued for awhile longer? Can America for her own sake afford to retrench in this work until her noble undertaking—the moral mandate she accepted—has been fulfilled? As we came from this gathering of journalists the other day the first thing that met our eye in the early edition of an evening paper was the headline, Bank Deposits the Largest in Our History. There was a sad incongruity between the suggestion of that headline and the film we had seen just a few minutes before of little children working like grown men and women, doing their part to help themselves. Can America with its full coffers weaken, or cut, the bond that binds us to these who still need our aid?

The Scopes Case

IT would appear that our contributing colleague, President Irving Maurer, has "started something" in his plain-spoken editorial in this issue based upon the Scopes case. If we know our constituency there will be wide approval of what Dr. Maurer has written, and probably at the same time equally wide dissent. Some who agree in the main with Dr. Maurer's statement of fact will not follow him entirely in his interpretation and will regard his sympathies and emphasis as misplaced at the present hour.

President Maurer is himself a progressive thinker and leader. He is not an apologist for obscurantism and reactionary conservatism. But he is zealous for the integrity, sound policy, and high-mindedness of his own cause. He deplores—and rightly in our judgment—the excesses of modernism, the tendency toward the assertion of sweeping and sensational negations, the lack of patient leadership in trying periods of transition, the willingness, if not eagerness, to shock, antagonize, and drive into opposition the more conservatively minded, and the general failure to pursue a course calculated to win confidence by persistent emphasis upon the ultimate verities and by the constant manifesting of constructive purpose.

We agree with that criticism, but it seems to us that Dr. Maurer has made it altogether too sweeping. His editorial hardly does justice to the careful and constructive way in which many progressive leaders in the modern church have sought to do their work, and it ignores the fact that in conspicuous instances—as in the case of Dr. Harry E. Fosdick for example—it is the most intensely evangelical of modernists that intolerant Fundamentalism has singled out for its most persistent attacks. Also, if the high, and to us approved, standard which Dr. Maurer sets up is to be used as a basis of judgment it must be applied all around. The sensational modernist who neglects the essential verities of the Gospel to deal with controversial issues in divisive ways is not to be more condemned than the sensational Fundamentalist who does the same thing—except, perhaps, and this may be Dr. Maurer's point, that the man who claims to be free and enlightened ought to know better. We shall not dissent widely from Dr. Maurer's arraignment of the sins of omission and commission of modernists and modernism.

But we do dissent from his over-emphasis upon these as causes of the situation in Tennessee, and we cannot share what seems to us the inadequacy of his sympathies in the Scopes case, and his unduly apologetic attitude toward those who are responsible for putting in the criminal dock a young teacher whose only offense was that he taught, we presume in no unwise or offensive manner, what pre-eminent scientists and many eminent Christian leaders, since the days of Henry Ward Beecher, have openly believed and taught.

We believe that the tendency of Dr. Maurer's editorial is toward seriously underestimating the desperate nature of the struggle symbolized by, and the issues involved in, this case. Nor can we agree that the right attitude is for men who love freedom of thought and teaching to pursue their course calmly and let a Scopes, here and there, be the unaided martyr or scapegoat. We have no higher respect than has Dr. Maurer for the chief counsel for the defense. He is a cynical and flippant free thinker, who gives one the impression of dallying with truth in the day of humanity's need. The humblest Christian who approaches God in reverence, and humanity in love, seems to us to have attained a higher position than the agnostic who makes a positive creed of his agnosticism. But we do not deplore the association of a non-Christian lawyer with this case. If he is fighting for liberty he is to that extent on the right side, and in this case it is not Christian liberties that are at stake, but the liberties of men as citizens. The whole fabric of liberty gives way when recourse is made to law to uphold or suppress opinion especially in matters affecting religion, where reason and conscience should be the sole sanctions.

The recognition of the sincerity and zeal for the faith, as they understand it, of many conservative Christians should not be allowed for one moment to blind us to the ignorance, dishonesty, and tragic consequences that are inevitably associated with all effort to maintain truth and establish religion by methods of intolerance and legal suppression.

Let us face the facts squarely. A great deal of this intolerance, no matter how sincere or well-intentioned it may be, arises from an attitude that is essentially and inherently dishonest. It arises from that which in the world of business would be regarded as false pretenses. The sin of presumption is the sin that lies at the foundation of these attempts to settle matters of science and philosophy by law and majorities. The humble Christian, strong in his faith, and practicing his faith in love and sincerity, is to be distinguished from the bigot, professing a knowledge that he does not possess and presuming to settle issues which he has never taken the trouble to understand.

Let us not be misunderstood. We have the deepest respect for Christian character and humility, wherever they are found and with whatever opinions they are associated. We have a deep sympathy with those who are perplexed by the problems of the world and by the difficult issues of science, philosophy, and religion. We can understand also the alarm that many feel in an age of changing standards, when the very fabric of church and society often seem imperiled. But we have no respect for those who meet with bigotry and intolerance a situation that demands inquiry, patience, and a recognition of the rights of others. The fact is that a great many people whose innate honesty and sense of propriety, apart from fear for their safety, would restrain them from meddling with an intricate machine, do not hesitate to meddle in the most presumptuous way with the intricacies of the world of thought, of scientific inquiry, and religious philosophy.

Upon these presumptuous souls the lessons of the past are wholly lost. They are either oblivious, or careless, of the fact that they are the successors of those who threw Galileo into prison and haled Bruno to the stake. They have also never discovered the plain lesson of history that error, as well as truth, persists in spite of persecution and intolerance. Open inquiry and right ideas are the only forces that can conquer error. In these matters honesty and humility go hand in hand, and we join most heartily in President Maurer's prayer: God grant for us all, modernists, fundamentalists, more of the humility of a genuine faith in God.

From One Presidency to Another

IN this issue will be found the report of Dr. George W. Nash's inauguration as President of Yankton College, upon the duties of which office he will enter in September, when he retires from active leadership in the Congregational Foundation for Education. Dr. Nash's service with the Foundation has been fittingly recognized by the trustees in a resolution which will be found on another page.

Dr. Nash's work will lack the widespread appreciation that it ought to have in the denomination at large because in the nature of the case only comparatively few can have followed in an intimate way the details of the Foundation's activity. It is those who have had such intimate knowledge who bear the highest tribute to what Dr. Nash has accomplished. He was called to leadership in a somewhat experimental undertaking, under most discouraging and difficult conditions. The problems in the colleges themselves were baffling, in some instances almost to the point of despair, and it soon developed that in the churches at large there was a far deeper, and more widespread, apathy concerning the Christian colleges than had been anticipated by those who had placed high hopes upon the Foundation. It is doubtful whether Dr. Nash himself realized all the handicaps and difficulties when he entered upon the work. But he took hold with a will. He went directly at the heart of the problem in seeking to put the colleges themselves upon a sound foundation of methods and standards, and what he achieved in this direction will never be fully realized. In general it may be said that whatever is to be the future of the Foundation, or under whatever agency its work is done, Dr. Nash has helped to demonstrate the permanent need of the work that the Foundation has existed to do. He has helped to establish a basis of order and integrity where there was at least a measure of chaos, and the importance of this cannot be well overestimated. Confidence in the colleges, in the integrity and sound business principles of their administration, in their standards, atmosphere, and influence, are at the very basis of permanent progress towards adequate support.

It remains to be seen whether the mind and conscience of the whole church can be aroused to a new sense of responsibility, but it is a profound mistake to regard the mission of the Foundation as having failed. Dr. Nash has helped to achieve real results and to create a new vision. He has helped to demonstrate a vital need, which Congregationalists may yet find a way of meeting. The determination that in some form the work of the Foundation shall go on is the best evidence of the results of his leadership. The spirit in which Dr. Nash has done his work has commended him to all who have had relationships with him during his term of office. He goes to his new and responsible position with the good will of the whole Congregational fellowship, and with best wishes for outstanding success in the tasks of a college presidency.

Welcome Americans

THE country at large should have a deep interest in the Citizens' Day just observed at Brockton, Mass. That city has for many years held out a helping hand to the newcomers through its Y. M. C. A. Americanization classes. In the unusual pageant of Brockton's centennial, in 1921, the families of many nations appeared in native costume, making a brilliant finale. Citizens' Day, June 30, was set apart by municipal proclamation and a half-holiday declared. Sunday pulpit messages preceded in popular preparation. A notable parade of 15,000, including former representatives of 22 nations with colors of their fatherlands, moved to the Fair Grounds where great events were staged. There 167 "graduates" received "diplomas" in the form of naturalization papers. Addresses were made by Mayor Bullivant, Harold C. Keith, Congressman Frothingham, and James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, stressing responsibilities and opportunities.

All this has essential value in securing co-operative thinking and action. We should like to see such a program organized by the new citizens themselves. For however significant this occasion is, there are in every sizeable city hundreds of youth annually coming to the franchise through reaching majority. Their arrival has not yet been specially heralded. We value the Brockton idea but we hope it means simply appreciation and sympathetic guidance, not a suggestion that there is nothing for newcomers to do "because America does it all."

Further, there is the thought expressed by Rev. E. H. Gibson in the First Church calender, which is worthy of inward digestion by the sponsors of the Day:

In a real teaching process the teacher learns more than the pupil. Those who presume to instruct newcomers in citizenship must live out the things they teach. Native sons and daughters dare not be lukewarm in this business of Americanization. They must point the way and take the lead.

It is the purpose of the local committee to provide such a program triennially. Already thousands of descriptive letters have been sent out, including 500 to American consuls abroad, detailing the plan with a view to its general adoption in America.

My Sympathy in the Dayton Case

A Contributed Editorial by President Irving Maurer

IT may be the reaction within me from the exploitation of the Dayton case in the daily press, but I have no hesitation in expressing, before this trial is heard, my sympathy with the church folk of Tennessee. My sympathy, of course, goes out to the young teacher who defies the law which would curb his spirit of truth. I cannot help feeling sorry for him, sorry that he was not left to work out his problem, even if it meant a bit of martyrdom. Martyrs, even today, have their work to do. But I cannot help looking upon him as a pawn in a game—he would have been more important if overzealous protagonists of one side or the other had left him to face his battle alone.

In expressing my sympathy with the church folk of Tennessee I do not wish to be thought of as at all in agreement with their theology, nor with their mistaken effort by legislation, to control public school education. Such attempts are wrong; they are futile. I have done all my preaching on the basis of recognizing evolutionary theories as steps toward the more wonderful revelation of the ways in which nature works which is dawning upon the world. I believe, even if we shall find some day how the life principle flashes into reality, that there is God in the world, that our spiritual natures are our realest selves, and that a spiritual approach to life is the most adequate.

The reason why my sympathy goes out to the church folk of Tennessee, the people who passed this "anti-monkey" law, the people who will probably convict Mr. Scopes of breaking this law, is because I think that in their concern for the Bible and for God, they are absolutely right. The methods they have pursued are wrong, but I honor them for holding that the Bible, that faith in God, that the human soul, are of paramount importance, and I think that we modernists, so called, should, before we laugh the Tennesseeans out of court, try much harder than we seem to be doing to establish in their minds the assurance that we, too, believe the Bible, faith in God and the human soul, as of paramount importance.

Some one wrote me the other day from New York asking me to subscribe to a fund to finance the defence of Mr. Scopes. I shall not subscribe one dollar. Instead, I shall be endeavoring, in season and out of season, to defend the supremacy of the religious life over all other human interests. There is a way of teaching an evolutionary theory which amounts to the veriest mechanism, and I think that the Christian people of Tennessee have a right to protect their children from such teaching. The burden of the argument rests upon modernism to show that a scientific account of life in a modern world is an affirmation of the values and the faiths which the religion of Jesus supplies. And how can such things be made plain to the people of Tennessee, if the defence of Mr. Scopes' effort to teach the truth is in the hands of a lawyer who says when asked if he believes in God, "I am not sure."

My sympathy goes out to the church folk of Tennessee because they will probably win in a mistaken effort to maintain a righteous idea, and that will be expensive for them. But the church folk of Tennessee, if they win or lose, will only be won over to a modern conception of life if it can be shown them, by the religious spirit in the lives of modern thinkers, that God lives, that we are his children, that God's most adequate revelation is through the life that was in Jesus, the life of love. God grant for us all, modernists, fundamentalists, more of the humility of a genuine faith in God.

From Our Western Editor

President Emeritus Edmund J. James of the University of Illinois died a short time ago. He came to the university when it was a second or a third rate school and he made it one of the great state universities of the country. He was probably as loyal to the type of education furnished by state universities as was any man in the country. He gave himself during all the years of his administration to building a school that would not only measure up to the highest in education, but to producing one that would go as far as possible in making character dominant in student life. It would have been easy to have accused Dr. James of being committed to tax-supported schools as over against privately endowed colleges.

In view of these facts his will, which was filed for probate the other day, is a very interesting document. The reports do not indicate the amount of the estate, but show that it is to be divided into four equal parts, the three children to receive one-fourth each of the estate and the remaining one-fourth to be divided equally among the following: McKendree College, Lebanon, Illinois; Illinois Women's College, Jacksonville; Illinois Wesleyan, Bloomington, and the Wesley Foundation at the University of Illinois. McKendree College is a small denominational school; Illinois Women's College is now fairly well endowed, but it has had a long struggle with poverty and the same is true of Illinois Wesleyan.

Dr. James was the son of a Methodist circuit rider, if I remember correctly, and was one of a large family. All of them are brilliant and all well educated, and so far as I can recall all of them started their education at a small college. Dr. James, even if he did have the millions appropriated annually by the Illinois Legislature for the state university, knew intimately the sacrifices and the poverty of the small privately endowed college. His will indicates that he believed that both the tax-supported and the privately endowed schools should continue to do their work in the field of education.

Two or three years ago, Illinois Methodists put on a successful campaign for financing their colleges. They and Methodists in other states did this at the very time that the denomination was asking immense sums of money for its centenary fund. Presbyterians in Illinois are just now in the midst of a campaign for $3,000,000 for their colleges and for their work at the University of Illinois. One of the leaders and substantial contributors to this fund is Senator McKinley, who lives in Champaign and who has been and still is an ardent supporter of the University of Illinois. He built, in memory of his father, a church for the Presbyterian students at the university and made a short time ago a liberal contribution to our work there. Of the $3,000,000 set for the goal, Presbyterians have already gotten $2,000,000 subscribed.

President Cowling of Carleton College, in the issue of The Congregationalist of June 18, gave what seems to me to be an absolutely true estimate of the attitude that Congregationalists now assume toward their colleges. For fear our readers have not paid sufficient attention to this statement, I will quote it:

Of one thing I am perfectly sure, namely, that higher education under Christian auspices will collapse in the near future if other denominations take no more interest in it than our Congregational Churches have in the last fifteen years. As a denomination, we apparently feel no responsibility for our colleges and the rank and file of our people are giving nothing for their support. Congregationalists here and there, as individuals are, of course, greatly interested in colleges as they are in many outside undertakings, but this fact can hardly be interpreted as representing an adequate program on the part of the denomination as such.

From my point of view, higher education represents the greatest opportunity before Congregationalism and, in view of the history of our denomination in this field, it represents also its greatest responsibility. But in spite of this inheritance, Congregationalists of this generation have completely failed to carry even their fair share of the support of this great interest. I am sorry to say that I find an almost complete indifference to the whole problem on the part of our Congregational leaders themselves.

The inauguration of President Nash at Yankton may serve to remind us of the influence of that college in the State of South Dakota, as an example of what denominational colleges are doing for Christian education. It is not too much to say that Yankton has set the educational standards for its state. This has been freely admitted by leaders of other educational institutions of the state. A large number of Yankton trained men and women have gone into the Christian ministry and other forms of Christian leadership around the world. The college has maintained a warm, helpful, evangelical atmosphere and a modern, free, theological outlook. It has succeeded in bringing the Christian men and women who have made up its faculty into almost a family relationship with the students, in dormitory and classroom. Its students have not only had high academic standards, by which to measure themselves, but they have been constantly measuring themselves by the lives of noble men and women, who were living in a sacrificial way. The college has been, along with many other denominational colleges, a center of sacrificial life, of plain living and high thinking, exemplified in its president and in the members of the faculty and the staff. The college has been one of the strongest supporters of the Congregational churches of the state and of the Congregational Church in Yankton and has done this without laying the least emphasis upon sectarian advantage.

Time and space would fail to recount, even in the briefest way, the influence of Oberlin, of Olivet, of Ripon, of Beloit, of Northland, of Carleton, of Grinnell, of Tabor, of Yankton, of Fargo, of Whitman, of Kingfisher, and of many others, affiliated with our own or with other denominations. The educational life of the Middle and Far West, as well as of New England, would have been infinitely poorer without the contribution that these schools have made. The tax-supported school can never produce the atmosphere, the impact of life upon life and the type of education that the privately endowed school furnishes. We need both types in American life; both should be kept strong and should measure up to high standards. We now have and shall continue to have a large number of people who will want their children educated in a state school, but on the other hand we shall always have a multitude who will choose the other kind for their youth.

Out of fifteen years' experience in traveling over the Middle and Far West I am thoroughly convinced that our Methodist and Presbyterian brethren are wise and farsighted in planning generously for the future of their colleges. What about Congregationalists? Are we to stay permanently in the state of indifference which President Cowling so well describes? Have we lost our passion for Christian education of the type furnished by the schools fostered by Congregationalists? Are we going to practice the doctrine of cutting off any demand made upon us that costs us trouble and compels us to raise money? Our people are growing richer and richer, but our benevolences are at a standstill and there seems to be a disposition in a good many of our churches to take the attitude, that if raising benevolences and endowing schools interfere with our ease, let's cut out the benevolences and the endowments. Before we become confirmed in this attitude, we ought seriously to consider the future of Christian education and its relationship to the welfare of the churches of Jesus Christ.

Chicago, Ill. R. W. G.

The Hill of Gold

By Emma Seabury

Across the ravine, with its crag and its rill,
Its lichens that cling, and its mosses cool,
Where the path winds down to the foot of the hill,
And the fern fronds wave by the placid pool;
And the squirrels frisk and the orioles trill,

Is an upland slope where the maple nears
The sturdy oak, and the beech, and the pine
Like a silhouette in the blue appears,
Reaching its arms in a clear cut line,
Tuning its harp to the song of the spheres.

The billows of goldenrod yellow and dun,
Undulate upward and on, and afar,
Billows of glistening gold in the sun,
Foamy and fringed with the glint of a star;
Movement and murmur, and one by one

Glamor and glory, and shimmer and shine,
Sweeping up to its tufted crown,
Rally and ripple and dimpling sign;
Then a glittering sea comes surging down
Its driftweed floss, as spun gold fine.

It glimmers and glances all day, and strong
It gleams bright out of the even then,
And it sings to my soul, the world-old song,
Of the love and beauty God gives to men,
If we gather it in as we pass along.

No toil for the visions my dawns unfold,
O souls, how can we be poor or mean?
The Apocalypse of His love is unrolled
Across my heart, as across the ravine;
Making me rich in my hill of gold.

The Situation in Tennessee

Backgrounds of the Scopes Case

By Rev. M. S. Freeman

Pastor of Pilgrim Congregational Church, Chattanooga, Tennessee

TO give in the space of a short article any adequate account of the situation here is impossible. At most only a few outstanding features can be briefly noted.

1. The law, which forbids the teaching in tax-supported schools of anything that conflicts with the story of the creation of man as it is given in Genesis 1 quite literally interpreted, is popular with multitudes, probably with a majority of the people of the state.

2. Their view can be stated in this way: The Christian religion stands or falls with the Bible. The Bible stands or falls with the theory of its inerrancy in every statement. The theory of evolution conflicts with the statements of the Bible. Therefore, to allow its teaching is to destroy the Christian religion. This view is implicit in a recent statement by Governor Peay, from which I quote a single sentence: "In my judgment the state had better dispense with its schools than with its Bible, and we are keeping both."

3. This view, based on identifying the Bible with the theory of its inerrancy, is being pushed with fanatical zeal, and, too often, with the art and the unscrupulousness of the demagogue. I quote from the announcement of a lecture on evolution which was given here July 5:

"Dr. Martin's subject will be 'Hell and the High School Evolution or Christ.'

"Large window-cards are now being placed with his photograph and that of his father, under which is printed 'Martin's Ancestors.' On the other corners are photographs of two monkeys under which is printed, 'Is this your grandfather?' and 'Is this your grandmother?' "

Farther on the announcement goes on to say: "This campaign does not mean to get religion taught in the tax-supported schools, but it does mean that, if religion cannot be taught, then it should not be undermined, submarined, attacked, and destroyed there. The people are being taxed to pay teachers to drill this evolution teaching into the children almost from the primary to the university, which is a flagrant violation of the spirit of the Constitution of the United States, which guarantees religious liberty. To compel us to send our children to tax-supported schools and then pay teachers to drill into their minds that the Bible is a tissue of lies, and that the Savior was not God's real Son but the illegitimate son of a fallen woman, all under the plea of science, when it is not, means the crushing of religious liberty and the trampling under foot of the Constitution of the United States."

4. Such statements and Bryan's fling about "the hand that writes the pay-check" have carried conviction to the minds of thousands and have aroused in their hearts just such fanaticism as once found expression by means of gallows and stake. In spite of the many comic elements, the seeds of untold tragedy are here in abundance.

5. It is not merely the tax-supported schools that are attacked in this propaganda. For instance: Here is the University of Chattanooga, a college with high standards of scholarship, founded and largely maintained by the Methodist Episcopal Church. It has been denounced by one of the prominent pastors of the city as "Chattanooga's hell-hole of iniquity" and "a hotbed of infidelity." Another, pastor of one of our larger churches, has attacked in his pulpit and in the press, both the university and its president, who, in his baccalaureate sermon, ventured to suggest that there is such a thing as Theistic Evolution, a thing that has been ignored or denied in practically all the anti-evolution statements. This pastor announced the withdrawal of his own children from the classes of the university and advised his congregation and all Christians to follow his example.

In fact, a general warning against the colleges and universities of the whole country has been repeatedly sent forth from many sources.

But how about the other side of the question? Are there no ministers with broader views to lift their voices in behalf of tolerance?

Here my first-hand knowledge is largely limited to the conditions in and near my own city, but I believe they are fairly representative of the state as a whole.

It is true that many, even among the pastors of our larger churches, even some highly educated men, are strongly on the anti-evolution side.

But there are also many wholly out of sympathy with the Anti-Evolution Law and with that spirit of intolerance of which it is an expression.

Among these are varying attitudes in the matter of taking a public stand on the question.

Of course the Unitarian and Universalist Churches are outspoken in their denunciation of the law. The Rector of the leading Protestant Episcopal Church of Chattanooga, who has just been appointed Bishop Coadjutor of Florida, preached a strong sermon in behalf of tolerance, and gave it out for publication. For the Congregationalists, I have tried, in my pulpit and in published sermons and statements, to let it be known that Congregational Churches have room for both Fundamentalist and Modernist, if only each will keep his temper and give to the other that toleration he asks for himself.

Among the others there are many who privately have expressed the greatest sympathy with and approval of my attitude and statements.

But they themselves have to walk very warily in their public utterances.

It is not at all that they fear any consequences that might befall themselves, but they, very wisely as I think, shrink from forcing an issue in their own churches which would quickly and surely provoke division and strife, serve to intensify the feeling in behalf of the narrower views, and accomplish little or nothing in that general broadening of views which they may hope to gain by the slower processes of education, when the passions aroused by strife have been cooled by the passing of time.

As for our own mission and task in such a time as this:

It is something, and not a little something either, to have even a few churches here of a genuinely evangelical spirit, whose pastors are free to speak out for truth and freedom, for progress and tolerance, without hindrance and without fear. "And this will we do."

What can you, of the Congregational fellowship throughout the country, do for us?

Laugh at us as little as you can.

Pray for us as much as you can.

Our task is not an easy one, and much that is very precious to all of us is hanging in the balance.

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Steamer and the Skiff

We were on a great Ocean Liner, I and Keturah, and we were entering a Port in a strange land. And the Ship steamed up toward the Dock and then the Engines stopped, but the tide was outward, and the Ship was slowly drifting away. And there was a Skiff beside the dock, and in it was one lone man. And he rowed his little Skiff out to the Ship.

And the Boatswain flung down to him a Small Cord. And the man in the Skiff took the end of the Cord, and rowed to the Dock, and handed the end of the Cord to certain men who stood thereon. And they pulled in the Cord, and at its farther end was a Rope.

And they pulled in the Rope, and at the farther end was a Cable. And they fastened the Loop of the Cable on an Iron Post of the Dock.

And the Donkey engine began to snort and clank, and the Capstan began to turn, and the Steamer warped its way to the Dock. And all the Passengers went ashore.

Now the little Skiff, with one man to row it, could never have pulled the Steamer up to the Dock, but it was well able to carry the end of the Cord. And the Cord drew the Rope, and the Rope drew the Cable.

There be times in the course of human events when Mighty Causes lie helpless in the Offing, or drift away from their moorings and become derelicts, not because they have no Engines or Cables or Capstans, but for lack of some Adventurous Soul in a Small Craft who will carry a Line ashore. And sometimes hath God honored men of Small Ability, but who used wisely and righteously the Ability they had, in carrying a Line to where it could pull a Cable and bring the Purposes of God to Port. And thereby have some Commonplace men served their generation well.

The Angel of Hell's Half Acre

By James M. Warnack
Of the Editorial Staff of the Los Angeles "Times"

"TAKE this money, go get a bath and a good dinner, and tell me your hard-luck story later—if you want to."

"But, Brother Tom—"

"No arguments, my boy. You're now in my home—and your home, too. However, I'm boss here—so do as I tell you."

That is the way the "down-and-outer" is handled by "Brother" Tom Liddecoat, superintendent of the Midnight Mission in Hell's Half Acre in "The City of the Angels."

"When society spends as much money, time, energy, and intelligence in the business of salvaging wrecked human beings as is now spent in reclaiming desert and swamp lands, we'll have a better, happier nation—and, incidentally, we shall have more money, time, intelligence, and labor for the reclamation and preservation of our country's great natural resources," says Mr. Liddecoat.

Angels with feminine faces and white wings have been painted so often that it is difficult for the average person even to imagine the existence of a "he" angel, minus the pinions, but "Brother" Tom is just that. Like the founder the Salvation Army, Tom's one ambition is to lift the fallen and, while his methods may be and have been criticized by many well-meaning persons and organizations, the results achieved thereby challenge the attention of all men and women engaged in social service, not to mention religion.

The New Way

Eight years ago Mr. and Mrs. Liddecoat were "scattering their forces," as it were, by serving on boards of various charitable organizations of Los Angeles, besides doing a great deal of "uplift" work as individuals. Recognizing the need for an institution for human "driftwood" in the down-town district, they organized the Midnight Mission. When Mrs. Liddecoat left this "bank and shoal of time" for her home in the land of Glory (please, Mr. Editor, don't say "when she died"), she bequeathed the Midnight Mission to her husband and received his promise to "carry on."

"I did not want the Midnight Mission any more than you want a white elephant," said Mr. Liddecoat when I visited him recently at the Mission, 136 South Los Angeles Street. "However, the men of Hell's Half Acre needed me—and God said 'Go.' I realized what it meant when I promised to devote my life to this work. I knew that it meant I would have to throw aside my dress suit, white gloves, and patent leather shoes, roll up my sleeves, and go to work. However, I do not regret my decision."

"Brother" Tom has spent the larger part of a considerable fortune in his work of taking human driftwood and converting it into temples of beauty and strength. During the last eight years he has given from ten to eighteen hours a day in the service of the men the church seems to have forgotten. Within the last eight years 40,000 men have knelt before the golden cross in the little Mission chapel and promised "Brother" Tom that they would return to the homes which they had deserted. Every day an average of 1,500 men walk in and out of the chapel and not a day passes that at least 300 ragged, unkempt men, of various ages, do not kneel, often for the first time in years, to whisper "Our Father who art in heaven."

There are times when those attending the services fall asleep in their chairs but in such cases they are never awakened, either by a sexton or by the critical voice of the preacher. They are allowed to get their sleep out—for sleep is often their greatest need, and none knows this better than Tom and his co-workers.

Between 400 and 700 men are given at least two meals every day at the Midnight Mission, and every night 400 weary bodies find lodging at the institution. True, the sleeping cots are not of the best but they provide rest and a place of refuge which "beats de city jail all to heck," according to one of the fortunate guests.

Deplores Jail System

By way of paranthesis, it has been remarked, by those supposed to know, that the jails of Los Angeles are not the favorite rendezvous of respectable criminals. As a matter of fact, even the decent citizens of Los Angeles recently became so ashamed of the city jail that they decided to build a new one—one that will hold undesirables and that will compel rats and lice to seek other headquarters.

However, with all due regard to the law, the courts, and necessary houses of detention, "Brother" Tom declares that the modern jail system is a mistake. He would like to see jails abolished and substituted for by "houses of persuasion."

"A house of persuasion is better than any prison," said Tom. "The strongest force on earth and in heaven is love, and if that force will not make men better, we'd better pray the Almighty to give us a new and better method. Do you know that it costs this county from $500 to $1,500 for every man tried by a jury? On the basis of economy alone we should find a better way to deal with our 'undesirables.' The hungry, friendless man will commit crime, regardless of his reputation. It is the business of the Midnight Mission to be on the lookout for such men and to steer them in the right direction."

On the south side of the Midnight Mission are several cheap eating houses, a tailor shop, a fortune teller's parlor, and a barber shop which advertises fifteen-cent shaves. To the north of the Mission is a wholesale drug house. Remembering the drug establishment I was reminded (I know not why) of the subject of Prohibition and I asked Tom how the Eighteenth Amendment had affected his "boys."

"Listen, son," he answered. "I lived here twenty-five years with the saloons going full blast. I attended hundreds of sunrise courts—and many times pledged my word that the 'drunks,' if released by the judge, would behave. I've handled thousands of intoxicated men. I've seen them fall from their seats, by the scores, at services in the chapel. God forbid that we should ever see such days again! It's bad enough as it is. It's bad enough that druggists are still allowed to sell the poisons that they do to persons not having prescriptions. I'm not going to name the brands of stuff they sell—I don't care to advertise them, and they're too well known already. However, deplorable as conditions are, they are better than they were in the old days."

Although dope is said to be harder to obtain than formerly, the number of addicts, for some reason, is apparently not diminishing, and Tom admits that many old drinkers, deprived of their daily fire water, have become drug fiends. Hardly a week passes that Tom does not engage in an actual physical conflict with a man crazed by dope. Today he exerts all the strength in his body to the effort of conquering a "dope"—and tomorrow the same man is kneeling at his feet, weeping from a combination of physical weakness and sincere gratitude for Tom's interference with his program. If Tom has not actually cured these men, he has at least proved to them that "somebody cares" and he has planted in the hearts of scores of such creatures the seed of future redemption. And Tom believes in redemption.

"The redemptive forces are the only forces which have made for universal progress since time immemorial—yes, even before the coming of Christ," said Tom. "Did you ever consider the fact that nothing is so bad that it cannot be redeemed—re-made and directed to glorious uses? Lincoln said this nation could not exist half slave and half free. Neither can humanity make true progress and attain salvation with half of society enslaved by poverty and sin and the other half apparently immune to evils. We must go forward as a race. Those who are strong must be the saviors, under God, of those that are weak. Look at that boy—do you think he was worth saving?"

"Brother" Tom pointed to a young man who approached us with a smiling face. "Come here, lad," he invited, and the young fellow walked up to the table at which we were sitting. "Did you mean that little prayer you prayed last night? Yes, I believed you did. Here, take this dollar, go out and scout around a little and see if you can find a job. Come back to see us if you fail—and come back, some time, anyway. Remember I'm your friend, boy—and that God is your friend."

"Soured on the World"

"He came here last night, ragged, dirty, and worn out from seeking employment," continued the superintendent, as the young man walked away. "We gave him a bath and a supper and put him to bed upstairs. This morning, after he'd had another bath and a good breakfast, I fitted him out in some decent clothes. He doesn't look like a hobo, does he? See that old man over at the end of the table? He is eighty years old. He used to be a judge. He had a large family and, apparently, many friends —but he 'got in bad' some way or other and the world seemed to turn against him. He lost the little money he had, his wife died, and all his children deserted him. For months he lived alone in a little old dog house, a few miles out of town. He slept most of the day and came out only at night —didn't want to be seen or to see anybody. If ever a man was 'soured on the world' it was that man. It took me four months to win him. Day after day I went to see him, for many days receiving only curses from his lips. At the end of four months I said, 'John, come to our Mission. You shall be fed and clothed as long as you live and when you pass away you shall not be buried in the potter's field.'

"The old fellow broke down," went on Tom. "Tears rushed from his eyes—and I knew I had won him. It took us three days to get him really clean, but he has remained clean ever since. In fact, he's the Beau Brummel of Hell's Half Acre. Redemption? Nothing else counts."

"How do I stand the work? Well, say, son, the Lord is the source of all my strength. Oh, I've broken down two or three times—but always got back on my feet again. Besides, I'm willing to pay for what I'm doing—for I'm getting highly paid. Not that we're building up any special organization here. We're trying to persuade men to go back to the churches they have forgotten. Jews, Catholics, Protestants, and men of no religion—we welcome them all."

Meals at All Hours

"How often do you feed the men who apply to you for help?" I asked.

"Whenever we have food," he answered, simply. "However, our regular feeding times are noons, six P.M., midnight, and early in the morning," he added, smiling.

There is almost a tear in Tom's smile—and almost a smile in his tears. He is the sort of Santa Claus type that makes one feel glad that the world is as good as it is—and, at the same time, almost ashamed of oneself that one doesn't try harder (as Tom does) to make it better and happier.

"And you give food, shelter, and clothing to anyone who applies, without investigating their claims to charity?"

"My Lord didn't investigate a man's past when He was asked for help—and why should I?" was Tom's rejoinder. "I know how they criticize me for this sort of giving but, bless you, lad, I'm not worried about that. This is God's work. If he wants me to stop, all he has to do is whisper to me that I'm on the wrong track. So far, he seems to be on my side."

A Glad Reunion

"Lord, bless this food to the strength of our bodies and minds. Create new hearts within us. Remember our loved ones, wherever they are, and grant that the homeless ones here may be restored to those who love them."

"Brother" Tom had finished this brief prayer at the Midnight Mission and 400 hungry, ragged men had seated themselves to enjoy the midnight feast prepared for them.

The door opened and a young man, handsomely dressed, neatly shaved, with manicured nails and carefully brushed hair, and wearing a diamond pin in his tie, walked to the platform and accosted Tom.

"Pardon my interruption," said the youth, "but this is just one more chance out of a million. At the beginning of the war my brother and I entered the service of Uncle Sam. He was a sailor, I a soldier. We both went to France. My brother never returned home. My mother, in New York, is dying from grief. I have searched for the boy all over the country. Will you please call the name of Bud Bennett?"

"Is there a man here named Bud Bennett?" shouted Mr. Liddecoat.

From the far end of the long table a ragged, unkempt young man jumped from his seat and rushed toward the platform. His brother opened his arms to receive him and the two embraced, speaking no word for nearly a minute, during which time the hubbub ceased and the residents of Hell's Half Acre gasped with wonder.

"Home, brother, home!" sobbed the man wearing the diamond pin. "But first, the telegraph office."

"Home!" echoed the man in rags as he fairly dragged his brother from the room.

"Brother" Tom sat with his head bowed, in silence.

"Beats hell, don't it?" vociferated an ebony-faced diner to the "bo" next to him at the table. "Say, boy, but ain't this beef stoo the cat's whiskers?"

"Does the general public help you much?" I inquired of Tom.

"Occasionally," he answered. "Some of the restaurants give us food now and then, 'slummers' bring us clothes every once in awhile, and sometimes a big-hearted man makes us a gift of larger dimensions."

"How about the churches?"

"Well, they're all right," he said. "They let me make speeches from the pulpits and sometimes the choirs of the big churches come down and sing for us—and go back," he added, but without a touch of bitterness in his tone.

"In your recent trip over the country for the purpose of establishing similar missions in various cities did you meet with sympathy on the part of the churches and social workers generally?"

"Not as much as I had hoped," he replied. "You see, prosperous people are not always greatly interested in unfortunate men and women. I'm not blaming them. It isn't human, perhaps, that they should be—but sometimes I think that if there were a little more genuine Christianity in the world—"

He did not finish the sentence—and did not need to do so.

Where Credit Is Due

Although a prominent Mason and a student of literature as well as of life, "Brother" Tom has little patience with so-called rationalism nor with those cults whose adherents like to call things by high-sounding names.

"Why not give God the credit and be done with it?" said Tom.

A lover of men, and loved by the men, Tom has little difficulty in obtaining help at the Mission. No salary is paid to any worker, and the men who do the cooking and serving at the tables volunteer their time and effort as freely as do the men and women who conduct daily religious services in the chapel.

Thomas Liddecoat was recently appointed by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors as a member of the Juvenile Probation Committee. When I went to see him a few days ago he had just returned from a visit to the Home for Girls.

"Evidently there are young women who need redemption, too?" I remarked.

"Yes," he answered, "but when our boys are taught the dignity and glory of manhood we shall need fewer homes for fallen women."

A Birthday Prayer

By Alice Hartich

God, on my birthday, for the year just passed
I give thee thanks; thanks for the happy days
Spent in my home in busy household ways;
For hours spent with beauty unsurpassed
When wee buds opened, or when leaves fell fast;
Thanks for the friends who share each happy phase;
For all who help me with their love and praise;
And for the unknown world, so richly vast.

And may the year that I begin today
Be rich in service. May I meet each task
With joy; find pleasure in a simple way.
Above all other blessings, this I ask:
In ev'ry thought and action that I share,
May I be worthy of the name I bear!

Christian Workers in South America

IV. The Congress on Christian Work in South America at Montevideo

By Frank K. Sanders

THIS notable gathering gains greatly in importance when viewed from the vantage of a tour throughout South America. Its timeliness, its range, the fine quality of the personnel, the new leadership emerging, the soundness of the conclusions reached,—all acquire added force after one has seen Argentina, Chile, and the countries of the west coast, as well as Brazil and Uruguay, and can think in terms of the whole continent.

The congress began on Sunday afternoon, March 29, and concluded on Wednesday, April 8. It was representative in membership. All told there were 314 delegates and visitors. These represented seventeen different nations, ten of which were South American. There were none from Mexico, Panama, Central America, or the Caribbean Islands, because these are to hold a congress of their own, next year, on a plan similar to that of Montevideo. Thirty-five organizations of fourteen different denominations, among which the Methodists and Presbyterians were naturally best represented, sent delegates who reflected every shade of feeling and viewpoint.

The principal part of the program of the congress was the discussion and presentation of twelve reports on The Unoccupied Fields of the South American Continent, The Indians of South America, Education, Evangelism, Social Movements of Today, Health and Medical Ministry, The Church in the Community, Religious Education, Christian Literature, The Relations Between Foreign and National Workers, Special Religious Problems, and Co-operation and Unity. The data for these reports had been in the process of collection and critical estimate by groups of actual workers on the field—nationals and missionaries—for two years. They were put into readable form in New York, but distinctly represented the active field rather than editorial workers.

These reports were given frank discussion, one at each morning or afternoon session. Since they had been printed in advance—most of them in Spanish and Portuguese as well as in English—they needed no elaborate introductions. Such introductory remarks merely aimed at emphasizing the principles underlying each report and the matters in it which demanded free discussion. There was never any lack of discussion. In fact, rigid rules of debate had to be maintained. But the discussions did not, as a rule, elicit fresh data; they rather registered a growing tide of fellowship, self-determination, and essential unity in the interests of a great program. It is inconceivable that the congress shall not have put evangelical missions and evangelical interests in South America far ahead of what they have been.

While this judgment is shared by all who took part in the sessions of the congress, there was not lacking some excitement. Among the invited guests were several distinguished South American educators, who came primarily to attend the Educational Conference, held just prior to the congress and reported in the last article. A Chilean poetess, Sra. Gabriela Mistral, who could not attend the congress, but was in sympathy with it, although she is a Romanist, wrote a friendly letter to be read to the congress which was received with expressions of pleasure by the gathering. She also took the same occasion to write a stinging rebuke to Sr. Dr. Alfredo Palacios of Montevideo, a publicist, who had been asked, months before the meeting, whether he would accept a formal invitation to attend the conference and the congress, and had replied through the public press, denouncing the motives of those who attended as being commercial and exploitive. A copy of this second letter she sent to Dr. Inman, the secretary of the congress, who was a personal friend and purely for that reason. It was, of course, a private document. Incidentally, it agreed with Palacios in denouncing 80 per cent. of the Americans in South America as coming to spoil the country. A Buenos Aires Herald reporter who had overheard Dr. Inman quote with amusement that opening statement, jumped at the conclusion that the applause given by the assembly to Srta. Misral's letter was in response to this sentiment and cabled his paper to that effect. Although the whole matter was made wholly clear as soon as Buenos Aires papers could reach Montevideo, yet a very large number of British and American residents were for a time led into opposition to the congress.

At the same time there was some feeling within the congress over what some nationals and some missionaries regarded as going too far in the recognition of those who did not profess to be evangelical in relationship or conviction. But the sanity and freedom of the business committee of the congress, which under Dr. Robert E. Speer's chairmanship thrashed out every difficulty as it arose, led not only to a mutual respect and forbearance between the various groups never before attained in quite the same way, but to a real commingling of viewpoints and to a reaching of relative unanimity.

The president of the congress was Dr. Erasmo Braga of Brazil, the able leader of co-operative movements in that great nation. Dr. Braga made an impartial, dignified, competent guide of the work of the congress. He took full responsibility and was singularly felicitous in his incidental and official remarks. He was quite as satisfying to the foreign visitors and to the missionaries as to the nationals.

All sessions were held at the Hotel Pocitos in Montevideo, a summer hotel of ample capacity. The summer season was just over when the congress arrived. The fact that the whole congress was together, day after day, meant much for its ultimate success. After the first day, Mrs. Speer and Mrs. Cushman of New York, out of their abundant Y. W. C. A. experience, organized a scheme of seating at dinner time which had a remarkable effect in getting groups broken up and everyone acquainted. The sessions were held in a great room abutting on the broad veranda facing the open sea, which served the guests as a "Boardwalk." The murmur of the waves furnished an undisturbing undertone to the speaking.

South Americans of leadership are not greatly under the influence of the Roman Church. Many of them regarded the congress as one more "religious congress" at which ecclesiastical dignitaries would discuss purely doctrinal themes. When some of them realized that the congress was rather concerned over the practical application of Christian principles to the problems of modern life and was wholly loyal in spirit to South America, they completely reversed their attitude of indifference or tolerance. As a matter of fact, the congress talked about doctrine only once and that very briefly. It was far more concerned with social, national, and international relationships in the light of the teachings of Jesus. Dr. Exner with his message on health and sex education, Dr. Barclay with his fine presentation of the principles of religious education, the discussions of literature, of evangelism, of education represented some of the best thinking of the delegates.

Two interesting and instructive evenings were known as "nights of the open heart." At one of them the "intellectuals" who were guests of the congress opened their hearts regarding the needs of South America. What they said was keen, rather surprising to the Protestant mind, yet quite acceptable. It showed that it is the hierarchy which mainly blocks the way to the freest exchange of opinion and of aid between Evangelicals and Romanists. These men and women are independent of ecclesiastical control, and will surely begin to find a way soon toward reasonable co-operation with active and intelligent evangelical forces.

Later it seemed quite desirable to open an evening of this sort to the national evangelical leaders, lest they should have even a slight reason for feeling muzzled. The actual outcome was harmless, of course, although some steam was blown off.

There are nationals, perhaps a good many, who are beginning to crave the appearance of leadership. Some of them have not counted all the costs of responsibility. As a rule, however, they are sane, earnest, and sincere men of noble purpose and clear conviction. When entrusted with the power to direct, their real leaders are no more likely to abuse such power than we are. The new nationalism must be reckoned with in a spirit of Christian brotherliness, not only in Asia but all around the world. Its first result, so far as evangelical Christianity is concerned, will be to throttle militant denominationalism. It is true, as Dr. Boynton recently remarked, "Before Christianity can execute its giant swing, the denominational spirit must be set aside and our great fundamental unity be realized." With this conclusion the congress was in great sympathy.

The Congress at Montevideo certainly drew missionary secretaries, missionaries, evangelical leaders, and "intellectuals" closer together, It not only exhibited the capacity attained by the leaders of the independent Brazilian churches, and proved the value and the wisdom of a policy of self-determination, but proved also and quite clearly, that some missionaries and their efficient institutions are needed for some time to come, to help the nationals get strong. But its clearest note was on behalf of unity and co-operation. It is evident to any observer that the individualistic policy in South America of one great evangelical body and of several lesser groups is a bad policy, and that it is supported by fanatics at home far more than by earnest missionaries in active service. It would be fair to say that few missionaries are lacking in the spirit of brotherhood. The very representative group at Montevideo came out of the congress quite united in the determination to carry on as the South American section of the Christian world.

The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches

IV. The Catholic and Protestant Conceptions of the Church

By Professor Daniel Evans, D.D.
Harvard Theological School

THERE is no group of religious persons who speak so often, and naturally of the church as the Catholics. They certainly are churchmen. This idea has the central place in their thought, and the word falls naturally from their lips. While some Protestants think and speak in much the same way, most of us do not, but if and when we do, we do not think the same thought. Never was it more true that two persons, or groups, may speak the same word, but have in mind very different meanings. It is instructive to observe that when the Catholics go back to the New Testament and seek what it has to say about the church, they carry back with them the idea which they now cherish and read it into all the passages which directly or indirectly refer to the church and its officers. They do not exegete, but eisegete the passages; they do not read out the historical meaning, but read in their own meaning.

This unhistorical method of interpretation of the New Testament was the characteristic method of many Protestants yesterday and of a few today. The Congregationalist and Presbyterian and others sought and thought they found just their church polity and worship in the New Testament, and they made special and exclusive claims for them. Now, however, few if any of these denominationalists make such claims. They recognize that they cannot find support in the New Testament for the organization of their churches in every particular, though they believe that the simplicity of their polity and worship is more like the New Testament churches than others. Some Episcopalians and Anglican High Church adherents still think that the New Testament justifies all the claims they make for their churches. And the Catholics, in particular, are staunch in their claims that the fundamental features of their church are derived from the teaching and conduct of Christ himself. He chooses the apostles, gives the primacy amongst them to Peter, imparts the Holy Spirit to them, gives them the task of communicating unerringly the truth of God, and administering effectively the divine Grace. Christ founds the church, and the church is the one holy, Universal Church, which has come down through the ages, and which will endure forever. The greatest thing Christ did for the world was to give it this church.

Now when we go into the Gospels and read them in their own light, and not in the glare that our desires or our prepossessions throw upon them, the first thing we discover is the paucity of references with respect to the church in all Christ's teaching, and these are found only in the first gospel, and critical study of them makes it quite uncertain that he uttered these words, and suggests that they are due to the disciples after they themselves had founded the churches naturally and spontaneously from religious needs and under historical conditions.

Jesus was thinking of something else and greater; of the Kingdom of God. This was his central idea, and his great passion, and it was for this he gave his life. He gathered about him a few men; he wanted to imbue them with his spirit, have them think his regnant idea, and be devoted to his cause. He knew full well that men who thought in this way and were thoroughly devoted to such a cause would want to have fellowship with one another; they would work together, live together, and worship together. But they must all be brethren and no one was to be master over the others. He left such matters as organization, officers, administration, all matters of constitution and polity, to the historical conditions and demands. As he never wrote a book, so he never organized a church.

The Christian fellowship, therefore, is primarily a matter of a social group, with like purposes, ideals, truths, and spirit. It is the faithful disciples in their brotherly relations, with faith in Christ as the bond of their union, with assurance of redemption in their hearts in relation to God, with love for all their fellow-believers, and with a passion to serve and win others to a like faith in Christ. The church is not fundamentally nor primarily an organization, with its officers, high or low, but the people of God in their religious and ethical relations. The organization is made by the fellowship; the fellowship is not made such by the organization. The Christian Church as a fellowship of believers makes the ministers, pastors, and bishops; they do not make the church. "We the people," make the American Republic with all its officers, and we the people of God make the church with all its officers. There is nothing of the sacerdotal nor of the monarchical in Jesus' religion, nor in his fellowship. As the late Dr. Fairbairn well said:

Measured by the standard of a sacerdotal religion, Jesus was not a pious person; he spoke no word, did no act, that implied a priesthood for his people. He enforced no sacerdotal order, promulgated no sacerdotal law; but simply required that the people should be perfect as their Father in heaven. He never gave the name of priest either to himself or to any disciple. . . . The religion of Christ "stood amongst the ancient faiths as a strange and extraordinary thing —a priestless religion, without the symbols, sacrifices, ceremonies, officially hitherto held, save by prophetic Hebraism, to be the religious all in all."

A century or more passed before the sacerdotal church took the place of the spiritual society of Christians. And its organization it derived from the Roman political organization, from the municipality up to the Empire. As Sabatier says:

The parish modeling itself on the municipality, the diocese on the province, the metropolitan regions on the great prefectures, and at the top of the pyramid, the bishop of Rome and the papacy.

Religious Education

THE CURRICULUM OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, by WILLIAM CLAYTON BOWER (Scribners. $2.25). This is not only an interesting but a highly significant and important book. The great task to which leaders in religious education have now set themselves is the reconstruction of the curriculum. Of the need there is little question. Religious education, like general education, is passing beyond the stages in which the autocratic authority of church or teacher or subject matter and the teaching of lessons about religion can be taken as the focal points for the organization of the course of study. We are discerning the need for a dynamic curriculum of living experience with the pupil at its center.

Professor Bower is the Chairman of the International Council Commission on Curriculum and is engaged in directing the research necessary for the sound development of such a course of training. A curriculum of this sort can only grow out of experience and experimentation. Its success depends upon the sympathetic understanding of the aims and principles involved, and intelligent co-operation on the part of church-school leaders. This volume will contribute greatly toward such understanding and will point the way toward effective co-operation.

The author gives answers to such fundamental questions as these. What is education? What is its relation to life and experience? How may experience be enriched and directed so that it may lead toward definite spiritual results?

The final chapter is a fitting climax as it points the way to a dynamic training that seeks, not a static and finished result, but a life that grows from more to more.

The bibliography at the close is very complete and will furnish a rich mine of material for the student who wishes to pursue a thorough course of reading on this subject.

Inaugurates New President

Dr. Nash Becomes Head of Yankton College

DR. GEORGE W. NASH, for three years President of the Congregational Foundation for Education, was inaugurated President of Yankton College, South Dakota, June 10. The gathering from the academic and religious world for the ceremonies was unusually large and representative. The exercises were held in the Congregational Church, Dr. Warren presiding. The prayer was offered by President Camfield of Ward Academy, and there were addresses of felicitation by Dr. Warren for the trustees, Dean W. J. McMurtry for the faculty, Dr. Alvin Hansen of the class of 1910 for the alumni, by Robert Feyerharm for the students, by Supt. D. J. Perrin of the State Conference representing the churches of the state, and by Dr. E. B. Allen, of Oak Park, Ill., on behalf of the churches of the nation. Dr. Dan F. Bradley of Cleveland, formerly pastor at Yankton and for a time president of the college, gave a brilliant and timely address on the topic, "The Collapse of Pessimism."

DR. GEORGE W. NASH
Becomes President of Yankton College

The retiring president, Dr. H. K. Warren, was born at Cresco, Ia., in 1858, and graduated at Olivet College in 1882. He was principal of the public schools at Mount Pleasant, Mich., for a year and superintendent of schools at Hannibal, Mo., for six years. He was president of Gates College, Neligh, Neb., for some years and was head of Salt Lake College one year. He began his work at Yankton with the opening of the school year 1895-96.

His thirty years' experience in some particulars takes us back to that of the Apostle Paul. Dr. Warren has performed labors abundant. He has met difficulties and hardships of many sorts and throughout the thirty years he has had upon him the pressing responsibility of directing and financing a pioneer college. It would be interesting to know how many miles he has traveled and how many people he has interviewed during this long service. He could undoubtedly tell many an interesting story of the rebuffs and slights and victories in his seeking funds for his work. It is evident that in thinking of his service one must take into account, not only the length of the years, but their depth also. He has faced hardship, toil, bereavement, and almost overwhelming disasters and yet has never lost his faith and his courage. He began his life work with high ideals and these have grown in the demands that they have made upon him and he is a much greater man in every particular than he was when he began his service. It often happens that those who have had a like experience with Dr. Warren become disillusioned and lose faith. It has not been so with him. During these thirty years of difficult leadership Mrs. Warren has been his steady companion and his invaluable helper.

HENRY KIMBALL WARREN
President of Yankton College, 1895-1925

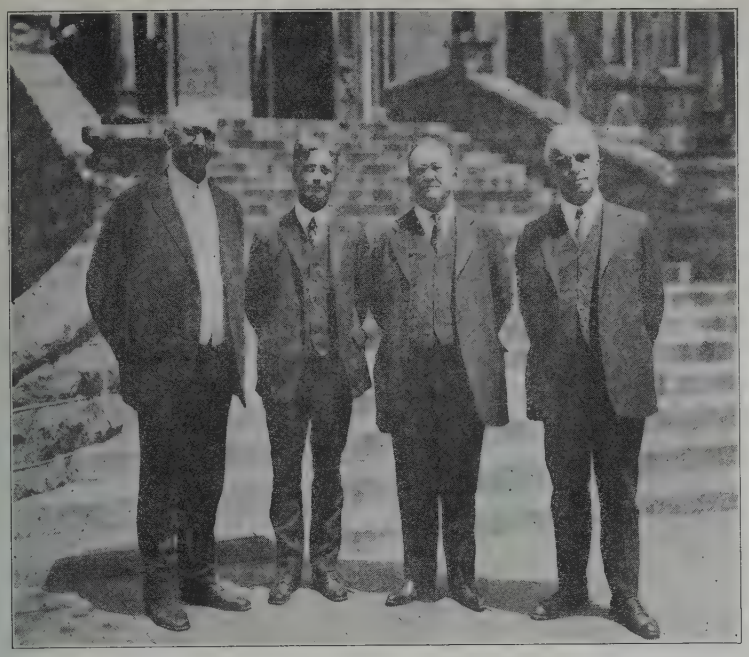
Dr. Nash, the new president, was born in Janesville, Wis., in 1868. His parents removed when he was just a boy to Canton, S. D., and the son was graduated from Yankton in 1891. For a year after his graduation he helped his father in the publication of the home paper, at the same time teaching mathematics in the Normal School at Canton. In 1893 he went back to Yankton as instructor and later became professor of Mathematics and Principal of the Academy and Normal Departments. He later studied a year at the University of Leipzig. In 1902 he was elected Superintendent of Public Instruction for North Dakota and resigned in 1905 to accept the presidency of the Normal School at Aberdeen. He was called to the presidency of the Normal School at Bellingham, Wash., in 1914, and served there until he became President of the Congregational Foundation in 1922.

In spite of the fact that the college has had one or two disastrous fires and has had to build itself into the life of a pioneer agricultural state, where money was scarce, Yankton has made a great contribution to education in the Northwest. It is hard to imagine what our churches would have done without the college, and the educational life of the state would have been immeasurably poorer without its contribution. The new president, in speaking of the path ahead, indicated that the service policy of the college will be maintained in its relationship to the alumni, to the churches, and to the other schools of the state. He promised that every effort would be made at once to do away with the menace of debt, which now threatens the college, and to provide the school with adequate facilities for its work, and that the Christian attitude, which has always characterized the college, should be maintained in every particular.

The commencement address was given by Dr. Ernest Bourner Allen of Oak Park, Ill.;

FAMOUS "THEGN QUARTETTE" OF EARLY 90'S OF YANKTON COLLEGE
Of which Dr. G. W. Nash was a member. Left to right: Rev. H. W. Jamison, Rev. J. P. Williamson, Dr. Nash (recently inaugurated President of Yankton), and Rev. Edward Burgi.



THE "THEGN QUARTETTE" IN 1925

twenty-one graduates received the degree of bachelor of arts and a considerable number were graduated from the Normal and Music Departments. The college begins a new administration with the consciousness of a great record and with a strong aggressive leader at the helm. When Dr. Nash came to the presidency of the Foundation he was quite unknown to the Congregational fellowship. In these three years he has commended himself to us as an educator and as a generous, brotherly, Christian gentleman. He will be able to realize on the investments of character and influence that Dr. Warren and the noble band of Christian men and women about him have made. He deserves and should have the help of our constituency in general in perpetuating the glorious heritage which has made Yankton possible.

Honorary Degrees

Bestowed at Recent Commencements

(Editors' Note—We shall be glad to receive from our readers any names which should be added to this partial list.)

D.D.

BELL, REV. ENOCH FRYE, Boston, Mass.—Middlebury.
BOWERS, REV. ROY EDWIN, Lakewood, O.—Oberlin
BRUCE, REV. ROBERT JOHN, Syracuse, N. Y.—Syracuse.
BRYN-JONES, REV. DAVID, Minneapolis, Minn.—Carleton.
CADMAN, REV. S. PARKES, Brooklyn, N. Y.—Yale.
CLARK, REV. ALDEN HYDE, Boston, Mass.—Amherst.
COFFIN, DR. HENRY SLOANE, New York City, N. Y.—Princeton.
ELIOT, SAMUEL ATKINS, Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard.
ERDMAN, PROF. CHARLES ROSENBURY, Princeton, N. J.—Princeton.
FISKE, REV. GEORGE WALTER, Oberlin, O.—Amherst.
FOLSOM, ARTHUR J., Fort Wayne, Ind.—Marietta.
FOX, REV. DANIEL FREDERICK, Pasadena, Cal.—Pomona.
FREEMAN, REV. MARSTON STANLEY, Chattanooga, Tenn.—Piedmont.
GILKEY, REV. CHARLES WHITNEY, Chicago, Ill.—Williams.
HODGDON, REV. FRANK WILBERT, Berkeley, Cal.—Dartmouth.
HOPWOOD, REV. JOHN L., Honolulu, Hawaii—Marietta.
HUNT, REV. WALTER REID, South Duxbury, Mass.—Bowdoin.
HUTCHINS, PRES. WILLIAM J., Berea, Ky.—Marietta.
IGLEHART, REV. CHARLES WHEELER, New York City, N. Y.—Syracuse.
JENNEY, REV. RAY FREEMAN, Galesburg, Ill.—Knox.
MACRER, PRES. IRVING, Beloit, Wis.—Oberlin.
MILLS, REV. GEORGE SHERMAN, Chicago, Ill.—Dartmouth.
MOORE, REV. JOHN M., Dallas, Tex.—Yale.
PAUL, REV. WILLIAM EDWARD, Minneapolis, Minn.—Grinnell.
PEARSON, REV. MILO EBER, Auburn, Me.—Bates.
POWERS, REV. WILLIAM HARRISON, Ithaca, N. Y.—Syracuse.
PYE, REV. WATTS O., Fenchow, Shansi, China—Carleton.
ROOTS, REV. LOGAN HERBERT, Hankow, China—Harvard.
TITUS, REV. HOMER FULLER, Troy, N. Y.—Syracuse.
WICKS, REV. ROBERT RUSSELL, Holyoke, Mass.—Williams.

LL.D.

ALLEN, JUDGE FLORENCE ELLINWOOD, Columbus, O.—Smith.
BARNES, CLIFFORD WEBSTER, Chicago, Ill.—Illinois.
BATES, KATHARINE LEE, Wellesley, Mass.—Wellesley.
BROWN, JUDGE FRED B., San Jose, Cal.—Knox.
BULLARD, ROBERT LEE, Governor's Island, N. Y. Columbia.
BUTLER, WILLIAM MORGAN, Washington, D. C.—Amherst.
BUTTRICK, WALLACE, New York City, N. Y.—Bowdoin.
CANNON, ANNIE JUMP, Cambridge, Mass.—Wellesley.
CATT, CARRIE CHAPMAN, New York City, N. Y.—Smith.
CHASE, PRES. HARRY WOODBURN, Chapel Hill, N. C.—Dartmouth.
CORWIN, EDWARD SAMUEL, Princeton, N. J.—University of Michigan.
COWLES, WILLIAM LYMAN, Amherst College, Amherst, Mass.—Amherst.
CUSHNY, ARTHUR ROBERTSON, Edinburg, Scotland—University of Michigan.
CURTIS, SEN. CHARLES, Topeka, Kan.—Washburn.
DORSEY, MRS. SUSAN MILLER, Los Angeles, Cal.—Pomona.
DUNMORE, WALTER THOMAS, Cleveland, O.—Oberlin.
FARRAND, LIVINGSTON, Ithaca, N. Y.—Dartmouth.
FINLEY, JOHN H., New York City, N. Y.—University of Michigan.
FRASIER, PRES. GEORGE WILLARD, Greeley, Col.—Colorado.
HADLEY, HERBERT SPENCER, St. Louis, Mo.—Harvard.
HAMMOND, JOHN CHESTER, Northampton, Mass.—Amherst.
HAMMOND, JOHN HAYS, New York City, N. Y.—Yale.
HANNA, CHARLES A., New York City—Marietta.
HANUS, PAUL HENRY, Cambridge, Mass.—University of Michigan.
HARDING, CHARLES FORD, Chicago, Ill.—University of Wisconsin.
HAZARD, CAROLINE, Peace Dale, R. I.—Wellesley.
HILL, DAVID JAYNE, Washington, D. C.—Bowdoin.
HOPKINS, ERNEST MARTIN, Hanover, N. H.—Yale.
HOSMER, JAMES KENDALL, Minneapolis, Minn.—Harvard.
HUSBAND, WILLIAM WALTER, Washington, D. C.—Middlebury.
IRVINE, MRS. JULIA JOSEPHINE, Paris, France—Wellesley.
KROPF, OSCAR ARMIN, Chicago, Ill.—Washburn.
KROPF, RICHARD EDWARD, Chicago, Ill.—Washburn.
MEAD, ELWOOD, Washington, D. C.—University of Michigan.
MONTGOMERY, MRS. HELEN BARRETT, New York City, N. Y.—Wellesley.
MORROW, DWIGHT WHITNEY, New York City, N. Y.—Princeton.
PARK, MARION EDWARDS, Bryn Mawr, Pa.—Smith.
PENDLETON, ELLEN FITZ, Wellesley, Mass.—Smith.
PINCHOT, HON. GIFFORD, Harrisburg, Pa.—Yale.
REED, HON. DAVID AIKEN, Washington, D. C.—Princeton.
SARGENT, JOHN GARIBALDI, Washington, D. C.—Middlebury.
SHEFFIELD, JAMES ROCKWELL, New York City, N. Y.—Yale.
SHIPLEY, PROF. FREDERICK WILLIAM, St. Louis, Mo.—Colorado.
STARR, MERRITT, Chicago, Ill.—Oberlin.
STONE, HARLAN FISKE, Washington, D. C.—Columbia—Williams.
STONE, MELVILLE ELIJAH, New York City, N. Y.—Knox.
STORROW, JAMES JACKSON, Boston, Mass.—Harvard.
THOMAS, AUGUSTUS ORLOFF, Augusta, Me.—Bates.
THOMAS, REV. NATHANIEL SEYMOUR, Laramie, Wyo.—Colorado.
WACKER, CHARLES H., Chicago, Ill.—University of Chicago.
WALES, GEORGE RUSSELL, Washington, D. C.—Middlebury.
YOUNG, OWEN D., New York City, N. Y.—Yale—Columbia.

Litt.D.

BAKER, RAY STANNARD, Amherst, Mass.—Amherst.
DARLING, J. NORWOOD, Des Moines, Ia.—Beloit.
ELLIOTT, GEORGE ROY, Brunswick, Me.—Bowdoin.
ESTEVE, EDMOND, Cambridge, Mass.—Bowdoin.
FRAME, MRS. ALICE BROWNE, Peking, China—Mt. Holyoke.
GRAY, DAVID, Portland, Me.—Bowdoin.
LEAVITT, CHARLOTTE MENDELL, Topeka, Kan.—Washburn.
MANLY, JOHN MATTHEWS, Chicago, Ill.—Yale.
MINOT, JOHN CLAIR, Boston, Mass.—Bowdoin.
MORIZE, ANDRE, Cambridge, Mass.—Middlebury.
PERRY, BLISS, Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard.
REPPLIER, AGNES, Philadelphia, Pa.—Yale.
ROBINSON, EDWIN ARLINGTON, Peterboro, N. H.—Bowdoin.
ROSTOVTZEFF, MICHAEL IVANOVITCH, Madison, Wis.—University of Wisconsin.
SHOREY, PAUL, Chicago, Ill.—Harvard.
THURSTON MRS. MATILDA CALDER, Nanking, China—Mt. Holyoke.
MCMASTER, PROF. JOHN BACH, Philadelphia, Pa.—Princeton.

(Continued on next page)

SCRIBNER, CHARLES, New York City, N. Y.—Princeton.

L.H.D.

HAMLIN, ALFRED DWIGHT FOSTER, New York City, N. Y.—Amherst.

NEILSON, WILLIAM ALLAN, Northampton, Mass.—Williams.

SEBRING, EMMA GOODEVE, New York City, N. Y.—Smith.

PRESTON, MRS. JOSEPHINE CORLISS, Olympia, Wash.—Carleton.

S.T.D.

COFFIN, REV. HENRY SLOANE, New York City, N. Y.—Columbia.

D.B.A.

PACK, CHARLES LATHROP, Lakewood, N. J.—Syracuse.

D.Mus.

FOOTE, ARTHUR, Brookline, Mass.—Dartmouth.

STOCK, FREDERICK H., Chicago, Ill.—University of Chicago.

WOLLE, JOHN FREDERICK, Bethlehem, Pa.—Princeton.

D.Sc.

ABEL, JOHN JACOB, Baltimore, Md.—Harvard.

BACON, DR. CHARLES SUMNER, Chicago, Ill.—Beloit.

BARTLETT, WILLARD, St. Louis, Mo.—Illinois.

BRYANT, ERNEST CALVIN, Middlebury, Vt.—Middlebury.

CROSS, WHITMAN, Chevy Chase, Md.—Amherst.

DODSON, JOHN MILTON, Chicago, Ill.—University of Wisconsin.

HALL, DR. MAURICE CROWTHER, Washington, D. C.—Colorado.

JEWETT, FRANK BALDWIN, New York City, N. Y.—Dartmouth.

JILLSON, WILLARD ROUSE, Frankfort, Ky.—Berea.

KELLEY, EUGENE ROBERT, Boston, Mass.—Bowdoin.

LANGMUIR, IRVING, Schenectady, N. Y.—Columbia University.

MERRILL, OSCAR CHARLES, Washington, D. C.—Bates.

MILLER, ROBERT TALBOTT, Baltimore, Md.—Amherst.

MILLIKAN, ROBERT ANDREWS, Pasadena, Cal.—Yale.

OLSEN, CHARLES, Brooklyn, N. Y.—Knox.

OSTERHOUT, WINTHROP JOHN VANLEUVEN, Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard.

SEARS, GEORGE GRAY, Boston, Mass.—Amherst.

TILESTON, PROF. ROLAND RAY, Claremont, Cal.—Colorado.

VAN SLYKE, DONALD DEXTER, Bronxville, N. Y.—Yale.

WARD, EDWIN ST. JOHN, Beirut, Syria—Amherst.

WHITE, DAVID, Washington, D. C.—Williams.

WILLIAMS, HORATIO BURT, New York City, N. Y.—Syracuse.

D.Ed.

BROWN, HARRY ALVIN, Oshkosh, Wis.—Bates.

Congregational Church, Olivet, Michigan

Probably no spot in Michigan is quite so quaint, interesting, and inspiring to Congregationalists as is Olivet. Here our Michigan College was established in 1844 by a colony, led by Father John J. Shipherd from Oberlin, Ohio. The first church service held in Olivet convened in the little log house of Mr. Shumway in February, 1844, and Father Shipherd preached the sermon. Afterward the services were held in the upper story of one of the college buildings. This building burned in 1851 and Colonial Hall at the college became the chapel. It was soon outgrown and the following year a frame building accommodating about 300 was erected upon a site furnished by the college. This building was outgrown in 1865 and a large addition was added, the upper floor being used for church services and the lower for recitation rooms. This building was used for the church services for more than a quarter of a century. It still stands upon the campus and is used for chapel and recitation purposes.

The present structure was dedicated in 1894. It is a blending of the Romanesque and Gothic styles of architecture and the material used is native field stone. It has many beautiful memorial windows and will seat about 1,100. The close relationship of this church to the college has given it unusual influence. Many strong men and women who are giving leadership in positions of great responsibility today made life decisions in this church. It has had such outstanding preachers as Dr. Butterfield, Joseph Estabrook, H. H. Goodwin, J. L. Daniels, Clarence T. Brown, James A. Blaisdell, and others. The same close relationship is maintained with the college at present under the leadership of Dr. C. C. Smith, who combines unusual strength in intellectual preaching with fine leadership in religious education and in pastoral service to the youth.

The Congregational Foundation for Education

An important meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Foundation for Education was held in Chicago on June 23. In view of Dr. Nash's resignation from the presidency, to become President of Yankton College, this meeting was of unusual importance in discussing the future work of the Foundation, and in its recognition of Dr. Nash's services.

In this connection the trustees put on record the following resolution:

In accepting the resignation of Dr. George W. Nash, the Trustees of the Congregational Foundation for Education place on record their high appreciation of the service rendered by Dr. Nash. Coming to the Foundation at the beginning of its existence, he has faced most perplexing problems of organization and administration to which he has given extraordinary devotion, patience, and wisdom. Unsparing of himself, he has maintained his interest in all our educational institutions on this continent and shared in their counsels and difficulties. He has won both our esteem and affection. We yield him to the responsible task to which he goes at Yankton College with earnest wishes for his continued success in the educational field.

Plans for continuing the work until the National Council meets were made as indicated in last week's Congregationalist. Dr. Nash will continue in active relationship as President until Sept. 1, and after that date in official relationship until after the National Council meeting, Dr. Bennett, former President of Doane College, taking charge of the Chicago office after Dr. Nash goes to Yankton until a permanent successor is chosen.

Other action taken by the trustees is summarized in the following statement sent us by the President.

At the meeting of the Board of Trustees yesterday we had with us a representative group. Twelve men were here and worked hard all day long on the Church's problems in education. We were glad to have two men from the Pacific Coast, two from Massachusetts, and others representing the great stretches of the country between. Strong men, able men, to consider together the work committed to the Foundation.

It came out in the meeting that all obligations of the Foundation have been met with the exception of some eight to ten thousand dollars, and the President was instructed to make a special effort to secure between now and Sept. 1 sufficient funds to wipe out the indebtedness. Then, following the National Council meeting, the Board of Trustees or its successor will be in a position to make such new grants to the institutions as the situation may warrant.

Piedmont College was placed on the Foundation's list as a result of the audit recently made by Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., on the assurance of the President and the Board of Trustees that the recommendations of the auditors would be carried into effect.

The committee composed of Messrs. King, Cowling, and Allen, who had formerly conferred with a like committee from the Education Society, was given authority to continue negotiations with a view to securing the harmonious consolidation of the Education Society and the Foundation.

A committee composed of Dr. Cowling, Mr. Mason, and Dr. Allen was instructed to prepare a suitable resolution on the death of Dr. Marion LeRoy Burton, deceased member of the Board.

A committee composed of Messrs. Blaisdell, Dan Bradley, and Montgomery presented a resolution on the retiring President of the Foundation, copy of which is enclosed herewith.

Dr. Baird, the Foundation's representative in the reorganization of Pacific University, reported at length on that institution.

The President of the Foundation reported that a plan for bringing to Billings Polytechnic Institute the united support of Baptist and Congregational societies had been recommended by a joint committee of the two national Boards and had already received the approval of Baptist Board and Baptist Convention of Montana. The proposed merger was unanimously approved by the Foundation and now goes to the Congregationalists of Montana for final ratification. In case of favorable action on the part of Montana Congregationalists, the union will become effective.

It was voted to continue indefinitely the office of the Foundation in Chicago with the understanding that Dr. John N. Bennett, Secretary of the Board and former President of Doane College, shall administer the office after Sept. 1 until a successor to the present President is secured.

The printing of a Foundation report for the year 1924-25 was authorized.

It was voted to continue adjustments with former Kingfisher students who are attending Fairmount and Drury.

Cordial endorsement was given to the movement to replace the school building recently destroyed by fire at Thorsby Institute.

The voting of grants to institutions was delayed until after the meeting of the National Council.

The Report of the Committee of Twelve on Missionary Organization was presented. The Board of Trustees passed a series of resolutions, as follows:

In reviewing the tentative report presented to us by the Committee of Twelve on Missionary Organization, and responding to the request for comment, the Trustees of the Congregational Foundation for Education are moved to make the following suggestions:

1. We feel the importance of stressing the work to be done by the denomination and the motives for carrying it on as over against the primacy of any form of reorganization for accomplishing it.

2. Assuming that some reorganization is to be undertaken, we favor a division on the basis of the various types of work administered rather than by the historic society alignments, and we recognize that this must be achieved through a process of development.

3. We feel that the four or five-fold plan of reorganization proposed by the committee would be more effectively in accord with these considerations than the two-fold plan now approved.

4. We believe profoundly that any form of reorganization will be vitally defective which does not provide for a greatly increased emphasis upon our educational responsibility and opportunity as a denomination, particularly as related to institutions for higher education, the work for which the Foundation for Education was primarily created and is now responsible.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

Finding God More Vitally

Where can the soul find God? How can the soul come into personal relations with God? What shall the soul do, that wants to know the God in whom it believes, and not be shut up in mere dogma?

God is revealed to us in creation. We feel that this marvel, the universe, demands an adequate explanation; we do not find an adequate explanation save in the thought of a self-conscious, eternal Personality. God is indicated to us by our own nature; we are spiritual beings, and we feel that there can be nothing less than a spiritual eternal Being at the heart of all life. We hunger unceasingly for the companionship of loved ones gone before, for satisfactions we do not get in this world, for the perfecting of our imperfect nature; we feel that the universe must in some way guarantee our spirits' satisfaction, and we can find the guarantee only in a God of love.

We find out about God by studying life in its multitudinous marvel as it is spread out before us. An open-minded study of nature helps us to know how God has worked during the ages, and is working now. The deposits in the bowels of the earth, the markings upon the high mountains, the sunrises and sunsets that glorify the skies of city and country, the colors of the wayside flowers, the vast stars that hurl themselves onward with inconceivable velocity through space no mind can comprehend, all are books written by the finger of God, and we learn about God by learning the facts they proclaim. The investigations of science are searches into the mind of God. The experiences of humanity down through the ages, as we read them in great history and biography and philosophy and poetry and fiction, make another volume through which we learn of God.

If you would find God aright, seek enlarged ideas about him. The Eternal must be filled with a vast pity as He beholds the crude, narrow, pigmy, derogatory ways in which his defenders so often think and speak of him. Rid yourself of all thoughts of a God of favoritism, revenge, cruelty, or anything else unworthy of an ever-living, divine Spirit. Seek the most majestic thoughts of God that you can find, the loveliest thoughts, the most honorable. Cultivate uttermost sincerity in your thinking about God, and in your giving of yourself to him. If you do otherwise you may be able to fool yourself, but you cannot fool God. Hold in your mind the thought that only truth can live, and that truth must be something worthy of being everlasting.

You find yourself to be spirit, in the ultimate; God is Spirit. Invite Spirit to commune with spirit. Offer spirit to live with Spirit. There is a difference between "saying one's prayers" and communing with God. It is possible to new-model the thought of one's quiet time with God, so that that time becomes something greater than a mere asking for favors. That time can become a joyous consciousness of God's enfolding presence, an opening of oneself to his wisdom, his influence, his power, his inspiration, his Spirit. Then the "practice of the presence of God" begun at that time can be carried out into all the day's activities, and by it your life can be lifted to a new level on which you continually live in the atmosphere of peace, and calm, and joy, because you have given yourself to absolute confidence in a God who is both Light and Love.

Closet and Altar

THE HONOR OF WORK

Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord.—Jer. 21: 16.

Never shall any man meekly and humbly take up some duty, occupy some lowly sphere, accept some difficult lot in life, or go forward to his cross, but he shall find and fulfil the work of God.—W. M. Clow.

The day's work! The thing you are tired of; the thing you think you know so well; the thing that holds for you no surprises, no revelations, no thrills of joy, no abiding satisfactions of spirit. Perhaps you do not know as much about it as you think. Perhaps you have only seen the earthly aspect of it—the wrong side of it, so to speak. The face of God, the peace of Jesus Christ, the light of the Spirit—you may find all these in the day's work if only you will believe it. This is God's way into our lives. This is our way into his life. This is the secret of sainthood—serving the divine Master as every day's work requires, recognizing the divine law in all human necessity.—Percy C. Ainsworth.

When I reflect how small a space I fill
In this great teeming world of laborers,
How little I can do with strongest will,
How marred that little by most hateful blurs—
The fancy overwhelms me, and deters
My soul from putting forth so poor a skill:
Let me be counted with those worshipers
Who lie before God's altar and are still.
But then I think (for healthier moments come)
This power of will, this natural force of hand—
What do they mean, if working be not wise?
Forbear to weigh thy work, O soul! Arise
And join thee to that nobler, sturdier band
Whose worship is not idle, fruitless, dumb.

Edward Cracroft Lefroy.

It is very significant that in every recorded instance the Apostles were busy at their daily work when the Master called them. Peter and Andrew were fishing; James and John were mending their nets; Matthew was sitting at the receipt of custom. God never visits an idle or unserviceable life.—David Smith.

Men are made for tasks and in them they find their satisfaction. Manhood untaxed by problems falls into decay.—Charles H. Brent.

One thing I feel sure of, and that is, if the Lord sets us free, we shall want to remain his servants forever.—C. H. Spurgeon.

O Lord, I have a busy world around me; eye, ear, and thought will be needed for all my work to be done in this busy world. Now, ere I enter on it, I would commit eye and ear and thought to thee. Do thou bless them and keep their work thine, that as through thy natural laws my heart beats and my blood flows without any thought of mine, so my spiritual life may hold on its course at those times when my mind cannot conspicuously turn to thee to commit each particular thought to thy service. Hear my prayer, for my dear Redeemer's sake. Amen.

Thomas Arnold.

[Assembled by Isaac Ogden Rankin]

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

God's Smile in Nature

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic for August 2-8

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: God's Friendliness as Expressed in Nature.—Matthew 6: 23-30; Psalm 145: 16. (An outdoor Consecration Meeting.)

Light from the Bible Passages

Jesus was an outdoor man. Almost from necessity he had to live outdoors. He appears to have loved it. Many of his illustrations are drawn from it. In God's providential care of the birds and flowers Jesus saw evidences of his Father's love for all his creatures. No want of ours goes unnoticed by him. Worry over these things has no place in the mind of one who believes in God. Worry does not add a single hour to life. Worry is a sign of lack of faith in his love and trust in his knowledge. The omnipotence of God is at the disposal of his creatures. No worthy desire of his creatures goes unsatisfied.

Leads for the Leader

If possible arrange to have this meeting out-of-doors. It will give just the right setting. Perhaps your pastor will be glad to assist and invite the older ones to go out with you. Do not bother about an organ. Sing hymns that will "go" without it.

Think of God's power as expressed in the things which he has created. The movement of the sun and moon and stars above. The rivers, waterfalls, trees, flowers, grass.

Think of God's wisdom, in the provision of the seasons, the snow and the rain, the springs and streams of water, the adaptation of these things to those who need them.

Think of God's love, in his care of the smallest of his creatures, the young and helpless. How does he sometimes seem cruel in nature—storms and earthquakes?. Does he send them?

Have some one read extracts from some of the more beautiful nature poems.

Thoughts for Members

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.
A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;
A tree that looks at God all day,
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in Summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

—Joyce Kilmer.

For the cool of the waters that run through the shadowy places,
For the balm of the breezes that brush my face with their fingers,
For the vesper-hymn of the thrush when the twilight lingers,
For the long breath, the deep breath, the breath of a heart without care;—
I will give thanks and adore thee, God of the open air!

—Van Dyke.

A Moment of Prayer

We thank Thee for that love of thine which everywhere we see. We look too much at ourselves, our weaknesses, and faults. Open our eyes, we pray, to thy greatness and thy goodness, so plainly revealed in all things which Thou hast created for our sakes and for our enjoyment. Amen.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Science and Religion: Evolution, etc.

THE EARTH SPEAKS TO BRYAN, by HENRY FAIRFIELD OSBORN (Scribners. $1.00). The Scopes trial in Tennessee gives immediate interest and importance to this popular discussion of the points at issue, by an eminent scientist, who is also a Christian believer. We do not know how a dollar could be better spent at present than by procuring this book. Its value consists quite as much in the discriminating judgment which it brings to bear upon the whole question of evolution as in the effectiveness of its reply to Mr. Bryan. There is a distinct danger that in reaction from the anti-evolution propaganda there may arise a popular tendency to regard everything as scientifically authoritative that bears the label evolution. Professor Osborn shows how persistent investigation has as definitely discredited some conclusions and speculations of certain evolutionists, as it has confirmed and vindicated the essential truth of the doctrine as established in the observations of Darwin and later investigators. He distinguishes between the truth of the evolutionary doctrine and the speculations that have been built upon it, and he asserts, as the irrefutable evidence of science, two "new and somewhat unexpected truths," viz., "first, that man has not descended from any known kind of monkey or ape, fossil or recent," and second, that "man has a long, independent, superior line of ascent of his own." For the development of these truths and the evidence for them the reader must consult Professor Osborn's volume itself.

THE DOGMA OF EVOLUTION, by LOUIS T. MORE (Princeton University Press. $3.50). This volume of nearly 400 pages contains the substance of the Louis Clark Vanuxem Lectures, delivered at Princeton last January. Though the author is Professor of Physics at the University of Cincinnati, he has approached his subject more from the religious and philosophical points of view than from the scientific. This, however, does not imply a disregard of the scientific standpoint, for Professor More constantly brings scientific conclusions under the most rigid scrutiny. But his viewpoint arises from his purpose which is the criticism of evolution as a dogma applied to the whole of life. In this connection he has anticipated the objection that his book deals too largely with conclusions and theories that, as Professor Osborn points out, have been discredited and superseded, by emphasizing this purpose, viz., "not to discuss the validity of evolution as a scientific biological theory but rather to trace the effects of its application to the broader fields of social life and religion."

Professor More believes that the results of years of scientific investigation "have been that, today, the evidence available supports our faith in a general law of evolution." He also declares his opposition to "the futile and foolish attempts to prohibit by law the teaching of the science of biology and of evolution, or to limit the full inquiry of biological phenomena." He considers, however, that evolutionists from a purely scientific standpoint have claimed much more than demonstrable facts warrant, that there is a gap that has never been bridged between organic and inorganic, and that if the evolutionary process be symbolized in a film there would be great stretches of blank film upon which science as yet has no record.

Professor More's position hardly seems consistent in acknowledging "a general law of evolution" and at the same time taking an almost sweepingly negative attitude toward the probability of an evolutionary process in the outworking of God's laws in the sociological and spiritual realms. His outlook is altogether too individualistic, and his distinction between the natural world as rational and the spiritual as "irrational" is an amazing distinction for a scientist. We may be far from the discovery of the laws governing the "miraculous" and the spiritual world in general, but how can one who surveys the processes of God in nature assume that God's laws are not as "rational" in their own sphere and as definitely operative in the spiritual world as in the natural? If there are evidences of a general law of evolution its significance, operation, and application would apparently be wider than Professor More seems to admit, though he is right in challenging the too ready assumptions and sweeping conclusions that even eminent scientists have based upon partial evidence. Especially is he right in challenging the rôle of biologists in invading with conclusions derived largely from their own field the spheres of sociology and religion.

BOTH SIDES OF EVOLUTION: A DEBATE, by CHARLES SPURGEON KNIGHT, D.D. (Field Pub. Co., San Jose, Cal.). A sort of points-for-debaters volume, which presents much summary of real fact and argument and a great deal of mere twaddle.

MAN'S LIFE ON EARTH, by SAMUEL CHRISTIAN SCHMUCKER (Macmillan. $2.25). In this book a Christian evolutionist, Emeritus Professor of Biology in the State Normal School, West Chester, Pa., presents in non-technical language the story of the earthly life of man. It is a popularization of the discoveries and conclusions of eminent scientists concerning human origins. In the concluding chapter the author discusses with good judgment the relation of these conclusions to religion. The book is interesting, instructive, and helpful toward faith.

EVOLUTION, KNOWLEDGE AND REVELATION, by STEWART A. MCDOWALL ($1.00). This volume by the chaplain and senior science master at Winchester College, England, contains the Hulsean Lectures delivered at the University of Cambridge last year. It is addressed by a student of evolution to those who are interested in the philosophy of Christianity and in the concept of Progress. The study centers around the fact and nature of Personality and the type of knowledge that marks the deepest association of personalities. This culminates in the knowledge of God, known through the friendship of Jesus, and the author's conclusion is that "evolution in its upward progress amounts to a course of preparation to qualify us for the intimacy with Jesus by which we acquire this superior species of knowledge."

THE DECLINE OF MAN, by STANTON A. COBLENTZ (Minton, Balch. $2.75). Too complacent evolutionists who assume that human progress is inevitably onward and upward would do well to consider this rather jarring note of Mr. Coblentz. His book is somewhat sensational, but it is none the less a valuable criticism of modern life and a searching revelation of the forces and weaknesses that if not checked may well make for the extinction of man. Such a book is pessimistic only to a very superficial view. In reality it is a book of high optimism, and its concluding chapter, Is There a Doorway Out?, is marked by much sound, if unconventional, and probably unpopular, wisdom. A book well worth reading.

TODAY AND TOMORROW SERIES (Dutton. Each, $1.00). In this series Messrs. Dutton have brought together some notable little volumes, all of scientific import, and all of unusual interest, though they are not of equal value. What I Believe, for instance, by Bertrand Russell, seems a book of little value except as an illustration of what some men would substitute for Christian religion and Christian morality. Far saner and more wholesome, freer in spirit because not marked with the dogmatisms of negation is C. J. Patten's The Passing of the Phantoms: A Study of Evolutionary Psychology and Morals—an exceedingly interesting, suggestive, and stimulating volume.

In Tantalus, or The Future of Man, F. C. S. Schiller discusses the dangers and possible results of racial deterioration and the avoidance of such deterioration by eugenic reform and the bringing of human life into conformity with law. This volume with Daedalus, by J. B. S. Haldane, and Icarus, by Bertrand Russell (the last two formerly reviewed) constitutes a notable trinity of scientific discussion.

Callinicus, by J. B. S. Haldane, is a "defense of chemical warfare." This eminent chemist does not believe that wars are over and he thinks also that chemical warfare will be more humane than warfare with explosives. Such warfare will be shorter, more decisive, and more dependent on brains and organization than on numbers. Is it not time, however, that brains and organization found their highest task in preventing war. If men are bound to have war the most humane war would probably be the one that destroyed mankind leaving nobody to fight.

The Mongol in Our Midst, by F. G. Crookshank, is an illustrated study of "man and his three faces," in which an eminent English doctor presents evidence in favor of a three-fold origin of the human race.

Narcissus: An Anatomy of Clothes, by Gerald Heald, is a most interesting study of evolution in relation to fashions and architecture. It is a book of unusual charm and originality.

THE DISCOVERY OF INTELLIGENCE, by JOSEPH K. HART (Century. $4.00). This book covering the borderlands of science and history, with special reference to the nature and progress of education, has particular value at the present time. Published last year, and without any reference to the Scopes case or specifically to evolution, it goes right to the heart of the issues that lie back of this trial in Tennessee. It is the story of why men think, and why they don't, of the struggle of intelligence against superstitions and prejudices, against customs and habits. It is a book for the average reader as well as for the student, copiously illustrated, and valuable alike for its historical survey of the progress of knowledge and for the help it offers in the development of a right attitude in the continued quest of truth.

Any book mentioned in these columns may be obtained through the Pilgrim Press Book Stores. 14 Beacon St., Boston, or 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

The Epistle of James

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for August 2
James 1: 19-27

The Epistle of James is attributed to James, the brother of the Lord, who seems to have been a prominent member of the mother church at Jerusalem. We know him chiefly through his epistle which reveals the practical churchman rather than the mystic or theologian. In his whole outlook and influence James was probably more Judaistic than this epistle suggests. He seems to have put his influence upon the side of those who required from Gentile Christians homage to certain matters of Jewish law, particularly the question of circumcision dealt with in the last lesson.

Does this lesson illustrate the fact that a man may be astray in his theories and yet fairly sound in his practice? Is not the position of James somewhat typical of the history of the Christian Church which has always combined insistence upon certain forms and creeds with definite emphasis upon practical goodness? At any rate, it is satisfying to discover that if James was something of a formalist he was at least much more than a formalist, emphasizing the reality of practical goodness' and the expression of Christian faith in Christian works.

This lesson is full of sound counsel. To seek truth is better than to be hasty in its utterance or swayed too much by one's emotion; "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath." There are two interesting parallels to these verses from James' epistle. The first is in the emphasis that Jesus gives upon the matter of hearing in the Parable of the Sower, the essense of which is not "take heed how ye sow," but "take heed how ye hear"; and the second is in Paul's reference to a mirror in 2 Corinthians 3: 18. James compares the man who is a hearer of the word and not a doer to the man who looks in a mirror and quickly forgets "what manner of man he was." He emphasizes the need of looking into the perfect law of liberty, and it is interesting to note that Paul's reference is also directly connected with this matter of Christian liberty. Paul lays stress upon the fact that a man must have constantly before him the image of Christ or the "glory of the Lord."

The abiding and permanent reality of true incentives to Christian living would seem to be the theme of Jesus. The Christian life is not a matter of moods and dispositions; it should not depend upon changing emotions. On the contrary, it is a permanent direction of mind and yet a perception of the right way and a definite conforming of life to that way. Thus it is that James warns these early Christians to test their religious experience in practical ways. If a man seems to be religious, let him examine into the reality of his life. If he is unable to control his tongue, he may be sure that he has not found the proper control of his inward life. The positive tests of Christian experience are also expressed in the verse that stands out after many centuries as one of the simplest and most vigorous definitions of practical religion. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." Probably James would have been among the first to admit that such a crystalizing of religion in practical terms must be illustrative of the spirit in which one conceives human relationships and the whole approach to the problems of life. Probably we need to consider such a practical definition with the deeper and more penetrating vision of Paul, "and though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing."

The pure religion that James defines in its practical bearings flows from a pure heart of love which does not consider the practical expression of religion in any formal or calculating way.

Books on the Bible

The Making of the English New Testament

We commend in the strongest way to every reader of the Scriptures a little book by Professor Edgar J. Goodspeed, American translator of the New Testament, on The Making of the English New Testament (Chicago University Press. $1.50). It appears with particular appropriateness in this four-hundredth anniversary of the first publication of the New Testament in English, and its account of William Tyndale and his work is vivid and inspiring. The story of successive translations and revisions is told in an interesting way. Emphasis is laid upon the discovery of the colloquial character of the New Testament writing and upon the value of present-day translations in seeking to reproduce this quality by rendering the text in modern English, or American, colloquial speech.

The New Testament: A Woman's Translation

The Centenary of the American Baptist Publication Society, which came in 1924, has been signalized by the publication of a Centenary Translation of the New Testament, notable for the fact that it has been made by an eminent Baptist lay-woman, Mrs. Helen B. Montgomery. Mrs. Montgomery is a woman of versatile gifts, whose strong personality was evidenced when she was elected head of the Northern Baptist Convention a couple of years ago, and by the vigorous and wise leadership that she gave during her term of office.

Translating the New Testament calls for other qualifications than those of an administrator, but Mrs. Montgomery's work justifies her undertaking. She has aimed to make a translation in which clearness of meaning for the average reader has been the chief goal. The customary division into chapters has been retained, and the verse divisions of the Authorized Version are indicated in the margin. Chapter headings and sub-headings for paragraphs are an added feature, making it easy to find desired passages. The Centenary New Testament is published by the Judson Press, Philadelphia, in various bindings and prices.

Religious Books

CHAOS AND CREED, by JAMES PRICEMAN (Harpers. $2.50). James Priceman is a pen name of a writer well known and able. His chief object is the clarification of his own creed. Most of his friends are out of sympathy with him. Here is the process and self-revelation whereby he came to faith. He says, "Back of every man's creed today, if he gives it honest investigation, back of every man's creed, equally whether he is agnostic or whether believing, stands the silent, challenging figure of Christ." Carefully he goes over the historical background, the four Gospels, the "supernormal" and the "autobiography of Jesus." He sums it all up in "A Creed," the last sentence of which is, "I believe that the incarnate Creator was an actual man, living, breathing, historic, and that his name was Jesus."

PRESENT TENDENCIES IN RELIGIOUS THOUGHT, by ALBERT C. KNUDSON (Abingdon Press. $2.00). Professor Knudson of the Boston University School of Theology is a disciple and worthy successor of Bowne. In these Mendenhall Lectures at De Pauw, he has given us a fine summary of the present-day religious thought. He first of all gives a fair picture of the modern thought world, especially as it concerns democracy and science. Then he discusses carefully, broadly, and deeply the problem of Biblical authority, experience as a basis of religious belief, reason as a basis of religious belief, and the social gospel and its theological implications. Naturally his strongest chapter is on experience, though he shows a splendid grasp of philosophical thought in his chapter on reason. His social gospel is most questioned by the radical type who are utterly opposed to individualism, but men need just such thinking as Professor Knudson's in these days when the danger is that individual responsibility and character shall be submerged in "social," "society," and the mass.

A Great American

EDWARD EVERETT: ORATOR AND STATESMAN, by PAUL REVERE FROTHINGHAM (Houghton Mifflin. $6.00). It is rather amazing that Dr. Frothingham's biography, appearing sixty years after the death of Edward Everett, should have the distinction of being the first and the definitive life of so eminent a statesman, educator, and orator, and this excellent biography is all the more welcome because of the lack which it supplies. Under the circumstances it is inevitable that Dr. Frothingham's volume should be almost more deeply of historic, than of distinctively biographical, interest, and this historic interest is further enhanced by the skill with which the biographer has placed the life of Everett in its setting and environment. In a sense it might make for a better and truer perspective if all biographies were published sixty years after the death of their subjects.

Few men have so intimately touched the life of their era at so many vital points as did Edward Everett. Of humble origin he was a type of that scholarship and leadership which in a democracy springs from the people. He was a minister of the Gospel, a member of Congress, a Governor of Massachusetts, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, editor of a great review, President of Harvard, Secretary of State, Senator, and much else besides. Above all he was an upright and honorable man, high-minded and magnanimous in an age when partisanship was intense and when most partisans were no more scrupulous than they are today. His character shines out through these pages in contrast with much that was in his own day and that is in ours. Particularly is his biography distinctive in the freedom from spicy gossip and malicious references, such as mar some recent political self-revelations. Everett's journal, upon which Dr. Frothingham has based much of his volume, was intentionally kept free from comment calculated to injure any fellow-being; and lest unkind comment should have passed in spite of his care, he warned any

(Continued on page 118)

Vital Questions for Congregationalists

To Come Before the National Council in October

The Merger of Periodicals

I would let The Congregationalist stay as it is. The Missionary Herald and the American Missionary could be combined into one. The American Missionary has no advertisements. In the new magazine there could be an extra number of advertisements to cover the lack in the American Missionary to make it financially more secure. The new periodical could be sold for $1.50 with club rates.

Orwell, N. Y. W. P. A. HUMPHRIS.

"How Do You Interpret the Bible?"

It would be a mistake to discuss the uniting of denominations at the present time. It is not a question today of what denomination you belong to. The great question before the Christian world is, how do you interpret the Bible? (Fundamentalists vs. Progressives.) Dr. Fosdick has put before the churches of the world in his book, The Modern Approach to the Bible, the great question that has to be determined before the churches can talk about unity.

The splendid stand taken by the Baptists in New York who have recently called Dr. Fosdick for Jan. 1, has set an example which, if followed by other denominations, will automatically make two organizations.

The Congregationalists should take a definite stand upon all public questions which have to do with the bettering of the human race. The fewer boards we have, the better it will be, as the high cost of overhead makes some of the laymen disgusted, as they think they are called upon to help support too many people when fewer could just as well do the work.

The Foundation for Education should be merged with the Education Society. Personally I can see no reason why the Annuity Fund and Ministerial Relief should not be administered by one organization.

Fargo, N. D. H. F. EMERY.

Consolidation of Magazines

First. Abandon all attempts to put out any church publication that will win its way to self support. If it does so well and good, but don't count on it.

Second. Abandon at once and forever the idea of securing general patronage of any church paper or magazine above the nominal cost of one dollar, or possibly one fifty. Since this would appear to cheapen a literary periodical like The Congregationalist, dissociate that entirely from missionary or other publications. We need a dignified and high class church organ, such as The Congregationalist is and always has been. If necessary let us subsidize it, perhaps out of the profits of the Pilgrim Press.

(Nothing in the above should be taken as a reflection on the quality of the missionary magazines. They maintain a high standard in every respect that serves their own peculiar purpose.)

Third. Proceed upon the reasonable assumption that printed publicity will win support to the cause of the missionary societies; and as a mere business proposition, the cost is warranted. Also that patrons of the societies are entitled to printed reports of the work, and a tabulation of receipts and expenditures. If an efficient laborer is "worthy of his hire," a missionary society is worthy the cost of its publicity, if it gets results.

A combined home and foreign magazine should be offered at not to exceed seventy-five cents for single subscription, fifty cents in clubs of five, and twenty-five cents in clubs equal to one-fourth the church membership. This takes no account of the worth—literary or moral—of the output. I am only concerned in getting it into many more homes than either the Missionary Herald or the American Missionary, or both, ever entered.

Issue but ten numbers a year. Let one hand wash the other by making two issues of The Congregationalist carry special missionary matter. This would recognize the relatedness of that paper to the whole scheme. It would enlighten such of its subscribers as do not take the missionary magazine. And it might stimulate magazine patrons to take The Congregationalist. Editorial harmonization might be difficult, but it should not be impossible, if we are really to unify our work.

Lakewood, O. CHARLES J. DOLE.

Moderator Should Be a Clergyman

I think the Moderator of the National Council should be a clergyman. The standard that has been set, and so splendidly maintained by at least the last two Moderators cannot be approached by a layman. No layman, who is fitted for the office, can possibly give the time which now seems necessary properly to represent the churches. It would be a mistake to select a man who is active in politics. One gentleman, a friend of mine, who is governor of a state and one of the contributing editors of your paper, has been mentioned. He is a partisan with strongly socialistic views, however, and my judgment is that it would be a mistake to elect him. I think, however, that Dr. Ozora S. Davis is an ideal man for the position.

Of course, there should be a large representation of women in the Council and in our various missionary organizations. There should be no union of Congregationalists and Presbyterians until the latter have cleared up their differences upon Fundamentalism. Congregationalists should say what they please as individuals on public questions. It is their duty to do this as citizens of the republic. Of course neither ministers nor laymen should commit their individual churches to any special position.

The Lord only knows (perhaps you do) how the energies of our laymen can be more largely utilized. If they have the love of Christ in their hearts and are doing their utmost, as Harry Fosdick suggests, to "take Jesus in earnest," they will find no trouble in properly utilizing their energies.

The relation of the women's organizations to the general organization of the church should, of course, be of the most intimate and co-operative kind. I am in favor of one board for foreign missions and one home board. The plan of the Committee of Twelve has been well worked out and is in line with business organization, and I am heartily in favor of the recommendations of that committee. Both the Foundation for Education and the Education Society should be merged into the home board. I see no reason why the Annuity Fund and the Ministerial Relief should not be administered by the same organization. I do not think that the interest of the people will be lessened by a merger of the societies. Indeed, I have a feeling that by merging the societies the interest in the Congregational organizations will be increased.

I regretfully accept the suggestion of merging the Missionary Herald and the American Missionary with The Congregationalist, but it is only with the understanding that both the home and foreign missions be adequately represented in every number of The Congregationalist and that each board publish not less than six times a year a supplement to The Congregationalist or, I think better, a substitute for that particular issue of that paper, and that these supplements or substitutes bear in each case the name of Missionary Herald and American Missionary.

I think too much emphasis cannot be placed on the meetings of our state conferences. I like the idea of "joint promotion," suggested by the Committee of Twelve, but I think wide latitude should be given to the American Board and some of the organizations included in the home board for special appeals.

AN OHIO LAYMAN.

Favors Periodical Merger

In the Minutes of the Vermont Congregational Conference for 1898 (it was then called the "General Convention") there is the following entry: "A resolution touching the consolidation of our benevolent societies was by vote laid upon the table." This resolution was quietly presented to the Business Committee by one of the younger pastors. The committee reported it without recommendation, and it was very promptly laid on the table. The older generation of Vermonters were not ready at that time to give any favorable consideration to the subject. It is interesting to see how sentiment has been moving in that direction. For several years we have had the apportionment plan, which unifies the appeals for money. Then we had our societies bunched together in groups. Now the Committee of Twelve presents a plan for a merger. I hope it will be accepted.

The inclusion of the women's societies is perhaps the most important item in the plan. It is not reasonable that the women in the local church should be expected to raise their own apportionment and then help the men out besides. Some years ago a request came from the Woman's Board that the young people give half of their foreign missionary offering to the American Board and half to the Woman's Board. It is infelicitous that the question should rise whether the young people ought to help their fathers or their mothers in this matter. Let them all have one purse.

I am heartily in favor of the consolidation of the magazines, although I confess that I am surprised to learn that the Missionary Herald and the American Missionary have each a larger subscription list than The Congregationalist. Furthermore I suspect that more than ten per cent. should be allowed for duplication of subscriptions.

Nominations for moderator are invited. It is certainly time to elect a layman, and we have one pre-eminent layman, namely Calvin Coolidge. At the last session he was made honorary moderator; but as the National Council is to be held in Washington this year it is most fitting that he should be called to the chair. Of course he could not give the time to attend more than a few sessions or parts of sessions, but two capable assistants are always chosen. It would give prestige to the Council to have the President for moderator, even for a small portion of the time. On the other hand, since he is surrounded by all sorts of politicians, it would give him a refreshing and uplifting change of atmosphere. It is well for all concerned that the President should come under the influence of our meeting, where international responsibilities will surely be emphasized.

WILLIAM COLTON CLARK.

Bakersfield, Vt.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Mr. Policeman

By Marian Kimball Willard

Mr. Blue Jay sat on the tallest of the tall es in the Grove of Pleasant Shadows, and ought of his troubles. He was not cold nor s he hungry, but he was greatly disturbed, hough it might seem to you and me that his ubles were not serious ones. Nevertheless, ey seemed serious to Mr. Blue Jay.

As he sat there on his high perch, he could for miles around, and also the very smallest e of the Sunshine Fairies on the ground be- v him. She was at work busily painting the wers.

Mr. Blue Jay sat on the tiptop branch, so at he could be seen very plainly. He wore at it time a plain, simple suit of dark blue. None the stripes and bars that we see today were his wings, nor did he wear a helmet. His it was simple, neat, smooth, and trim.

As he sat there, he could see the great white ips of the clouds sail by, and then he could rn and see the littlest fairy swinging her ush of milkweed silk to paint the stripes on e tiger lily. He saw a water sprite swim out th a pond lily in her mouth and plant it in e River of Sweet Water, where it was to oom and fill all the air with sweetest fra- ance.

All the while, Mr. Blue Jay was thinking of s troubles. The day before, the birds had ng before the Queen of the Sunshine Fairies see who should have the honor of being chosen e sweetest singer of all the birds. Mr. Blue y had secret hopes of winning the prize, for knew that his voice was stronger than that any of the other birds, and to him it sounded sweet as theirs. He really did not feel un- ppy when the Queen of the Sunshine Fairies ve the laurel leaf to Miss Nightingale, nor did care when the Song Sparrow family was nored by the Queen; but he did care, and care great deal, when he was laughed at. No one es to be laughed at, Mr. Blue Jay least of l. And it was worse to be laughed at by Mrs. owbird than by anyone else. All the other rds dislike the Cowbird family.

Mrs. Cowbird, you know, never builds her vn nest. She never flies about and hunts for igs and straws and down to line her nest as her birds do. No, indeed. Mrs. Cowbird nows an easier way than that to do her house- eping. She steals into the nest of some other rd, smaller and weaker than she is, and there e lays her eggs and flies away. That leaves the little mother who built the nest, the care the ugly, greedy Cowbird babies. In fact the owbird babies are so selfish that they crowd e nest where they are placed so that the other ttle birds are crowded out of their nest, and e little Cowbird babies get all the care and tention.

No, no one likes the Cowbird family, and it as Mrs. Cowbird who had laughed behind her ing, when Mr. Blue Jay failed to win the ize—Mrs. Cowbird, dull and ugly in her coat rusty brown, with her noisy creak for a ng, and her evil way of stealing into other rds' houses.

Such impudence was not to be borne with atience. Mr. Blue Jay had seen Mrs. Cowbird eaking about the nest of little Mrs. Summer ellowbird, and he felt sure that in Mrs. Yel- wbird's nest lay one or two of those hateful owbird eggs. Mr. Jay thought seriously of unting up those eggs and eating them for his reakfast, but decided to wait until he was sure at the Yellowbird family had gone out.

As he watched, he saw the Queen of the Sun- shine Fairies flying about to see what her subjects were doing. One fairy was busily painting the pink stripes on the morning glory; another was making the yellow eyes in the daisy. Suddenly, on the shore of the River of Sweet Water, he saw a long black shape. It squirmed and glided through the low bushes. It was Black Snake, dreaded and feared by all the birds that fly. Mr. Blue Jay was the only one to see the danger, the only one who knew Black Snake was after eggs and baby birds. Sly and wicked, he knew where the nests were low on the ground. Not the Cowbird's eggs alone would he take, but those of dainty Mrs. Bluebird, and of cheery Mrs. Song Sparrow.

Something must be done and done quickly, for the dreadful black shadow glided nearer and nearer to the Alder Thicket. Mr. Blue Jay thought of the little ones in the Yellowbird's nest.

"Thief, thief, thief!" he screamed with all his might. All the birds stopped to listen.

"Thief, thief, thief!" screamed Mr. Blue Jay as he flew through the Grove of Pleasant Shadows and lighted on the Alder Thicket.

As all the birds stopped to listen, Mr. Crow called "Caw, caw, caw!" just as loud as ever he could.

Little Red Squirrel began to chatter and scold, and then all the other birds joined the chorus, each one making as much noise as possible, although they did not quite know what the racket was all about. Mr. Snake knew that he was discovered, and slipped swiftly away.

Then Mr. Blue Jay flew back to his tall tree in the Grove of Pleasant Shadows and looked about him. He felt much happier than he had before he saved the Yellowbird babies, and he felt less like making a breakfast of the Cowbird's eggs. Then he heard a soft flutter of wings behind him, and there on the branch sat the Queen of the Sunshine Fairies, her golden dress gleaming in the sunshine and her gauzy wings waving to and fro.

"Blue Jay, my friend," she said in a silvery little voice. "I know how you felt yesterday, when the Cowbird laughed at you. I know of what you were thinking this morning, when you sat on this tree and looked at the clouds and the shining river. I cannot punish Cowbird for her wicked ways. That is now beyond my power, but I can reward you for your sharp eyes and your quick wit. I am going to make you the policeman of all the birds. On your head will grow a beautiful helmet. Under your chin will be the black strap that holds the helmet on. Black and white straps will mark your uniform. When you call, 'Thief, thief,' all the birds will stop to listen to your warning cry." Then she waved her wand three times, and was gone.

Mr. Blue Jay flew straight to the River of Sweet Water to see what had happened to him. As he looked in the water, he saw a great change. Yes, there on his head was a helmet, with a crest waving in the air. A black strap went under his chin, to hold the helmet on. Bands of black and white trimmed his wings, and his quiet blue coat had turned bright and glossy. And that is the way that Mr. Blue Jay became the Policeman of the Grove of Pleasant Shadows.

(All rights reserved)

Be always employed; lose no shred of time; gather up the fragments that none be lost, and whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.—John Wesley.

The China Situation

This statement is issued by the Committee of Reference and Counsel of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, 25 Madison Avenue, New York City. It is signed by the secretaries of the boards and societies which have work in China, including Dr. William E. Strong of the American Board and Miss Mabel E. Emerson of the Woman's Board.

The newspapers of July 2 carried the announcement that the Government of the United States is prepared to meet with other powers in conference in regard to carrying out the provisions of the treaties and the accompanying resolutions relating to China, which were adopted by the Washington Conference on Limitation of Armament in 1921-22.

Secretary Kellogg's announcement has been received with profound satisfaction by officers, members, and supporters of the boards and societies interested in, and co-operating with, the Christian Movement in China. We hope that the suggestion of the Government of the United States will be acted on favorably by the other powers signatory to the Washington treaties. The representatives of the signatory powers were agreed when they met in Washington that it was desirable "to safeguard the rights and interests of China"; and to this end the treaties relating to China were concluded and the accompanying resolutions adopted.

Information reaching us from China, through trustworthy sources, indicates that the prolonged delay in bringing about the arrangements for the relief of China contemplated in the Washington treaties and resolutions has created serious misunderstandings on the part of the Chinese people.

At this distance from China we are not competent to form an opinion as to the responsibility of those involved in the reported local disturbances but we record our conviction that a permanent settlement of the difficulties existing in China will be effected, not by the use of (or by the show of) force, but by friendly conference between those concerned.

While believing that China's greatest and most difficult problems are within herself and that their solution involves the establishment of stable and just government, the realization of national unity, and the adoption and enforcement of enlightened laws, we believe justice to China demands the readjustment of the treaty relations between China and other nations as suggested at the Washington Conference; and that, until these treaties are readjusted, there will inevitably continue to be misunderstandings between China and other nations. We identify ourselves with those who are endeavoring to secure justice for China in all her relations with the other nations because it is the simple and inalienable right of China.

All One

By William Olney

Seas separate the armies of the Cross;
But they are linked by many tender ties:
Christ's wounds and blood their ardent souls engross—
One saving sacrifice.

One Book reveals all that they know of God;
One Holy Spirit teaches them to pray;
One faith unites with all before, who trod
The crimsoned way.

'Neath varied banners see Christ's armies fight,
But all surrendered to divine control:
All zealous for the victory of the right;
One Lord: one Task: one Goal.

London, England

Pacific Calls Dr. Dobbs

In 1841 Rev. Harvey Clark of Chester, Vt., began missionary work among the Indians in the Tualatin Plains near where Portland now stands. When the white settlers came, a school was organized for them under the leadership of Mrs. Tabitha Moffett Brown in 1847, with the help of Mr. Clark. This was the year that the Congregational Home Missionary Society commissioned Rev. George H. Atkinson to extend religious work in Oregon. He urged the immediate establishment of an academy. This was called the Tualatin Academy, from the Indian name of the river. Land given by Mr. Clark and others and additional land purchased since comprise the present campus of Pacific University, 30 acres of land cornering in the center of Forest Grove, 27 miles out of Portland.

President John F. Dobbs

As its first president, Rev. Sidney Harper Marsh, was a graduate of Union Seminary, so also is the new president, Rev. John F. Dobbs, called to this position by the trustees of Pacific University, May 4 of this year.

About 300 students are enrolled in the various departments of the University, and there is every reason to believe that an increased enrollment will be realized during the summer. Pacific has a number of adequate buildings; has need of others; is increasing its endowment; and feels that it is entering upon a future large with hope.

Pacific University has a history that roots back into the pioneer days and doings of the Oregon section. Its life is a part of the great country in which it is located. The great trees on marvelously fertile soil suggest the terms in which we may think still of this distinctly characteristic institution. Its name is Pacific—our greatest ocean whose waters wash the shores of Oregon near-by. Its various departments, such as the Conservatory of Music, entitle her to the term she has adopted—"University."

Pacific is fortunate in two ways especially, in her officials and student body. Because of the fine religious traditions back of her, and the wide opening afforded a school of this type between the agricultural and other tax-supported university—where Christian truth and religious sentiments can be taught with courses of broad cultural training—those who know the situation are filled with hope and joy.

The coming of President Dobbs has been most timely. The continued independence of the school has been assured by loyal support in recent months, and his reception has been the most generous and hearty. He has made friends at once. The students are most enthusiastic. His own athletic history, his experience for all his ministry with cultured people, and his evident determination to advance the scholarship and standing of the school have made for him a great welcome at Pacific University.

Dr. Dobbs was born in the beautiful hill country of New Jersey; prepared for college in a private school, and entered Lafayette College at Easton, Pa., in 1893. He became active in college Y. M. C. A., and outside religious work, and was assistant State Secretary of Christian Endeavor for New Jersey, and president of a Christian Endeavor Union of 45 societies in two counties of that state.

He played for three years on the great football teams of Lafayette where they were fortunate enough to defeat Cornell and the University of Pennsylvania, and tie a score of 0 to 0 with Princeton.

He entered Union Seminary in 1897; was graduated in 1900, took M.A. work at Columbia, received this degree in 1900 from Lafayette, and because of literary work was given his D.D. by Lafayette in 1911. His first pastorate was in New York City where the training school of service to the poor and association with many of the greatest business people of the city fitted him for many duties he will now perform.

For ten years in New York and seven in Syracuse, N. Y., he served the Dutch Reformed Church, though he was ordained in June, 1900, by the Elizabeth Presbytery, to which church he belonged. In May, 1915, he was called to historic First Congregational, Malden, Mass.

At Malden Dr. Dobbs endeared himself to host of friends, was instrumental in creati an endowment and building a large, mode parish house, fully equipped, where today a the largest Girl Scout group and the large Boy Scout troop in the state of Massachuset

Dr. Dobbs increased the finances of his fi charge, leaving thousands of dollars in various treasuries. He raised a killing de of about $16,000, accumulating largely fro running expenses under former ministers in h second charge. Congregationalists know of t financial strengthening of First Churc Malden.

Pacific University should have no difficult under the leadership and encouragement of t people now directing her affairs, in entering in a steady and large development. She has t foundation and is ready to build. Her camp is adequate and a part of it is beautiful beyo words. The rapid growth of Portland will co tribute its share, and the general advanceme of the state and of the whole Northwest is matter of common consent.

A Great American

(Continued from page 115)

editor into whose hands his journal might fa to omit "everything of which any person cou have a right to complain."

That in itself is a clue to Everett's greatnes and his biographer has honorably respected th wish. The result is a biography that mov upon the high planes, in which the importa and significant details of a life and its tin are effectively portrayed without anything b ing sacrificed to tittle-tattle. Dr. Frothingham book will take its place among the biographi of first-rate importance.

Daughters of the Famous

Miss Frances E. Dana, daughter of the famous author of "Two Years Before the Mast," Richard Henry Dana, and Miss Alice Longfellow, daughter of the famed poet, are shown in old-time costume which they wore at the anniversary of Washington's taking command of the Colonial troops in 1775. The celebration was held at Cambridge, Massachusetts

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

A Japanese Church in Salt Lake City

Salt Lake City, Utah, has a new church. I started out to find it Sunday afternoon, May 17. I passed the great Mormon Temple, that strange citadel to what has seemed to us a very strange God indeed. I passed a square, quat building which announced itself as a Buddhist temple. And then the "Japanese Church of Christ."

It was the day of dedication for the new building. This attractive building stands as

JAPANESE CHURCH, SALT LAKE CITY
New Building Recently Dedicated

the achievement of Rev. Kengo Tajima, a Yale graduate, and a devoted and able man. Back of him have been the American Missionary Association and the Congregational Church Building Society and the Presbyterian Board of Church Erection. Local laymen of all denominations have been loyal in support.

It is the "Japanese Church of Christ"—that's all. I could find no denominational tag anywhere. Here are wisdom and grace indeed, and the Presbyterian and Congregational Boards are to be congratulated again upon their willingness to support a movement which bears neither name.

It was a gay scene that Sunday afternoon. Thirty or forty Japanese girls and young women, arrayed in their dashing native colors, gave their touch of radiance. A group of fine, intelligent young men were ready with their courtesy, and proud to show us the new building. Mothers with their children were much in evidence, and their babies made the scene interesting. There was luncheon for all in the tennis court before the service, and tea afterwards. While we could not understand all of the food with which we were served, and especially the forms which certain unknown fish took upon itself, we could understand the children, and respond to the beauty of the scene.

The church filled up with Japanese and Americans. Representative Japanese and Americans were on the platform, and the program was under way. There was music from Japanese musicians, and an anthem by the choir of a neighboring colored church. I am told that the colored folks find a cordial welcome from the Japanese, and sometimes feel a closer tie to them than to their white neighbors. Perhaps the Jap may still teach the white man his Christian manners!

There were speeches, without number and without end. The Japanese and the native Americans spoke, laymen and ministers, and told of their dreams for this new church. Congregationalists and Methodists and Presbyterians added their words. One felt like raising the question whether what is good for Japanese Christians might not also be good for plain white ones, and whether we, too, might not more confidently dream of a "Church of Christ" without all these precious labels.

The laurels of the hour go to Mr. Tajima. His genius made the building possible, and the enthusiasm of the church is behind him. Congratulations to him and long years of ministry in the cause which he loves. H. C. H.

Long Service at Racine, Wisconsin

FIRST, RACINE, WIS., held a few weeks ago a two-day celebration in honor of the 75th birthday of the pastor, Rev. J. T. Chynoweth, and the diamond anniversary of the church. The anniversary services began with the Sunday morning sermon by the pastor on the topic, "Has It Been Worth While?" Carlisle V. Hibbard of Madison, a former member of the church, also spoke. At the anniversary dinner greetings were brought from Plymouth Church by Rev. H. R. Hogan and from the churches of other denominations by both ministers and laymen. Mr. F. A. Morey presented the pastor with a purse of gold on behalf of the church, and the young people and those representing other organizations in the church made gifts. Many greetings were received from former members and from churches at a distance that are interested in Mr. Chynoweth and the church. A pleasing feature of the celebration was the presence of the oldest living member, Mrs. Jane M. Fellows, who for 47 years has been connected with its activities.

Mr. Chynoweth has just begun his 20th year as pastor of First Church and will this year complete 50 years in the ministry. His service in Racine has been of such outstanding character that the Racine Journal News, a leading paper of the city, gave its leading editorial one day to a discussion of the work of the pastor. It said in part:

Notwithstanding his years he is a leader in all the activities of his church, another proof that age can be no longer measured by years and that men are no older than they appear to be. Youthful thoughts, steps in line with the ever and always advancing procession in which lies the public thought will keep men young, no matter how many may be the years resting upon their shoulders.

Brooklyn's New Parish House

The completion of the new parish house of FLATBUSH, BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dr. L. T. Reed, pastor, is a noteworthy addition to the church architecture of Brooklyn and even to the country at large. The building is colonial in style, of brick with limestone trimmings, basement and three stories, and is a harmonious extension of the colonial church building erected 15 years ago.

In the basement are club-rooms, suitable for serving small suppers and luncheons, dressing-rooms for men and women, a storeroom, a large kitchen with full hotel equipment, serving-rooms, dishwashing-room, with electric dishwashing machine, etc. On the main floor are located the assembly hall, seating 500, which is equipped with an adequate stage and moving picture outfit, a reception room, a league meeting-room, trustees' room, sexton's office, coat and store rooms, and a kitchenette. Dr. Reed's study is on the second floor, as are also the offices of the church secretary, the church recorder, and the two assistants. On this floor are also a large and sunny women's sewing room and the men's locker room with shower baths at the rear. The third floor is given over to the gymnasium, with lockers and showers for the use of the women. It is thus so removed from the other main rooms of the church plant as to allow an uninterrupted program of calisthenic class work, team games, and other recreative diversions. Adequate provision is made for all departments of the Church School and also for the special classes for adults and young people held during the year.

NEW PARISH HOUSE, FLATBUSH CHURCH, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

League Room in the Parish House of the Flatbush Church, Brooklyn

The architects of the building are Allen & Collens of Boston; and the construction work was done by the William Kennedy Construction Company of Brooklyn. Ground was broken on July 14, 1924, and the building was dedicated with a special service and a reception and house-warming in March of this year, the 18th anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. Reed.

The cost of the building was $160,000, the furnishings in large part being given as memorial gifts by members of the church. The membership of the Flatbush Church is now 1926, and the replacement value of the church property is fully $700,000. With the new parish house building, the church will be able to minister to the whole social and religious life of the community for generations to come.

Golden Anniversary of Wilmette, Ill.

Wilmette, Ill., a suburban church of Chicago, has just celebrated its 50th anniversary with exercises lasting over most of a week. The village of Wilmette dates back to the year 1869 when 525 acres were platted. The Northwestern Railway was built through the present site of the village in 1854 and the first station was erected in 1870. In 1871 a religious organization was formed under the name of "The Evangelical Alliance," which was a union of all denominations. This first church had no pastor for a long time, its services being conducted by professors from Garrett Biblical Institute in Evanston and occasionally by Dr. E. N. Packard, who was then pastor of the Evanston Congregational Church.

In 1875, at the suggestion of Dr. Packard, several Congregational and Presbyterian families of the village were invited to confer about the organization of a Congregational church, and the organization was completed June 3 of that year. There were 19 charter members. A few days later the church became a member of the Chicago Association which had such noted leaders as Dr. E. P. Goodwin, Dr. E. N. Packard, Prof. S. C. Bartlett, Dr. Simeon Gilbert, and Dr. J. E. Roy. The last named presided at the first Communion service of the new church on the following Sunday and presented a Communion set, which was a gift from First, Oak Park.

On account of the fact that the church owned no building, its business and social meetings were generally held in the homes of the members and most of its members continued to support "The Evangelical Alliance." The next year Rev. E. P. Wheeler of Beloit was called to the pastorate, the Home Missionary Society aiding in his support. For eight years the services were held in a one-story country school house. Apparently in those far-away days the Home Missionary Society was hampered for funds as often happens now, and after three and one-half years of giving support felt that it must retrench, so the Wilmette and the Winnetka churches were combined under the pastorate of Rev. Samuel Kidder, who was pastor of Winnetka.

This arrangement continued until 1882 when Rev. John Parr was called to the pastorate. The first church building was erected in 1883, at a cost with its furnishings of $3,500, and the pastor was paid the magnificent salary of $900 per year. The church grew rapidly on account of the rapid growth of the village and in 1895 Mrs. Mary E. Gates presented to the church the lots on which the present building stands. The first unit of the present structure was finished in 1905 and in 1909 the building was completed under the leadership of Rev. Roy E. Powers, who had come to the pastorate. Since that time another lot adjoining the church property has been purchased and a manse secured.

The following ministers have served the church: E. P. Wheeler, S. T. Kidder, J. H. Parr, Glen Wood, Willis Hadley, Josiah Beardsley, E. B. Dean, W. H. Walker, S. C. Haskin, R. E. Bowers, and S. A. Lloyd, the present pastor, who began his service in 1919. The church has always been known for its interest in missionary projects, both home and foreign. It has also paid much attention to the work of religious education. The pastor, Dr. Lloyd, is himself a leader in this field and he has about him a large number of laymen and lay-women who are also trained leaders in religious education.

The anniversary exercises began with an organ recital on Wednesday evening, followed by an address on "Music and Worship" by George L. Tenney and a concert by the church choir. On Thursday evening addresses were made on the church of the past, the present, and the future, and the mortgages on the building were burned by the board of trustees. On Friday afternoon the celebration of the Women's Guild was held. Addresses were made by charter members of the society and there was a dramatic presentation, in costumes of a former day, of incidents of the early history of the society. The evening was given to stories and reminiscences with brief addresses by the two charter members, Mrs. S. E. Gooding and Miss Hattie Brooks, and incidents related by former ministers E. P. Wheeler, J. H. Parr, E. B. Dean, W. H. Walker, and R. E. Bowers. The greetings of the national societies were brought by Rev. W. F. English of the American Board, a member of the church from our schools by Prof. H. H. Walker of Chicago Seminary, from other denominations by Rev. F. C. Stifler, pastor of Wilmette Baptist Church. Mr. H. B. Gates gave the story of the early day and Miss Bertha Wheelock spoke on the hope of the future. Saturday evening an historical pageant, written and produced under the direction of Mrs. A. J. Coburn of the church, was given on the lawn. The anniversary sermon was preached by Sec. H. W. Gates of the Education Society and the exercises closed with a Communion service. Winnetka has behind it 50 years of fine service to its community and to the world, and faces the future with unity and optimism.

Scandinavian Young People Meet

Supt. O. C. Grauer was one of the speakers at the Convention of Young People's Societies and Choirs for the Northwest, held in Britt, Ia., May 31. Eleven automobiles loaded with young people motored from Minneapolis, while 44 young folks came by train. Automobiles came also from La Crosse, Houston, and Dawson, Minn., and Kenosha, Wis. The English-speaking Congregational Church in Britt closed for the day, its members joining our Scandinavian young people in two great meetings in the High School auditorium both morning and afternoon. At night a big meeting was held at the "Flats." On the following day and evening, conferences were held on young people's work in our Danish-Norwegian fellowship. Notwithstanding the fact that the days were hot, interest never flagged. Folks got better acquainted, and some close and genuinely worth-while contacts were made. F. L. M.

A State Conference Belongs to the Young People

The young people of Nebraska know that the State Conference of Churches is their affair. They proved it at the recent meeting in Fremont. All one afternoon and evening were handed over to the young people, and they were asked to make up their own program. And they did! The well-beloved Director of Religious Education, who goes by the name of Murphy, was the man behind the scenes. He wrote many letters to the young people of the churches, he asked them to speak up, and to tell what they wanted to talk about, what grievances they had to air, what suggestions to make.

Out of all this a program was born, and no better young people's program has been framed for many a day. Twenty young people took part in it. They discussed such questions as, giving young people more responsibility in the church, the kind of sermons they like to hear, the provision of worth-while tasks, what the church should stand for, and where the church is falling down. It was a great thing for the ministers that afternoon to hear what these boys and girls thought about us. It should be tonic for our souls.

The young people came by the carload. They filled the church. There was a spontaneity nd an eagerness about it which set every one thrill. Here is hope for the state conference nd maybe they will still show us the way.

The response to the young people was made y Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Moderator of ie National Council. He caught and held the nterest of the young people, and gave them a iessage of power. He always does.

The dinner for the young people in the eve- ing was the closing event of this section. Five oung people told what they would do if they ere "Pastor of a city church," "President of Vomen's Work," "President of Doane," "State uperintendent," "Moderator of the National ouncil."

Congratulations to Nebraska upon those oung men and women. There is life in the ebraska air. H. C. H.

Reaching the Boys of the Community

The task of reaching the boys of any com- unity and of interesting them in some worth hile program is always one of the chief con- erns of the minister. Not often does the min- ter meet this need through the organization f a band, as Rev. Ross Hartman of the Hills- oro, Wis., Church has done. Mr. Hartman, ho is a graduate of Oberlin College and Yale ivinity School, is a talented musician himself nd one of his first efforts after accepting the astorate of the Hillsboro Church was to organ- e a band. The band was started in the High chool and after a period of training under Ir. Hartman's direction, gave several concerts nd have played for numerous other entertain- ients. They were entered in the Wisconsin tate School Band Tournament and placed ixth in the "Class C" bands.

Through the band Mr. Hartman finds that e can train the boys in team work, co-opera- on, accuracy, and persistence. He also finds iat the band bridges the gap between the atholics and Protestants because of its playing t various Catholic functions as well as Prot- stant. To the great regret of the community nd of the boys especially, Mr. Hartman has ist accepted a call to Chardon, O.

Congregationalists at Blue Ridge Conference

Blue Ridge, N. C., is becoming the missionary iecca for the Protestant denominations of the outh. The session of the M. E. M. Conference, eld June 26-July 6, was the best. Of the nearly 00 delegates 40 were Congregationalists and ney came from 11 states. The denomination as creditably represented in the faculty. Our Education Secretary, Dr. H. W. Gates, was eely recognized as one of the leaders of Chris- ian education in America and the world. Other iembers of the faculty were Miss Olive Pear- on and Miss Helen Wilcox.

The spirit of the M. E. M. has educational alue in the South where extreme denomina- ionalism has made difficult interdenominational eadership by the Federation of Churches. It s significant, therefore, that so many denomi- ations were represented in the conference, in- luding a large delegation from the Episcopal Church, led by Bishop Bratten of Mississippi. The leaders of the Blue Ridge M. E. M. are lanning to make it an effective agency for the evelopment of co-operation among the denomi- ations of the South.

Because of this the Home Missionary So- iety unites with the Sunday School Extension Society in promoting attendance by the young eople of our Congregational churches. In hree years the attendance from our churches as increased from four to 40. The number nd character of our delegates are revelations o the churches of the South where we are so ittle known. And the influence on the Congregational churches of the Southeast is very decided. The Blue Ridge Conference is a rallying point for Congregationalists from the several states. Plans for development of the missionary and young people's movement in the South are formed. Among the denominational leaders present were Sec. H. W. Gates, Miss Olive Pearson, Supt. L. H. Keller, Assistant Supts. Ensminger and McQuarrie, and Field Worker Rev. J. F. Blackburn.

SUPT. R. R. SHOEMAKER AND REV. J. M. MOYA
The latter is pastor of our Mexican Church at Gallup, N. M.

L. H. K.

Summer Services

Vacation Preachers at Second, Dorchester

During the absence of the pastor, Rev. Vaughan Dabney, the pulpit of SECOND, DORCHESTER, MASS., will be supplied as follows: July 12, A.M., C. L. Talbot, nine years leader of Codman Men's Bible Class; P.M., Rev. F. L. Cooper, of the Commission of Missions; July 19, Dr. H. F. Holton, Brockton; July 26, Rev. G. L. Cady, Secretary of the A. M. A.; Aug. 2, Dr. M. S. Rees; Aug. 9, Dr. C. W. Huntington; Aug. 16, Rev. W. P. Landers; Aug. 23 and 30, Rev. E. E. Aiken, Jr., Director of Religious Education, Second Church.

Supplies for Services at Brockton

The pastor of SOUTH, BROCKTON, MASS., Rev. R. W. Coe, preached July 5 and 19. Other summer visitors through the vacation are, July 12, Dr. R. H. Bainton, Professor of Church History, Yale; July 26, Dr. A. F. Pierce, Shawmut, Boston, a former pastor of South; Aug. 2, Rev. L. S. Beardslee, Westboro, formerly Director of Religious Education at South; Aug. 9, Dr. M. E. Pearson, Auburn, Me., formerly acting pastor of the church; Aug. 16, Dr. J. S. Durkee, Howard University, another former pastor; Aug. 23, Rev. W. P. Landers, a son of First Parish and now in Milton; Aug. 30, Rev. S. R. Harlow, Professor of Biblical Literature at Smith and for several years foreign pastor of South Church. From July 23 to Aug. 1, Mr. Coe gives two courses at Northfield on "Agencies of Religious Education" and "Every Day Problems of Christian Living." In August, with his family, he will be at Five Islands, Me. Miss Lorna G. Townsend, Director of Religious Education, is at Evanston, Ill., for special summer school courses.

Following the custom of many years, FIRST PARISH and PORTER, BROCKTON, hold union services during July and August, with the following preachers in charge: At FIRST, July 5, Prof. Douglas H. Corley, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.: July 12, Dr. T. E. Busfield, Plymouth; July 19, Pres. J. S. Durkee, Howard University, Washington; July 26, Dr. Seeley K. Tompkins, Boston; Aug. 2, Rev. J. R. Simonds, Faribault, Minn. In PORTER: Aug. 9, Rev. John Moore, Amesbury; Aug. 16, Rev. A. W. Bailey, East Dennis, Mass.; Aug. 23, Dr. W. E. Gilroy of The Congregationalist; Aug. 30, Rev. F. B. Harrison, East Bridgewater. Dr. H. F. Holton of Porter will preach Sept. 6.

From East to West

VERMONT

Centre, Brattleboro, Dedicates New Chapel

The beautiful Memorial Chapel of CENTRE, BRATTLEBORO, Dr. H. P. Woodin, pastor, recently completed, was dedicated June 7.

A special meeting of the church was called on March 14, 1924, and a building committee, of which Mr. Louis A. Whitney was chairman, was appointed to make the necessary arrangements for the building of a memorial chapel on the site of the old chapel, provided the necessary funds could be secured. A two weeks' canvass by a committee led by Mrs. Fremont Hamilton resulted in pledges to be paid during three years amply covering the amount estimated to be required. Many of these pledges were made in memory of loved ones formerly connected with the church. The work of demolishing the old chapel was begun in April, 1924, and the new building was completed in May, 1925. The total cost was approximately $40,000.

The dedication sermon was preached by Rev. H. G. Miles, a former pastor, and now Associate Secretary of the Annuity Fund. Sunday evening the whole community joined in a union

"A splendid book, packed with memories we shall never willingly let die."—S. Parkes Cadman, D.D.

Remembrance of Things Past

A Familiar Chronicle of Kinsfolk and Friends Worth While

By JOHN RAYMOND HOWARD

"I am reading your book with intense interest. . . The story is thrilling in many places, and is told with all your sense of reality, with vividness and grace. . . A great refreshment and a delightful companion."
—George A. Gordon, D.D.

All Booksellers, $3.25 By Mail, $3.40

THOMAS Y. CROWELL COMPANY
393 Fourth Avenue New York

NOTICE

The National Council Office desires to have a complete file of pictures of fo mer moderators. Pictures are desired of the following:

REV. W. I. BUDINGTON
HON. L. S. FOSTER
HON. W. B. WASHBURN
HON. LORRIN A. COOKE

Any information that will assist in secu ing these pictures will be greatly app eciated.

Address, National Council Office
287 Fourth Ave. New York City

service at which pastors of the local churches gave words of greeting and congratulation.

Tuesday evening Rev. E. L. Shaver of the Education Society addressed the young people, outlining the program and possibilities for young people's work in the church. On Wednesday evening there was a parish supper with Rev. R. M. Houghton, another former pastor, as speaker of the evening. Dr. Houghton was enthusiastically received and spoke of the minister's message, not propaganda for various causes, worthy though they might be, but the simple gospel applied to modern conditions.

On Friday evening the brotherhood invited the ladies to a supper, after which they were entertained most agreeably by Mr. John Thomas of Gloucester, Mass.

A banquet for the juniors on Saturday night with a game hour conducted by Rev. F. K. Brown of West Brattleboro completed the week's program.

First Aid for Whooping Cough

Rub Roche's Embrocation thoroughly into the little sufferer's chest. Penetrating deeply it helps loosen the phlegm and brings relief.

Roche's has earned the endorsement of thousands of mothers—used successfully since 1802. All Druggists.

E. FOUGERA & CO., Inc., New York
W. Edward & Son, London, Eng.

ROCHE'S EMBROCATION

Fights Whooping Cough and Croup

Centennial Observance at Saxtons River

The centennial of SAXTONS RIVER was observed June 21-23 with six services, each of a different nature: a service of public worship and Communion, an historical service, a missionary service, a service of reminiscences, a banquet, and an historical pageant. Besides there was an historical exhibit, and a centennial book of 75 pages was published. Rev. R. W. Roundy of Laconia, N. H., grandson of Rodney Wiley, one of the charter members of the church, preached the sermon. The pastor, Rev. W. R. Blackmer, delivered the historical address. Rev. C. E. White, Assistant Secretary of the American Board, who was born in Saxtons River, gave a forceful missionary address.

Miss Grace M. Chapin, daughter of Rev. G. F. Chapin, pastor of the church for 38 years and now pastor emeritus, wrote the pageant which was given on the campus of Vermont Academy to an audience of 500. The natural scenery was ideal. Miss Edith M. Foster wrote a beautiful centennial poem, and Rev. Joseph Hayes Chandler, son and nephew of two of the former pastors, composed the centennial hymn. Miss Katherine E. Holbrook of Chester, daughter of still another pastor, had a part in the celebration. The church is greatly indebted to Mrs. Ellen C. Stearns, who has been busy for a year gleaning information regarding the church's past. The weather was ideal, the attendance throughout remarkable, and the spirit of the best.

Saxtons River has been a missionary church, contributing last year $1,312 to benevolences. Three hundred dollars of this was a "forward" step the church took to celebrate properly the centennial year. This makes provision for the theological training for one year of three students in China. The names of two of the students were announced at the missionary service. The church faces the new century alive and brotherly and missionary.

REV. GEORGE F. CHAPIN
Pastor Emeritus of the Saxtons River Church

The Calvin Coolidge Junior Picture

In August, 1924, Rev. E. H. Ballou paid a visit to WOODSTOCK and told of the needs of the new boys' school in Tientsin, China. There was a gift of money given him at that time, part of which was a donation from the Church School to pay for one room in the new school. The superintendent wrote Mrs. Calvin Coolidge asking for permission to name the room the Calvin Coolidge Junior Room. Mrs. Coolidge from the White House replied that she "not only approved" but that it touched her "very deeply." She also sent a photograph of her boy to hang in the room which would bear his name. The picture was exhibited in Woodstock, and then sent to the American Board headquarters to be forwarded to China.

All letters of explanation which were sent from Woodstock or Boston to Tientsin were lost, presumably in the confusion of war. Recently a letter was received from Mr. Ballou, a part of which is as follows:

I have an idea that somewhere between us a letter from you has been lost. At any rate, we have had something of a mystery here, with a very happy solution.

Back early in the year a fine, large photograph of a young man was received, mailed from the business office of the Board in Boston. There was no explanation accompanying it whatever, and whereas we should have recognized the picture, coming thus out of the unknown, so to speak, we did not. We made several possible guesses as to whence it might have come, and were about to inquire of Boston as to its origin, when along came the April number of

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion.

CAMPS AND VACATION PLACES

Boarders wanted on farm. All modern conveniences. Splendid lake, swimming. Best of cooking. Accommodations for family all summer. Mrs. John E. Aldrich, R. D. 2, Putnam, Ct.

Elmlawn, Woodstock, Ct. Ideal place for a vacation in an old, beautiful, and historic New England town. Near Woodstock Lake and golf links. Modern conveniences. Rates reasonable. Address Mrs. Louise L. Child.

Bay of Fundy House—Ideal vacation. Sea fishing, motor boat, excellent table. $10 a week. Write J. E. W. Daley, Culloden, Nova Scotia.

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., in the vicinity of the White Mountains. We offer the comforts and conveniences needed for a successful vacation and rest. No hay fever. Lower rates to those who come in June and July. Booklet. A. J. Newman, Prop.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, homelike rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large, brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

Best place for vacation, mountains, New Hampshire, 100 miles from Boston. Board or rent bungalow. Moderate rates. Howard Brown, Alstead, N. H.

PASTORATE WANTED

Progressive pastor wishes to communicate with a church seeking spiritual leadership. Address "Y. Z.," Congregationalist.

POSITION WANTED

Wanted—By September, position as matron by experienced middle-aged woman with reference. "M. A. H.," Congregationalist.

Organist and choir director desires position in Michigan. W. J. S., 313 South Fourth Ave., Ann Arbor, Mich.

HELP WANTED

Wanted, Sept. 1, young man assistant for social and religious work with boys and young men. Address C. F. Hersey, New Bedford, Mass.

TEACHERS WANTED

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

MISCELLANEOUS

Woburn, Mass.—Two nicely furnished rooms in widow's home, with or without kitchen privileges; all improvements. Good locality, near trains. Tel. Woburn 0667-J evenings. Mrs. W. J. Buckman.

Theological Books For Sale—In good condition. A bargain. Including: Vincent's Word Studies (in some cases several volumes); Expositor's Greek Testament; Luke (Plummer); Ephesians, Colossians (Moule); Parables, Miracles, Training of the Twelve (Bruce); Ten Vol. Spurgeon's Sermons; History of Christian Church (Sheldon); Expositor's Bible; Isaiah; Twelve Prophets; James and Jude. Many others. I may have what you want. Write me. Remember: A Bargain. Willis P. Hume, North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

Vacation and Sunday Schools find twelve Scripture Crosswords on separate cards for individual pupils valuable for interest and instruction. $2.00 hundred. First Congregational Church, Gardner, Mass.

For Sale—A church bell, good tone. Forty-eight pews, oak, comparatively new. Will seat 240 persons. Apply to W. H. Jordan, Orono, Me.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wasteless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

Mail Order Printing—State your needs and receive our quotation. 1,000 envelopes, 1,000 note heads, business size, printed $7.50. The Print Shop, East Northfield, Mass.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

COMMUNION SUPPLIES

We supply every essential for the Communion service. Trays, Glasses, Covers, Plates.

THE PILGRIM PRESS
14 Beacon St. Boston
156 5th Ave. New York
19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

Vermont Missionary. I was much interested find part of our Sunday School-Boys' School respondence therein; and upon reading your roductory paragraph regarding the picture ich Mrs. Coolidge had given for the room ned after Calvin, Junior, the explanation of photograph flashed upon me. And then of rse we all recognized the young man. What a gracious thing it was for Mrs. Cool- e to do. You can be sure that we appreciate ery much out here, as doubtless the Sunday ool did in Woodstock. I presented the med picture, containing a little card of ex- nation, to the Boys' School yesterday morn- at their chapel; and they were even more erested than I had hoped they might be. One ng which particularly impressed them was t a boy sixteen years old was so nearly dy for college.

The new dormitory is going up. They were ing bricks above the level of the second story terday. If Marshall Chang Tso Lin had not n seized with a mad desire to grab all carts sight about a month ago for the sake of ving some of his troops and supplies across ntry to Paotingfu, the roof would probably on by this time. The new building, because lack of funds, will be used for awhile as a s' dormitory instead of for the boys. We ll, however, keep the picture in the old Boys' ool until the transfer is made.

While in Plymouth, Vt., during the illness of President's father, Mrs. Coolidge received letter of acknowledgment from Rev. Earle llou. The note from Mrs. Coolidge to the odstock Church School is framed and hangs ve the mantelpiece in one of their rooms, ere it is proudly pointed out to the many mer visitors. Rev. H. H. Hines is minister Woodstock.

MASSACHUSETTS

dained at Squantum

SQUANTUM, an energetic parish of Quincy, he outgrowth of a Home Missionary Society t, whose men erected its house of worship 1914. Its pastor-elect, Albert H. Burroughs, s ordained June 23. The council returned to former custom in the considerable examina- n given the candidate, who responded with ing reserve and thoughtfulness.

Mr. Burroughs is from Missouri. He was cated at Kidder Institute with its Congre- ional background, and at Wesleyan College Cameron, where he received his B.A. degree. year at Garrett Biblical Institute was sup- mented by principalship in a high school l further study at the Boston University ool of Theology, where he is now completing divinity course. He has turned to our de- nination for its larger freedom and for the son that Congregationalism locally repre- ts the community church idea. Squantum is viding an attractive parsonage for Mr. and s. Burroughs. The council organized with v. T. W. Davison, Atlantic, as moderator. . Davison served this church with his own il 1923, fostering its strength until it could intain its own minister. In the ordination rcises Rev. Vaughan Dabney of Second, rchester, preached upon "The Secret of wer." Dr. I. W. Sneath of Wollaston offered ordaining prayer; the fellowship of the urches was extended by Rev. G. W. Owen, rde Park; the charge to the minister by v. Eric I. Lindh, Quincy; the charge to the ople by Rev. T. W. Davison.

mage by Fire to Turners Falls Edifice

Events have been occurring rapidly at RNERS FALLS since its 50th anniversary in y. One month after this observance the ifice was struck by lightning during the ght of June 8, and the steeple and roof were laze when seen a few minutes later. The al fire department was on hand in a remark- ly short time and saved the building from pending ruin. The estimated damage ounted to nearly $1,000. Extensive repairs

When Sunday Comes
By John Andrew Holmes

It requires more ability to interest a congregation nowadays for thirty minutes than was required to harangue a church in early New England for seven hours.

are to be made on other parts of the property during the vacation.

This is the church of which Mr. N. D. Allen, for years the Warden of the Charlestown State Prison, was one of the founders. Mr. Charles W. Hazelton of this church, who is president of the local national bank and also president of the Montague Steel Rod Company, is the lay delegate from Franklin Association of Churches to the National Council in Washington in October. Mr. J. Frank Bates has been the organist for over 40 years, beginning his service about the time that Rev. Luther H. Angier became pastor in 1885. Thirty-eight have united with the church in the last two months, 31 on profession of faith and seven by letter. The anniversary caused renewed interest, and reminded the members of their indebtedness to the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society and to the Congregational Church Building Society in the day of small beginnings. Rev. Thomas H. Vincent has been pastor for nearly nine years.

CONNECTICUT

Large Number of Accessions for Goshen

Twenty-one united with GOSHEN on July 5, 16 on confession and five by letter, the largest number to come into church membership at one time since Nov. 4, 1827. This is Rev. H. E. Small's 29th year as pastor.

Activities of Second, Greenwich

The Men's Club of SECOND, GREENWICH, Rev. Oliver Huckel, pastor, has had an unusually successful year with a monthly supper and address. Among the speakers have been Dr. George E. Vincent of the Rockefeller Foundation on Public Health, Don Seitz of the New York World on American Humor, Dr. Sidney L. Gulick on the Attitude of America toward Japan, and Frank Meier on Deep-Sea Diving, illustrated with his diving suit.

Two features since the last mention of this church in these columns have been a brilliant anniversary sermon by Dr. George A. Gordon of Boston, who was pastor at Greenwich 40 years ago, and the remarkable course of lectures by Dean Charles R. Brown on "Why I Believe in Religion." Rev. William T. Topping of Foo Chow, China, the foreign missionary pastor of this church, with his wife and three children, has made the church two delightful visits, giving sermons and addresses. This church has helped to maintain a representative in the Foo Chow field for more than 20 years.

A wonderful Easter Sunrise Service marked the seventh annual holding of this service, with the trumpet music from the spire and the singing of resurrection hymns from the churchyard adjoining.

The pastor, Dr. Huckel, in January and February gave a course of lectures at the Pacific School of Religion at Berkeley, Cal. These lectures will probably be published shortly under the title, Backgrounds of Prayer. His recent book of observations and interpretations from a journey round the world, called The Secret of the East, is now in its second edition.

A Fiftieth Anniversary at Saugatuck

SAUGATUCK, WESTPORT, on June 24 observed the semi-centennial of its Auxiliary to the W. B. M. Miss Mary E. Coley, a charter member, gave an interesting review of the 50 years. Mrs. S. M. Foster presided over the program which also included personal experiences in Africa by Mrs. F. R. Bunker, Wilton, and addresses by Mrs. W. H. Fairchild, New Haven, Miss H. L. Reynolds of Greenwich, as well as greetings from former presidents.

Weston Ordains Minister

NORTHFIELD, WESTON, entertained a council, June 25, to ordain its pastor-elect, W. D. Carroll. A native of Ohio, the candidate was graduated from Findlay College in 1920 and from Yale Divinity School in 1923. As Thayer Fellow of the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem he traveled and studied for a year in Egypt, Palestine and Syria, and European countries, and in 1924 accompanied the American Expedition to the Dead Sea. Later he pursued further studies for a doctorate in philosophy in the Department of

FIRST MORTGAGES
and REAL ESTATE BONDS
Interest 7% Semi-Annually
On Improved Income Florida Real Estate
Loans confined to
Tampa and South Florida
Principal and Interest Guaranteed
Write for booklet and information
GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.
THE LESLIE
A quiet, cosy little House by the sea. Now open. Private baths. Descriptive booklet. 21st season. The best and nearest view of the President's yacht.

The Pratt Teachers' Agency
70 Fifth Avenue, New York
Recommends teachers to colleges, public and private schools in all parts of the country. Advises parents about schools.

OLIVET CAMP On beautiful Lake Geneva
Williams Bay Wisconsin
NORMAN B. BARR, Superintendent
Comfortable and sanitary accommodations. Abundance of good food well cooked and served. Board and Lodging, $12 to $18 per week per person. Bungalows, Cottages, and Tents furnished for light housekeeping, $12 to $30 per week; $30 to $75 per month; $65 to $160 per season, June 15-Aug. 31. For information or reservation write to Olivet Camp, Jedd C. Landwair, Manager, Williams Bay, Wisconsin.

Semitic and Biblical Languages at Yale. The ordination sermon was by Rev. J. M. Deyo of Danbury; the prayer by Rev. F. R. Bunker of Wilton; the charge to the candidate by Rev. E. O. Mead of Georgetown, and the charge to the people by Rev. E. F. MacGregor of Norwalk. Rev. M. F. Clark of New Canaan extended the hand of fellowship.

OHIO

Resigns Assistant Pastorate of First, Toledo

The resignation, effective Oct. 1, of Frank E. Duddy, assistant pastor and director of religious education in FIRST, TOLEDO, for over six years, was read on Sunday morning, June 21, by Dr. A. A. Stockdale. Mr. Duddy has been offered a fellowship by the National Council on Religion in Higher Education and has accepted the same, choosing Harvard as the school where he will work on his doctorate degree.

Mr. Duddy has been 10 years in the ministry, graduating from the Boston University School of Theology in 1915. He came from service in France and has been associated with Dr. Stockdale since that time. In First Church he has made a country-wide reputation among religious educators. His work in this field of religious education has been unusual and substantial, and leaders agree that he has made a new approach to the solving of church school problems. His book, A New Way to Solve Old Problems, published by Scribner's, gives in substance the method pursued in First Church. The book has had a wide appeal and has been the means of drawing visitors from widely separated parts of the country to Toledo to observe the school at work. The school's essential feature is an eight years' preparation of the children of the school for church membership. The school has just closed its fifth year and is an established success.

Under Mr. Duddy's leadership the Boy Scout troop of the church has been the prize-winning troop of the city. His work among young men of the church and congregation has been marked by a constructiveness which has been outstanding.

REV. FRANK E. DUDDY

His work at Harvard finished, it is expected that Mr. Duddy will enter the field of teaching, that being the purpose for which the National Council awards its fellowships.

ILLINOIS

Alto Pass' Dedication

ALTO PASS dedicated its new church in May, on the site of its former building, which was completely destroyed by fire in December, 1923. It also celebrated the 40th anniversary of the organization of the church. The new building, costing more than $9,000, was dedicated free of all indebtedness and without any public appeal.

The building is of stucco, with a commodious basement. On the upper floor is the main auditorium, with folding doors on two sides, making several classrooms available. A large choir room is immediately back of the pulpit platform. The defunct church at Dongola presented its rich, full-toned bell to the church at Alto Pass. Friends were present from almost every community where there are or have been Congregational churches in the southern portion of the state. Associate Supt. Walter Spooner, who laid the corner stone of the church last October, preached at the morning service. The afternoon service of dedication was under his direction. The church was organized May 17, 1885, with 26 charter members. Five of these are still living; four were present and participated in the act of dedication. It is expected that this church will soon yoke with Cobden under competent pastoral oversight.

TEXAS

Building Projects at Dallas

Rev. T. H. Harper reported an Easter gift of $25,000 which helped to make the day at CENTRAL, DALLAS, one of joy and inspiration to all. A committee has been appointed to buy property adjacent to the church with a view to enlarging the present plant, so that it will accommodate many more, as it is hoped to have 1,000 members in the church and 1,000 members in the Sunday School within ten years. The basketball squad of Central Chur won the city title in the Sunday Scho Leagues.

WINNETKA, DALLAS, has just put into the plant about $2,500, and it is now much mo attractive. Rev. Allen Crabtree is pastor.

JUNIUS HEIGHTS, DALLAS, is now in building campaign and will erect this year commodious building with which to care f their increasing numbers. The proposed buil ing will cost about $25,000. Rev. J. L. Smit is pastor.

CALIFORNIA

Sunset, San Francisco, Retires

SUNSET, SAN FRANCISCO, held its last ser ice, June 21, after an existence of varying fo tune for almost 30 years. A devoted band people have held the fort through the yea through times of great discouragement, but n without profit both to the growth of their ow individual faith and to the wider increase the Kingdom of God. A territory in San Fra cisco with great promise has been allocated t the denomination, and work will be begun once to develop a project to fill the gap mad by Sunset's retirement.

Conference Director of Religious Education

Rev. J. C. Prince of Topeka, Kan., has bee appointed Director of Religious Education an Young People's Work for Northern Californi by the Congregational Education Society, an arrived on the field July 15, in time to partic pate in the Young People's Conference sche uled for July 27 to Aug. 3 at Asilomar, conjunction with the annual State Conferenc The need of such a director has been keenl felt for many years and the people of Cal fornia are rejoicing in their good fortune securing such an able man as Mr. Prince.

First, Oakland, Lays Corner Stone

On June 7, FIRST, OAKLAND, laid the corne stone of their new building, inscribed with th Scriptural passage, "Strength and Gladness Ar in His Place." Mr. R. H. Chamberlain, forme member of the Board of Trustees, read the his tory of the church, and the records of th church were placed in the hollow of the ston by Dr. R. E. Gilson, President of the Boar of Trustees. The central figure of the ceremon was Mrs. J. K. McKean, aged widow of former pastor who did much for the church she was assisted in tapping the stone into plac by little Lois Waddell, daughter of the assistan pastor. Dr. R. E. Brown, pastor of the church delivered the principal talk of the occasion

A Successful Mission Assured with an M&M PORTABLE CHAPEL

Substantial Attractive Economical

Ideal for outlying congregations not ready for large church. When this edifice becomes a reality the M & M Chapel can be erected in a new field or sold to another congregation. Ready-built in sections with windows and doors in place, complete with glass and hardware. Bolted together in a short time by unskilled labor. Superintendent furnished at a nominal fee if desired Have given satisfaction for 25 years. Send for free catalog.

MERSHON & MORLEY CO. 92 Main St., Saginaw, Mich

THE HALL ORGAN COMPANY
WEST HAVEN, CONN.
High Grade Pipe Organs
Churches Masonic Halls Residences

McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND
220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B.

OCEAN GROVE NEW JERSEY

The famous sea-shore and camp-meeting resort of America has ordered many thousands of our new hymn book for this season.

Hymns of the Living Gospel, No. 3

Nothing like it. Hymns for the Church—80 of them; Gospel songs—30 new and 54 best known favorites; Invitation Hymns; Responsive Readings; Worship Services for Sabbath Schools prepared by REV. E. H. BONSALL, JR., Sup't Young People's Division, Pennsylvania State S. S. Association. High-grade but not expensive, $15.00 the hundred. Send for returnable sample.

HALL-MACK CO., 21st and Arch Sts., Philadelphia

BIBLES of every description, size and price. Buy from your own Publishing Society.

THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 158 5th Ave. New York 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago and the prayer of dedication was led by Supt. W. J. Minchin of the Northern California Conference. Rev. R. C. Waddell, beloved assistant pastor, was unable to participate in the ceremony on account of illness.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

CLINTON, J. R., Ulster, Ireland, to Central, Philadelphia, Pa. Accepts.

ENMAN, J. E., Chula Vista, Cal., to Wasco. Accepts to begin Aug. 1.

FAGAN, W. G., North Middleboro, Mass., to First Evangelical, Milton. Declines.

SELLER, P. B. L., Clayville, N. Y., to Chester, N. J. At work.

VAANANEN, JOHN, Finnish, Maynard, Mass., to Finnish, Portland, Ore. To begin Oct. 1.

WILSON, GILBERT, New First, Chicago, Ill., to Park Manor, Chicago. Accepts to begin Sept. 15.

Resignations

DUDDY, F. E., assistant, Toledo, O. Effective Oct. 1. To study at Harvard.

KELLY, G. J., Chester, N. J.

Ordinations and Installations

GLEASON, B. C., o., i., First, Brewer, Me., June 24. Sermon by Dr. J. J. Martin; other parts by Rev. Messrs. A. M. Little, W. J. Moulton, G. K. Carter, C. A. Moore, and E. M. Cousins.

Anniversaries

SAXTONS RIVER, Vt., 100th, June 21-23.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
CONNECTICUT
Goshen, July 5	16	21
Rocky Hill, July 5	4	5
Torrington, First	8	13
MASSACHUSETTS
Auburndale	2	4
Gloucester, West, July 5		1
NEW JERSEY
East Orange, First		1
NEW YORK
Canaan, July 5	3	3
Hall	1	4

Personals

BEALE, DR. C. H., of Milwaukee, Wis., will preach at the Tabernacle Church, Salem, Mass., on July 19 and 26.

CHUTE, MISS ISABEL M., Brockton, Mass., who has just completed a two year course in the Hartford School of Pedagogy, has accepted a position as Director of Religious Education in Grace Church, Holyoke. In her home town Miss Chute was secretary of South Church, interested in many religious activities, and prominent in state-wide Christian Endeavor service.

MILLIAN, REV. J. C., Abington, Mass., soon to become Director of Religious Education in Foundry M. E. Church, Washington, with Mrs. Millian has been presented with a purse of gold.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Obituary Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

NETTIE MAUDE BUTTERFIELD

Nettie Maude (Howells) Butterfield, wife of Claude Albert Butterfield, for twenty years a Congregational minister and serving churches in Ludlow, Foxboro, Springfield, and Fairhaven, Mass., passed away suddenly at Springfield, Vt., where they were staying at the Butterfield Farm, Thursday, July 2. She leaves besides a husband, two children, Jean Elizabeth, aged 15, and Robert Tucker, aged 12, four brothers and a sister and mother. She was laid to rest in Lakeview Cemetery, Cleveland, O., amidst a rich floral tribute and in the circle of those she loved. For two years they had made their home in Lexington where already they had won a host of friends, as they had done elsewhere.

Their meeting was romantic—on the English Channel while touring Europe. Theirs was not love which death cannot sever. She was an untiring worker, efficient and willing. Quick to resent a wrong and quick to forgive. A devoted mother and loving wife. Another has offered these words of Whittier:

I will not mock thee with the poor world's common
And heartless phrase
Nor wrong the memory of a sainted woman
With idle praise.
With silence only as their benediction
God's angels come,
Where in the shadow of a great affliction,
The soul sits dumb.

MRS. EMILY BROWN HARKNESS

Mrs. Emily Brown Harkness died May 31, 1925, at Claremont, Cal. She was the first graduate of Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., to become a foreign missionary, and was the first president of Kobe College, Kobe, Japan.

After 13 years in Japan she retired on account of failing health. She married James Harkness and lived in California. The burial was at Cresco, Ia.

REV. ELIZABETH T. HOWLAND

Elizabeth T. Miller was born in Bainbridge, Ross County, O., March 26, 1852, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Miller. The family moved to Chillicothe in her youth, and she graduated from the High School in which she was later a teacher. She was always a student in correspondence courses. She was twice married and twice widowed, the second husband, Henry H. Howland, being of Mayflower stock. Mrs. Howland was ordained to the Congregational ministry at Napoli, N. Y., Sept. 19, 1894. After an effective ministry there she came, in 1900, the third woman in immediate succession, to the country church at Nelson, O., a township with population steadily diminishing for 75 years, the church strong in the past, and sending an unusual number of sons and daughters as ministers and missionaries and teachers, notably of the Goodsell and Fuller families. After a ministry greatly helpful to church and community, Mrs. Howland came, in 1902, to Plymouth Church, Chillicothe, the city where she had been pupil and teacher. By more than ordinary gifts as preacher and organizer, sweet persistence, and absolute devotion, she brought a discouraged church, about ready to give up, to the best position it had ever held in the city.

A later pastorate, in 1915, repeated the miracle. It is not difficult to think that if health had permitted continuance in service here, the later history of the church might have proved to be very different. Another country pastorate was with the church at Wayne, O. Seeking better health conditions, she was at Oneida, Kan., in 1909; at Pomona, Fla., 1918; at Arch Creek, Fla., 1920; at Pomona again, 1921; and came back to the family home at Chillicothe in 1922, for the care of an invalid sister, and the closing years of her own life. She died May 21, 1925. On returning to Ohio she became a member of Plymouth Church, Columbus, with ministerial standing in Central Ohio Association.

Mrs. Howland was a more than ordinarily acceptable and successful minister of the Gospel; quiet and sane, but fervent and impressive. Her modest womanliness gave her added charm and power.

J. G. F.

THOMAS B. POLLARD

Thomas B. Pollard, for eight years headmaster of the Daniel Webster School, Quincy, Mass., died June 25, after a lingering illness. He had taught in the city since 1887. The week before his death he was presented with a purse of gold from teachers and pupils in remembrance and to mark his retirement from active service.

Mr. Pollard was born in Dexter, Me., and graduated from Phillips Andover and Bridgewater Normal School. At his funeral Rev. Carlton Easton, minister of the Quincy Point Church, and Rev. H. E. Hurd, former minister, officiated. Eight principals of Quincy schools served as bearers. The burial was in Mt. Wollaston.

MRS. CHARLES H. SMALL

Cara Lindsley Small, wife of Rev. Charles H. Small, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Sandusky, O., died June 5. She was born in Rochester, Minn., in 1861. In 1886 she was mar-

(Continued on page 127)

Rockford College for Women

Founded in 1847 for Modern Women

A COLLEGE of distinguished graduates, fine traditions and high standards of Christian scholarship. Chartered as college with Beloit by Congregationalists, February 25, 1847. A.B., B.S., and A.M. degrees. Majors in Education, Art, Social Service, Home Economics, Music and Secretarial studies. A campus of wooded acres on Rock River, 88 miles from Chicago. All girls participate in athletics. An intimate college with many student activities.

Write for catalog and book of views.

Wm. A. Maddox, Ph.D., Pres., Box C, Rockford, Illinois

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION

BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

Sixtieth Year Opens August 17, 1925

Prepares men and women for

The Pastorate Social Service
Religious Education Foreign Service
Research

Practical Instruction. Opportunities for Self-Support.
Facilities of University of California.
Graduate Degrees. Faculty of Ten.
Modern and Commodious Buildings under Construction.

COME TO CALIFORNIA TO STUDY

HERMAN F. SWARTZ, President

Bangor Theological Seminary

The 110th year opens Sept. 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.

For catalogue and information, apply to

WARREN J. MOULTON, President

Bangor, Maine.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Research and Training in Five Departments:

(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.

Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

WALNUT HILL SCHOOL

15 Highland Street, Natick, Mass.

A College Preparatory School for Girls. 17 miles from Boston. 46 Acres. Skating Pond. Athletic Fields. 6 Buildings. Gymnasium.

MISS FLORENCE BIGELOW, Principal

OUTSTANDING MINISTERS

come from outstanding young men, trained by outstanding seminaries.

THE CHICAGO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

needs your help in finding young men of the right type, to train for fields of world service. Your suggestions will be appreciated.

FRANK G. WARD, Dean,
5757 University Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches.

For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries Rev. James L. Barton, Rev. Cornelius H. Patton
Associate Secretaries Rev. D. Brewer Eddy, Rev. Ernest W. Riggs, Rev. William E. Strong
Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady, Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Henry Smith Leiper, M.A., Corresponding Secretaries
Miss Lucy B. Crain, Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Associate Secretaries
Irving C. Gaylord, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries

Rev. A. Y. Bliss, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York

Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, D.D., Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies and Congregational ministers seeking pastorates. Maintained by the Congregational Conferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chairman.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secretary and Missionary Education Secretary
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and Adult Education Secretary
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Secretary
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service, Missionary Education, Student and Young People's Work; aids Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of the denomination for the publication and distribution of The Congregationalist, church school equipment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, teachers' magazines, children's and young people's weekly papers, and books for home and church use, with book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Manager
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregationalist
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Congregational House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas.; Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIOR, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIFIC, 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W. C. Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec. Sec.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H. H. Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Congregational House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; Rev. John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BOSTON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Sears Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer. Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, a constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trust for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

(Continued from page 125)

ried in New York City, going to Washington, D. C., with her husband, who was the first pastor of the Mt. Pleasant Congregational Church. They afterwards lived in Hudson, Springfield, Cleveland, O., when her husband was state superintendent, and in Jamestown, N. Y.

Mrs. Small was a most efficient pastor's wife, and greatly endeared herself to the people of the churches and of the cities where they lived. For six years she was president of the Ohio Woman's Home Missionary Union, and at the time of her death she was a trustee of the union.

She had two sons, Carlton L. and Philip L., who are in business in Cleveland.

Her funeral was conducted by Dr. Dan F. Bradley, assisted by Rev. E. S. Rothrock and Rev. Ross W. Sanderson, in the church at Sandusky. The interment was in Lakeview Cemetery in Cleveland.

American Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches. Bequests and Annuities are solicited in order that the House may be freed from mortgage indebtedness and the Association thus enabled to furnish our Missionary Organizations with business offices at minimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Rev. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hubbard, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816

Home visitation and personal missionary service in connection with our churches. Emergency relief. Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contributions and legacies gratefully received and scrupulously administered.

William Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. Parker, Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

Incorporated 1829 Boston Reorganized 1922

Seaman's Friend Society, Inc.

This Society, reorganized in 1922, now fully represents the Congregational Churches of New England in its practical, social and religious work among seamen. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Rooms at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. The Society provides dormitory accommodations, reading and recreation rooms, religious services, pool tables, and games of many kinds, a restaurant, a canteen, shower baths, postal and banking facilities. Donations and bequests solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis. President, Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore E. Busfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. Com., Franklin P. Shumway; Office 618 Congregational House.

American Seamen's Friend Society

(Incorporated 1833)

The only American undenominational international and national Society aiding seamen.

Maintains a Sailors' Home and Institute at 507 West Street, New York City.

Loan libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing from New York.

PUBLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).

Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.

SUPPORTED by contributions and legacies.

JOHN B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE SIDNEY WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary.

CLARENCE C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 79 Wall St., New York, to whom contributions may be sent.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday Schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps all churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

Events to Come

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

ISLES OF SHOALS CONGREGATIONAL SUMMER CONFERENCE, Star Island, off Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 10-24.

NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H., Aug. 10-17.

Northfield Summer Conferences

CONFERENCE OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, July 23-Aug. 1.

GENERAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS, Aug. 1-17.

MASSACHUSETTS CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR INSTITUTE, Aug. 17-24.

National Association of Organists

The National Association of Organists is to meet this year in Cleveland, O., August 4-7. The importance of this association in relation to church music is evident, and much attention of the coming convention will be devoted to this special interest. The full program can be obtained from Willard I. Nevins, 29 West 57th St., New York.

"I think I'll take my beauty nap now."

"Take a good long sleep, dear."—Pitt Panther.

Did you ever hear the story of the Scotchman who after twenty years as a golf enthusiast gave up the game because he lost his ball?—West Point Pointer.

Prof—"What do you mean by saying that Benedict Arnold was a janitor?"

Ferdie Frosh—"The book says that after his exile he spent the rest of his life in abasement."—Brown Jug.

"Dear me, they say Boston's so cultured that many children have never heard of the Three Bears."

"No, but they've all heard of the Forbears."—Ames Green Gander.

"Oh, I've had my shot at this public speaking stuff," remarked Antwerp Andy, who has done just about everything in this world, "when I was a kid I used to call up my girl over a rural telephone."—Hamilton Royal Gaboon.

A farmer in Iowa sent the following letter to the Navy Department:

"My youngest son has gone away and enlisted in the Navy. I can't get him out. Won't you help me? He is a good boy and I was raising him for my own use."—Our Navy.

Passing Motorist (to man standing disconsolately beside a stalled machine)—"What's the trouble, partner?"

The Disconsolate One—"The blankety-blank guy I bought this car from was a faith healer and there aren't any tools in it.—California Pelican.

Mrs. Lafferty—"Ten stitches did the doctor have to take in me ould man after the fight last night."

Mrs. O'Hara—"Tin? Was that all? Shure, when the doctor seen me poor husband carried in this morning, he says: 'Has any wan got a sewing machine.'"—Boston Transcript.

Fond Parent to Abie—"How much is two times two?"

Abie—"Six."

F. P.—"No, Abie, that's wrong. The answer is four."

Abie—"I know the answer, fadder, but I wanted to see you bargain."—Dartmouth Jack o' Lantern.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder* and *The Advance

July 23, 1925

Vol. CX No. 30

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook	99
Editorial—The "Good Old Days" Again	100
From One Presidency to Another
Will It Be Necessary?
The Scopes Case
My Sympathy in the Dayton Case, by Irving Maurer	103
From Our Western Editor	104
The Hill of Gold, by Emma Seabury	104
The Situation in Tennessee, by M. S. Freeman	105
The Parable of the Steamer and the Skiff	105
The Angel of Hell's Half Acre, by James M. Warnack	106
A Birthday Prayer, by Alice Hartich	107
Christian Workers in South America, by Frank K. Sanders	108
The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches, by Daniel Evans	109
Inaugurates New President	110
Honorary Degrees	111
Congregational Church, Olivet, Michigan	112
The Congregational Foundation for Education	112
Our Invalid Parish—Finding God More Vitally	113
Closet and Altar	113
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic	113
Among the New Books	114
The Congregationalist's Bible Class—Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson—Books on the Bible	115
Vital Questions for Congregationalists	116
With the Children—Mr. Policeman, by Marian Kimball Willard	117
The China Situation	117
All One, by William Olney	117
Pacific Calls Dr. Dobbs	118
News of the Churches	119

Books on Modern Industrial Problems

Each a direct challenge to thinking Christian men and women

RECENT LABOR PROGRESS Roger W. Babson

Author of "What Is Success?," "The Fundamentals of Prosperity," etc.

Here is a mine of authentic, authoritative information concerning the Department of Labor, the duties it undertakes, the service it renders, and of those areas of government over which it has specific and immediate control. The reader may learn all about the establishment of and development of Women's and Children's Bureaus; of the service rendered by the Department in matters of employment and conciliation in trade disputes; of the work carried on in the administration of Immigration and Naturalization; of how its Bureau of Statistics furnishes the fullest information relating to work and wages, living conditions, and how the Department possesses what is unquestionably the best and most complete labor library in existence. $2.00

CHRIST AND LABOUR C. F. Andrews

"Mr. Andrews' discussion calls for courage and boldness in facing world situations today. No serious reader of his book can fail to feel the urgency of the demand that social relationships be redeemed, and the uncertainty of the doom that lies 'on every culture and refinement of man that is built on the oppression of the poor.' A remarkable feature of the book is the way in which quotations from the New Testament are introduced in settings which give them new vividness and meaning, so that the words of Christ come as a direct challenge to his disciples today."—International Review of Missions. $1.75

THE NEW WORLD OF LABOR

Sherwood Eddy

Author of "Facing the Crisis," "Everybody's World," etc.

This book is the widest survey ever attempted in a single volume of the industrial situation and of labor conditions in America, China, Japan, India, Russia, Great Britain, Germany, France, and Italy. "I had always taken a certain academic interest in social and industrial problems. But after the war it was different. I could not approve the old un-Christian social order," said Mr. Eddy after months of experience at the battlefronts. His twenty-three years of service in lands abroad have fitted him to deal in true perspective with the present world situation. $1.50

THE ECONOMY OF HUMAN ENERGY

Thomas Nixon Carver

Professor of Political Economy in Harvard University

The principal resource of any country is its fund of human energy, and the conservation of this resource is the greatest of all economic problems. Much that is said and written on the subject of waste is confined to the waste of money, food, fuel, and other material resources. These things are important in themselves and deserve attention. The only serious form of waste, however, is the waste of man power or human energy. In order that our people may be encouraged to think of every economic question as a question in the economy of human energy or man power, this book is written. $2.50

CHILD LABOR and the SOCIAL CONSCIENCE

Child Labor Primer Davis Wasgatt Clark

One of the foulest blots on our national escutcheon is that of child labor. But the cleansing process has begun, and some day—an early day, let us hope—it will be completed. The author says that "the American conscience has been informed and quickened until it has finally and clearly discerned the essentially criminal character of Child Labor, has arrested and placed the culprit in the prisoner's dock and bidden him plead to the general charge of being an enemy-alien to the public welfare." $1.00

THE IRON MAN IN INDUSTRY

Arthur Pound

Here is a refreshingly modern argument for such education of our industrial workers that they may be equipped profitably to enjoy the leisure with which the automatic machine now provides them. There is scarcely a phase of our life today which is not, to some degree, influenced or controlled by the automatic machine. Arthur Pound, an alumnus of the University of Michigan and a resident of Flint, the manufacturing center of the great automobile industry, has had an excellent opportunity to make a study of the Iron Man at the highest point of its development, as well as of the many human problems and relations which it so vitally affects. To his wide experience and keen observation Mr. Pound adds an imaginative quality which lends a forcible interest to his book. $1.75

INDUSTRIAL DEMOCRACY A Plan for Its Achievement

Glenn E. Plumb and Willian G. Roylance

The Plumb Plan explained and applied; a definite program for the reorganization of industry on a democratic basis.

This book is the consummation of years of practical experience and profound study by Mr. Glenn E. Plumb; it is his final contribution toward securing that social justice our government was created to establish. The truths set forth in this work are as ancient as human experience; their application is new only as development in the material arts and sciences makes new institutional adjustments necessary in the economic and social relations of organized society. As advocates of social justice are only to be secured through economic and industrial justice, we can render no more valid service to our times than by the widest diffusion of these truths in which we believe. $2.00

THE GOLDEN RULE IN BUSINESS

Arthur Nash

President the A. Nash Company, Cincinnati

The great miracle of the modern business world is here set forth for the first time in a book of universal appeal. What Roger W. Babson has been long urging, has been actually put into practice, not only with startling ethical results, but also with financial success exceeding even the wildest imagination. $1.25

CHRISTIAN IDEALS IN INDUSTRY

F. Ernest Johnson and Arthur E. Holt

This study grows out of the conviction that the "hot spot" in the world of human relations is in the field of industry and concerns the knotty problems of capital and labor. As these problems are essentially human problems they require a spiritual approach and an educational method for their proper consideration and solution. 75 cents

MODERN INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS

Policy and Practice John Calder

Mr. Calder's book is for the student of industrial relations, and of labor and industrial management. It is calculated to arouse an understanding of the relations between employer and employee which will lead to a more intelligent sympathy in the years to come.

"It is a book which no man dealing with large groups of men in industry can afford to neglect. It penetrates beneath the surface of industrial problems to the psychological and spiritual attitudes which must be understood if proper adjustments are to be possible even for men of good will."—The Congregationalist. $2.25

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP AND MODERN INDUSTRY

A Series of Discussions for Adult Groups by Arthur E. Holt

Thought-provoking Questions for Discussion

Given an interdependent industrial world, how can it achieve unity, with freedom and righteousness?

What advantages have come as a result of our modern way of making a living?

What are the duties and rights of the farmer, employer, laborer, consumer, middleman, investor, professional man, in modern industry?

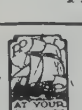
The sickness of a society that is based on the fight for rights alone?

What contribution can "The Community of the Spirit" make to an industrial order through a mutual regard for rights and duties?

Can we outline a program of action for the church in the midst of international, inter-racial, and inter-class war?

A most valuable and unusual feature of this course is the Library Package of pamphlets containing much illuminating and informing material. The plan is for each group to buy one of these packages of pamphlets to be used as a reference library.

Price of the textbook, 25 cents. Price of the Library Package, $1.50. Send for returnable copies today.



Congregational Publishing Society
(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston
19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 31 July 30, 1925

If I Were A Jew

By ERNEST G. GUTHRIE

The Scopes Trial—A Day in Dayton

By FRED P. ENSMINGER

Francis E. Clark—An Appreciation

By ROLFE COBLEIGH

The Christian Endeavor Convention

By FRANCIS E. CLARK

The Raw Deal for Religion

AN EDITORIAL

In A Tight Corner

The American Board Needs Help

6,000 personal gifts are needed before September 8.
A careful estimate shows a serious situation.

The July News Bulletin is now being read by the Board's friends —thousands of them—the best Christian folk of the land—devoted, interested in vital Christianity, willing to help.

The Condition Told in Figures

The gifts of the churches decreased $9,000 in ten months.

Net decrease in receipts for ten months $20,705. After including every possible feature of relief in sight, the Board must receive by September 8 an increase over all last year's receipts in these two months of $109,484.

Whatever part of this amount is unraised will appear as deficit September 8.

Ten thousand new friends receive this appeal for the first time. Will you help? It is new money that is needed. Will you step into the line?

The Board's loyal, steady friends are thinking, deciding. There is no better nor more important work. There is nothing closer to the heart of Christ nor more like His life. This work is a vital part of the Kingdom Program. We all believe in it and will be loyal to it.

Make checks payable to F. A. Gaskins, Treas., 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
Books close September 8. Send your checks before that date.

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | July 30, 1925 | No. 31

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh — News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D. — Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

Money Well Spent

A GOOD friend of The Congregationalist, whose faith in our service must be thus publicly acknowledged since its expression is anonymous, sends a cashier's check for $100 to be applied on subscriptions in behalf of ministers and home missionary pastors who are not receiving in salary more than $1,800 per year. We deeply appreciate this gift and assure our anonymous correspondent that with the help of the C. H. M. S. and the State Superintendents the money will be well applied in sending the paper where it will be appreciated.

Outside so distinct a sphere of benevolence, but valuable for its Christian service, there is a further field that might be cultivated at the present time by friends who are willing to back religious journalism with financial support. This is in the placing of The Congregationalist in libraries of a public and semi-public character. We are led to emphasize this service just now because of a letter from a reader who has been accustomed to read The Congregationalist at the Congressional Library in Washington. In recent weeks he has missed it from the tables there and wondered whether the librarian were at fault. The fact is, however, that some time ago the subscription, which was paid by a Washington layman, expired and was not renewed. Unfortunately The Congregationalist has not resources that warrant our sending the paper except upon the basis of a paid-up subscription. We wish that it were possible to establish a Library Club with a fund for the express purpose of placing The Congregationalist in libraries throughout the country, where each copy might find dozens, or hundreds, of readers. Are any of our readers interested? Are any willing to begin this service by placing The Congregationalist in the libraries in their own communities?

Other places where The Congregationalist would be appreciated but where we have been unable to send it with regularity would be in Homes for the Aged. Many old readers, who have welcomed The Congregationalist's weekly visits in by-gone years, would still find help and comfort in its pages were it available.

Dr. J. D. Jones on Pastoral Visitation

RECENTLY addressing the outgoing ministerial students at Hackney and New College (London, Eng.), Dr. J. D. Jones, well known through his long pastorate at Bournemouth, and his conspicuous leadership in English Congregationalism, laid great stress upon pastoral visitation as an essential factor in the work of the ministry. He expressed the opinion that a church would be justified in canceling a call to a pastor who informed them at the inception of his ministry that he was "not a visitor." Dr. Jones acknowledged that there were men of special genius for pulpit ministry, like Spurgeon and Parker, who could not be bound by ordinary standards, but added that "if a rank-and-file man thinks he can act like the great genius he is heading straight for destruction." He recalled the prayer that some man had made for a student who was leaving Yorkshire College:

May he keep ever mindful that he is not a Spurgeon or a Parker or a Campbell Morgan, and that he does not minister in the City Temple or Westminster Chapel, but in a little country charge. There was, Dr. Jones said, a vast amount of sanctified wisdom in that prayer.

Dr. Jones knows English conditions well, but if we were to discuss the matter from the standpoint of American conditions we should say that much of the fault in this matter of pastoral visitation lies with the churches. There ought to be a clear understanding about such matters, not after, but before a call is extended, and the church that has deliberately called to its pastorate a man whose lack of practice of pastoral visitation is well known has no right to complain when it fails to get pastoral visitation. As it is, one of the most discouraging aspects of the minister's life is to see how larger opportunity so frequently passes by the men of conscientious devotion to pastoral duties to knock at the doors of others who, largely at the neglect of such duties, have won attention by sensational and superficial methods. Each minister in these matters must satisfy his own conscience and determine what is his highest ministry, but there cannot be too great appreciation by the churches of sound training, stability of character, and conscientious devotion to the details of pastoral service.

An Eminent Example

A STRIKING phase of Dr. Jones' address was his reference to his own methods. The minister's danger from having no fixed hours should, he thought, be avoided by the exercising of rigid self-discipline. In this connection he thus outlined his own day, and his practice during his long pastorate:

The time before breakfast I keep for myself, for letters or literary work, or writing addresses such as this. From 9 to 1 A.M. I am in my study, preparing for the work of the pulpit. Most of my evenings are occupied with meetings, but the afternoons, when I am at home, I give regularly to my people. The hours of visitation are as usefully spent as those in the study. Even though outside work for the denomination often calls me away, I pay a good deal more than two hundred calls in the year—more like double that number—and I look forward to the time when freedom from outside engagements will enable me to do much better. . . . Visitation of the sick is a sacred obligation with which nothing should interfere. I have heard of a young minister who postponed his visit to a sick room owing to a golfing engagement. Such a man shows himself a shepherd who does not care for the flock.

I have begun the twenty-eighth year of my ministry in Bournemouth, and I have never known what it was to have a ripple of disagreement with my people. I have never had even the crumpled roseleaf in my ministry, and the reason is that the people are all my friends. I believe I am as happy as any man in the Congregational ministry, and the explanation is that I have tried to be a pastor as well as a preacher.

Dr. Jones thinks that even "the social call" is to be commended. "If you never waste time in any worse way than by taking a cup of tea with your people," he remarked, "you will not go far wrong."

The Place of Preaching

IT should, perhaps, be pointed out that this insistence upon the essential place of pastoral visitation comes from a preacher who prepares his sermons with the utmost care, and whose preaching has attained wide recognition for its power and effectiveness. In this same address Dr. Jones laid great stress upon preaching, not as the mere imparting of knowledge but as the bringing of men face to face with God. He quoted Sir George Adam Smith to the effect that while preachers should know all about modern scholarship they need not pour it all out on their people in church. "It is a good thing to wash your face, but it is needless to leave the soapsuds on it."

He is the wise preacher [said Dr. Jones] who leads his people on into the larger truths without in the process creating friction and strife. Let the preacher deal with abiding human needs, and his views on points of scholarship will create no trouble.

We are not sure but Dr. Jones takes too complacent a view at this point. One of the profoundest human needs today is the need of the right attitude toward matters not dissociated from "points of scholarship." The neglect of sound teaching, intellectual as well as "spiritual," accounts for much that is happening in Tennessee and elsewhere in America at the present hour. Dr. Jones would be surprised to know the extent to which the failure to make his own intellectual convictions plain at some points has led to his being regarded by many ultraconservatives in America as an ally of their cause. A correspondent not long ago, in a letter to the Editor, claimed Dr. Jones for the Fundamentalists. That, of course, is absurd. Dr. Jones during the quarter-century that we have known him has broadly accepted the approved results of modern scholarship and the historico-critical view of the Bible.

Evolution and Life's Goal

THOUGH brief in compass, occupying barely half a column, an editorial in the New York Times of July 19 states with unusual clearness the position of those who find no conflict between the evolutionary theory and religious faith, and also the moral and spiritual meaning of the evolutionary doctrine for those who find in it some explanation of the methods and purpose of the divine Creator.

The Times recalls the words of a former President of Princeton, the late Dr. James McCook:

When a scientific theory is brought before us, our first inquiry is not whether it is consistent with religion, but whether it is true. If it is found to be true on the principle of the induction of Bacon, it will be found to be consistent with religion on the principle of the unity of knowledge.

The Times points out that the Tennessee legislature did not face the question "Is it true?," but assumed that the evolution theory was inconsistent with "what it supposed to be essential to religious belief," and that the court refused to permit itself to be informed on the matter, following the title of the act which prohibits the teaching of the "evolution theory," rather than the body of the act which defines the prohibition as against the teaching of a theory which "denies the Divine creation."

But [says the Times] there are millions who though their minds give support to the evolutionary theory have also a belief in a Divine creation and a faith with a foundation as firm as that of the pious prosecutors in this case.

The trial, "with all its humiliating accompaniments," the Times thinks, illustrates two outstanding characteristics of the human mind—the darker side of tenacity in clinging to inherited ideas, which is responsible for treating the greatest philosophers with contempt and sending inventors to their graves in penury, and the brighter side in that "mysterious urge which in spite of all the weight of precedent, the clog of habit, the love of the familiar, the downward pull of passion, and the peril of failure gives one a persistent impulse toward something better than what it was."

It is in this connection that the Times admirably defines the spiritual significance of evolution for the man of devout mind.

In the evidence of a developing process there is stronger emphasis upon a divine end and purpose. So this attitude of the open-minded quest of understanding becomes a new basis of communion with the divine. Says the Times:

It is the unsatisfied mind pushing further back to get some interpretation of the whole series of creation in order to find some suggestion of the specific consummation toward which what has preceded is persistently working; for the existence of the different forms of energy must, while leading back the thought to some common Source, also lead forward to some definite Goal and to a "unity of that which man is and of that which he wishes to be."

The Retirement of Dr. Clark

FRANCIS E. CLARK has resigned the presidency of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, but his spirit will continue to lead on the youthful hosts that go forward in the path of service which he blazed so long ago and which through all the years he has helped to make a highway of righteousness. Competent hands and an inspiring personality are ready for the succession. While regretting the retirement of "Father Endeavor" Clark, we may rejoice that Dr. Daniel A. Poling, trained under Dr. Clark, experienced in leadership as Associate President with him, now becomes President. For many years Dr. Clark has devoted much of his time to international Endeavor work, and, as president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, he has made many and far distant journeys among all the nations of the world. This office he continues to hold.

Dr. Clark as pastor of Williston Congregational Church in Portland, Maine, organized the first Christian Endeavor Society on Feb. 2, 1881. Since 1882, annual or biennial conventions have been held regularly. In 1885 the United Society of Christian Endeavor was formed at the convention in Ocean Park, Me. In 1887 the United Society was incorporated and called Dr. Clark from the happy pastorate of Phillips Church, South Boston, Mass., to the office which he resigned on July 6, at the recent International Convention in Portland, Ore., his term of service having been just 38 years to a day.

What busy years those 38 years have been. How marvelously blessed has been the work of Dr. Clark as leader of the great movement, as preacher of an evangel for the times, as prophet of a new and better day, as religious journalist and author of books. Best of all have been and are the man himself, and the life that he lived. A saintly, brotherly, manly man, Dr. Clark has always lived a life of resolute, humble, unselfish Christian endeavor.

He has been wisely constructive in the choice of corner-stone principles upon which the Christian Endeavor movement is built, in the methods adopted, and in the choice of his co-workers. The names of Shaw and Baer, Wells and Gates, Poling and Mrs. Shaw, stand high in the honor roll of comrades with Dr. Clark. At least a score of others have made notable contributions to the success of the movement. But the real leader has always been Dr. Clark.

The basic principles of Christian Endeavor, as stated by Dr. Clark himself, are: "Confession of Christ, Service for Christ, Fellowship with Christ's People, and Loyalty to Christ's Church." The society puts great emphasis upon training young Christians for service by serving and self-expression. It provides for spiritual and intellectual development and for wholesome social pleasure. Its grading provides for all ages of youth. As Dr. Clark says:

It unites all ages in a pledge to Christ and his church, without which in some form of serious obligation we believe no society of Christian Endeavor can prosper or long exist.

The society also places much stress on the Quiet Hour for personal devotion, on responsibility for Christian stewardship of time and money and personal influence. It seeks to promote these multifarious forms of Christian activity largely through its religious meetings for prayer and testimony, its committees for service, its unions for fellowship and inspiration.

Dr. Clark continues:—

You will notice that, in my opinion at least, Christian Endeavor glories in being distinctly, avowedly, rejoicingly, a religious society. It does not seek to camouflage its religion with worldly attractions; it does not bait its hook with doubtful amusements.

Dr. Clark has led in the development of a practical program and effective methods adaptable to any truly evangelical church for the Christian training of youth. The success or failure of any society or any union depends upon the personalities responsible for it. If all had the spirit and wisdom of Dr. Clark there would be few failures indeed.

It is significant that Dr. Clark places much emphasis upon the pledge, upon loyalty to Christ and the church, upon useful service, upon the deepening of the spiritual life, upon good citizenship, upon interdenominational and international brotherhood, and always upon progress. "I press on," is the motto which he gave at Portland for the Fidelity Campaign upon which Christian Endeavorers have entered.

Dr. Clark has made a superb contribution to the religious life of the world; he has set an inspiring example in his own life, and he has given us a vision of ideals which we all need to realize. In the golden days of life's autumn, amid the sheaves of an abundant spiritual harvest, may Dr. Clark be richly blessed.

R. C.

* *

The death recently of Dr. A. C. Dixon, noted Baptist preacher of Baltimore, who was for some years pastor of Spurgeon's Tabernacle in London, leads a writer in the British Weekly to recall an interesting story of Dixon's introduction to C. H. Spurgeon on his first visit to England. Spurgeon glanced at Dixon's tall figure, and remarked, "Well, I have always heard that they carry things to great lengths in America."

The Raw Deal for Religion

MUCH reading of many daily papers with their glaring headlines and first-page sensationalism on the Scopes case impresses one with the fact that in all this publicity true religion, for the most part, has been getting a raw deal.

There would be value in this first-page publicity emphasizing issues that in some measure at least are essentially religious in their import and associations were the publicity characterized by constructive insight and discriminating judgment. As it is, a great deal that appears is calculated to encourage misconceptions in the popular mind; and this, in spite of much assumption to the contrary, is harmful. A popular preacher once said to the writer that he cared little what the papers said about his sermons as long as they gave them adequate attention. There is in that a reflection of the popular notion that it is a great thing to get religion discussed no matter what is said about it. We cannot agree with that opinion. On the contrary we believe that in all publicity concerning religion the value of news and comment depends entirely upon the quality and the truth of what is said about it.

The Scopes case, in its present stage, except as certain lime-light seekers could contrive to make it spectacular in non-legal, or extra-legal way, was bound to be of limited interest. At the time of writing the decision would seem to be a foregone conclusion. The case narrows down to the question of Scopes having broken a law that he virtually admits breaking. The real issue will appear when the case gets to the Supreme Court of the United States, and there is widespread belief that the Tennessee "anti-evolution" law will not last longer in that Court than did the Oregon anti-parochial-school law. If the Supreme Court should ultimately uphold the Tennessee law this country would indeed be facing a desperate situation—a situation in which all the cruelties of which democracies are capable—and democracies can have all the cruelties of mobs when they are not ruled by reason and principle—might be applied through majority rule to effect new inquisitions.

As it is, both in its immediate setting in Dayton, and in the reports and comment in the press at large, the Scopes case has become too much an issue, debate or struggle, between Bryan and Darrow; and the unfortunate significance of this is that neither of these men is spiritually competent to discuss religion in its finer aspects and higher values. Mr. Darrow puts Mr. Bryan in the witness box and questions him about Jonah and the whale, and the whole farcical performance assumes an aspect of real tragedy as one realizes that apparently neither questioning skeptic nor credulous literalist senses the sublime truth and spiritual beauty of an allegory that marks the culminating point of Old Testament religion, and the noblest conception of divine and human relationships that man had attained before the day of Christ. Compare the atmosphere of the Dayton court-room with that of Broadway Tabernacle on a Sunday morning as Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, with all the competency of open-minded faith and spiritual perception, preached to boys and girls the sermon on "Jonah" recently published in The Congregationalist. How can any reasonable person who really wishes to read the Bible intelligently fail to perceive how immeasurably devout, open-minded scholarship, studying the Scriptures with full appreciation of their form and beauty, and in quest of their spiritual meaning, towers above either cold and unsympathetic rationalism or credulous formalism?

One recalls in this connection the reply of the late Chancellor Burwash to a student. The Chancellor had been lecturing upon the allegorical interpretation of the early chapters of Genesis. For almost an hour he had expounded the spiritual truth cast in allegorical and poetical form when a student broke in with the inquiry whether Adam had been put to sleep that he might not feel any pain when the rib out of which woman was formed was taken from him. Chancellor Burwash was a man of unusually saintly character and serious mien. Even a smile seldom hovered over his features. But at the question he threw himself back in his chair with a loud guffaw, as he said to his student, in reproachful kindliness, O you poor bald Occidental! You do not appreciate the beautiful poetry of the Hebrew mind!

It is the spirit of the Occidental that has been chiefly in evidence at Dayton. Even the story of Creation has not had a fair show. It is the Bible rather than science that has suffered at the hands of the incompetents. Whatever potential injury Mr. Bryan and his cohorts may do to science is as nothing to the potential injury to progress toward the intelligent appreciation of the Bible and the perception of its inward meaning and outward glory. Take this Genesis story of Creation; contrast the sublimity of its ancient perception of the source and meaning of the world and of life, the enlightenment and progressiveness of its writer, with the crude literalism of a modern day that would bury its spirit beneath its letter! What does this story assert? What is its positive value? We find the answer in three conceptions beyond which modern thought has hardly gone. Consider their sublimity.

1. The Genesis writer comes at once to a Creator—that is he postulates being or personality at the foundation and center of the universe.
2. Intrinsically and inevitably, in origin, nature and destiny, he links the life of man with this creative Being.
3. He represents creation as an orderly process—the bringing of order out of chaos.

For such a spiritual conception linking all of the world, and all of life, with all of truth, it is as futile to look to the cultured agnostic as to the dogmatic and loudly-assertive obscurantist. If there is pathos in the condition of church life in America today, in the fact that so many who ought to be giving intelligent leadership are but blind leaders of the blind, there is equal, if not deeper, pathos in the spiritual futility of so many "intellectuals" who pose as the enlightened and superior critics of Christian faith and of the Christian Church. When one thinks of the ability of some of these men, of what they might be doing, the contemplation of this futility is all the more pathetic.

From Our Western Editor

A constant barrage upon the Volstead Act is being kept up throughout the West by the Chicago Tribune and other newspapers of like attitude. They hammer constantly upon these three points—more liquor is being consumed than before Prohibition went into effect; the traffic is much more lawless than it was under regulation, and crime has greatly increased under Prohibition. I think it would be easy to convince any unprejudiced observer that the first two charges are false. Chicago had 8,000 saloons just before Prohibition came into effect. Many of them, by the admission of their owners, were selling large amounts of liquor and making lots of money. The reports of the police, of residents of our hotels, of merchants who know the financial situation, and of observers from almost every field show that it is not possible that the amount of liquor being consumed now is as great as before Prohibition went into effect. It seems that more is being consumed on account of the fact that all drinking now is against the law and is, therefore, very much more noticeable. When it was lawful to drink intoxicating liquors the public paid little attention to open drinking. Dozens of boys might go along the street in the summer time with pails of beer for the lunch of working men and it had become such a common sight that no one commented upon it. By the most liberal estimate of the liquor consumed now, in comparison to that of the days of the open saloon, careful observers say the amount, so far as the West is concerned, is cut down fully 75 per cent. This is true of cities such as Peoria, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul, and even Milwaukee.

It is freely charged that the liquor traffic is more lawless than in the days of the open saloon. Folks who say that have short memories. Some of us can never forget the days when that trinity of hell, the saloon, the gambling den, and the house of prostitution existed together, with the saloon as the basic element. The saloon in those days broke practically every law of God and man. Saloons would sell to minors, both boys and girls, they would rent out rooms for immoral purposes, they would sell liquor without a license, and they controlled the politics of the country in those days. The slates of the political parties were often made in the saloons and dictated by saloon keepers. The liquor traffic has always been lawless and the only way to deal with it is to make it an outlaw. It can't be regulated. It was many times more lawless in the old days than it is under the Volstead Act. The return to the selling of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes means that we shall return to the open saloon with all its evils. The Volstead Act is probably as well enforced as any other law upon the statute books.

I can well remember what happened when a mayor in Chicago saw a great light regarding the social evil. He had been at the head of the city government for a good many years and had believed that the way to deal with the social evil was to have a segregated district and treat the evil as Europe does. When he changed his mind the police stopped all street solicitation, they wiped out the segregated district and suppressed, as far as possible, every appearance of the evil. That does not mean that there is none of it in the City of Chicago. Not at all. It does mean that it is hidden, that the youth are not corrupted by it, that girls are infinitely safer here now than they were formerly and that the whole situation is cleaner. It means that those who want to go astray in this way must seek opportunities to do it. A comparison of the situation on the streets of New York and Chicago now with those of the days of open vice will convince anybody that the prohibition of the social evil is by far the best way to deal with it. We still have advocates of the segregated district, who claim that evil women have been driven into residence districts. Those, however, who would return to the old method of licensing vice are growing fewer and this method will never be adopted again in America. Even the Chicago Tribune believes in prohibiting the sale and the carrying of fire-arms and seems to believe in the enforcement of the narcotic act. Isn't it strange that the paper should take such an antagonistic attitude toward the Volstead Act? Where narcotics and fire-arms have slain their tens the liquor business has slain tens of thousands.

As to the charge that there is more crime now than there was before Prohibition, the charge is probably true. Those who make the charge would have some trouble in proving, however, that Prohibition is to blame for the increase in crime. We must take into account that we are in the period following the World War. History shows that such periods have always been lawless. In addition people have had much power put into their hands and they have more money to spend than ever before. The fact that they have not developed control enough to enable them to use the new power wisely has no relationship to Prohibition save that if there should be any difference it would be found in the help that Prohibition has given. Knowing, as we do, the influence of the saloon in other lawless periods, it seems reasonable to believe that if we had the open saloon of a former day, the lawlessness of today would be greatly intensified. Employers of labor claim that their workmen give very much better service in these days than in the days of the open saloon and those who retail merchandise hold that their sales are very much larger than ever before. So it is evident that the money is not going into liquor and if it is not going into liquor then the Volstead Act cannot be charged with the increase of crime. In spite of the constant hammering that the Act gets, evidently the majority of the people of the country still believe that it is a good law by the way they vote. It ought to be enforced until the people vote to change it.

* *

Readers of The Congregationalist have been much interested in the troubles at Herrin, Illinois. Rev. Howard S. Williams, a layman evangelist of Hattiesburg, Miss., has just closed a seven weeks' revival which has greatly stirred, not only Herrin, but Williamson County. It is claimed that more than 160,000 have attended the revival during the seven weeks and that about 400, including some of the county's "worst" people, have claimed conversion under the preaching of Mr. Williams. Apparently the revival has resulted in a great clean-up so that bootlegging and gambling are a thing of the past. Williamson County is situated in a part of Illinois which can yet be touched by the old-fashioned emotional revival. Perhaps that is the only type of religious work that would be successful in this community. It is to be hoped that the emotional movement is deep enough and strong enough permanently to change the character of the county. E. W. G.

Chicago, Ill.,
July 20, 1925.

A Long Ministry

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

I have read in your paper of July 2 the account given by the Western Editor of the two thirty-year pastorates in the West; and it has brought to my mind a similar pastorate in the East. For thirty years my father, Rev. Thomas V. Haines, preached in the Congregational Church at the country town of North Hampton, N. H., and was then made pastor emeritus. The good that he did and the influence he sent out can never be written except in the books of God. He has been in heaven twenty-two years last May, but his memory is still cherished in many hearts; for he was greatly beloved and respected by all who know him.

MY FATHER

'Twas he who took my hand and played with me
The while we dwelt among the hills.
'Twas he in tender love that crowned for me
My childish joys with happy thrills.
'Twas he who later merrily declaimed
His little daughter's language, clear, precise,
When in the grass a frog she saw and cried:
"A mice! A mice! Papa, a mice!"

His love was deep, and rooted in a life
That showed to me the Love Divine;
And taught my youthful heart to gladly take
That Heavenly love and make it mine.
He imaged purity and truth upon
The inner chambers of my soul,
And twined about my undeveloped life
A Scripture safeguard of control.

O, Father of my childhood hours and guide
Of many happy later days!
Thy words, God given, thy deeds with God performed.
Still help me through life's devious ways.
A halo rests for me around thy life,
Reflected from the other shore;
And never shall its glory dim, but shine
Increasingly, forevermore.

Wellesley Hills, Mass. E. H. A.

We may feel like censuring a friend who makes failures, but, if we knew the severe struggle he is making to prevent more and greater failures, we would be more sparing of criticism and more prodigal of praise.—Presbyterian Witness.

If I Were A Jew

By Rev. Ernest G. Guthrie
Pastor of Union Congregational Church, Boston, Massachusetts

I THINK I ought to say by way of introduction that if I were a Jew, my general position in the world would not be improved, for I happen to be Scotch by race, and as you all know we are so alike that the rest of the world keeps confusing us. "What is the difference," I was asked the other day, "between a canoe and a Scotchman?" The answer was, "A canoe sometimes tips, but a Scotchman never does."

Now you know very well that next week that story will be told of a Jew. We both know that the Jew and Scot are among the most generous people in the world; but the world pretends not to know that, and it uses us interchangeably for its feeble humor. All races are subject to these caricatures, and particularly those that have strongly marked characteristics. But there is one good thing about caricature. It tells you something about the world that draws it, and if you are willing to learn, something about yourself in relation to that world.

1. If I were a Jew, then, I think that I would examine this caricature, and learn from it all that I could—first, with regard to the world in which I found myself, and secondly with regard to myself in relation to that world.

(1) With regard to the world at large, however happy my own local associations might be, I would study the hostility of Anti-Semitism, its nature and its sources, with a keen eye for the changes that are taking place in that feeling for good as well as evil. And, first of all, I would make up my mind about these Christians. I could hardly be expected to forget the cruel persecutions which Christians have inflicted upon the Jewish people throughout the ages. In that great 53d chapter of Isaiah, both Jew and Christian once recognized in the man of sorrows, who is acquainted with grief, the portrait of the Messiah. It was in the subsequent conflict with Christianity that the Jew said: "No: this is no portrait of the Messiah. It is the portrait of his own martyred people." There is nothing so shameful in the history of Christianity as this, that the followers of Him, who is set forth, as they believed, in this passage, the crucified Savior, behaved, in His name, with so great cruelty that the Jewish people took them for the very tyrants and persecutors whom the passage condemns.

But I certainly would not want to confuse that shameful past with the present. I would want to remember that it was certainly not the Christianity of Jesus that inspired all this. It is recorded and confessed in our Christian commentaries with shame. Christians recognize in Annas and Caiaphas, in Herod and in the people who put Jesus to death, the same spirit in themselves that kills the prophets, even if it no longer stones the glorious messengers of God. Thinking upon these things I might even be disposed to believe that true Christianity is one of the greatest forces in the modern world to save men from racial fanaticisms. The Christian world, except in a few barbarous spots, has come at least so far as to see the incongruity of singing Jewish hymns on Sunday and killing Jewish men on Monday.

(2) I think I would make up my mind, for a second thing, that a great deal of this sinister menace of Anti-Semitism has been and is due to fear and jealousy. You remember what the London storekeeper says in Galsworthy's play, "Loyalties." He enumerates quite a number of the race's virtues, but he objects to Jews on account of these very virtues: because they are honest, intelligent, industrious, and because they have the bad habit of getting on, and because they are everywhere.

And yet, while I saw this, I think I would keep steadily before my mind the larger humanity that is ever working to overcome these primitive traits of fear and jealousy. I think I would always remember the Dreyfus Case and the heroic way in which Jean Jaures labored for the victim of the most shameful outburst of racial feeling in modern annals, through twelve years of monumental labor—humanity in French form, for humanity in the Jew. As the tumult and passion of his own people rose against him, the voice of Jaures rose above it like that of a seabird in a tempest, demanding that justice should be done, in a sublime vindication of our common humanity.

(3) I think, however, that the worst enemy I would detect in the world I faced would be the subtler forms of pogrom and vivi-sepulture in the Western World, directed not at the flesh nor so much at the rival in commerce, as at the Jewish soul. I would feel that here was an enemy to be fought not with any external weapon, but with the whole, the full, the mighty forces of the Jewish soul in fellowship with the nobler soul of the whole world.

If I were a Jew, as far as I faced my problem, as a problem of dealing with the external world, I should know that there is only one great position to be taken, and that is to be larger in mind, heart, and spirit than the foe. The prejudices and fanaticisms of race are infinitely difficult to overcome, for when we overcome them in one form they reappear in another. After a long and very large-hearted discussion of race in our men's class, one morning, a Christian brother got up and, after clearing his throat said, "Well, pastor, I think you are right. The Jews are all right, but I can't stand the Irish."

Recently I was using a marked copy of Galsworthy's play, to which I have already referred. The central character, as you remember, is a Jew, and the author's main purpose undoubtedly was to out-think racial prejudice. This copy had been used in both Christian pulpit and Jewish synagogue and there were some interesting pieces of paper attached to it. One was by a "Christian" who evidently thought that the Jew had come out too well. He had actually tried to palliate the crime of the Englishman, and had deleted the word "honest" from the description of the Jew. But there were also the marks of the "Jewish" synagogue on the copy. A rabbi's peroration was there. It was a frank and quite pagan rejoicing that the Jew had outwitted his Gentile brethren. These two men, Christian and Jew, by their footnotes had canceled out the whole spiritual drive of that great drama, in the interest of race, masquerading under the great name of religion. There is only one great way to deal with the spirit that draws a circle so narrow as to leave you out, and that is to draw in your mind and heart and spirit a circle big enough to take him in.

2. But if I were a Jew, I think I would know that the external problem, however large and menacing and hard to endure at times it may be, is not my greatest problem. It is always within, and cannot be solved from without.

Therefore the second thing I would try to learn from the world's caricature, and from the opposition to my race I encountered, would be what it had to teach me about myself. Caricature is always an exaggeration of some characteristic or group of characteristics, but usually it points to something that is there and it is only by a divinely inspired process of self-criticism that the soul of a race can be saved.

(1) The world knows two kinds of Jews; and the Jew himself knows the two kinds. "A peculiar people this," as one of the rabbis has said. "Their character is hard to fathom. When Aaron asked them to give for the golden calf they did so; and when Moses asked for the tabernacle they also gave. The Jews are likened in the Scripture to the stars and the dust and so they are. When they ascend they go up to the

Introduction by Rabbi Harry Levi

Temple Israel, Boston

Ignorance is the mother of prejudice. We seldom respect those whom we do not know. And we cannot know people unless we meet them. Scenically "distance lends enchantment to the view" but not socially. If Christian and Jew are to share good will, they must get closer together. Hence years ago I began to exchange pulpits with Christian ministers, that they might meet and know my people, that I might meet theirs. Some three years ago in such an exchange with Rev. Harold Stratton of Arlington Heights, Mass., I urged that an exchange of pulpits should be followed by an exchange of pews. Six months ago the members of the Brotherhood of Temple Israel were the guests of the Men's Club of Rev. Mr. Stratton's church. The following month the courtesy was reciprocated. On this occasion Dr. Guthrie was the guest of honor and brought with him a number of the men of his church. It was here that he presented his address on the theme, "If I Were A Jew." The address was followed by a question period. There was here no empty compliment, no patting on the back, no condescension. It was a rare hour of frank, honest, fine give and take. Out of such occasions, such meeting of men of differing faiths, must come the better days.

stars; and when they descend they go down to the dust." The determination as to which of these types shall prevail is in the keeping of every member of the race. It determines his own destiny, it determines the destiny of his people, it determines their place in the larger life and service of the world.

(2) The real question that the world is asking of the Jew, as he rises into power in the modern world, is: "Do you come as the friend of our best or our worst life?" In an article in the Atlantic Monthly, some years ago, written by a New York rabbi, entitled "The Modern Pharisee," it was claimed that the real danger for Judaism is not in the noble separateness and distinction of the Pharisee at his best, but in the Sadducean tendency to make wrong contacts with the civilizations in which the Jew finds himself. The idea was that Jewish Bolshevism in Russia, e.g., is the great prophetic passion for social justice in contact with and perverted by Slav morbidity and mysticism, and that the strain of crass Jewish materialism in America is Jewish intellectual ability and intensity in contact with and perverted by Yankee business acumen. This certainly is an interesting diagnosis of the situation. It would be a curious piece of irony if the picture of the Jew that affronts other races should turn out to be the picture of themselves, in which Herod has been out-Heroded. But it would also be the supreme tragedy for the Jewish race; for it would mean that those who are able to be and were commissioned to be the friends of the world's best life had become its enemies, and in the process had destroyed the greatest soul the world has known.

(3) Every one of us is either a true or a false artist of his race. If you were to ask me tonight why I, one of the myriads of Gentiles, believe in the greatness of the Jewish spirit, the depth and tenderness, the height and grandeur of it, the evidence I would have to offer might seem casual, but for that very reason it is significant. It would be first of all that great series of lives in the Old Testament; then next a Jewish family that my own family knew with intimacy far across the world; then one rabbi, one tailor, one landlord who kept a few Christian families, month after month without rent through a hard winter. That is all; but after all it serves to show the part the humblest as well as the mightiest of us has in our daily contacts in replacing the world's caricatures with a true and convincing picture of the soul of the race.

3. And so, to pass to the positive formulation of what I would seek to be and do, if I were a Jew I think I would concern myself with three things:

(1) The eternal question as to the mission of the Jewish people. What is that mission? The mission of your ancestors has certainly been to teach religion to mankind, to be the standard bearers of the knowledge of God throughout the earth. Last Sunday morning I was standing before a class of young people preparing to enter the Christian Church. As I turned the pages of the Old Testament I asked, "Why is it that we, and scores of other nations throughout the world keep studying the religious literature of this one people?" And they agreed that it was because the Jew had the greatest vision of the Eternal, the most sensitive ear to the voice of the Spirit that rules the world. This is the reason why the thunders of Sinai are still heard in the world, and the greatest songs that men sing throughout life's pilgrimage are the Psalms of Israel, and the highest prophecies of the human prospect in God are drawn by those who were the prophets of Israel.

But what, we ask again, is the mission of this people today? Here you are, scattered throughout our Western civilization, the most indestructible people the world has known. In this great hour when the Western world is facing a waking Orient, facing its menace, its judgment and its hope, here you are scattered like Eastern garrisons throughout the West. Who knows but it may be given to this people again to become God's standard bearers, and the mediators of a spiritual unity that shall make the world, East and West, in the deepest sense, one!

But however that may be, no greater tragedy could be conceived than that the religion that has been the suffering mother of at least two of the great religions of the world should have lost this sense of its highest mission in some great hour when the world shall be conscious that its greatest need is the knowledge of God.

(2) The second question with which I would concern myself would be, the great world society that is now being created throughout the earth. I would know from my own racial history that there is no panacea for the evils from which humanity has suffered from the antagonisms, the prejudices, and the bitter conflicts of race with race. "There is no short cut to success," as a great student of the race problem says:

> No easy hopes or ties
> Shall bring us to our goal
> But iron sacrifice
> Of body, will, and soul.

The great enterprise upon which we have started now cannot be achieved in a generation. It will take more than a generation to teach the Englishman that, however great he has been as a schoolmaster to the less advanced races, he is not permanently commissioned to keep them in his school. It will take more than a generation for the Mayflower stock, that gave the original and great direction to the life and institutions of this country, to recognize the worth and potency for good as well as evil of all the other emigrations that have come over in the Oceanic and the Mauretania, the pilgrim ships of later years. It will take a long time before we will "include our John Sobieskis with our George Washington in our national idealism."

The worst thing that could happen to us here is that we should all be so thrown into the melting pot as to become a Yankee Stew, that all the great races that have their distinctive contribution to make should simply lose their distinction and contribute to a monotonous standardization of the whole. There is only one worse thing that could happen and that would be that the melting pot should become a "varnishing pot," covering with a thin veneer the races, creeds, and cultures that have their own color and worth. It was one of your own great sons, Moses Hess, who satirized the son of a German Jewish banker, who would stand for hours on end desperately endeavoring to iron out the Semitic kinks of his hair!

No! There are no short cuts to this great fellowship of human life. "Men who look to gather where they sow," it has been said, "may grow greens for the pot or grain for the oven. Forests spring from the labor of those who will never feast in the halls roofed by their beams. Generations must live and die ere the strong and enduring growth is ripe for the axe, and others must come and go or ever the beams are hewn and joined of that final abode where all nations and kindreds and peoples and tongues shall dwell together as one."

But that does not mean that all that is left us is to work for a distant consummation which we ourselves can never expect to see on earth. A human fellowship is an actual present experience. It is found in the region of art, which knows no bonds of race. It is here in the field of science. "Who cares to what race a man belongs who finds a cure for cancer or any of the other ills from which humanity suffers?" It is already here in the greatest and most comprehensive of all fields, the field of religion, or we would not be here in the Brotherhood of this Temple tonight, for whose Rabbi I have not only the profoundest respect, but if he will let me say so, that kind of affection that we feel for all great and generous souls. And while I am speaking of that will you let me say that there is no voice heard over the radio in Boston that speaks with clearer vision of what belongs to our common and highest humanity, and no voice that seems to strike the responsive chord in so many hearts in the different branches of the Christian Church as the voice of your own great leader.

(3) And that leads me to mention finally, and in a word, the last of these concerns I would have if I were a Jew, and I have the feeling that whatever I was, I could count it the greatest of all, my attitude as a Jew to Him who is not only the greatest of all Jews, but the greatest of the human race.

I remember, some years ago, reading Rabbi Enelow's A Jewish View of Jesus, and if you have not read it I should like to commend it to all who are here tonight whether Jew or Christian. I remember the joy with which I recognized that the old era of polemics was passing and how a new era of appreciation was being born. I rejoiced in the open-mindedness, the catholic spirit, the deep and whole-hearted appreciation of the Jewish view of Him to whom the heart of the world has gone out, whom we, Christians, call "Lord," even when we so feebly obey the mighty commands of His spirit, and so dimly share His eternal vision of God and humanity.

I understand clearly that here is no official attitude of modern Jews to Jesus, that there is no acknowledgment of his Divinity or Messiahship in the conventional meaning of those terms; but it is something that the modern writers of Jewish history are giving an ever larger place to Jesus and the great movement that he inaugurated and it means much for the growing unity and fellowship in faith and service that a Jewish scholar can ask, "Who can compute all that Jesus has meant for humanity?," and thus answer his own question, "The love he has inspired, the solace he has given, the good he has engendered, the hope and joy he has kindled—all that is unequaled in human history. Among the great and the good that the human race has produced, none has ever approached Jesus in the universality of appeal and sway. He has become the most fascinating figure in history. In him is combined what is best and most mysterious and most enchanting in Israel—the eternal people whose child he was. The Jew cannot help glorying in what Jesus thus has meant to the world; nor can he help hoping that Jesus may yet serve as a bond of union between Jew and Christian once his teaching is better known and the bane of misunderstanding at last is removed from his words and his ideal."

If there is anything of that hope in the Jewish heart, it is in the Christian heart also. And the day may come, yea, the day shall come, when the mission of the first Israel and the mission of the second Israel shall be accomplished through Him and the "earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

If I were a Jew, this would be my hope; and because I am a Christian, it is my faith.

The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches

V. Catholic Authority and Protestant Freedom in Religion

By Professor Daniel Evans, D.D.
Harvard Theological School

THE one word that runs through all Catholic discourse and literature is authority. Nowhere else does one hear or read the word so frequently as with the Catholics, neither in our political, nor social, nor scientific world. It sounds and resounds everywhere. It is iterated and reiterated perpetually. This word expresses the fundamental position of the Catholic Church toward the human mind and conscience. It claims the right to require the subjection of the mind and conscience to its teaching, not on particular truths but on all truths which have to do with faith and morals. And this authority is made at times to cover many intellectual matters, within the province of science and philosophy, and of political matters, as to the nature and freedom of the state and the form of government, though there has been a progressive delimitation of much of these territories from the authority of the church.

And in whatever sphere and to whatever extent the authority is exercised, its place is permanent. It is to wield authority over all the periods of the individual's life, from childhood through manhood to old age. Never is the individual to be free from this authority. It lasts throughout his whole life. And the race itself is to be under the authority of the church throughout all generations. The time has never been since the foundation of the church, nor as long as it continues, when the race will become free from the authority of the church. The individual and the race may be freed from all other authorities in the course of time and development, but not from the authority of the church.

The basis for such extensive and permanent authority lies in the claim that the church was founded by Christ, that it alone is the infallible teacher, that religion is of its essence dependent upon authority, that there is no protection from error, nor guarantee of truth otherwise or elsewhere, that the whole of religion, and its ethics and civilization itself are involved in this authority.

Therefore the church demands submission, has the right to coerce the mind, to conscript the conscience, and the basic virtue of the good Catholic is obedience to the limit of full submission. And the promise is made as the reward for this obedience that "the one universal act of submission, and doubts and perplexities of yesterday and today vanish into serenity and security of tomorrow."

Now over against this Catholic authority in religion, we must examine the Protestant freedom. The break with the authority of the church by the Reformers came from the discovery of the conflict of authorities. The authority of the church clashed with the authority of the Bible and the Reformers accepted the authority of the Bible and broke with the authority of the church. They followed the greater authority. The Catholic infallible interpretation of the Bible was found to be not only fallible, but erroneous; the Catholic practices were not in accord with the Christian religion; the Catholic way of salvation did not lead to assurance: the Catholic ethic did not express the Christian spirit. When these two authorities were found to be in conflict, then a choice of authorities was forced upon the Reformers and they preferred the authority of the Bible. If the church had given the Bible to the world, it was the religion which the Bible records for us, that gave the church, and the church must be subject to this religion. If the church can and should judge much in the Bible and consider itself superior to it in these parts, nevertheless, since the Bible records for us the mighty truths of prophets and apostles and the Christ, it is judged by these, and this judgment has been sometimes favorable, and at other times unfavorable. It has happened more than once through the centuries, as it did more than once in Peter's own lifetime when he was judged and condemned by Christ and St. Paul, so the Christ and St. Paul have judged and condemned the church.

To set the authority of the church against the authority of the church, was a fighting measure necessitated by the situation. Some Protestants stressed the authority of the Bible too much. They merely exchanged one infallible authority for another, with no change of mental or moral temper, but the greater reformers did not make this mistake. It was not the whole Bible that was such an authority, but the Gospel in the Bible, all that had reference to, and was of worth in, bringing the world the glad tidings of salvation. They made a distinction within the Bible itself, and were thus freed from the authority of the lesser and lower and outgrown parts of the Bible.

This, of course, required freedom of soul for the interpretation of the Bible, for the discovery of its truth and for the rejection of its error. They sincerely held that they were guided by the spirit of God in their interpretation, and in their acceptance and rejection, and they also believed there were depths in it which they had not yet fathomed, and ranges which they had not yet covered. The spirit in the Bible and in their souls bore witness to the reality of these profound experiences and everlasting truths. And these truths found them at deeper depths than the truths of other literature. If they were bound by some truths of the Bible, these very truths freed them from the errors of the Bible, and the tradition and authority of the church.

But no man can be bound by the truth who is not free to study it, consider it, weigh it, test it, and accept it only as it wins and takes captive his free mind. A slave cannot commit himself, a free man can. A mind subjected to authority without the right to question, challenge, assent, or dissent cannot commit itself; a free mind can commit itself. This committal comes after the examination into the claim, not before. Whatever authority is recognized and accepted is pedagogical in character and purpose. It may be exercised over minors, but it purposes to educate the minors and make them mature, and give them their freedom. Such authority is indispensable at one period in the life of the individual, social groups and people, but it becomes dispensable the more it accomplishes its purpose, which is to make free men, and if the Son makes us free, then are we free indeed.

And such freedom is worth all it costs, in the way of difficulties, perplexities, differences, controversies, divisions, dangers. It's the price of manhood in religion and to this we are all called.

Not Strength of Granite

By Josephine Johnson

Not strength of granite, barren, cold, and hard,
Not for endurance only, pray I, Lord.
Rather, like some great oak tree, grant to me
A living strength and fruitful. Let me be Rest for the weary, shelter for the weak,
That age relies on, little children seek.
So shall each tempest, smiting from above,
Leave me but firmer, rooted in thy love.

A Day at Dayton

Personal Impressions of the Scopes Trial

By Rev. Fred. P. Ensminger

Congregational Superintendent of Kentucky, North Carolina, and Tennessee

DAYTON was trim and hospitable. The proprietor of a shoe store was cordial; he cashed a check and volunteered to introduce us to a lady whom we were glad to meet. He had been a juror excused by Darrow because he knew evolution was wrong.

We stood, with a number of others, in the crowded courtroom. A red-haired policeman, who kept his frayed temper and courtesy until the end of the day, waved people out of the airway of our windows all day. He hoped that it would rain tomorrow so that the people would not come out.

A fine looking man said that he was from a town up at the head of the Sequatchie Valley. I asked him if there were any modernists in his county. He replied, after consideration, "No, I reckon we don't know enough up there to be modernists."

An old gentleman of thoughtful mien from Harriman had come with us on the train. He winters on the West Coast of Florida. He said that he had come to help keep Bryan of the Florida East Coast from putting it over on Scopes. He had some modest and good tracts, showing that the letter killeth, but the spirit maketh alive. These were given out after conversation.—Takoma Park literature was scattered about the courtroom.—In the courthouse yard a small boy hireling was giving out a book notice that howled to heaven. Its climactic cartoon begins with a gorilla chewing a human thigh bone. Bones and skulls are at his feet. An intelligent Devil with hair tuft horns, bat wings, and a trident, stands behind him as his mentor. A breast-legend makes him D-EVIL-UTION. An ascent of seventeen stairs, with captions on the stair-risers, begins with "Might Makes Right," ascends through varied stages, such as "Nameless Diseases," "Orgies," "Suicide," and issues in "1914-1918." It is called "Evolvo-Spoof-Us." A bat accommodatingly flies around to orient darkness. One experience of the day was the shifting of the local train to set off a baggage car which contained a trained chimpanzee.

At the Trial

The trial begins. The bulk of the people are from the valleys and ridges of East Tennessee, but the whole sovereign State has representatives, and some concerned educational and religious leaders from all over the South are present. The legal fraternity are interested. Tennessee teachers are there. It is a practical problem with them. Here are a number of cosmopolitan champions of liberty and freedom. The reporters make the largest group. Camera men are the most conspicuous.

A local school official stands in a prominent place near Bryan before court opens. The movie camera will have to feature him, whether or no. He is said to have gubernatorial aspirations.

Notables to be observed are Darrow, Bryan, Scopes, and Malone. Some, who know who he is, wish to see Mencken. The local people are interested in "His Honor," who keeps his poise and gracefully presides; in the promising young attorney-general of the district, in the senior McKenzie—"General McKenzie," lawyer with a penchant for humor. But the interest focuses on Bryan.

Like all Americans, the folk admire smartness and respect Darrow for his record. They like him because he provides a part for a legal duel. They disapprove his lack of church loyalty and regard him and Malone as infidels. They are fortified in their predisposition to think this a line-up of good and evil. Darrow accommodates himself easily to the situation and is well received by the opposing attorneys. It is a curious phenomenon that all the lawyers are Democrats.

Scopes is a young college graduate with hair pushed back from a good forehead. He has poise and sense and many friends in Dayton. His father is beside him. The father is more doubtful. He was born in England, where they think differently about religion, and it is said that he had voted for Debs.

The Day's Battle

The day's battle is over the constitutionality and verbal statement of the Anti-Evolution Law and the regularity of the indictment. Neal, of the defense, a Tennesseean, who was a leader in the attack on the State University administration, is the attacking captain. He proceeds with the arguments to quash the indictment. Hayes, Darrow's assistant, gives an exposition remarkable for its clarity. He frames an imaginary parallel law by which a man is to be punished by the State of Tennessee for teaching the heliocentric theory of astronomy in defiance of the Bible that the world is flat.

General McKenzie answers for the prosecution and an historic episode results. In a grandiloquent way he welcomes the strangers from Chicago and New York, at the same time informing them that they had no need to come to Tennessee to interpret evolution to its people. They are put in the category of foreign attorneys. These alien attorneys are not familiar with Tennessee procedure, but they are welcomed as any attorneys. It is an effective Southern way of putting meddlesome Northerners in their places. The judge, with grace, seeks to avoid a faux pas. He assures the visitors that they are the guests of the Tennessee attorneys. McKenzie is almost humble in assuring them that all is in good nature and that they are guests and should understand him. He loves them; he repeats it,—he loves them. Malone speaks out. He says with great plainness and some spirited insistence, "We fully appreciate being guests, but here in court we do not wish to be considered guests. We are here as lawyers and as Americans." It is another evidence of the different currents of thought and different psychologies of the South and the North. The localities have diverse concerns. They treat the same concerns differently. They misunderstand each other.

Darrow Speaks

In the afternoon's argument Darrow made a speech which may go down as a constitutional classic. His left elbow appeared through a tear in his shirt-sleeve, but he was oblivious to all petty annoyances. He rose to sublime characterization and offered asides which revealed his human touch.

He began by saying that it was well-nigh impossible for him to transport himself in thought back into the sixteenth century. Progressing, he recalled the great and forgotten days of Jefferson, when Americans really loved liberty, and the subsequent times when the founders of Tennessee provided for it in their constitution. He opined that the framers of the instrument meant what they said in expressing desire to cherish literature and science and to assure religious liberty. He shouted that the substance of liberty was gone when it was merely a legal husk and had no public opinion back of it. He said that he knew why learning and religious liberty were so foully attacked and his client in danger of disgraceful conviction. It was on account of the militancy of some Fundamentalists who would make all go to heaven whether they wished to or not. As an aside, he intimated that this came about through a foreign lawyer from Florida. Bryan was publicly mum all day, even glum, forbidding. His face was set hard, jaws outlined like those of a steel trap. As Darrow spoke of the great commoner, Jefferson, one could think of the other and much different modern commoner present and watching. Darrow might have known more about the Scriptures than he did. He revealed much to the most of his hearers. His climax was the picture of increasing and cumulative religious hatred and strife and war, threatening a civilization which might be lost in a returning welter of religious wars like those in mediaeval Europe. Tenderly maintaining the value of Scripture of all faiths in giving help and consolation, he marveled that religions sometimes made men hate, rather than love each other after the way of the Nazarene. "Bigotry" and "Ignorance" were the strikers that rang against the bell of liberty in this great oration.

Psychologically, the crowd was not captured by Darrow. He was good-natured and leisurely in his brilliance, rather than grandiloquent and satirical. Had he been playing to the galleries, he could have made a clarion call for the right of a man to think and act for himself and for brotherhood and tolerance. Was he really speaking to the judge? Daytonians were positive that the judge would never yield to the motion to quash the indictment. He seemed to be speaking to the American people at large—in Tennessee and everywhere—the people who have the disposition to do the right when they understand it. After adjournment, his opponent, General McKenzie, told him, "That was the greatest speech I ever heard." A friend of Darrow's interposed, "Didn't it convince you?" "No," said McKenzie, "it didn't even strike a spark."

Varied Personal Verdicts

Going from the trial, a local man said to his companion, "The trouble is that Darrow was in the wrong pew. Up in Chicago they might like that kind of a speech, but it does not go down here."

On the train an employee repudiated the idea of hearing such a trial. It was "rotten." After the war, the carpet-bagger came down and ruined the country and were properly treated. This was another attempt to ruin it.

The old gentleman from Harriman thought that the speech would not be effective in changing local sentiment. He believed that God, in his own unforeseen way, would overrule the situation for good.

A splendid Tennesseean, who had held a distinguished office, deprecated the whole thing. He said it would enter politics and saw men even then in courtroom grooming themselves for the political race. A Tennessee lady, of poise and charm, who has rendered great public service to America, was deeply concerned as to outside opinion. "I am afraid that they will think we are fanatical," she lamented.

The Situation and the Way Out

The situation is surely fraught with great issues. No proponent of liberty would have a deeply religious people go beyond its information. The educational development of the East Tennessee mountain region has been retarded by the physical difficulties. Farms yield a restricted living. Illiteracy, however, is being steadily banished. The church is the great popular institution. Southern educators are campaigning for patronage of libraries.

There are little-understood holy values in the South, for which a Southerner could die. Courtesy, formal chivalry to women, personal dignity, are invaluable. The people have had a lesser share of opportunity and prosperity, with considerable privation and suffering. The Bible has fed and sustained them. It is being attacked by unbelievers and aliens. Why should others interfere, if Tennesseeans wish to protect the religion of their children?

The way out is through the Bible, the Christlike spirit, the positive spiritual affirmation of a progressive orthodoxy. Congregational churches among the white people of the South have borne a good spiritual witness. They have a mighty mission in providing liberty to the growing cohorts seeking the larger concepts and applications of religion, believing in religious toleration and in discriminating between the lowlands and the ranges and peaks of our blessed Book. Fortunately our Southern-born Congregationalists yield to no others in the land in sense of their mission and in loyalty to Christ.

A Canadian Outlook

Church Union the Day After

By Principal D. L. Ritchie

"DISTANCE," it is said, "lends enchantment to the view." It also sets things in true perspective; that may be part of the enchantment. How, after a month has passed, does Church Union in Canada, so adequately dealt with in The Congregationalist, now present itself to those who toiled to make it a success and who themselves were amazed at the spirit and achievement of its first days? Has any of its glamor gone, or anything of the enchantment of that first week passed away? The truth is that, seen with some perspective now, the thing looks as wonderful as ever. The consummation of the Union was really a great thing greatly done. That was the witness of all who shared in it, and as they have carried their impressions to the far corners of the Dominion, the wonder of it grows as the promise that these days gave is swiftly and smoothly being made a fact in places and with things where difficulty might have been expected and delay was feared.

The spirit of Union is plainly on the wind; it certainly is in men's hearts, and they are hastening to make it a fact in Canadian church life. Especially in the great spaces of the West does it grow like corn in July heat. The churches of Manitoba, which have voted on Union since the day of consummation, have given a great answer. It is clear that they mean to have one Christian Church, the center of a community's life, unifying, purifying, and enriching the social order, and so giving the spirit and teaching of our Lord a fair chance of showing what the Kingdom of God means. Nor are the Eastern Provinces disappointing expectation. Their social life is less fluid, traditions and prejudices are more stubbornly set, but such a buoyant spirit of hopeful joy as is abroad can melt hard resistances and do unexpected things.

The increase and spread of a spirit of good will may win over many who hitherto have been Anti-Unionists. They feared a great ecclesiastical machine, a clerical bureaucracy, some form of soul and social tyranny, but when they see and feel the new spirit and understand afresh that where "the spirit of the Lord is there is the true liberty," their fears in many instances will melt away and their oppositions be overcome. Certainly nothing was more distinctive of the early days of the United Church Council than its jealousy for spiritual liberty and its swift erasure of the landmarks of the ecclesiastically-minded who would authoritatively fashion all things after a pattern. Ideals with freedom to adopt them, good methods with liberty to adapt them, the best order and forms with the right to choose and co-ordinate, were what daily gained favor, so that it was clear that the United Church of Canada, in its early days at least, understood well the narrow and harsh temper that causes splits and schisms, and it would have none of it. With order, it means to give freedom, in fashioning the great organization the present leaders are bent on flexibility, and assuredly all that is a good omen for the future. Because of this spirit, it is clear that before another year has gone many things which it was thought would take years to set in order will be accomplished facts. Union in realization promises to be as great a thing as it was in expectation. The whole thing is proof once more that while without good will men can accomplish nothing, and with a little good will can do great things, with much good will nothing is impossible to them. A will to good will is the one thing needful in all the world today to solve its tangled problems alike in church and state.

And yet there was one spot in the great feast, and it is causing many to wonder with a great disappointment. It was not the grievous split in the former Presbyterian Church. To those with a slight knowledge of the history of Presbyterianism that is easily enough explained. Not from the Presbyterian split, and, alas, its bitterness, but from the chill silence of the Anglican Church in Canada has the great disappointment come. After the Lambeth Appeal, apparently so solicitous for Church Union, that silence is hard to understand. The three churches now united have in their possession recent invitations from the revered Primate of the Episcopal Church in Canada to enter on discussions and negotiations with a view to Church Union, and all know what use was made of these by the Anti-Unionists with the purpose of thwarting the Union that has been accomplished. They argued for a wider Union, and pointed to the zeal of the Anglicans as proved by the Lambeth Appeal and the Archbishop's invitations seeking such a blessed consummation. At least by appeals and discussions the Anglicans have made themselves the protagonists of Church Union in the world. But when the great experiment is made, and achievement has crowned it, not a sentence of greeting, not a word of welcome, not a syllable of benediction; rather, in some places and in various ways, hindrance if not ill-will.

Delegates from other churches came from afar and rejoiced with a great joy at what they heard and saw and shared, but from the Anglican Church in Canada by silence made almost audible by the solitary voice of one of its scholarly ministers who, on his own behalf, from his own pulpit, uttered the Christian good will that all had a right to expect officially from a church so greatly concerned about Christian separations and church divisions as the Anglican Church has professed to be. What can be the meaning of it all? Can they be astonished if many wonder and ask searching questions? Did their invitation mean Church Union, or even what some call Christian Unity, or did they aim only at an enlarged ecclesiasticism of their own type? Certainly the measure of the lost opportunity to recognize and rejoice in a great achievement in Church Union can be determined only by a true zeal for the unity of Christ's people.

Doubtless the United Church of Canada will manage to do its work in the world without such countenance on the day of its birth, but all are impoverished when the spirit of good will is thus withheld, the cause of Christ is hurt in the house of his friends, and the Kingdom of God is thwarted in the world. All that must be deplored by Christian men. But what is most to be deplored is the blow that has been dealt at reality in Christian negotiations and much advertised programs. It is a poor thing to play ecclesiastical politics when the hour calls for the practice of Christian brotherhood. The leaders of the Anglican Church cannot now complain if their professed zeal for Christian Unity is painfully discounted and their invitations to Union conferences not esteemed at their face value. It certainly will take much explanation to justify their attitude to the actual Union of three historic churches in Canada. These are plain words, but frankness is always best; it wears longest. Nothing can be done until men and churches handle reality.

The leadership given by the Canadian Churches cannot fail to have great results. Others will follow in the path they have hewn, though much differently. Fragmentary Protestantism will increasingly come together to do its work in the world, and good men everywhere will rejoice when they hear of separations blotted out and unities and unions realized. No one can contend that it is the will of Christ that his flock should be artificially separated in ecclesiastical pens which nullify and destroy the spirit of love and brotherhood. It is still his prayer that the world may know that the Father sent him to be its Savior because his people are one in love and good will.

Christian Workers in South America

V. South America—A Land of Contrasts

By Frank K. Sanders

SOUTH AMERICA and her peoples abound in contrasts. Both are great, but not in our way. Brazil is larger than the United States and Argentina is only a little smaller, yet the United States has no reason to fear competition from either nation. They have the power to be real rivals, but, for many reasons, are not likely to be. One warms up to cultured South Americans. They are a charming people, abundantly worth knowing, abounding in various types of genius, artistry, and culture, yet the average northerner seems to think of them as grown-up children. He has difficulty in gauging their psychology. They are keen about imposing fronts to buildings and careless regarding the conveniences therein; they go into projects with much enthusiasm, but seem unprepared to stay with them through all kinds of fortune. They can make money, but spend their incomes lavishly to the last cent. Often one hears the remark that the vast improvements made in the more progressive cities are wholly financed by foreign capital, and that the provincial towns may expect no help of any kind from a central government in dealing with their problems. Wealthy South Americans, especially the landowners, look upon their incomes as a source of spending money, rarely as a basis for enlarging a business or for befriending a town or city.

A Beautiful Memorial

Whether any such sweeping judgment is correct may be questioned. South Americans have great qualities. I shall never forget the wonderful monument to General San Martin and the Army of the Andes, which is not only a fitting tribute to that heroic leader who with his indomitable army conquered the difficulties of the Andean passes and brought freedom to Chile and Peru, but an inspiring masterpiece of sculpture. Ferrari, who conceived it, set his impressive statue on the rocky peak of a group of foothills just out of the city of Mendoza from which the historic march began. By a skillful treatment of the native granite, the noble figure on horseback, moulded in bronze, and the bas-relief depicting the scenes of the preparation and the march seem a very part of the mountain peak itself. Such a monument is something of a shrine. I felt, as when standing in the noble memorial to Lincoln at our own capital, that it stirred me to reverence for real greatness and heroism.

Moreover, a good friend of the Chileans said, a day or two ago, "I question whether it is wholly right to say that South Americans lack persistence. They have initiative and energy enough when aiming at some task they appreciate. None are more efficient then. But in committee service, while they are ready to execute any specific task, they do not care to keep in readiness for future tasks of the same sort. A Chilean young woman will readily accept and handle some definite responsibility, but she does not care to take it for a year." The Latin temperament and the Iberian heritage of these people are hard for Anglo-Saxons to understand and properly estimate. But South America is a land we need to try to interpret fairly, for its potentialities are very great indeed.

In place of making this last article a series of references to the wonders of nature in South America or to its interesting cities, I am minded to touch upon a varied series of contacts, each of which has some bearing on the question of the place which South Americans may take in the world of today. Every well read man knows that they do not lack genius, brilliance, the power of self-expression, the ability to think through weighty problems. The question is whether they have or will gain the more solid qualities which underlie an enduring and steady development. Undoubtedly, their heritage is in the way. It is hard for a proud South American to accept defeat philosophically. This works out not only in the political sphere where a defeated candidate is tempted to rise in revolution against his rival, but in everyday activities. A boy in school likes to play on a winning side, but is inclined to quit if he loses once or twice. Politeness with the gentlemanly South American ignores often the matter of truth; he will say what he regards as courteous whether it is so or not. In South America social rank counts heavily. Until recently the middle classes which make so much of the real strength of any country were scarcely existent. Commerce and public education is altering this condition in the cities, but in the country, that is in nine-tenths of South America, the old feudal conditions prevail. These conditions deaden the initiative of those who might really lead, and prevent the rapid development of a healthier social and political condition. A good illustration has developed during our trip. Mr. E. S. Gilmore of the Wesley Hospital, Chicago, was studying medical service. He finds first-rate doctors and surgeons, well-equipped hospitals in the cities, and no nurses worthy of mention. Young women of fair social standing will not qualify, since the Latin-American mind dislikes the idea of unmarried women in attendance upon both sexes. The only remedy seems to be the discovery of a few winsome young women of irreproachable character and standing who will be martyrs for a great cause.

President Arturo Allesandri

It may seem strange to us in the United States to hear our idealism defended. We take it for granted, but not so our neighbors in South America. While we were at Santiago, the capital of Chile, our group was honored by an invitation to call upon President Arturo Allesandri, recently restored to power after being driven out of Chile by the old aristocratic group. We found him a thick-set, business-like type of man with a friendly smile. His well-guarded reception room was spacious and stately, but the steps leading to it were filled with a motley throng, every one of whom was, apparently, wishing to take some fancied wrong to "Don Arturo." In response to our greeting, the President said that he had been studying North American psychology and that while many spoke of us contemptuously as "dollar chasers," he knew that we were a people of high ideals with "a soul." He went on to declare himself in full sympathy with such ideals as he understood; "in fact," he added, "I think I am essentially a Christian." He has a leadership of his people which he seems to be using wisely.

There is no finer tribute to the innate idealism of these peoples than the beautiful symbol of international peace which crowns the summit of the pass over the Andes, exactly where the boundaries of Chile and Argentina meet. For nearly a quarter of a century the bronze statue of the Christ has blessed a friendship which seems likely to be permanent. The conception and execution of this perfect piece of symbolism was wholly South American.

Our best illustration of what South America is preparing to do was given by Gabriela Mistral, the Chilean educator, humanist, and poet, a woman of simplicity of appearance. Though a representative of the lower middle class in society, she has won a foremost place in the respect and affection of her own countrymen. I am told that she is today the most quoted writer in the Spanish speaking world. She was very gracious and witty, talking brilliantly on a very wide range of literary and religious themes. She is much of a mystic and believes that all true followers of religion can and should find much common ground. Her Catholicism, to which she is loyal, in no way precludes her sympathy with any true spirit. Her whole life is absolutely devoted to making the spiritual predominate over the material. I recall, however, one remark which revealed her heritage. She had said that all religious people should pay far more attention to the saints and to the secret of their lives. When one suggested that there are modern saints who are too active in doing good to be able to meditate, she did not really respond. To meet on intimate terms with so fine and lovely a character was a real privilege. More than one of the group of twelve thus favored realized that travel puts one into touch with facts and people who give him a fresh education.

I must close with a reference to two educators I have met on a basis of friendship, neither of them evangelicals, Professor Dr. Ernesto Nelson of the University of Buenos Aires and Rector Dr. Enrique Molina of the University of Concepcion, Chile. Of course, these were broad-minded men or they would not have been willing to discuss educational or religious themes with us. They were also scholars of much prominence in their own nations. They were keenly in earnest regarding moral issues and moral and religious advance. They both declared that the "intellectual" South American does not consciously base his ethics upon the character or will of God, and yet that he has a very definite moral code to which he does respond. They urged that young missionaries aim to acquire such familiarity with Spanish as to enable them to read the thoughtful literature which molds the serious-minded. They declared that such literature sells better in South America than novels.

Every traveler to South America feels like writing a book, so many of his experiences, if he has the good fortune to be well introduced, are absolutely novel and full of stimulus. I shall not weary the readers of The Congregationalist with more articles. I content myself with urging that reports and volumes on South American themes be utilized by many here at home to get a sounder view of these republics with which we ought to be on happier terms, and of these peoples who will fully and richly reward our friendliness.

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the River and the Delta

This have I observed as I and Keturah went around this wobbly old Planet, that the great Rivers that flow to the Ocean have an hard time getting there because of the Silt which they carry. It is not the Rocks that impede them, but their own Detritus. For we saw the Nile and the Rhine and the Ganges and the Irrawaddy and certain other Mighty Streams, even as we had seen the Mississippi, and every one of them had a great Bar at its mouth, and a low, flat plain of soil through which it crept wearily and sluggishly into the Sea.

And I said unto Keturah, All the four rivers in the Garden of Eden rose in the Highlands in the heart of Continents, and every one of them gathered Silt as it traveled, and likewise the sewage of Cities, and flowed thick and with great and lazy Labour to the Ocean.

And she said, It seemeth a pity, for they flow out as Pure Rippling Springs, and they end their course as Muddy and Unattractive Sewers.

And I said, Keturah, it is often so with Human Life. We spend much of our time admonishing Youth, and reproving it for its Thoughtlessness. But most of the Novels that I read in the days when Novels themselves had not become Silted and Filthy were of the beauty of Unreckoning Youth and the sordidness of Coldly Calculating Age.

And she said, It is a sad thing for Age, not that it groweth old, but that it loseth the Vision and Idealism of Youth.

And I said, It is not the obstacles that lie in the channel of a man's life that impede him from reaching the Ocean of his hopes, but the Silt of his own growingly Materialistick Mind. This is what doth make a Delta wherein are lost much of the freshness and purity of motive, and a large part of the spontaneity and ardour, that are so beautiful in Youth.

And Keturah said, My lord, we must never grow Old. And if so be that our hairs grow white, still must our hearts keep young. Nor will we seek to cumber our lives as they flow toward the Sea with too many cares of things that clog the tides of the spirit.

And I said, Oh, Keturah, it mattereth not that streams should carry burdens. All of these mighty streams, the Ganges and the Irrawaddy and the Yangtze Kiang and the rip-roaring old Mississippi bear great Ships and are not impeded, but they clog themselves below the water-level, in the depths which men see not, but the hidden silt impedeth the flow, and sendeth each of the great rivers out at their latter end in a Dozen Muddy Creeks that crawl and grope, instead of going forth Majestickally and finishing their courses with triumphant shouts. Even so do men whose lives sprang forth from hillside springs, pure in purpose and joyous in spirit, load down their Ideals with Silt and Sewage, and suffer Slow Debasement till they go wearily and obstructed to Oblivion.

And Keturah said, It is not Earthly Gain that can corrupt us, for we possess it not.

And I said, It is not earthly gain that doth corrupt any one, but the love of it, and it corrupteth not only those who get it but those who strive and fail. But we will seek to keep a clear and free channel for our lives, that our Ideals sustain us to the end.

An Anthem

By John T. Theodore

My head was bowed before a heedless Fate;
My shoulders ached from Sorrow's stinging rod;
I longed for peace,—now bruised and desolate,—
And turned my steps into the House of God.

Away from all,—behind the pulpit high,—
There stood a group with robes and tasselled caps;
They sang an anthem, now in whispering sigh,
Now in full voice or like some thunder-claps.

They sang the song with most bewild'ring trills
And convolutions intricate and rare,
And traversed back and forth the lines in frills,
Now with appeal, and now in ringing dare.

Few words I caught, but I could not, alas!
Discern the burden of their song, its goal;
It was to me, indeed, like "sounding brass,"—
A pretty face, and yet without a soul.

Then came "Amen!" in cadence sevenfold;
"So Let It Be!"—but "IT" was lost in ART;
And when the last notes died away, behold!
They had not soothed a whit my aching heart.

I longed for peace; I found an idle strain.
I sought relief from burdens hard to bear;
I looked for God; they strove to entertain;
When the song ceased my burdens still were there.

The Northern Baptist Convention

Lively Disputes and Dignified Settlements

By Francis C. Stifler
Wilmette, Illinois

EVOLUTION as a subject for religious debate did not make its appearance in the discussions of the Northern Baptist Convention held at Seattle from June 30 to July 5. No Baptist Convention since the first in 1908, however, has recorded so much debate on matters of doctrine and polity. Seattle placed the meeting far from the center of denominational population and in the midst of a strong Fundamentalist section. The situation offered the ultra-conservatives the chance of all chances to win.

The delegates came up to Seattle with the stage set for lively discussion. One of the first things on the program was the report of the Committee on Affairs of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society. This committee was instructed a year ago "to ascertain and report the policy, if any, which the Board of Managers of the Society had adopted with respect to the appointment and retention of persons as missionaries who do not accept or who have repudiated or abandoned the evangelical faith as held historically by Baptists." This report, some 15 pages long, which had been broadcasted earlier in the denominational press, was very fair and satisfying to the entire Convention, as revealed by a unanimous vote of acceptance taken within two minutes after its reading. Then just as the chairman of the session was moving on to the next order of business, there appeared by his side Dr. W. B. Hinson, Fundamentalist leader of Oregon, which is the great Fundamentalist state of the Convention, to offer a resolution. His opening remarks gave the impression that he was there to bury still deeper all former differences, and delegates of all theological views were sure that the storm was over for a year at least, when Dr. Hinson produced a resolution calling upon the Foreign Mission Board immediately to recall every missionary who did not preach and teach that "the New Testament clearly teaches the divine and direct creation of man in the image of God, the plenary inspiration of the Scriptures of both Old and New Testaments, the certain Deity of Jesus Christ, involving His Virgin Birth, His sinless life, His sacrificial death, His bodily resurrection, and ascension to the right hand of God, and His return."

The Convention hall was packed to the doors. At once it became evident that the Fundamentalists had planned this move so as to gain their deep desire to harass the denomination with some creedal statement. The battle was on. The President of the Convention, Hon. Carl E. Milliken of Maine, proved himself a superb parliamentarian. He was never once questioned in his decisions. In the next 15 minutes some of the great debaters of the Convention had spoken, when finally a vote to postpone action until the resolution could be printed and distributed was carried and the matter was put over till the following day.

A Day of Dispute

The following day, Thursday, July 2, proved the big day of dispute. Northern Baptists have never known a day like it. It began early in the morning with the report of the Enrollment Committee, usually a matter of mere routine. The chairman of this committee reported that numerous resolutions against the seating of the delegates of the Park Avenue Church of New York City had been received and that the committee had voted to leave the matter to the decision of the Convention. The Park Avenue Church, it will be recalled, have recently called to the pastorate Harry Emerson Fosdick, whose acceptance was given with the understanding that baptism by immersion should not be a prerequisite to membership. The present pastor of the church, Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, his wife, and two other delegates were present at the Convention. When the resolution to unseat was offered, the chair surprised and confounded the conservatives by ruling that it was unconstitutional according to the by-laws of those sections relating to the status of delegates, to unseat, as the Park Avenue Church had as yet made no changes in its status. An appeal from the decision of the chair was not sustained and the report of the Enrollment Committee excluding that section referring particularly to the Park Avenue delegates was accepted by a vote of 912 to 364. This discussion consumed the entire morning session of July 2.

Missionaries and Their Beliefs

The afternoon session was the battle royal over Dr. Hinson's resolution regarding the theological beliefs of the missionaries. This time the resolution was in the hands of every delegate. Again the house was packed with Fundamentalist delegates from Oregon and Washington. All delegates were seated by states. Certain minor amendments were offered and accepted which slightly softened the tone of the resolution but left its creedal statement untouched. In the midst of the debate that followed, Dr. W. S. Abernethy of Washington, D. C., appealed to the chair for a vote by states. This is a provision in the by-laws of the Convention that had never hitherto been resorted to. It provides that by request of one-fifth of the delegates present at any session, the vote of any subject may be taken by states, each state delegation by a majority decision casting one vote for every 10,000 constituents in its state. Such a vote gives a decided advantage to the Eastern states where the churches are larger and more numerous. Such an appeal had long been expected by Eastern leaders as a probable feature of the Seattle Convention.

But the vote by states was never called for. In the midst of the debate there arose from the Illinois delegation a man six feet four, built along the general lines of Abraham Lincoln and armed with a real ability to sway the crowd. He indulged in a little genuine humor which had its telling effect and then moved to amend Dr. Hinson's resolution by removing the entire paragraph containing the creedal tenets and substituting therefor a general exhortation to the Foreign Mission Society to exercise care in the selection and retention of its representatives. The speaker was Rev. Robert Van Meigs of Quincy, Ill. He is one of the most picturesque figures in the Convention who has hitherto taken no prominent part. He is a Fundamentalist. His genius for swaying a great audience is unquestioned. From the time he spoke till the vote was taken the defeat of the original resolution was expected. The vote, taken at 4.30, was 742 to 574 for Dr. Meigs' amendment, which was really nothing more than a decent burial for the designs of the Fundamentalists.

The following day a parting shot was taken by the conservative wing of the delegates in the form of a resolution to amend the by-laws so as to define a little more clearly just what a Baptist Church is. This resolution, which was overwhelmingly adopted without debate, is the stage setting for next year's Convention discussion at Washington, D. C., when it is expected that many more churches than merely the Park Avenue Church of New York City will be found to be practicing what is known as "open membership."

More Funds for Foreign Work

Aside from the discussions over doctrine and polity, the great question before the Convention was that of its budget. The churches had failed to reach last year's budget by $1,500,000. Theological dispute was partially responsible for this. To cut the budget still further, however, looked to the Foreign Society, suicidal. After much deliberation and discussion, in the midst of one of the most beautiful scenes of co-operative self-denial, the two foreign societies were granted increases in their budgets while the other boards accepted decreases in theirs. It became the conviction of the Convention that the general morale of the churches this year depended upon a process of encouragement of our foreign workers.

A word should be said as to the temper of the Convention. There was never a finer demonstration of the competency of a Christian democracy under able leadership. In all the tenseness of the debates of Thursday, July 2, there were no personalities indulged in and no sign of bitterness. As one Convention preacher stated it, "There was no peace, but there was love."

Devotionally the high points of the Convention were reached first under the spell of Dr. F. W. Goodchild, official head of the Fundamentalist group in the Convention, and again under the spell of Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, whose seat in the Convention was challenged on account of heresy. Dr. Goodchild lifted the convention in his noon-time devotions on Friday, July 3, and Dr. Woelfkin when he was called to the platform in connection with a short debate on his fitness to serve on one of the denominational boards.

The local press made a great deal of the presence in the city of Seattle of certain Fundamentalists who were apparently there to direct the forces of their cohorts in the Northern Baptist Convention. Among them was Dr. T. T. Shields of Toronto, and Dr. Frank Norris of Fort Worth, Texas. These, together with Dr. Mark Matthews, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Seattle, had the bad taste to hold certain simultaneous meetings in which they denounced their theological foes and threatened to create a new Foreign Mission Society. It should be made perfectly clear that all this is entirely aside from the truly orderly and Christian deliberations of the Northern Baptists who argued their way as Christians should to a better understanding of their common aims.

A Moment of Insight

By Atwood Cecil Brainard

When it was done,
"Only another sin," he said,
"Another one
That I must pay for, haply, when I shall be dead."

A sudden cord
Whipped at his heart. "Another spear,"
He moaned, "O Lord,
"Have I plunged in Thine uncomplaining bosom here!"

Christian Endeavorers at Portland, Ore.

An Interpretation of a Great Convention

By Rev. Francis E. Clark, D.D.

I HAVE been asked by The Congregationalist to give my interpretation of the recent Christian Endeavor Convention in Portland, Oregon.

It is not an easy task, since a multitude of subjects were touched by the hundreds of speakers and leaders of conferences and classes, but here is a partial interpretation:

It proved that religion and religious themes were of as much importance and interest to the young people of today as ever. The convention resented the current talk about the peculiar and general degeneracy of young people in these days, declaring that except in the Wordsworthian sense, the boy is not "father to the man," but the man is still the father of the boy; and that the father's own laxness and lack of Christian training and family religion account largely for the crime and moral laxity of youth.

The convention received with special applause Governor Pinchot's plea for law observance, and all allusions of this character, all references to a new world order, a "warless world," and kindred subjects. The resolutions declared that "war settles nothing but unsettles everything," and that young people have a special right to express their opinions on this subject since they are in the draft age, and must bear the brunt of another war if, unhappily, it ever comes.

The delegates gloried in their international and interdenominational organization as a forerunner of more complete Christian unity, and deplored the indifference or hostility of some denominational leaders who would thwart or limit their union activities.

Thousands of the delegates had never crossed the continent before, and were evidently impressed with the vastness of their own country and the big things of the Western coast,—the mighty rivers, majestic mountains, and enormous trees. They even wondered at the "Great Big Baked Potatoes" which the menu of the Pullman diners list; and the cherries of Oregon which, in spite of the proverb, require two bites apiece.

The unbounded, free-handed hospitality of the Westerners was also impressive. At every large town near the Coast the delegates were met by groups of other Endeavorers who rained flowers and fruit upon them, and cheered them on the way with jubilant songs, while in Portland free automobiles, free excursions, and abounding hospitality were the order of the day.

Growth of Christian Endeavor

Evidences of the constant growth of Christian Endeavor in all lands added to the joy of the multitudes that for six days thronged the auditoriums and churches. Secretary Gates reported the formation of more than 9,700 societies within the last two years in the United States, since the last International Convention,—6,000 within the last twelve months. Dr. G. H. Hubbard, who formed the first Christian Endeavor society in China, forty years ago, brought news of 1,400 new societies recently reported in that country, making more than 2,500 all told. Two thousand were reported from India. The eloquent James Kelly of Scotland, President of the European Christian Endeavor Union, told of a thoroughgoing Christian Endeavor revival in Great Britain, and in Australasia, as well as cheering accounts of great Endeavor fellowship meetings, embracing all the recent warring countries, in Hamburg, Germany, and in Riga, Latvia.

Mr. Kelly also brought an invitation from the British Endeavorers to hold the next World's Convention in London in July, 1926, for which the Crystal Palace and the great Albert Memorial Hall have already been engaged. The invitation was unanimously accepted. It is expected that at least a thousand delegates, perhaps twice that number, will go from America.

Missions occupied a large place in the time and affections of the Portland convention, and such speakers as Rev. Royal J. Dye of Africa, and Rev. Dirk Lay, the apostle to the Pima Indians, made a deep impression. Mr. Lay was backed by a dozen Pima Endeavorers on the platform.

Election of Dr. Poling

I need not add that I was greatly rejoiced at the election of Rev. Daniel A. Poling, LL.D., Litt.D., as President of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, a position which, after thirty-eight years of service, I imperatively resigned on account of advancing years. No one could be better fitted for the post than Dr. Poling. He is young, enthusiastic, well-poised, gifted as a preacher and writer, beloved of all young people. While he will remain as co-minister of the Marble Collegiate Church of New York, his church gives him a yearly vacation of three months, and expects him to make Christian Endeavor his chief avocation. With his wife and seven children he represented, on the platform, a "Family Christian Endeavor Union," all the members of which belong to one or another of the five societies in the Marble Collegiate Church.

I still retain the office of President of the World's Christian Endeavor Union.

The Portland Convention was not a battleground. With scarcely an exception, not a controversial theological word was spoken. The creed of every society is the creed of its own church, and its only covenant is: "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I will strive to do whatever he would like to have me do." In this there is no room for controversy.

To sum up my interpretation of the convention: It indicated the blessing of God upon the movement as never before; it proved that the young people were resolved in their societies not to sidetrack the devotional life, but to major in religion, as from the beginning, using all other things, recreation, athletics, social life, as minors, rejoicing in an ever-widening fellowship, national and denominational, and praying for the time when "All may be one."

* *

P. S.—While I am writing, let me say that it may be of interest to your readers to know that the next World's Christian Endeavor Convention, which is to be held in London, promises to be an important international event, promoting good will and fellowship throughout the world, and especially among the recently warring nations of Europe.

The Crystal Palace of London and the great Albert Memorial Hall have been secured for the meetings, by the Endeavorers, and already the official heads of the seven leading denominations of the Christian Church in Great Britain and Ireland have accepted the position of honorary presidents and supporters of the convention. Among these are the Bishop of London, Dr. J. D. Jones of Bournemouth (Congregational), Mrs. George Cadbury, the president this year of the National Free Church Council, Dr. F. B. Meyer, and others. The Archbishop of Canterbury, despite his seventy-seven years, has promised to speak at the welcome meeting at the opening of the convention.

It is expected that delegates will be present from every nation of Europe, as Christian Endeavor has a foothold in all of them, as well as from Australia, India, Africa, and Asia.

Home Missions Conference

Impressions of Northfield Gathering

By Mrs. John Voorhis Holt

Earnestness, consecration, and large endeavor, together with a spirit of Christian fellowship, dominated the 19th Interdenominational Woman's Home Mission Summer Conference held in Northfield from July 6-14.

The enrollment was the largest in the history of the Home Missions Conference, with a larger number of denominations represented, a larger group of girls in the camps and a larger number of women in the halls. Pervading all was the fine spirit of hospitality, helpfulness, and fellowship.

The conference was presided over with ability and charm by its chairman, Mrs. T. R. St. John. The program committee, of which Mrs. Charles E. Blake was chairman, presented a program of remarkable strength and interest.

A "get-together" for the camp girls, a presentation of leaders, and a reception to the missionaries at The Northfield brought the entire conference group into a splendid fellowship and created an atmosphere of unity and understanding at the beginning of the conference.

Dr. James Gordon Gilkey was in charge of the morning Bible hour and chose for his subject "Secrets of the Victorious Life." The topics for study were: "Utilizing One's Reserve Power," "Taking the Strain from Life," "Keeping the Radiance in the Day's Work," "Conquering Fear and Worry," "Getting Along with Queer People," "Keeping One's Sense of God." Dr. Gilkey made an eloquent appeal for the development of larger personalities plus the infinite energy, power, and love of God. "Christ taught the art of living at our best, 'I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life.' A victorious life has learned that out of the vastness that is God, it can summon the power to lead one into the abundant life; that God loves us so much he stays by to bring us to our best self and to him; that those who are living at their best see God, they are triumphant and radiant Christians."

The theme for study was "The Slav in America." Two evenings of rare pleasure were provided when Mrs. Arthur B. Strickland in Slovak costume gave in monologue the fascinating story of "Sonya the Slav" and Miss Ellenor Cook gave a brilliant recital of Czecho-Slovakian folk songs.

The conference was fortunate in having addresses from Miss Nannie H. Burroughs, head of the National Training School for Women and Girls in Washington, D. C., Mrs. Jennie F. Pratt, Kindergartener at Ellis Island, and Miss Laura F. Parker, Executive Secretary of the Farm and Cannery Migrant Work. The need for co-operation on a large scale was made evident if the streams within our land are to be kept pure.

The study groups for the week were in the hands of experts. Mrs. Dan Brummitt taught with the added enthusiasm of one recently returned from Czecho-Slovakia the senior book, Pleasant Pioneers; the young women's book, High Adventure, was taught by Miss Maude E. Bradley, and Mrs. A. M. Lamb led the junior group with Better Americans, Number Three.

The methods hour brought forward many valuable suggestions for presenting study programs.

The music of the conference was in the cap-ble leadership of Mrs. Rex Dodge of Portland nd her splendid choir of camp girls, with Miss Elizabeth Lowry as pianist.

The musical pageant, "The Nation's Gifts of Music to America," was written by Mrs. Dodge nd presented by the camp girls. The various ational groups in their brilliant costumes made pageant of beauty as well as song. When this ntire cosmopolitan group burst into our own ymn, "America," aided by the piano and organ, nd flung into being the living flag—our own Stars and Stripes—the large audience rose to ttention and a lesson in race relations had een learned never to be forgotten.

The daily forum proved of large interest. Dr. Cady led the discussion on "Race Prejudice," Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead led the topics, "The United States and the United World," and "Common Fallacies About War and Peace," nd Miss Mary Peacock opened the discussion n "Building for the Future."

Sunday at Northfield is always an inspira- ion. This year the morning sermon was preached by Dr. Gilkey, the student-fellowship ervice on Round Top was led by Miss Ona A. Evans, and the Communion service in Sage Chapel was followed by an address by Dr. Arthur H. Bradford, whose subject was "Serv- ng by Being."

The atmosphere of a conference that brings together a large group of purposeful young women, together with leaders in church work nd young missionaries in active service, is freighted with Christian energy and brings a new meaning to Christian fellowship. These intimate personal contacts with those doing large service in the world, broadens and deepens the understanding of our young women nd gives them a new estimate of Christian living as they catch the vision of a service for themselves that is world-wide in its interest.

This conference has emphasized the meaning of worship and has given to young and old alike a new appreciation of worship in the individual life. The camp girls particularly will never forget the early morning services in the groves where nature, God, and man were alone together, they will carry into mature woman- hood the deep impressions of the sunset services on Round Top, and they will never forget the twilight Communion service when God walked among them and blessed them.

The great spirit of Northfield sent a challenge into the hearts of those gathered on her hill- sides, for larger Christian service and for a deeper sense of the living presence of God to be interpreted to the world in radiant lives.

Principal Dickerson Resigns

Dr. Charles E. Dickerson, who resigned from the principalship of Northfield Seminary, North- field, Mass., last October, and who retired from his work at the last commencement season, has been connected with the Northfield Schools 36 years. For 22 years he was head of the de- partment of science and vice-principal at the Mount Hermon School.

At Northfield Seminary, where he has been principal for 14 years, his work has been equally noteworthy and successful. With vi- sions of higher achievements ever before him, he has steadily strengthened the organization and improved the quality of work done since the seminary came under his care. That Dr. Dickerson has placed the school on a high scholastic basis is evident from the testi- monials from over 40 colleges which students from Northfield have attended, and by the ex- cellent records they have made.

In the second year of Dr. Dickerson's ad- ministration the number of students was con- siderably increased in the opening of Gould Hall, which accommodates 150 students and teachers. At this time the teaching staff was proportionately increased. Fourteen years ago there was little departmental organization. Now there are 11 well organized departments.

Dr. Dickerson has ever kept before him the threefold purpose of D. L. Moody in founding the institution—practical training in domestic work, intellectual training of the highest, and steady emphasis upon the development of character.

For Unity of Administration

In the old Bull Moose days Southern Cali- fornia was overwhelmingly progressive in poli- tics. If public opinion may have veered some- what from the political ideas of that day, Con- gregationalism remains continuously "progres- sive." Here the policy of apportionment of benevolence received an early and hearty ac- ceptance. More recently our representatives have been active in securing closer unity in the administration of moneys both for local and benevolence enterprises.

As the Committee of Twelve struggled with a proposal for merging the missionary societies, the State Conference at Long Beach in May voted to approve the consolidation into four organizations. As later, it has been given out, there is urged the merging of the work into two societies—for home and foreign activity— there is undoubtedly quite as great an accept- ance. Still further, as led by Supt. G. F. Kenngott, the conference may be practically ready to favor the consolidation of all our mis- sionary work into the direct responsibility of the National Council.

Those who have recently removed here from the East can readily understand the strong sentiment for the maintenance of those organ- izations which originated in a crisis of special need, and have through the years accumulated a treasure of accomplishment and personal as- sociation. The very name is dear to thousands; the constituency has been bound together by annual conventions, co-laborship, and litera- ture; their money is invested in it, and their prayers and hopes. This for each of the na- tional societies. Any change would be a per- sonal shock. Yet should not the largest measure of strength and efficiency be prized above one's personal attachment? It seems so to us at this Southwest. We believe that to put all our missionary work under unity of adminis- tration would eliminate waste, overlapping here and neglect there, give focused vision and poignancy of appeal, a concentrated attack of all the allies upon the frontier of need. Already both in Northern and in Southern California, the Women's Foreign and Home Missionary Societies have voted to consolidate and are working out the plan. In this connec- tion, too, it may be noted that the Board of Directors of the conference now number 27, of whom one-third are women.

In parallel fashion, the conference has pro- gressively taken under its management within its limits, the functions of several of the national home societies. Since Nov. 4, 1908, it has administered its own home missionary work, sending five per cent. of its receipts for that purpose to the Congregational Home Mis- sionary Society. In 1916 it took over the work of Ministerial Relief, transmitting to the National Society 25 per cent. In 1917 it as- sumed the functions of the C. S. S. E. S., send- ing the National Society last year 10 per cent., and in 1923, the work of the Congregational Education Society, sending on 12½ per cent. with a minimum of $500 annually.

In the past year the conference has assumed the responsibilities formerly under the care of the A. M. A. Already it had given its support to our Lincoln Memorial Church, the only church for colored people in the Far West. It has aided the Armenians. Large sums have been given annually for work among the Mexi- cans in many places. Why, then, should not similar oversight be given directly to the work among Japanese and Chinese and also the In- dians? If the preceding steps had been wise, the work of the A. M. A. as a whole in our section would seem warrantably to come to the conference. Accordingly it has been done, and approval to the request had been made unani- mous by the Commission on Missions of the National Council at its meeting in Chicago in January, 1925. Five per cent. of the receipts from the churches for the purpose are to go to the A. M. A. Rev. Paul Waterhouse has been secured to work among the Orientals and the Indians, and to give himself to church extension in other directions as he may be able.

In this gradual assimilation of the work of the several national societies by the conference there has been no desire to accentuate state rights, but rather state obligations. Nor are we possessed by a narrow sectionalism. In each case our fellowship with the life and work of the nation is expressed in the sending of funds on a percentage basis for the areas be- yond California.

However, it is considered that the Board of Directors, numbering 27, with their superin- tendents specialists for the field, can act more intelligently, sympathetically, and quickly to meet our own situations than can any offi- cials in Chicago, Boston, or New York, however capable and devoted. There has been expected, too, a deepening of interest of Congregational- ists in their own local work, which in the in- creased contributions seems to be proved. Then, too, as the home missionary work, the Sun- day school founding and training, are so closely related, and that of the races may well be uni- fied, it was judged the conference adminis- trators might best co-ordinate these branches of the service. There is high appreciation of the fine work done by the Pacific Coast representa- tives of the various national boards, but there is conviction that each conference may better take care of the functions within their own borders. Moreover, we wish to support finan- cially all these lines of service, and further maintain our place in the national fellowship by sending contributions for general missionary activity.

One other matter requires mention: the movement toward a unified treasury and budget. Each church now apportions its con- tributions for benevolences in certain per- centages for each society. Are we not rapidly approaching the time when the churches will raise a total amount for benevolence without such division, making one offering simply for conference work? In this case, the conference must pass on contributions to the C. C. B. S. and the American Board until there may be full unity in national administration. Already some churches have a unified budget, which in- cludes with local expense their apportionment for benevolence. As Supt. Kenngott says, "That will be a great day, when in the interests of unity, simplicity, and fairness to all, we have one conference work, all under the ad- ministration of the conference directors, demo- cratically elected and widely representative of all the churches and their unified though varied interests."

Yucaipa, Cal. CHESTER FERRIS.

The Pastor Says: It is better to meet God with an ear trumpet than with an orchestra.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

Those Larger Minds and Other Worlds

In the midst of the fierce materialism of our day there is a new outbreak of interest in things spiritistic. Spirit photographs and "ectoplasm," mysterious breezes in darkened rooms and puzzling bell-ringings, are become matters of headline in our daily papers. Serious investigations are being carried on by scientific men, and there is much argument about it and about. The spirit of man is never content to abide long in a purely materialistic world.

If it is possible to make authentic investigations into the realm of the hereafter, we want those investigations. At the same time credulity on the one hand, and notorious fraud on the other, have again and again loomed so large in these matters that the cautious mind must be forever on its guard. Mediums who produce some phenomena that no investigator is able to explain, are, by these same investigators, caught red-handed in so much trickery that the guardful mind finds itself suspicious about the unexplained phenomena also.

It is hard to think, anyway, that if the spirits of our beloved dead wish to make themselves known to us, there is no way save through the tipping of tables, the ringing of bells, the blowing of cold airs, manifestations out of specially constructed cabinets in darkened rooms, and through other tricks that conjurors duplicate on the stage for public amusement.

It may be that some of the mediums are not consciously deceiving. Perhaps at times, being in some sort of self-induced hypnotic state, they are not themselves aware that they are performing hocus-pocus. What that mysterious subconscious mind can lead its owner to do, not only in hypnotic and trance states but even when he appears to be normally conscious, is still largely unknown. Hypnosis and automatic writing frequently bring forth into light things which the conscious mind was utterly unaware of possessing; but it has been found again and again that they were merely things which had been forgotten by the conscious mind, or which had been taken into the subconscious mind in entirely normal ways though without conscious awareness.

Yet it may still be true that our larger minds have contacts and perceptions that but seldom get to our consciousness.

> Not in entire forgetfulness,
> And not in utter nakedness,
> But trailing clouds of glory do we come
> From God who is our home:
> . . . . . .
> Hence in a season of calm weather
> Though inland far we be,
> Our souls have sight of that immortal sea
> Which brought us hither.

Wordsworth meant more by this than mere poetic fancy. Watchers at the bedside of the dying now and then see the eyes of their beloved lighted with new and wondrous light as their lips utter greetings to those gone before, whom they believe themselves to behold. Here and there are souls that feel unseen presences, and that believe themselves to receive high biddings. These are revealings that would be worthy of a spirit world. St. Paul, St. Augustine, St. Francis of Assisi, and others of great achievement, and others still, even to our own day, who never came to fame, have believed

(Continued on next page)

Closet and Altar

KEEPING THE HEART

Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life.—Prov. 4: 23.

He that secures the heart secures all the rest, because this is the principle of all the moral actions of the whole man, and the hand obeys this, and the feet walk by its prescriptions.—Jeremy Taylor.

It must begin at the heart; otherwise it will be but a mountebank cure; a false imagined conquest. The weights and wheels are there, and the clock strikes according to their motion.—Robert Leighton.

The hand may commit mistakes, it is the heart that commits sin.—Joseph Parker.

Watch Nature in all her moods as you will—she is only the great palace in which the Father has set His children to dwell; and the real shadow and sunshine is in the words and hearts of men.—William Everett.

> Oh! that mine eyes might closed be
> To what concerns me not to see;
> That deafness might possess mine ear
> To what concerns me not to hear;
> That truth my tongue might always tie
> From ever speaking foolishly;
> That no vain thought might ever rest,
> Or be conceived in my breast;
> That by each deed and word and thought
> Glory may to my God be brought!
> But what are wishes? Lord, mine eye
> On Thee is fixed, to Thee I cry;
> Wash, Lord, and purify my heart,
> And make it clean in every part,
> And when 't is clean, Lord, keep it, too,
> For that is more than I can do.
> Thomas Elwood.

In the religious life our house must be set in order daily. Any remissness in systematic vigilance and industry means so much spiritual confusion and loss. Day by day in repeated aspiration and petition must we speak with Heaven; so shall we be cleansed from all filthiness of flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.—W. L. Watkinson.

Whether we will or no, the greater part of life is passed alone; and, oh, how much depends on the upward guidance of solitary thought!—Henry P. Liddon.

Make yourselves nests of pleasant thoughts. None of us yet know, for none of us have been taught in early youth, what fairy palaces we may build of beautiful thought—proof against all adversity. Bright fancies, satisfied memories, noble histories, faithful sayings, treasure houses of precious and restful thoughts, which care cannot disturb, nor pain make gloomy, nor poverty take away from us—houses built without hands for our souls to live in.—John Ruskin.

Be not weary of me, good Lord, and let me not be weary of myself, or of trying to conquer myself. I am all weakness, but thou art almighty, and canst put forth thy strength perfectly in my weakness. Make me truly to hate all which thou hatest, fervently to love all which thou lovest; make me truly sorry, for love of thee, that I have so often offended thee, and so mightly transform me, through thy grace, that I may no more offend thee; through Jesus Christ. Amen. C. B. Pusey.

[Assembled by Isaac Ogden Rankin]

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Recreating Bodies and Souls

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic for August 9-15

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: The Benefits of Wholesome Play.—Mark 6: 31, 32; Luke 2: 52.

Light from the Bible Passages

Jesus was a worker, as a boy, in the carpenter shop. No one can think of the boy Jesus not entering into the play of others in his village. Apocryphal writers long years after his death tried to picture him as working senseless miracles even as a boy. He was far more likely a normal lad who worked as other boys and played as they did. He was a worker as a man. When men became Jesus' disciples they entered upon a career of strenuous activity. After a season of hard work he called them to a vacation. He knew they needed it. They needed to get away from crowds and incessant activity to quiet and rest. They undoubtedly valued it all the more because of their previous hard work. Try to imagine what they said and did.

Leads for the Leader

What is the best argument for a vacation? What is the best kind of a vacation? How can we take our religion into our play? Do we usually "leave God at home" when we go on our vacation?

Our play ought to refresh us. Do we play too hard? Do we make it a business instead of a pleasure? Must we always win? Do we find ourselves physically renewed?

Our play ought to bring us into better relations with others. "Team-work" has a spiritual value. Do we get it?

Our own play may come through helping others to play. What can Endeavorers do toward giving pleasure to the poor, neglected children of the community? What about assisting at playgrounds?

Thoughts for Members

What is life all for? This is a question that will trouble you a great many times before you have finished with life. Let us try to settle it now, once for all. What is it all for? Birth, babyhood, youth, maturity, old age, death? Play, study, work, pain, sickness, sorrow, sacrifice, joy, love, disappointment? I will tell you what I think: It is to produce in us a character like Christ's.—Sydney Strong.

> If all the year were playing holidays,
> To sport would be as tedious as to work.
> —Shakespeare.

In those vernal seasons of the year, when the air is calm and pleasant, it were an injury and sullenness against Nature not to go out and see her riches, and partake in her rejoicing with heaven and earth.—Milton.

You were made for enjoyment, and the world was filled with things which you will enjoy, unless you are too proud to be pleased with them, or too grasping to care for what you cannot turn to other account than mere delight. —Ruskin.

A Moment of Prayer

We thank Thee O Thou who givest us all things, for the periods of rest and recreation which Thou in Thy mercy dost bestow upon us. Teach us, we pray, to make the most of them for our own upbuilding of body and soul, and for the increase of happiness for all those whom we meet in the daily rounds of life. Amen.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

The Second Missionary Journey

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for August 9
Acts 15: 36 to 16: 5

If some people had written the Bible we may be sure that this lesson, or at least part of it, would never have been in the New Testament. They would not have considered it seemly to tell the story of a quarrel between two good men like Paul and Barnabas. We may thank God that the Bible was written by open-minded, honest men, who were more interested in telling the truth than in putting even good men in a favorable light. This surely is one of the marvelous things about the Bible, the way in which even in the account of its greatest heroes its writers tell the unfavorable as well as the favorable side. From Genesis to Revelation we have recorded the sins and weakness of men as well as their spiritual attainments; and we have also the evidence that even the best men were not perfect. The Bible would be far less valuable were this otherwise.

Abraham, Moses, Elijah, David, Peter, Paul, John—all its noblest characters are revealed as men who touch us ordinary mortals at certain points of weakness and sin, and the great lesson of this is that weak and sinful men like ourselves may find beauty of character and strength of soul through Divine power.

This seems to be a very unseemly quarrel that broke out between Paul and Barnabas as they were about to enter on their second missionary journey. Apparently, also, it broke out in an unpremeditated way and it was all the more intense because of the suddenness of the cleavage. Apparently neither of the missionaries had been anticipating any trouble, for Paul had proposed to Barnabas that they should go together visiting again the churches that they had established during their first missionary journey, but the suggestion of Barnabas that they should take John Mark with them roused Paul to indignation.

We do not know just what ground of complaint Paul had against John Mark. This young man was evidently the son of a favored Christian family. It was at his mother's house that the disciples were assembled when Peter came to them after his miraculous release from prison, and it was at her door that the amazed, and probably terrified, damsel had left Peter standing while she went to tell of his presence.

We do not know a great deal about John Mark, but as the author of the second Gospel he has left a beautiful and glorious memorial that would imply for him much greater directness of action and strength of purpose than Paul apparently was willing to accord him.

We do not know why he had left Paul and Barnabas on their previous journey. The record of that journey merely mentions that John Mark left them at a certain point and went to Jerusalem, but there is nothing there that indicates the reason. However, Paul felt so strongly about what he had regarded as Mark's desertion that he and Barnabas had an irreconcilable difference. So each went his own way, choosing his own companion. Paul took Silas and Barnabas was accompanied by Mark.

Let us hope that these two noble-minded men, however sharp was their contention, agreed to differ and parted company without ill-will or temper, though they could not see eye to eye in a matter of policy. Let us remember, also, that there was one good aspect to their difference of opinion. It provided for two journeys instead of one. For they wisely did not attempt to go over the same territory, but each pair chose its particular course. Also let us emphasize the beautiful way in which the lesson ends. If it begins in contention it ends in construction, for the record is that "the churches were strengthened in the faith and increased in numbers daily." It is interesting that the Golden Text of this lesson is the verse in Psalm 72 from which the Dominion of Canada took its name. When the Fathers of Confederation were considering a name for the united provinces away back in the 60's of last century, some one turned to the Scriptures and read the passage, "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth." Then and there the name Dominion was taken to describe the new confederation. It was perhaps with reference to this historic instance as well as for its appropriateness as a text that at the recent great gathering in the Arena in Toronto, when the United Church of Canada was inaugurated, this passage should have dominated the assembly in a great streamer along one side of the auditorium.

If the church grows in spite of dissension and difference, how much more vitally would the church grow and progress if Christians everywhere were united in spirit and purpose! Only the other day we heard of some eminent man who defended sectarianism on the ground that various rival sects had accomplished more than would have been done by one organization.

There may be superficial truth in such a claim, but one cannot find much consolation in it when he thinks for a moment of what a Christian Church, vitally united, and dominated by the spirit of God, could accomplish.

Recent Books for Bible Readers

THE MEN WHOM JESUS MADE, by REV. W. MCINTOSH MACKAY (Doran. $1.60). Dr. Mackay, minister of Sherbrooke Church, Glasgow, who has written former volumes on Bible Types of Modern Men and Bible Types of Modern Women, here presents studies of the Twelve Apostles. His method is that of comparing the finished product with the raw material to reveal what the Master accomplished. Dr. Mackay has used skillfully the materials available for such character study.

STUDIES IN CRITICISM AND REVELATION, by THOMAS JOLLIE SMITH (Revell. $1.50). The author of this book is Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Studies in the University of Melbourne. As a critic of conservative views and standpoint Professor Smith is to be reckoned with, but despite his honesty and good spirit his book is rather a partisan document. His strength is in the vigor with which he assails the modernist tendency toward asserting too dogmatically conclusions that rest upon a basis of assumption rather than careful proof, but he hardly perceives the extent to which conservative criticism has rested upon a similar dogmatism and he fails to do justice to the constructive value of progressive critical scholarship. A notable, and to us very delightful, feature of the book is the brief introduction by Dr. F. W. Norwood of the City Temple. Dr. Norwood in his student days was a friend of Professor Smith. He admires his character and intellectual capacity, but after the lapse of years finds himself not in entire agreement with Professor Smith's standpoint and with the views expressed in his book. It is highly creditable that in a dignified way Dr. Norwood should have said so, and it is particularly creditable to Professor Smith that he should have sent forth his book with an introduction that in some measure criticizes his own position. That is the spirit that men ought to display in the approach toward truth; we hope the time will come when men everywhere will value honesty of statement more than mere words of eulogy.

HUMAN NATURE AND THE GOSPEL, by WILLIAM LYON PHELPS (Scribners. $2.00). A book of this title by the Lampson Professor of English Literature at Yale will immediately commend itself to Congregationalist readers, and the reader who seeks these pages with high expectation will not be disappointed. Three years ago Professor Phelps wrote a book under the title, Human Nature in the Bible, dealing mainly with the Authorized Version of the Old Testament as a masterpiece of literature. In now approaching the New Testament Professor Phelps realizes that he has a task of deeper spiritual import, and the spirit of his approach is admirable. Recognizing the New Testament as "the literary masterpiece of all time," Professor Phelps is clear in the perception that its true pre-eminence is none the less not as literature but for the personality that appears on almost every page. "In the presence of the Light of the world," he writes, "all other lights are dim, and it is impossible to consider the New Testament merely as a literary work." His faith in Jesus is clearly and nobly expressed.

> I believe in him [writes Professor Phelps] as the Divine Revelation, as the Teacher who knew more about humanity than any poet, novelist, scientist, philosopher, or dramatist. I believe that he is the one hope of mankind, and that his way of life is not only the wisest, but the only way that can bring nobility and happiness to the individual and security and peace to the world. And I am just as certain of his ultimate triumph on earth as I am that I shall not be here to see it.

We have, we hope, quoted enough to make this book sought after.

THE BEAUTY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT, by BURRIS A. JENKINS (Doran. $1.50). Somewhat similar to Professor Phelps' book in purpose, but more the book of a preacher, and using Moffatt's Translation, instead of the Authorized Version to which Professor Phelps clings, is this volume by Dr. Jenkins, pastor of Linwood Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo. Dr. Jenkins is well known for his work as an editor as well as for his eminence in the pulpit. His method is somewhat the reverse of that of Professor Phelps. He begins with the pre-eminence of Jesus and the truth of the New Testament and comes to the beauty of the record, whereas Professor Phelps approaches the pre-eminence of Jesus through the beauty of the record. But both books are one in their appreciation of the artistry of the New Testament and in their adoration of the portrait there portrayed, their faith in the living Savior of Men.

Our Invalid Parish

(Continued from preceding page)

themselves to hold direct relations with that world. By these relations they have been comforted, greatened, inspired to noble living, perhaps led to be God's messengers to men in a special way.

Here is, then, our privilege: not to be credulous in the presence of table tippings and cabinet manifestations, but to open our whole selves, conscious and subconscious, to that greater Reality which enfolds all things that are seen.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Sermons and Addresses

SENTENCE SERMONS, by ROY L. SMITH (Revell. $1.50). A volume containing several hundred of the crisp sentences following a general heading which have made the author, a Minneapolis Methodist pastor, famous through their syndicated publication in daily newspapers.

VILLAGE SERMONS BY A NOVELIST, by GUSTAV FRENSSEN (Appleton). Gustav Frenssen became widely and favorably known in America largely through the translation of his book, Jörn Uhl. These sermons, delivered to a small village congregation at Hemme, in Holstein, Germany, reveal him in a less-known but very acceptable rôle. They are the expressions of a man deeply and sincerely religious who speaks to his fellow-men in vigorous, simple language. It was Frenssen's early ambition to be the greatest preacher in Germany. For various reasons that ambition was not realized but one recalls it in the quality of these sermons.

LIFE IN THE HEIGHTS, by J. H. JOWETT (Doran. $1.50). Dr. Jowett was at his best in expository preaching, and his highest art in that sphere was in the "week-night meditations" based on studies in the Epistles. This volume contains nearly seventy such studies.

THE ROMANCE OF RELIGION, by LEWIS T. GUILD (Abingdon Press. $1.75). A modest but able volume culled from the pulpit work of a long and fruitful ministry. The sermons are varied in theme and interest but are marked throughout by an earnest spirit in interpreting the Gospel for daily life.

THE PERIL OF POWER, AND OTHER SERMONS, by HENRY HOWARD (Doran. $2.00). These sermons are by an eminent Australian Methodist preacher, well known in England and the colonies and now introduced to American readers. There are sermons in the volume that we like better than the title sermon, but the volume as a whole reveals a preacher of individuality whose power lies in the mastery of truth and in the qualities of originality and effective illustration.

BRITISH PREACHERS: THE MEN AND THEIR MESSAGE—1925, edited by SIR JAMES MARCHANT (Revell. $1.75). The first of a series of proposed annual volumes. The present volume includes sermons by twenty-one preachers. The list in itself is interesting: L. P. Jacks, R. J. Campbell, John A. Hutton, James Black, J. C. Carlile, Dean Inge, Leyton Richards, H. Tydeman Chilvers, George H. Morrison, Bishop of Birmingham, James Reid, Dean Burroughs, F. W. Norwood, F. B. Meyer, R. C. Gillie, John Kelman, Herbert H. Farmer, Miss A. Maude Royden, Charles Brown, Bishop of Durham, and Norman Maclean.

SERMONS BY LEADERS OF THE SCOTTISH PULPIT, edited by D. P. Thomson (Doran. $2.50). Twenty-one sermons by the following preachers: James Black, J. Golder Burns, J. T. Forbes, A. C. Hill, W. Newman James, Norman Maclean, George H. Morrison, Robert Morton, Hubert L. Simpson, Lauchlan MacLean Watt, John White, and others.

LOOKING TOWARD THE HEIGHTS, by O. C. S. WALLACE (Doran. $1.60). Dr. Wallace is pastor of Eutaw Place Baptist Church, Baltimore. These sermons were delivered in a huge tent erected on the campus of the College of William and Mary to the students. They are enriched by illustrations, full of the power of appeal, and greatly challenging to high ideals and noble purpose. They centralize Christ, incarnate and crucified. Dr. Wallace uses to fine effect the best of poetry.

DOING THE IMPOSSIBLE, by JOHN E. CALFEE (Revell. $1.00). Dr. Calfee is president of the Asheville (N. C.) Normal School. He has given us a group of his chapel talks to students. Each talk centers around a phrase like Doing the Impossible, Whipped by Fear, Selling—What?, etc. They are invigorating, practical, and suggestive.

MAKING A PERSONAL FAITH, by WILLIAM FRASER MCDOWELL (Abingdon Press. $1.00). To the students of his Alma Mater, Ohio Wesleyan University, these lectures were delivered by Bishop McDowell on the Merrick Foundation. His aim is not so much to save the faith of the fathers, as "to save the children of the fathers to a living faith of their own." His subjects are: The Spirit and Method of Faith, the Personal Basis of Faith, the Manner and Purpose of Faith, the Outcome and Product of Faith, and the Permanency and Continuity of Faith. It is a strong, bracing, spiritual tonic not only for the college students of today but for their elders. It helps men to get a grip on Jesus Christ.

THE WAY TO THE BEST, by MILES H. KRUMBINE (Doran. $1.50 net). This volume of sermons is written by a Lutheran pastor in Dayton, O. They are direct in method, modern in application, and winsome in their appeal.

Sermons and Addresses for Children

STORIES TWICE TOLD: SERMONS FOR CHILDREN, by J. P. STRUTHERS (Doran. $2.00). Every month for twenty-seven years Rev. J. P. Struthers wrote for children in his paper, Morning Watch. The present volume, published since his death, contains some of the most notable pieces. It contains over fifty sermons, sketches, and stories, widely varying in type but of uniformly high quality.

A BUNCH FOR THE BAIRNS, by DAVID WILSON (W. P. Blessing Co., Chicago. $1.25). Addresses originally given from pulpits in London and other parts of England. The texts are aptly chosen and used.

FROZEN BUTTERFLIES, by H. S. SEEKINGS (W. P. Blessing, Chicago. $1.25). Thirty-two talks with boys and girls by an English preacher who knows how to talk with boys and girls and not merely at them.

Light on Present Problems

THE WORLD AND ITS MEANING: AN INTRODUCTION TO PHILOSOPHY, by G. T. W. PATRICK (Houghton Mifflin. $3.50). The Professor of Philosophy in the University of Iowa, in the writing of this book, has rendered a fine service both to the student of philosophy, and to the general reader of average intelligence who would like to have some glimmering of the problems with which philosophers and scientists are grappling.

We doubt whether there is available anywhere a better general introduction fulfilling the purpose that Professor Patrick himself defines in the preface. Approaching his subject modestly, mindful of those who challenge all philosophy, Professor Patrick says:

But whether philosophy is progressive or not, there are today a lot of new and vital movements in it which thoughtful people are anxious to know about, and one purpose of this book is to study these movements. If, as Professor James said, Pragmatism is to be the philosophy of the future, it is well to know just what Pragmatism is. If there is still hope for an idealistic view of the world, we are keen to know how Idealism stands today in face of the revelations of science. If the new physics and the new theory of relativity have thrown any light on the nature of things, we long to know what this light is. If the Freudians and the Behaviorists have contributed to a better knowledge of the nature and destiny of the soul, we should like to know what their contributions are. If on the other hand there is nothing in prospect but a blank agnosticism, even this we do not care to accept without first subjecting it to reflective thought.

It is precisely these questions upon which this book sheds light. Its aim is not to set forth a system of philosophy, but to survey systems and conclusions. In doing this, however, Professor Patrick has not abrogated the rights of judgment and criticism. He has sought to be impartial, but not impersonal, and has not refrained from indicating his own views, and his general standpoint which he himself describes as "realistic and pluralistic, and I hope theistic; certainly idealistic, and quite unmistakably optimistic." Bishop McConnell has said regarding Professor Patrick's volume that "for sheer absorbing interest it far surpasses a detective story." We hope the day will come speedily when such books as this will be among the "best sellers."

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH AND HUMAN WELFARE, by FRANKLIN H. HARRIS AND NEWBERN I. BUTT (Macmillan. $2.50). While science and scientists are under fire it is a good time to consider the positive contribution of science to human life and welfare. In this work by the President of Brigham Young University, in which the Research Assistant of the same University has collaborated, we have a useful survey of the field of scientific discovery and invention. An appendix giving the discoveries in chronological order, and an excellent index, make the volume valuable for reference, in addition to its major value as a well developed story of the way in which science has conquered disease, the problems of communication, transportation, and production, and the various problems incident to want and welfare.

GETTING A LAUGH, AND OTHER ESSAYS, by CHARLES HALL GRANDGENT (Harvard University Press. $2.00). This volume takes its title from the first essay, a racy and illustrative discussion of the things people laugh at. It well describes the volume as a whole for the professor has seen life with a humorous eye. It is a somewhat personal volume but trivial incidents and prejudices are dealt with in an entertaining way. One gets here and there the impression of the heaviness of the professor and scholar playing the rôle of the man-of-the-world, but the professor and scholar are sufficiently in evidence to make the volume solidly instructive as well as entertaining.

THE VOICE WITHIN. A Study of Conscience, by GEORGE DICKSON OWEN (Stratford Co. $1.00). What is conscience and what does it do? It is umpire and troubler and how much more? Is conscience always to be trusted? Is conscience the voice of God in the soul of men? How about the education of conscience? All these and many more questions about conscience are discussed fairly and thoughtfully.

Fiction

NINA, by SUSAN ERTZ (Appleton. $2.00). When an unknown author, as was Susan Ertz when her novel, Madame Claire, appeared, wins immediately such popularity, the publication of a second novel inevitably evokes the question: "Is it as good?" Nina is written with as much distinction and charm as was Madame Claire, but one questions whether, if it had appeared first, the theme chosen would have brought her such decided recognition. Nina was the niece of a wealthy widow, Mrs. Caldwell, and she was brought up together with Morton, a boy adopted by her aunt. Mrs. Caldwell loved the boy more and spoiled him. He grew up selfish and heedless of others. The marriage of Nina and Morton was a failure because of his character and the story deals with the love which Nina unfalteringly gave him despite neglect and unfaithfulness. Nina even obtained a divorce in the hope that she might be nearer to him than when he was bound to her. Her marriage to another was brought about by a young Frenchman, a particularly well drawn character in the story. He wishes to see her shielded by the love and care of a man worthy of her. Having accomplished this he doubts if he has done right. "Perhaps Nina's foolish love—that asked for no goods in exchange, was the greatest thing in the world." The fact that Nina's love has so much more the quality of sisterly affection than of ordinary passion seems somewhat to weaken the development of the theme.

THE RECKLESS LADY, by PHILIP GIBBS (Doran. $2.00).

PARADISE, by COSMO HAMILTON (Little, Brown. $2.00).

SOUNDINGS, by A. HAMILTON GIBBS (Little, Brown. $2.00).

These three books are by three talented brothers, who in their respective books have much in common. Having had exceptional opportunity for observation and knowledge of the war, of post-war conditions, and of the younger generation, each displays that talent to marked degree in their individual interpretations of their subject, their subject being the study of people and conditions since the war.

In The Reckless Lady Sir Philip Gibbs interprets the state of mind of the privileged classes in England who have lost, or feel they are losing, their privileges. A young English girl whose father belongs to the old order of aristocracy, but whose mother has been reckless, marries an American and each of these facts is the occasion for the author's critical observations. The latter part of the book dealing with the impressions and reactions of an English man and woman to America and Americans is very striking, and almost as if written to promote good feeling between the nations.

Paradise is frankly a good story. The hero, the Honorable Anthony, is a misfit before the war, but having found himself then he also finds opportunity for his adventurous spirit after the war in a quest of a fortune on an Island in the South Seas.

Soundings is the subtle study of the development of the personality of a very modern girl whose education by her artist father has freed her from the hampering training which the education of a girl usually means.

GOD'S STEPCHILDREN, by SARAH G. MILLIN (Boni & Liveright. $2.00). Rev. Andrew Flood, a weakling and an example of misguided missionary zeal, settled among the Hottentots. After the complete failure of his efforts to convert them to Christianity he conceived the idea that the only way to win their hearts was to wipe out the distinction between white and black, to become altogether assimilated with them by marrying a native woman. In a story that steadily gains in power the author traces the fortunes of the daughter, the grandson, the great-granddaughter, and the great-great-grandson. The story of the suffering and shame that follow under existing racial conditions is told with a stark directness that makes the book a serious contribution to the discussion of the subject of miscegenation. The last descendant of the missionary that is dealt with is educated at Oxford and marries an English girl but before their child is born he determines to leave his wife and says: "For my sin in begetting him, I am not to see my child. And, for the sorrow I share with them, I am to go among my brown people to help them." But while the story closes there the reader thinks of the unborn child and others concerned whose fortunes the author did not trace.

THE PASSIONATE QUEST, by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM (Little, Brown. $2.00). Two young men and a girl brought up in a very narrow religious atmosphere leave their home and seek their fortunes and ideals in London. One man wants wealth and obtains it, the other literary success and obtains it, and the girl the beautiful things of life which she eventually obtains. The story is much more intricate and interesting than this optimistic development would suggest.

TONGUES OF FIRE, by ALGERNON BLACKWOOD (Dutton. $2.00). This is a collection of short stories in which Mr. Blackwood, who is well known for his extraordinary ability in writing of the occult and the mysterious, has again drawn his material from this field.

SNUFFS AND BUTTERS, by ELLEN N. LA MOTTE (Century. $1.75). A collection of nine stories which deal with those poignant happenings and misunderstandings which so often follow the contacts of the white man with the Oriental. Miss La Motte is gifted with keen insight and each tale is a fine example of her skill in dramatic presentation.

IN THE LAND OF YOUTH, by JAMES STEPHENS (Macmillan. $2.50). James Stephens was awarded the Taillteann gold medal for his novel, Deirdre. His new romance, In the Land of Youth, is the second volume in a cycle dealing with the Irish saga of Queen Maeve, of which Deirdre was the first. The myths and legends of Ireland could scarcely be more beautifully told.

Our Readers' Forum

From a Santa Barbara Reader

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

I thought you might like to hear from the part of your great family in Santa Barbara.

The promise, "In the world ye shall have tribulation," has been fulfilled to us, but while we are sorrowful, we are still rejoicing. There were three churches standing very near together, ours between the other two, the Episcopal and the Unitarian. Ours is left, the others demolished. The fine large Presbyterian and the Methodist also are in ruins. Do you not think we may say without criticism, "We thank thee, O God, that we are not as other men"? We have only a small church membership here. Some of them have lost their homes but not many are injured. Our pastor, Rev. Paul Davies, is among us cheering by his very presence.

Our Intermediate Endeavorers attended the State Convention week before last. In the procession they carried a banner on which was inscribed, "Pep, yes! Santa Barabara Co. raised 90 per cent. of all the mustard in the world." That spirit prevails among the people yet. Our churches, hotels, banks, stores, school buildings, homes—many of them are wrecked, but no one is whining. I have not heard of any one who thinks of leaving on account of the earthquake. Where would we go to be safe? Not to Montana or Wyoming, not to Boston if we wanted to dance, not to Illinois or Kansas, or any other place where cyclones may come at any time. Life and property are just as safe here as anywhere. It is 100 years and more since our fine mission was wrecked. This second catastrophe will in time be repaired. We are only safe "under the shadow of His wing," and there we may be always and anywhere.

We are so thankful it was not when school was in session or later in the day when people would have been in stores and offices and on the street. And then though we have had neither gas nor lights, it has been bright moonlight and we have had water.

It has been very trying on the nerves of people who are ill, or not strong. This is the eleventh day since the earthquake and we have had shocks every day—two since I have been writing; but since we have learned that they do not forebode another disaster, only the settling of the earth, we do not run out-of-doors every time one comes.

I doubt if I ever entirely recover from the shock, as I am almost 85 and was just recovering from a serious illness, but hope to be at least stronger. The Congregationalist, like some of our other blessings, still comes, and I enjoy it.

Santa Barbara, Cal. HANNAH F. TURNER.
July 8, 1925.

Michigan Layman Nominated

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

If the nominations for the moderatorship of the National Council are not closed, may I suggest a Michigan layman for the position who has for many years been an honored Massachusetts layman as well. I refer to Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield of the Michigan Agricultural College, who is this week assembling the rural pastors of the state at Lansing for a two weeks' conference on the practical problems of the rural pastor. President Butterfield and his staff are making it easy and profitable for these hard-working, meagerly paid men and their wives to come together on the beautiful campus of Michigan's second greatest institution of learning. President Butterfield has for years been and is a member now of the National Council, and has done notable work on its Social Service Commission, with special reference to the opportunities and duties of the rural church, to which class the larger number of our Congregational churches belong. If this is the year for a Western layman, President Butterfield fits into the picture as no other man mentioned can. Of Congregational heritage and training, progressive without fanaticism, and familiar with all the problems of administration, this real leader of men, if elected, will be the first man called to that office from the great State of Michigan, which now contains the fifth city of the nation, and is the fifth state Congregationally measured.

Cleveland, O. DAN F. BRADLEY.

When we can do nothing else for those around us we can at least keep from showing them a gloomy countenance. There are faces that throw a shadow wherever they appear, and spread discouragement without speaking a word.—Young Churchman.

WITH THE CHILDREN

The First Baby of the White House

By Frances Margaret Fox

The first baby that ever lived in the White House was little Susanna Adams. Her grandfather, John Adams, was then second President of the United States; his beautiful wife was Susanna's grandmother. She was an orphan, was this little Susanna, who went to live in the White House when she was three years old. Her father was Charles, one of the three dearly beloved sons of John Adams. He was the small boy his mother once described in a letter, as "a sweet little fellow." When he died, the grandfather and grandmother adopted his wee daughter, who cheered their sad hearts with her merry, laughing ways and made their home happier in the President's huge "Palace."

Susanna never forgot something that happened while she lived in the White House. She was about four years old and was still wearing little black dresses because her father died, when Uncle Thomas sent her a doll's tea-set. Susanna's dearest friend was a little girl named Ann Black. Ann came to the White House straightway to play tea-party with the new dishes.

Here, though, is the story exactly as Susanna's granddaughter told it, and as Mrs. Upton gives it to us: "They had real hot water in the tea-pot and real sugar in the sugar-bowl and cream in the cream-jug, and cake in the plates. All went smoothly until my grandmother went out of the room for a few minutes. When she returned, Ann's envy had overcome her friendship, and though she had fled, the china remained—in little bits on the floor. She had smashed it all.

"As toys were more rare and consequently more valuable than now, this incident produced a coolness between the friends which lasted until some one gave Ann an extremely pretty but small wax doll and she invited my grandmother to spend the afternooon with her. My grandmother went, carrying her own doll, and the two little girls played most happily together; while Ann with proud superiority displayed the advantages of her doll, which was wax and could open and shut its eyes. But in one unlucky moment she turned her back, and like a flash the wax head was in my grandmother's mouth and two rows of vindictive little teeth closed through the neck. With a triumphant 'There!' my grandmother put the several parts into Ann's hand and walked out of the house; she always ended the story with, 'And I never was sorry that I bit that doll's head off.'"

And to think that this little four-year-old was an Adams! Even so, as an Adams always told the truth, we are obliged to believe the story.

Usually little Susanna was a sunny-tempered, good, and happy little child; she behaved so well her grandfather was proud of her; naturally he loved her dearly.

When her baby days at the White House were over, little Susanna went to Quincy with Mr. and Mrs. John Adams to live in their old home. In later years, two more Presidents welcomed this same little Susanna to the White House as their guest. One was James Monroe and the other was John Quincy Adams.

On the farm at Quincy, little Susanna lived the days of her joyful childhood. Mrs. John Adams was certainly a delightful grandmother. She kept a bag of ginger-cakes near the top of the cellar steps, which hung so low the children could help themselves.

One reason why John Adams especially approved of the little Susanna was because she was a worker. He didn't like lazy children. In those long-ago days before typewriters were invented, all legal papers had to be copied by hand. Now by dint of continual practice, Susanna, while she was still only a little girl, was a good penman. It was so easy to read her writing that she begged her grandfather to allow her to help him with his copying; so one time when he had much work to do as Commissioner for the American Government because we were having trouble with Holland about fisheries, little Susanna copied thirty foolscap pages for her grandfather. He was so pleased that he ordered a gift made on purpose for her.

It was a gold ring set with twelve big pearls in a circle surrounding a lock of his hair and a lock of her grandmother's hair. When John Adams presented the ring to little Susanna, he said, "This is a reward for your industry." No wonder she treasured the gift all her life and that her daughter and her granddaughter, in their turn, considered the beautiful ring a priceless possession.

In time, Susanna was married at the old home in Quincy and later, in the year 1818, went to live in Washington. As long, though, as Mr. and Mrs. John Adams lived, Susanna and her little daughter Susan often went home to visit.

At the White House, where she had lived as a baby, Susanna was a welcome guest. James Monroe was United States President then and Susanna and his daughter, Miss Maria Monroe, became great friends. Susanna's uncle, John Quincy Adams, was President Monroe's Secretary of State. When Uncle John Quincy became President, the White House doors were again opened wide to admit the lovely Susanna, who, although she was twice married and lived to be ninety years old, will always be remembered as the first White House baby.

(All rights reserved)

The Three Kites

By Charlotte E. Wilder

In the night, while every one in the Bump family was sleeping, the wind began to blow. Mrs. Bump woke and said to herself: "Good. Tomorrow the wash will dry quickly." Mr. Bump thought: "Oh, dear, the dust will blow in my eyes when I drive the car."

But Bobby turned over in bed and nudged Billy. "Did you get the kites out yesterday, Bill?" he whispered. "Just listen to that wind!"

Billy opened his eyes and shut them again quickly. "Yes, I did," he grunted. "Can't you let a fellow sleep?"

Betty didn't hear any of the noise, but she was the first one the next morning to take her kite out of the closet. It was a red, diamond-shaped one with a yellow tail. Right after breakfast, the three of them ran outdoors, past the garden and the plot where Daisy, the goat, was browsing, to the slope behind the barn. And soon the kites were sailing high up in a row, like pennants of green and blue and red.

"I wonder what would happen if one go loose?" said Billy, letting his string out.

"I guess it would go up and up until it go caught on a star," said Betty.

Billy began to laugh. "What a silly idea," he said, and let out some more string. He was not looking at it, but suddenly he felt the end slip through his fingers. He jumped to catch it, but it was already high in the air and the kite was pulling it farther away every moment.

"Oh, dear!" he exclaimed. "I forgot to tie the end to this piece of wood inside."

"Maybe it will come down soon," said Bobby, holding his very tight. But the lost kite was sailing very fast in the high wind and though the children raced after it, they had to stop when they came to a fence and a new-plowed field.

"I'm going back in the yard where the wind isn't so strong," said Bobby. "You can sail mine some of the time." They had hardly been there a minute before the wind dropped suddenly. The kites began to circle and swoop.

"Run, Betty," called Bobby, "or your kite will get caught on the barn!" Betty picked up her heels and ran, but as Bobby started to follow, his kite made a big dip and the string caught on the weather-cock. There it hung, flapping, and though Bobby pulled as hard as he dared, he could not get it loose.

"Let's climb up in the hayloft inside," said Billy, "and try to pull the string from that little window." They all thought that was a good idea, so Betty dropped her kite on the grass and went into the barn with the boys. They tried their best to reach the string, but it was out of reach, so they climbed sadly down again. And then, just as Betty reached the door of the barn, she stopped with a cry. There, on the grass, was Daisy, the goat, eating up the only kite that was left. She was tearing at the red paper with her teeth, and crunching the pieces of wood as though they were delicious little bones.

"Oh, you naughty little thing!" said Betty, beginning to cry. Daisy looked at her in a very surprised way, because she was the pet of the family and was usually allowed to do anything she pleased.

Mr. Bump must have heard the noise, for he came around the corner of the barn, calling, "What's the matter?"

They told him the whole story and he listened, turning over the remains of Betty's kite in his hand. Then he said: "Now just wait a minute. We can fix this one all right, and why don't you boys make some new ones?"

"Can we really?" They had never thought of that, because their other ones had been bought at the store.

"Why, of course," their father answered. "We always made our own when I was a boy. Come along."

They went with him, all talking at once and laughing. Soon they were cutting up paper and tacking long, thin sticks together.

"I think it's just as much fun to make kites as to sail them," said Betty.

Billy stopped hammering, and looked up. "Just the same," he said, "next time I'm going to hold on to mine, and stay away from the barn and—one more thing—lock up that Mrs. Daisy!"

(All rights reserved)

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

In the American Tropics

The Rapidly Growing Church at Coral Gables

By E. L. Hay

Down where the American tropics begin—
Miami, on the lower East Coast of Florida
-where the southbound visitor first sees the coanut palm, the Caribbean pine, and the yal palm in their native splendor, there has

Recently Erected Church Home at Coral Gables

ecently been dedicated the new house of wor-ip of First Church of Christ, Congregational, Coral Gables.

Here on the mainland of the United States as been built a community that is totally difrent from the other cities of the country.
ith its happy blue skies, brilliant golden sun-ght, and vivid colorings of tropic verdure, iami—the American tropics—has called for chitecture that reflects the charm of the ackground. One of the most graceful achieve-ents in this Old-World architecture is the new ilding of the Coral Gables Church, designed y Richard Kiehnel, of the firm of Kiehnel and lliott.

In its lines, coloring, and massed effects this lifice is reminiscent of the missions built cen-ries ago in the New World by the pioneer panish monks. There is a warm beauty exressed throughout the building that is at once iendly and persuasive. There is grandeur in ie ornate belfry tower, with its tall columns nd arches and small grille balconies.

Below the belfry tower colorful roofs of panish tile slope leisurely to quaint over-anging eaves. The main portal of the hurch is graced by massive stone ornamentaion, surmounted by a small arch and flanked y two wrought-iron Spanish lamps, whose elicate traceries of metal resemble the black ace of mantillas.

The Beautiful Interior

Once within the portal of this church, the isitor is immediately led further by the re-oseful beauty of the interior. Here, one feels, is a place of serene happiness and spiritual satisfaction. Its harmony and beauty lead the mind from the hurly-burly confusion of this speeded-up civilization to the superior, balanced peace that comes from the contemplation of beauty.

Through the decorative wooden grille, immediately inside the entrance, the eye views an ample auditorium with a series of Roman arches extending leisurely towards the pulpit, which is set beneath a vaulted dome. These graceful arches and columns separate the two side ambulatories from the main body of the auditorium.

Large Cuban tiles, set in black and white mosaic design, compose the floor of the church. The pews are quaintly fashioned in cypress and have a most venerable appearance, achieved by a special treatment of the wood's surface.

Dominating the whole auditorium is the heavy-timbered ceiling of "pecky" cypress, with large cross-beam structure, fastened at the junction angles of the beams by massive decorative steel plates. A characteristic Spanish detail of the interior is the polychrome designs, in vivid colorings, painted on the cross-timbers of the ceiling and on the spindles of the wooden grilles.

Throughout the interior an interesting Christian symbolism is expressed in many details of decoration, from the trinity groupings of floor tiles and windows to the antique Spanish light fixtures. Large chandeliers of wrought-iron, fashioned in the circular, ornate design of a crown, have been suspended from the huge timbers overhead—ever present suggestions of the spiritual crown of light. The wall brackets are Spanish lanterns, wrought in iron, of antique design, each with a small cross surmounting the entire lovely pattern.

Sloping rafters and beams form the ceilings of the wide ambulatories, which serve as side aisles for the main body of the auditorium.

Three-paneled, arched windows, in groups of three, occupy the most of the space of the side walls. The panes of the windows are of a mellow golden tint.

Probably the most unusual feature of this new structure is the provision for an outdoor auditorium. At the rear of the church is a quaint monastic cloister whose arches look outward upon an ample Spanish patio and garden, capable of accommodating a couple of thousand people. Facing this patio are a raised pulpit, an organ console, and a choir loft of ornamental stone. By this strategic arrangement the church organ can be used for both outdoor and indoor services.

Landscaping of this patio and garden is now being accomplished by the artists who have supervised the entire artistic growth of Coral Gables. Within a few brief months, it is expected, this garden and the grounds surrounding the house of worship will be an enchanting place of rich tropic foliage and floral color.

Shrubs, trees, ferns, and flowers attain maturity in this sun-drenched climate and prodigal soil with amazing rapidity.

Church Less Than Two Years Old

Less than two years old, the Coral Gables Congregational Church has had a most interesting history and surprising achievements. Since its organization on Dec. 19, 1923, the church has secured its permanent pastor, Rev. Thomas B. Powell, and has acquired its handsome new home and a cosy parsonage, located a block away from the church.

Dr. Luman H. Royce, Director of City Work of the Congregational Extension Boards, effected the organization of the Coral Gables body in December, 1923, and served temporarily as pastor. December 30, 1923, was the date of the first service and on the 17th of the following February the first Communion was administered. At this time the services and church meetings were held in the living room of the temporary parsonage which had been loaned the church by George E. Merrick, owner and developer of the suburb.

On Oct. 3, 1924, Mr. Merrick deeded to the church the site where the present beautiful house of worship stands. From April, 1924, until December, Rev. Orvis T. Anderson, pastor-at-large for the Congregational fellowship in Florida, served as stated supply. On March 11, 1924, an ecclesiastical council of the Congregational Churches recognized the young church and admitted it officially into the fellowship. The church was incorporated Aug. 27, 1924, as Coral Gables Congregational Church.

A Small but Progressive Group

Though small in numbers the membership of the young church was particularly active. There were many details of organization to be carried out, in addition to the establishing of the regular routine of church work. Within a brief time after the securing of the church property, the trustees were authorized to break ground and on Nov. 2, 1924, the special ceremonies for the laying of the corner stone were observed.

Rev. Thomas B. Powell

In January of this year the church invited Rev. Thomas B. Powell to visit Coral Gables

(Continued on page 154)

Burroughs

Only Burroughs Bookkeeping Machines Can Give You All These Advantages

1 Simplicity—No trained operator is needed. Anyone who can read can post ledgers with a Burroughs Automatic Bookkeeping Machine.

2 Absolute Accuracy—The machine handles more than 75% of the work automatically. The proof method is 100% accurate and checks the accuracy of the operator, as well as the machine.

3 Speed—All ciphers and punctuation are printed automatically—two or more keys may be depressed at one time—entering amounts on the Burroughs visible keyboard is like writing amounts in the ledger with which you are acquainted. These are only a few of the features that make Burroughs the speediest bookkeeping machine.

4 Economy—More than 30 automatic features eliminate a tremendous amount of human labor—thereby saving time and money.

5 All tabulation is 100% automatic. Whenever the machine prints an amount, the carriage automatically tabulates to the next printing position.

6 All dates are printed automatically. The date is set up in the morning and repeats automatically all day long.

7 Folio numbers, descriptive characters, dates and all symbols are printed in red.

8 Debit postings, credit postings, debit balances, credit balances and closed accounts are automatically designated on carbons as well as originals.

9 There is no copying of balances. They are printed automatically by depressing the total key.

10 Statement, ledger and proof—all originals—can be made in one operation.

11 Or statements may be made separately at the end of the month, if desired.

Today more than 85% of the bank ledgers in the United States are posted on Burroughs Automatic Bookkeeping Machines, and thousands and thousands of commercial concerns are finding them a positive way to decrease bookkeeping costs and increase profits. For all kinds of ledger posting, statement writing and stock record work Burroughs machines are preferred by financial, industrial and retail concerns everywhere.

Why not have a Burroughs man demonstrate the new Burroughs Automatic Bookkeeping Machine to you on your own work in your own office? Without assuming any obligation you can learn how this machine will help you to make more money.

If you live in one of the more than 200 cities in the United States where Burroughs offices are located, call Burroughs. Otherwise, your banker will give you the address of the nearest office, or, if you prefer, mail the coupon.

BURROUGHS ADDING MACHINE COMPANY
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

Factories at Detroit, Michigan; Windsor, Ontario and Nottingham, England

Sales and Service Offices in all the Principal Cities of the World

Burroughs Adding Machine Co.,
6100 Second Blvd.,
Detroit, Michigan

Please send me further information about the Burroughs Automatic Bookkeeping Machine.

Name ----------

Business ----------

Address ----------

Adding Machines
Bookkeeping
Machines
There's a Burroughs
for every figure job in every business
Calculating Machines
Billing
Machines

(Continued from page 151)

in connection with a visit to Florida under the auspices of the Church Extension Boards. Mr. Powell was at that time pastor of the First Congregational Church of East Orange, N. J. While here he accepted the invitation to become the permanent pastor, and the following month moved his family and household goods from New Jersey to the American tropics.

He began his Florida pastorate on March 1 of this year. Two weeks later, on Sunday, the 15th, the first public worship was held in the new house of worship, and on April 5, Palm Sunday, special dedicatory exercises were observed, in which eminent pastors of the Congregational fellowship participated, including Dr. L. H. Royce, organizer of the church, and Dr. J. R. Smith of New York, Secretary of the Congregational Church Building Society. The dedicatory address was delivered by Dr. Smith; the act of dedication was conducted by Mr. Powell.

One interesting detail of the dedication ceremonies was the baptism of an infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard Webb Edwards, who were the first couple married in the Coral Gables Church in December, 1923. During his incumbency as organizer and temporary pastor, Dr. Royce had performed the wedding ceremony, and Mr. Powell thought it quite fitting that he should also perform the first baptism of the church for this first-born of that alliance.

The Minister of Coral Gables

A brief mention might here be made of the man who is now guiding the Coral Gables Church toward its ultimate destiny. During his pastorate in New Jersey, Mr. Powell made many friends and attained eminence in ecclesiastical circles, notably as President of the Congregational Ministerial Association of the Metropolitan area, and as a member of the Executive Committee of the Congregational Extension Societies.

He is a graduate of Bucknell, '06, following which he matriculated in Yale University and received his Bachelor of Divinity degree in 1909. While a student at Yale, Mr. Powell distinguished himself by winning the much-desired Mersick prize for oratory. His first pastorate was Center Church, Meriden, Ct., where he served for seven years. He was called to East Orange and there, too, served for seven years. Accompanying him to his new pastorate are Mrs. Powell and their three children, Dorothea Saunders, Priscilla, and Thomas B., Jr.

Mr. Powell is keenly interested in his new service and in the unusual possibilities for developing and expanding the influence of the young church. Equally pleased are the congregation in securing his services, for he is eminently qualified, by reason of his experience, youth, and proven ability, to foster the church through its most promising and happy future.

It is of happy significance that the Community Church of Coral Gables has started so auspiciously to make history and to become immediately such an amiable and loving force in the life of man here.

Of profounder significance is the fact that this huge, lovely suburb of Coral Gables, sometimes called Miami Riviera, is the outgrowth of land purchased thirty years ago by a pioneer Congregational minister, Rev. Solomon G. Merrick, father of George E. Merrick, the man who has carried forward magnificently his father's dreams of establishing here a community of beauty, culture, and genuine neighborly happiness. The original Merrick farm was a tract of 160 acres. Within the last four years this has been expanded to 10,000 acres, embracing some of the most handsome homes and estates in the entire Miami district. Rev. Solomon G. Merrick was the first pastor of the Congregational Church of Coconut Grove, a township near Coral Gables, which church might be considered the spiritual forbear of this young church.

THE PILGRIM HYMNAL
"The best hymn book in America"
Sample copy on request
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston
156 5th Ave. New York
19 S. LaSalle St Chicago

From West to East

WASHINGTON

Triangular Exchange in Seattle

By way of commemorating the successful outcome of 20 years of effort to unite the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Congregational Churches of Canada, three Seattle ministers, one from each of the three denominations involved, exchanged pulpits, Sunday, June 28. Dr. Arch Tremayne, of Pilgrim Congregational, preached a commemorative sermon in the Woodland Park Presbyterian Church; Rev. W. W. MacHenry, pastor of this Presbyterian Church, preached at the Woodland Park Methodist Church, while the pastor of this Methodist Church, Rev. F. L. Pederson, preached at Pilgrim Congregational. On this same Sunday, in this same city, on the eve of the Northern Baptist Convention here, one faction of this great Christian body, known as "extreme Fundamentalists," were firmly entrenched in the First Presbyterian Church, occupying the pulpit morning, afternoon, and evening, vehemently propounding their interpretations of the Scriptures, and severely criticizing all who differ from their viewpoint, and this while their brethren were holding a preliminary meeting to the Convention in the First Baptist Church. Which of these, think you, the three pastors who presented the triangular exchange, or the militant "Fundamentalists," best interpreted to the world the teachings and spirit of Him who taught his disciples to pray, "Thy Kingdom Come," and who Himself was heard to pray "that they all may be one"? C. R. G.

CALIFORNIA

Big Creek Community Church

On the last Sunday in May, Supt. W. J. Minchin visited Big Creek, addressing a largely attended service in the Moose Hall, where Dr. L. A. Stark installed and commissioned the officials of a new organization known as the Big Creek Community Church. The charter list of the new church was composed of 77

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.
THE LESLIE
A quiet, cosy little House by the sea. Now open. Private baths. Descriptive booklet. 21st season.

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

CAMPS AND VACATION PLACES

Elmlawn, Woodstock, Ct. Ideal place for a vacation in an old, beautiful, and historic New England town. Near Woodstock Lake and golf links. Modern conveniences. Rates reasonable. Address Mrs. Louise L. Child.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, homelike rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

Best place for vacation, mountains, New Hampshire, 100 miles from Boston. Board or rent bungalow. Moderate rates. Howard Brown, Alstead, N. H.

Boarders wanted on farm. All modern conveniences. Splendid lake, swimming. Best of cooking. Accommodations for family all summer. Mrs. John E. Aldrich, R. D. 2, Putnam, Ct.

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., in the vicinity of the White Mountains. We offer the comforts and conveniences needed for a successful vacation and rest. No hay fever. Lower rates to those who come in June and July. Booklet. A. J. Newman, Prop.

HELP WANTED

Lincoln Institute of Kentucky, child of Berea College, only well equipped colored Normal and Industrial School in the state, beautifully located 22 miles east of Louisville, undenominational but deeply religious, needs a teacher of Bible and English, also a teacher of English. Mature white woman preferred. $600 and living for 36 weeks a year. Few incidental expenses. Large opportunity for service. Fall term opens Sept. 30. Address Rev. A. Eugene Thomson, Lincoln Ridge, Ky.

Wanted—Strong young woman, able to drive car, to become member of family of four in Brookline the last of September. Chief duty will be to take to and from school boy of 13 who has difficulty in walking. Write to Dr. David N. Blakely, 87 Milk St., Boston.

Wanted, Sept. 1, young man assistant for social and religious work with boys and young men. Address C. F. Hersey, New Bedford, Mass.

PASTORATE WANTED

Progressive pastor wishes to communicate with a church seeking spiritual leadership. Address "Y. Z.," Congregationalist.

POSITION WANTED

Companion Secretary or Companion Attendant by middle-aged woman. References exchanged. "A. A. M.," Congregationalist.

Organist and choir director desires position in Michigan. W. J. S., 313 South Fourth Ave., Ann Arbor, Mich.

SUPPLY PASTOR

Congregational minister spending vacation in Boston would supply few Sundays in August. "B. L. H.," Congregationalist.

TEACHERS WANTED

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

MISCELLANEOUS

Wellesley, Mass.—Cool, desirable rooms, new house near college. Quiet location close to square and R. R. station. Private family. References exchanged. 6 Wiswall Circle. Tel. Wellesley 1083-M.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wastleless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

MINISTERS—Have you books you no longer need? If so, why not try an ad in our classified columns in an effort to dispose of them? Some other pastor may want to purchase them.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

names. This remarkable piece of work has been done in three months' time in a community that has been in existence for a decade or more without a church or leadership. The California Home Missionary Society accepted the challenge of work in a camp that has no permanent prospects but has a population of 1,000 or 1,200 people who need ministry. It has meant a heavy initial expenditure but has already proven to be a rewarding venture.

Association Helps Celebrate Antioch Anniversary

Combining the 60th anniversary of ANTIOCH with the spring meeting of the Upper Bay Association, an unusually fine celebration was held the latter part of May. Organized just following the Civil War the Antioch Church has faced the joys and sorrows of changing population and industry, yet comes to its 60th anniversary with its physical equipment so restored that it had the appearance of a new house of worship. The program of the Upper Bay Association was regarded as one of the best held in that association and the evening program was in recognition of the anniversary and in appreciation of the improvements. Prof. F. W. Hodgdon of the Pacific School of Religion and Rev. H. V. White of Stockton, together with the conference superintendent, were the visiting speakers. At noon the delegates and friends were all entertained at the home of Mrs. Beede and the evening dinner was served in the dining room of the church.

The pastor, Rev. G. S. Brett, has been with the church three and one-half years, and during that time has helped straighten out a bad legal tangle that has impaired the title for years. Following that he led the church in its work of restoration and refurnishing until both church and parsonage are spick and span in appearance and fitted for the great task of ministering to the community.

NEBRASKA

Congregational Rally at Sutton

The second annual Rally of the Congregational Churches of Central Nebraska was held at Sutton, Sunday, June 21. There were fully 1,000 present representing 15 churches. The morning worship consisted of two simultaneous services, one for young people and adults addressed by Rev. Harold Cooper, pastor of the Crete Church, and the other was a junior church, conducted by Rev. O. M. Adams, Director of Religious Education of First Plymouth, Lincoln.

In the afternoon, for the first hour and a half, the people met in three sections. The men met in the Park Pavilion under the leadership of Supt. W. A. Tyler; the women in the Methodist Church under the leadership of Rev. Ada S. Anderson, State President of the W. C. M. I., and the young people in the Congregational Church under the leadership of Dr. F. G. Murphy and Howard Anderson. Each group discussed the work of the church from its vantage point. Following the sectional meetings, they all assembled in the pavilion for the vesper service which was addressed by Rev. A. G. Heyhoe of Doane College, Moderator of the Nebraska State Conference.

Rev. N. J. Breed of Hastings, who is father of the rally idea, was in general charge. The following officers were chosen for the next rally: President, Rev. Harold Cooper, Crete; Vice-President, Rev. A. E. Bashford, Exeter; Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. A. W. Clark, Sutton; and in addition a committee of pastors and laymen were chosen to co-operate with them.

The gathering is valuable mainly for its added fellowship and greater inspiration.

C. G. M.

IOWA

Semi-Centennial at Hartwick

The last Sunday in May witnessed an occasion of unusual interest in the fine rural community of Hartwick. The church reached the half century milestone and that event was of sufficient importance to assemble a great multitude of people who filled the church building in three separate services—morning, afternoon, and evening.

The church was founded by men who had the sacrificial spirit. From the beginning the community has sustained it with genuine devotion to religion. During these 50 years it has been served by 25 different pastors, many of whom were furnished by Grinnell College during their student days, and now occupy prominent positions. In spite of these biennial changes in leadership the church has prospered, and is today a vigorous community organization with a great host of young people and an expansive parish of wide outreach. An interesting feature of the celebration was the presence of six charter members and an equal number of former pastors. Of the latter were Robert Lavender and W. E. Sauerman who served the church in pioneer days. Leaders of a later day who shared in this anniversary were Rev. J. E. Nyhan of Moline, Ill.; Rev. N. W. Wehrhan of Grinnell, Ia., and Rev. H. H. Pittman of Springfield, Ill. These visiting clergymen all brought their splendid messages which were a challenge to the church to enter into a great future out of a great past. The present pastor, Rev. A. T. Eldridge, is rendering most acceptable service. P. A. J.

Rockford College for Women

Founded in 1847 for Modern Women

A COLLEGE of distinguished graduates, fine traditions and high standards of Christian scholarship. Chartered as college with Beloit by Congregationalists, February 25, 1847. A.B., B.S., and A.M. degrees. Majors in Education, Art, Social Service, Home Economics, Music and Secretarial studies. A campus of wooded acres on Rock River, 88 miles from Chicago. All girls participate in athletics. An intimate college with many student activities.

Write for catalog and book of views.

Wm. A. Maddox, Ph.D., Pres., Box C, Rockford, Illinois

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

HARTFORD

W. Douglas Mackenzie
President

Theological Seminary
Dean, M. W. Jacobus

School of Religious Education
Dean, E. H. Knight

Kennedy School of Missions
Dean, E. W. Capen

Through these associated schools Hartford offers full training for:
1. The Christian ministry.
2. Religious education and social service.
3. The foreign field.

Each school has its independent faculty and its own institutional life, and together they form one interdenominational institution with the unity of common aim and spirit.

HARTFORD SEMINARY FOUNDATION, HARTFORD, Conn.

ROGER W. BABSON

Says: "I was delighted to go over The Chicago Theological Seminary's Dormitory, which seems to me to be 100 per cent. in every respect. It certainly should be a real factor in building up better fundamental political, business, and social conditions, for which the country is in such need at the present time. I wish every business man could know and see the constructive and very important work which The Chicago Theological Seminary is doing." May we send you further information?

OZORA S. DAVIS, President,
5757 University Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA
Sixtieth Year Opens August 17, 1925
Prepares men and women for
The Pastorate — Social Service
Religious Education — Foreign Service
Research
Practical Instruction. Opportunities for Self-Support.
Facilities of University of California.
Graduate Degrees. Faculty of Ten.
Modern and Commodious Buildings under Construction.
COME TO CALIFORNIA TO STUDY
HERMAN F. SWARTZ, President

Milwaukee-Downer College
Milwaukee, Wisconsin
A standard College for women.
Full four-year courses leading to B.A. and B.S. degrees. Academic programs, Home Economics, Music, Art.
MISS LUCIA R. BRIGGS, President
For catalogue address the Registrar

Bangor Theological Seminary
The 110th year opens Sept. 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor, Maine.

GRINNELL
A College of Liberal Arts for Men and Women.
Applications for admission in September, 1925, are now being received.
An illustrated booklet will be sent on request.
Address:
Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, (Dept. C.)

ILLINOIS

Rededication Service at Pacific, Chicago

PACIFIC, CHICAGO, held a rededication service on Sunday, May 17, to inaugurate, by the complete rehabilitation of the church building, the new era which has been ushered in. Dr. J. A. Jenkins of Union Theological College preached at the morning service and Dr. John R. Nichols of the City Missionary Society was at the evening service, which was a union of the Warren Avenue Church and the Pacific congregations. Warren Avenue Church has gone into advisory relationship with Pacific, nominating two members of the church to be members of the Board of Directors of the latter. The church building has been recently decorated throughout and is taking on new life. Rev. J. M. Stevens of Peoria, who was pastor of the church from 1900 to 1907, was present at the homecoming on Tuesday night, May 19, to which all former members of the church were invited. Rev. W. A. Briggs is pastor of Pacific Church.

Gift to Pastor of Rogers Park, Chicago

A few weeks ago the people of ROGERS PARK, CHICAGO, presented their minister, Rev. W. W. Patton, with a new Nash Sedan automobile for his professional work and his family's personal pleasure. A group of the young married people in the church proposed the gift, and immediately received the hearty endorsement of the trustees and the generous support of the parish for the project. With the gift goes insurance for one year.

The church this summer is also remodeling two rooms in its parish house into fine, attractive studies for Mr. Patton and the assistant minister, Rev. J. D. Hoy. Their studies adjoin each other, and will be connected by telephone on a switch board in the present church office with the office itself and with the outside world. These improvements will give one more bedroom in the parsonage, where Mr. Patton's present study is located.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

The acid test of public interest in radio religious services will come with the invention of a receiving set that will receive the offering.

MICHIGAN

Notes of Progress at Port Huron

PORT HURON, Rev. Jonathan Turner, pastor, had six accessions at the last Communion, four men and two women, making 58 since the first of the year.

A series of morning sermons (preparatory) was presented on the general theme, "Selling the Bigger Idea of the Church": (1) "Its Inner Beauty and Meaning," (2) "Its Work of Broadcasting," (3) "Its Main Message, Man is More than a Machine Merely."

A weekly luncheon down town of the Men's Club has been an interesting and profitable experiment here.

A new church history and manual with roster of membership is being printed.

The Church School has just had its summer Christmas Tree, and sent their boxes to China.

Boulevard, Detroit, to Build

BOULEVARD, DETROIT, has broken ground for a new building, to cost around $100,000. Last year 107 new members were received, making a total membership of 550. About 650 are now enrolled in the Church School. Rev. F. C. Ellis is pastor.

OHIO

Tallmadge's Anniversary

FIRST, TALLMADGE, is preparing to celebrate the centennial anniversary of the opening of this historic church. It was on Sept. 8, 1825, that this church edifice was dedicated: and it is now one of the oldest, if not the oldest, building now in use for religious purposes in the state. Arrangements are in hand for an extensive celebration of this interesting event, consisting of special sermons on Sept. 6; historic addresses, community dinners, and a pageant on Sept. 7 and 8.

In preparation for the centenary the church is redecorating the building, inside and out, at a cost of about $1,500. Rev. W. H. Morton is minister of First Church.

PENNSYLVANIA

Randolph Centenary

RANDOLPH, GUYS MILLS, will hold its centenary and homecoming, Aug. 9-12. This church was founded by the early settlers, many of them the best pioneer stock of Western Pennsylvania, and has had an unbroken history ever since. At one time Randolph was one of the strongest churches in the county and enrolled many well-known families. John Brown of Harper's Ferry tradition once attended that church and the ruins of his old tannery still remain a few miles away.

The program will be a four-day treat, avoiding everything cut-and-dried and leaving the way open to use any of the old pastors or numerous visitors who are present. The centennial is the consummation of a four years' pastorate under Rev. W. S. Percy, during which the church and Sunday School have prospered and feel a corresponding inspiration to make this event a noteworthy success. It is hoped that ex-pastors and friends will attend the celebration.

Slovanic Choir Wins Approval

The choir of SLOVANIC, PITTSBURGH, is rendering splendid service. Not only was their singing at the State Conference much appreciated, but at the Christian Endeavor Spring Rally they received second prize.

NEW JERSEY

Building Improvements at Jersey City

Since the coming of Rev. R. H. Davidson to WAVERLY HEIGHTS, JERSEY CITY, last December, extensive improvements have been made on both the interior and exterior of the church building.

Rutherford's Annual Meeting

The first annual meeting of RUTHERFORD since the coming of Rev. N. W. Pendleton was held in June. Some of the outstanding features of the year were: 101 new members received into the church; the completion of the new church and community center; the local budget well taken care of; installation of bowling alleys, pool tables, etc., by the Men's Club; over 100 per cent. increase in attendance at the Sunday morning service.

CONNECTICUT

Ordination of Paul A. Cullens

Early in June, a council of the Naugatuck Valley Association of Ministers was called by FIRST, WATERBURY, to ordain Paul A. Cullens, recently graduated from the Harvard Theological School.

Mr. Cullens' father, a graduate of Bangor in 1898, was a Congregational minister serving for the most part rural churches, so the candidate spent his early days in the country parsonage. His schooling was of necessity varied. He attended Pittsfield and Groveland High Schools and then Mt. Hermon, all situated in Massachusetts. He took his undergraduate and graduate work in Harvard University. It was not till his senior year in college that he decided to become a minister, and graduated this year as a member of the first class since

Church Furniture
Pews · Pulpits · Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
Dept. D.
CHICAGO 14 E. Jackson Blvd.
BOSTON 69 Canal St.

CHURCH WINDOWS AND MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS BRONZE AND MARBLE
SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
Jacoby Art Glass Company
Dept. 54 2700-54 Vincent Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

ESTEY
PIPE AND REED ORGANS
Estey Organ Co.
Brattleboro Vermont

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND 220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

CHURCH FURNITURE
Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1114 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

Church
EMBROIDERIES, ALTAR LINENS PULPIT GOWNS, CLERGY AND CHOIR VESTMENTS, CLERICAL CLOTHING Estimates on Request
J. M. HALL, Inc.
9 East 35th St., New York
Tel. Caledonia 8648

Pulpit Gowns
and Choir Vestments
CUSTOM TAILORING
FOR CLERGYMEN
Pulpit Hangings & Bookmarkers
Cox Sons & Vining
131-133 E. 23rd Street, New York

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
79 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them.
Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B.

e amalgamation of Harvard Divinity School
d Andover Theological Seminary.
The ordination service was most impressive,
pecially since a minister of 87 years, Rev.
L. R. Wyckoff of Woodbury, Ct., gave the ht hand of fellowship, and Rev. Archibald llens, the young man's father, gave the or-ining prayer.
Rev. H. D. Gallaudet of First, Waterbury, ve the charge to the candidate, Dr. C. A.
nsmore of Yale the charge to the people, d Dr. S. K. Tompkins of Boston, with whom e candidate has been doing student work dur-
g the last two years, preached the sermon.

RHODE ISLAND

ntral Falls Young Women Go to China

CENTRAL FALLS, Rev. J. D. Dingwell, pas-
, is located in a district into which people various nationalities have come. The church s shown a spirit of helpfulness by keeping en door and by maintaining a civic forum.
e pastor has written and staged community geants. For two years the church has met full its apportionment for benevolences.
Last month it sent from the wonderful Chris-n home of Robert Cushman (of Mayflower scent) two fine daughters, Misses Elizabeth ster and Mary Bradford Cushman, as misnaries to China under the American Board.
large audience on Sunday, June 21, with all e Pawtucket pastors present gave an enthusitic farewell.
Dr. D. Brewer Eddy, associate secretary of e American Board, gave a stirring charge to ese young women whose enthusiasm for their w work was an inspiration to the large thering who witnessed the service of recogni-
n. One hundred and fifty young women gave Pledge of Devotion, expressing to these young lleagues their allegiance through "thought," rayers," and "love," as well as through ancial backing.

v. A. W. Bailey Leaves Pawtucket

The educational pastor of FIRST, PAW-CKET, Rev. Arthur W. Bailey, has closed a o years' service with that church. The reso-ions adopted by the church appreciate his al, earnest ministry in advancing the edu-tional life of the church and school and his luable contribution to the young people. The miration and appreciation of his faithful fe for her tireless service and hospitality are pecially stressed. Mr. Bailey is now resid-g at East Dennis, Mass., where he plans to end a year in study.

re Damage at River Point

The church house of RIVER POINT, Rev. W.
Leonard, pastor, on Sunday afternoon, June
, was visited by one of those strange, mysteous fires beginning in the loft of its vestry.
hrough water, smoke, and blaze the vestry as a bad loss and the auditorium was dam-
ed. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

OCEAN GROVE NEW JERSEY

The famous sea-shore and camp-meeting resort of America has ordered many thousands of our new hymn book for this season.

Hymns of the Living Gospel, No. 3

Nothing like it. Hymns for the Church—80 of them; Gospel songs—30 new and 54 best known favorites; Invitation Hymns; Responsive Readings; Worship Services for Sabbath Schools prepared by REV. E. H. BONSALL, JR., Sup't Young People's Division, Pennsylvania State S. S. Association. High-grade but not expensive, $15.00 the hundred. Send for returnable sample.

HALL-MACK CO., 21st and Arch Sts., Philadelphia

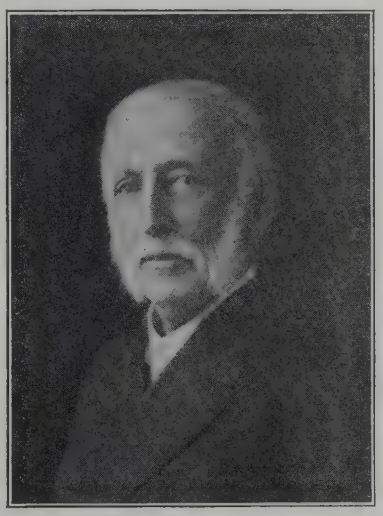
MASSACHUSETTS

Splendid Service as a Union Church

Congregationalism united with the union idea when 34 years ago Rev. W. J. Batt, for many years chaplain of the Massachusetts Reformatory, inspired the formation of the West Concord Union Church, one of the earliest community churches in the state. On July 2 Mr. Batt, assisted by the present pastor, Rev. A. W. Stone, and a former pastor, Rev. S. N. Adams, of Chester, N. H., burned the mortgage on the second church edifice which was built to accommodate the growing church 15 years ago.

The church has now 355 members, 279 having been added during the present pastorate. The financial growth has also been marked, the annual receipts having increased 100 per cent. during the past nine years.

The church property, including the recently purchased adjacent parsonage, is now valued at $60,000. In addition to the carefully graded



REV. WILLIAM J. BATT
Pastor Emeritus

Church School of 250 members, some 12 organizations are affiliated with the church, several of community scope.

Congregational in its origin and ministry, the church frankly accepts the more inclusive union idea. In these days when the merging of denominationalism into a common sense of oneness in Christianity in Canadian church

REV. ALFRED WHEELER STONE
Present Pastor

unity is causing wonder and rejoicing, may we not give recognition to a body which achieved this end over a quarter of a century ago? Liberal and Fundamentalist unite in common worship. The increasing benevolences are given largely to non- and interdenominational projects. With forgetfulness of denomination and remembrance of the common bonds of spiritual unity in Christ, may it not be that the spirit of this Union Church indicates the key to the answer to the prayer of our Lord, "that they all may be one," among and within denominations and among all the peoples of the earth.

WEST CONCORD UNION CHURCH, CONCORD

Going to Portland, Oregon

Rev. John Vaananen has resigned from MAYNARD, where he has faithfully ministered to his people for more than 15 years. Finnish, Portland, Ore., has called him to become their minister, and Mr. Vaananen is going to be in his new pastorate by Oct. 1.

West Gloucester Christenings

Rev. C. G. Fogg, pastor of WEST GLOUCESTER, on June 21 baptized 14 children at the parsonage, later baptizing three children at

(Continued on page 159)

FIRST MORTGAGES and REAL ESTATE BONDS

Interest 7% Semi-Annually

On Improved Income Florida Real Estate

Loans confined to Tampa and South Florida

Principal and Interest Guaranteed

Write for booklet and information

GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

The Fisk Teachers' Agencies
120 Boylston St., Boston 225 Fifth Ave., N. Y.
Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Birmingham, Chicago, Kansas City, Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles. Everett O. Fisk & Co.

Offering Envelopes
For all purposes. Prompt Service
Ask For Prices
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston, 156 5th Ave. New York, 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East
Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations
Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service
Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service
Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement
Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work
Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins

Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher
Corresponding Secretaries Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong
Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady, Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Henry Smith Leiper, M.A., Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries
Rev. A. V. Bliss, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York

Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, D.D., Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies and Congregational ministers seeking pastorates. Maintained by the Congregational Conferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Covell Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chairman

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secretary and Missionary Education Secretary
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and Adult Education Secretary
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Secretary
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service, Missionary Education, Student and Young People's Work; aids Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of the denomination for the publication and distribution of The Congregationalist, church school equipment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, teachers magazines, children's and young people's weekly papers, and books for home and church use, with book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Manager
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregationalist
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Congregational House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas. Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIOR, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIFIC, 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W. C. Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec. Sec.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H. H. Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasurer; Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Congregational House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; Rev. John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BOSTON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; C. E. Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Sears Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, a constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trust for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

(Continued from page 157)

ıome, and on June 28 one child at the church. West Gloucester received one member on con-fession on July 5.

The Pastor Says: The man who runs a pop-corn stand nowadays boasts that he is a man of affairs, as contrasted with the theorist and visionary who manages merely a church or a college.

American Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches. Bequests and Annuities are solicited in order that the House may be freed from mortgage indebtedness and the Association thus enabled to furnish our Missionary Organizations with business offices at minimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Rev. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hubbard, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

4 Beacon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816

Home visitation and personal missionary service n connection with our churches. Emergency re-ief. Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contribu-ions and legacies gratefully received and scrupu-ously administered.

William Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. Parker, Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

ncorporated 1829 Boston Reorganized 1922

Seaman's Friend Society, Inc.

This Society, reorganized n 1922, now fully rep-esents the Congregational Churches of New England n its practical, social and eligious work among sea-nen. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover t., Boston, and at Vine-ard Haven, and Reading ooms at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. he Society provides dormitory accommodations, eading and recreation rooms, religious services, ool tables, and games of many kinds, a restau-ant, a canteen, shower baths, postal and bank-ng facilities. Donations and bequests solicited. ontributions received on an annuity basis. Presi-ent, Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., ev. J. Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore . Busfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; reas., Charles F. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. om., Franklin P. Shumway; Office 618 Congre-ational House.

American Seamen's Friend Society

(Incorporated 1833)

The only American undenominational interna-onal and national Society aiding seamen. Maintains a Sailors' Home and Institute at 507 est Street, New York City. Loan libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing om New York. PUBLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00). Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided. SUPPORTED by contributions and legacies. JOHN B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE DNEY WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary. CLARENCE C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 79 Wall St., ew York, to whom contributions may be sent.

American Sunday School Union

iladelphia, Pa. Founded 1817

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and aintains Union Sunday Schools in the outlying ral districts of the country. Publishes and rculates moral and religious literature. Helps l churches of Christ by its pioneer and founda-on work, not duplicated by any other agency. upported by voluntary gifts. Contributions so-ited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. ontributions and communications relative to ork in any part of the country may be sent to e New England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

ADKINS, J. B., Des Moines, Ia., to Eldon. Accepts.

DRAKE, G. B., student pastor, Ames, Ia., to Springfield, Mo. Accepts.

HAMMOND, J. A., Closter, N. J., to Westbrook, Me. Accepts to begin Sept. 15.

LOCKETT, J. J., recently of Southboro, Mass., to North Attleboro. Accepts.

Resignations

LOCKWOOD, D. C., Park, Berkeley, Cal.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
CALIFORNIA
Claremont		13
Los Angeles, Masis	12	63
Pasadena, First		10
FLORIDA
Miami Beach, July 12		21
MASSACHUSETTS
Rutland, June 24	16	20

Events to Come

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

ISLES OF SHOALS CONGREGATIONAL SUMMER CONFERENCE, Star Island, off Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 10-24.

NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H., Aug. 10-17.

Northfield Summer Conferences

GENERAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS, Aug. 1-17.

MASSACHUSETTS CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR INSTITUTE, Aug. 17-24.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Obituary Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

MRS. THOMAS H. HARPER

Mrs. Thomas H. Harper, wife of Dr. Thomas H. Harper, pastor of the Central Congregational Church of Dallas, Tex., passed away June 24, after a most active life in the churches to which she and her husband ministered. She was one of the most lovable of women, a real leader amongst all, having unusual ability and talent. Her singing of gospel songs over the radio gave her a multitude of friends whom she had never seen. Services were held in the Central Church and Dr. A. E. Ricker made the address. The body was taken to Oklahoma City for interment and a service was held in the old Pilgrim Church, where Dr. and Mrs. Harper ministered for fourteen years, Drs. Urch and Sheldon having charge of the service there. The churches were crowded with mourners and the flowers which expressed their love were of the choicest. A memorial service was held in the Westminster Church at Spokane where Dr. and Mrs. Harper ministered for seven years. She leaves her husband, a daughter, Mrs. Helen Carpenter of Los Angeles, and a son, Harold, who are grief-stricken over her departure.

"She being dead, yet speaketh."

MRS. ELIZABETH A. NORTHROP

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Northrop died at her home in Ivoryton, Ct., on May 26, 1925, at the age of 84. She was the daughter of Samuel M. and Harriet H. Comstock.

During her long life she interested herself constantly in the development of community and church activities.

As a charter member of the Ivoryton Congregational Church, the formation of which was due greatly to her, she has done much to make that church a power for good. As a trustee and deaconess she interested herself in the temporalities and the spiritual work of the church. For many years as president of the Home Missionary Society, she not only gave largely of her abundance, but eagerly and persistently endeavored to quicken the interest of the church members in mission work at home and in foreign lands.

She administered a fund left by a deceased sister, Harriet, to which she added largely from her own purse, and thus was able to aid a goodly number of young women in securing an education.

These now living useful lives in this and far-away lands bear witness to the love and wisdom of their benefactress.

Her slender, active figure will become a memory in this community, but the wise and forward looking labor of her long years in this place will serve to stimulate a real zeal for God's work in the lives of those upon whom her mantle falls.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder* and *The Advance

July 30, 1925

Vol. CX No. 31

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook	131
Editorial—Evolution and Life's Goal The Retirement of Dr. Clark	132
From Our Western Editor	135
If I Were a Jew, by Ernest G. Guthrie	136
The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches, by Daniel Evans	138
Not Strength of Granite, by Josephine Johnson	138
A Day at Dayton, by Fred P. Ensminger	139
A Canadian Outlook, by D. L. Ritchie	140
Christian Workers in South America, by Frank K. Sanders	141
The Parable of the River and the Delta	142
An Anthem, by John T. Theodore	142
The Northern Baptist Convention, by Francis C. Stifler	143
A Moment of Insight, by Atwood Cecil Brainard	143
Christian Endeavorers at Portland, Oregon, by Francis E. Clark	144
Home Missions Conference, by Mrs. John Voorhis Holt	144
Principal Dickerson Resigns	145
Our "Camino Real"—For Unity of Administration	145
Our Invalid Parish—Those Larger Minds and Other Worlds	146
Closet and Altar	146
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic	146
The Congregationalist's Bible Class—Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson	147
Among the New Books	148
Our Readers' Forum	149
With the Children—The First Baby of the White House, by Frances Margaret Fox—The Three Kites, by Charlotte E. Wilder	150
News of the Churches	151

Study Courses for Adult Groups

Plan Your Fall and Winter Courses Now

Old Testament Studies

THE OLD TESTAMENT BOOKS, Their Origin and Religious Values for Today G. L. Chamberlin

The purpose of this course is to see, through the reading of large portions of the Old Testament books, in connection with the historical circumstances out of which they came, the progress of the religion of the Hebrews, from its earliest days to its culmination in an adequate foundation upon which Christianity might be built and a literature for all time. 50 cents

THE ORIGIN AND GROWTH of the HEBREW RELIGION H. T. Fowler

A brief yet interesting and authentic text for the complete study of the development of the religion of Israel. Professor Fowler begins with its earliest inception among the primitive Semites and traces the remarkable growth of the Religion of Jehovah through the stages in which Jehovah was considered merely as a tribal deity until the major prophets had come to the realization of Him as a universal God. $1.50

New Testament and Life of Christ

THE FOUR GOSPELS AND THE CHRISTIAN LIFE Walter B. Denny

This book is designed primarily for those who have as yet received little or no instruction regarding historical origins of the Gospels and the historical attitude toward the person of Christ. Presents a thoroughly religious view of Christ and his claims upon men, set against a background of thoroughly modern view of the Gospels (as to origin, date, authorship, etc.) and of the historic Jesus. $1.00

THE ORIGIN AND TEACHING OF THE NEW TESTAMENT BOOKS

Ernest D. Burton and Fred Merrifield

The student is introduced to each of the New Testament books in its historical relation to the persons and times represented in it. No student of the Bible can afford to miss the opportunity which this course gives to see the New Testament period through the eyes of its writers. 50 cents

THE LIFE OF CHRIST

Ernest D. Burton and Shailer Mathews

This is a student's book, scholarly without being heavy, critical without exploiting hazardous theories. One of the best studies on the life of Christ published. $1.75

THIRTY STUDIES ABOUT JESUS

Edward I. Bosworth

Dr. Bosworth takes up the main points in the life and teachings of Jesus. Through the use of questions at the end of each study, he throws new light on the meaning of life and its possibilities. Cloth, 95 cents. Paper, 60 cents.

HOW JESUS MET LIFE QUESTIONS

Harrison S. Elliott

The whole viewpoint of the approach to the life of Jesus is that of considering the issues he met. The student is confronted, not by comment on Scripture passages, but by one searching question after another. Cloth, 65 cents

Christian Fundamentals

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE A CHRISTIAN

Edward I. Bosworth

Straight from the shoulder, Professor Bosworth tells us what that "wonderful way of living" is, which we call being a Christian. Cloth, $1.25

MAKING CHRISTIANITY CHRISTIAN

Frank M. Sheldon

A discussion course on the problem—"What really is essential Christianity?" It bristles in every paragraph with gripping and thought-provoking questions. 20 cents

For Parents' Classes

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP IN THE FAMILY

Millacent P. Yarrow

A discussion course on the complex ethical problems involved in the modern family. 25 cents

THE TRAINING OF CHILDREN IN THE CHRISTIAN FAMILY Luther A. Weigle

"The author interprets the opportunity and functions of the Christian family. He states plainly the perplexities and dangers of the modern home and suggests how to meet them. The child at play, at work, and study is discussed; how to build strong bodies and form right habits; the relation of the child to others, to devotional life and to the church."—The Congregationalist. $1.50

CHILDHOOD AND CHARACTER

Hugh Hartshorne

This book grapples with the fundamental problem of character from the religious point of view, presenting fresh and absorbing first-hand data about real children. Suggestions for study and observation. $2.00

Social Questions

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP AMONG THE NATIONS Jerome Davis and Roy Chamberlin

A discussion course on international relationships which bravely faces controversial issues and evades no question of fundamental importance. What can the Church do toward getting rid of war? This is one of the most pertinent questions facing Christian men and women today. 25 cents

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP IN MODERN INDUSTRY Arthur E. Holt

This course proposes to help groups of men and women to find materials with which to build a common Christian conscience in regard to industrial problems. 25 cents

THE TESTING OF A NATION'S IDEALS

Jeremiah W. Jenks and Charles F. Kent

The religion of the Bible is inseparably connected with its sociology. The great messages of the men of the Bible were called forth by social conditions as well as by the needs of individuals. This book shows that our civic problems of today are closely similar to those in Israel during the period from the Judges to the later Kings. $1.25

Race Problem

AND WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?

An Outline for the Study of Race Relations in America

This course is designed to aid discussion groups and individual readers to understand the nature of the problems involved and, not least, of their own attitudes toward other peoples and races. Single copy, cloth bound, $1.00; paper bound, 75 cents; per dozen, $10.00 and $7.50

CHRISTIANITY AND THE RACE PROBLEM

J. H. Oldham

Considered by many to be the best available study book on the race question. $1.00

Religious Education

THE TEACHING CHURCH

Benjamin S. Winchester and Irwin L. Shaver

Designed to arouse an intelligent interest in religious education on the part of adult members of the church, to set the responsible leaders at work to study carefully their local educational problems, and to lead them to begin the practice of making necessary improvements with systematic regularity and in accord with the highest religious educational standards. Ready September. Price to be announced.

Church History

GREAT MEN OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Williston Walker

In this book the author has departed from the generally dry presentation of the history of the church throughout the centuries, and in a series of brief biographical studies has illustrated the progress of religious thought within a difficult, critical period of the life of the church. It offers thirteen studies of the most important men, from Justin Martyr to Horace Bushnell. $1.50

LANDMARKS IN CHRISTIAN HISTORY

Henry K. Rowe

For convenience this course is divided into four periods: (1) Christianity in the Olden Time; (2) The Great Awakening; (3) Anglo-Saxon Christianity; (4) Christian Expansion in the Nineteenth Century. Pupil's edition, $1.20; Teacher's edition, $1.25

AT YOUR SERVICE

Congregational Publishing Society

(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston

19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 32 August 6, 1925

Happenings in China

The Social Significance of Leisure

By "AL PRIDDY"

America's Largest Congregational Church

By FREDERICK L. FAGLEY

Our Readers' Views and Opinions

Santa Barbara Resurgent

The Death of Mr. Bryan

AN EDITORIAL

With the Approach of September

We realize that the autumn season and the beginning of the church year is near at hand

FROM our reading of the daily newspapers and the weekly and monthly magazines, more than ever before we are impressed with the conviction that the world at large needs the stabilizing influence of the Church and the doctrines of Christian brotherly love. The history of the past few years has left turmoil in almost every nation of the globe — political, economic and social. The next few years are to determine the dwelling-place of our children, their children and the ages to come.

Are we as individuals prepared for intelligent service?

The Christian church faces a tremendous task, and needs the earnest efforts of every one of its members. Both at home and abroad, in all walks of life, its influence must be felt, and to cope successfully with sinister opposition the workers must be trained to the great problems ahead.

The Congregationalist

gives to the people of our denomination instructive and inspirational articles and editorials regarding these problems, carefully outlining the programs of our great leaders, and week by week the news of the progress of the Christian world. No church can afford to be without a large number of subscribers, for it is upon these well-informed people the pastor depends for help. The larger the body, the firmer the grip has that church in its community.

$3.00 per year
$2.75 in Church Clubs

Department of Circulation

14 Beacon Street
BOSTON

19 S. La Salle Street
CHICAGO

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | August 6, 1925 | No. 32

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh — News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D. — Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

Dr. Bridgman to Return to Congregational House

THE announcement that Dr. Howard A. Bridgman will return to the Congregational House in September to succeed Rev. Alfred V. Bliss as District Secretary of the A. M. A. will be welcomed by the fraternity of the Congregational House to whom Dr. Bridgman's genial comradeship made him deeply beloved during his long years of association with The Congregationalist. This appointment also brings to the service of the A. M. A. a conspicuous leader whose knowledge of, and interest in, its work are deep and thorough-going.

Few men, also, know the life of the New England churches more intimately than does Dr. Bridgman, and few, if any, are more acceptable in the pulpits of New England. His coming into this work will be a source of strength alike to the society that he serves and to the whole Congregational fellowship of whose work the A. M. A. is an important part. The A. M. A. has made an excellent choice. Mr. Bliss, as has already been announced, goes to Maine where he assumes the duties of State Superintendent.

Cheer Leaders and Engineers

THAT the need of the times is for social engineers rather than mere social cheer leaders is the dominant note in a review by Glenn Frank, President-elect of the University of Wisconsin, of the observations which, as Editor of the Century magazine, he has made from time to time in its editorial columns on the general outlook for Western civilzation. "Social cheer leaders," says Mr. Frank, "might do a little toward dulling the despair of a new dark ages, but only social engineers can usher in a new renaissance."

Referring to the extensive "literature of despair," produced by those who believe that we are in a disintegrating civilization, Mr. Frank says that the only valid literature of hope can come, not out of mere optimism, but "out of the same fields of research and experience that have inspired the literature of despair."

The main thing I want to emphasize at this point, [Mr. Frank continues] is that while mooning optimists may write a literature that will give us the spirit of hope, only responsible scientists, philosophers, administrators, and authentic spiritual seers can write a literature that will give us the anatomy of hope.

This "literature of hope" he defines as follows:

A literature of hope is a literature that uncovers for us the unused resources of health in our civilization and suggests to us a workable technic for using them. And a realistic literature of hope always warns us against optimism unless we set ourselves manfully at work to harness the forces of health it has pointed out to us.

Goals and Processes of Attainment

WHAT Mr. Frank points out would seem to be axiomatic, a very commonplace of truth concerning hope and progress. But like most commonplaces it needs the most insistent emphasis. The forces of moral purpose and spiritual enlightenment are ineffective today because in the main they are meeting desperate facts and situations with theories and ideals, failing to perceive that the assertion of a high ideal does not by any means imply its realization, and that the practice of an ideal by a few does not necessarily hasten its acceptance by the many. We are laying much emphasis upon social goals, but little emphasis upon social processes. And this is true in relation to almost every problem that is associated with the fundamental matter of the continuance or disintegration of civilization.

Take, for instance, the matter of world peace. World peace depends to some extent upon the establishing of a peace psychology, a hatred of war. But can a peace psychology be developed rapidly or widely until there has been developed a psychology of security? Moreover at the very crux of this matter of security lies the constant menace of nationalism and sectionalism—a nationalism that, strange to say, was helped on by a perversion of American idealism, and a miscarrying of the hopes that were placed upon the freedom implied in "self-determination." This, in itself, is an illustration of the way in which the highest idealism may prove futile, or even disastrous, when it is not related to facts, processes, and possible consequences. Effective idealism must take account of conditions and means of attainment as well as of the desirable goal.

The Matter of Imperialism

OR take the cognate matter of imperialism and expressionism—the relations of stronger to weaker nations, and the racial issues that underlie these relationships. The Christian who believes in brotherhood and service—that the strong should serve the weak and that the worth of men should be recognized regardless of race or color turns with revulsion from the whole program of exploitation with its greedy concession-hunting and its associated and underlying sordidness of political and military ambition and aggression. The whole business is a vile misrepresentation of "Christian" civilization. But it should not be forgotten that it is not altogether a misrepresentation of the civilization that the churches have failed to Christianize. A Christian theory, a Christian conception of life, even individual Christian practice, will not alone remedy this situation. There is a demand for a Christian foreign policy when we have not yet established a Christian home policy. Possibly the demand for the one may help to produce the other—the need of mending our own civilization from the bottom up may be made apparent only as we see its crucial weaknesses shown up in its contact with the East.

But can one believe that the reply to the evils of expansionism and imperialism is found in an anti-imperialism that simply denounces and condemns? The fact is that a Christian imperialism of helpfulness and service must be built up by as patient and elaborate and costly a process as that by which militaristic imperialism has attained power. Only thus can Christian ideals supplant worldly motives of self-interest and ambition. It is useless to consider the goal unless we discover and employ the means of its attainment.

The Clash in the Far East

ONE cannot discuss these matters without having in mind the tragic situation in China. It begins to look as if here, rather than in India or in connection with Japan, the real showdown between East and West is going to come. Here the defects and evils of Western policies of force and aggression are coming to a head, and just because the Chinese have in recent years imbibed more of Western ideas and ideals than any other people in the East they are bound to be the most resentful of foreign aggression in so far as it outrages the ideals of sovereignty and political rights which Chinese students have discovered to be at the very core of Western civilization. As yet this resentment is sporadic, and probably it will prove to be futile in its immediate effect. The chances are that the Chinese themselves will pay, as they have paid heretofore, in loss of life and in exorbitant indemnities, the cost of outbreaks of resentment. But there is an ominous aspect to the whole situation. The student outbreaks may not always be sporadic or disorganized. In the background is Russia—not as yet, according to the best testimony, very deeply involved in the incentives toward the present upheaval, but none the less an influence, and always likely to become a more dominant influence, sinister, unscrupulous, unsettling. The only ultimately effectual barrier against these sinister influences that largely leave out of account both Christian ideals and the closely related ideals of democracy and civil liberty will be a deeper fidelity to these ideals on the part of Western nations in their intercourse with the East.

Events at Canton

HOW finely Christian leaders in China are expressing the Christian outlook and sympathy in the present crisis is evident from the resolutions passed by the faculty of the Canton Christian College which appear elsewhere in this issue. In connection with the events at Canton that called forth these resolutions we have been privileged to see a private letter from a member of the staff of the Christian College. From this we have permission to quote the following vivid account, though the name of the writer must be withheld. The letter says:

It was a sad, sad conclusion for the college year. A sudden interruption of examinations, a rushed Commencement, and a hurried flight of the foreign staff, were all forced upon us by the march of most extraordinary and regrettable events.

It was well known that the critical day would be Tuesday, the 23d, but we had high hopes that it would pass by without any untoward incidents.

Our students and Chinese staff members left the campus during the morning in order to participate in the patriotic parade in Canton. It was destined to be a very large demonstration of Cantonese sympathy for the victims of the Shanghai tragedy, and it was well known that there would be many thousands participating. No members of the foreign staff went into Canton to witness the parade, because there was certain to be considerable anti-foreign feeling among the demonstrators. So far as the Canton Christian College section of the parade was concerned, however, we were confident that all would be orderly.

Until late afternoon, no more thought was given to the affair than an occasional expression of wonder as to its progress. But about four o'clock, my afternoon nap was cut short by the sound of gun-firing from the direction of Canton. And it was not long thereafter that I heard excited student voices, saw a stretcher being brought up the path toward the infirmary, and then, to my utter amazement, saw student after student come straggling into the campus with mud and blood-stained clothes. Upon every face was written consternation and horror. They had been fired upon by the troops on Shameen (the French and British concession), they said, and the number of wounded and killed was still unknown. Their stories were remarkably consistent and were told in most cases without the sharp bitterness which might easily have been expected.

It was a ghastly affair and it took the very heart out of every American on the campus. We were stunned and dazed. It is sickening to think about it even now, and I do not feel like describing the situation. Suffice it to say that before the evening was over we learned that one of the finest Chinese professors and one student had been killed, six students had been wounded, and a number were still missing.

The American staff members remaining on the campus, seventeen in number, unanimously felt that the shooting of the students was absolutely unjustifiable, irrespective of who may have fired the first shot. Accordingly, on the next morning we drew up some strong resolutions to that effect and took all the steps we could to give them wide publicity.

The Shanghai Tragedy

FULLY as deplorable—and apparently as avoidable—seems to have been the tragic outbreak at Shanghai. The Chinese side of the story is that the alleged killing of a Chinese laborer by a Japanese foreman in a Japanese-owned cotton mill occasioned a parade of students in protest. The claim is that as these students, orderly and unarmed, approached the Nanking road they were attacked and beaten by British constables who arrested about 30 student leaders, including two girls. The indignant students followed the party to the police station near which they were fired upon by order of Inspector Everson, when 11 were killed and 17 wounded. Whatever may be the full facts concerning this part of the story, the investigation by British Assessor Whitamore brought out the fact that in all about 44 shots were fired and that the order to fire had been given by Everson about ten seconds after he had warned the crowd to disperse. The Chinese claim that as the shots were heard "the crowd tried to disperse, but the firing continued."

That is a lamentable record, not dissimilar from the horror of General Dyer's action at Amritsar. One does not like to think such action typical of British officers, who in the main have justified their traditional reputation for coolness and efficiency in trying situations, particularly in dealing with mobs and "demonstrations." There can be no doubt that incidents such as this have given a great blow to British prestige not only in the East, but here in America, where there are always those who are interested in developing anti-British sentiment. Not the least unfortunate aspect of the matter is that such incidents tend to bring the whole course and policy of British imperialism under condemnation. We have no interest in defending that course and policy, but it ought to be said that it has not been without certain admirable aspects. The Amritsar incident, for instance, has in many minds wiped out all appreciation of certain high qualities of British administrators and administration in India, as it has blinded many to the sincerity and zeal with which outstanding Liberal British statesmen have set before themselves the task of promoting self-government in India.

The whole field of policy and activity of Western powers in the Far East calls for careful study and discriminating judgment. Also it would seem that situations must be estimated and dealt with according to the facts and not according to preconceived theories. Predominant above all needs, however, is that of good will. America has a profound opportunity in the present crisis, and it looks as if she is well represented in relation to Eastern affairs both in the type of American Christian leaders in China, and in the President who now occupies the White House. We believe that President Coolidge, so far as his personal influence may be exercised, may be depended upon to act with calmness, tolerance, and good judgment.

Two Prayers for the Times

DR. EMRICH calls our attention to two prayers by the late Dr. Jowett, contained in a little booklet, Yet Another Day: A Prayer for Every Day of the Year, published early in the present century by the Revell Co. Though written so long ago few prayers could be more appropriate to the present days of religious questioning and controversy. Dr. Jowett's prayer for July 24 is as follows:

> My Father, may some glimpse of larger truth be given to me today! May I not be contented with yesterday's revelation! May my windows be opened towards the East, that I may catch the dawn of new days and the coming of new light!

and that for April 30:

> God of all grace, I pray for all who mould the opinion of our country. Bless all the editors of our newspapers, and all whose ministry is in the public press. Illuminate their minds, and elevate their lives, that all their writings may be for the glory of their God.

Dr. Peet Returns to America

IF heroes of the Cross were welcomed with the éclat that attends military heroes surely there would have been brass bands and thronged city streets to welcome back to America that great Christian diplomat, Dr. W. W. Peet of Constantinople. Dr. Peet has passed the age of active service in the American Board and he now retires from the post in which partly through his inherent strength of character and partly through the unusual opportunities afforded a man of striking personality and administrative genius he glorified an office that nominally implied merely financial obligations. As Treasurer of the American Board in Constantinople, for over forty years, Dr. Peet stood in unusual relationships of friendship and confidence with missionaries and their families. Upon him devolved in large measure the duty of representing the Board and the missionaries in negotiations with the authorities and in many practical ways. The successive crises due to racial antipathies and massacres, political intrigue and change, international rivalries, and in later years the stress and strain of war, brought Dr. Peet into unofficial privileges and responsibilities more in character with the dignity and pretensions of a plenipotentiary than with the simple rôle of servant of a missionary board. But the power of Dr. Peet lay in the sincerity and simplicity with which he preserved his character of a Christian layman ever willing to bear his burden of service. Power and opportunity came to him because men trusted him. The story of his achievement can never be fully known. We are hopeful that much of the record may be told for Congregationalist readers by Dr. Peet himself, but he admits that for various reasons many of the most interesting revelations are either matters of confidence or matters concerning which it is inadvisable to speak.

Modest, courageous, patient, persistent, and above all a man with the vision of love, and seeking the conquests of love, Dr. Peet retires with the good will and admiration of all who have followed his course. There is hope that his service in the Near East may still continue in counsel, or in other ways, but any continued service will be outside of the official responsibility that he has had under the American Board.

Dr. Peet's retirement has been fittingly recognized, especially by those whom he has most effectually served. The Acting Patriarch of the Armenians in Turkey, Kevork, presented Dr. Peet as he was leaving Constantinople with a beautiful manuscript copy of the Gospels, a rare parchment, finely illuminated, and dating back certainly beyond the eighth century, and probably as far back as the fifth. The address accompanying this gift appears elsewhere in this issue.

The Death of Mr. Bryan

THOUGH death came quietly and silently to Mr. Bryan its circumstances made his passing the dramatic climax of a dramatic career. His sudden emergence to fame and to presidential candidacy in the "Cross of Gold" speech could hardly have occasioned a deeper throb than the news of his death in the very hour of his Fundamentalism triumph and his plans for a further relentless crusade. If Mr. Darrow had been stricken thus suddenly many would have seen in it a direct judgment of the Almighty. They will be apt to see in Mr. Bryan's death either a martyrdom, or the intervention of a kindly Providence.

Probably Mr. Bryan would himself have chosen no better way to die than in the midst of fighting what he deemed the battles of the Lord. In battling the mocking and cynical skepticism of Mr. Darrow he might well regard himself as the champion of righteousness and truth, though many of us have never considered the Ark of God in danger and have thought of Mr. Bryan as more zealous than wisely guided in his efforts to steady it.

The Bible says that "he that believeth shall not make haste." Mr. Bryan's chief defect was that he lacked the calm of deep convictions. He over-estimated the power of agnosticism and infidelity, in exactly the same way as he either under-estimated, or never understood, the power of intelligent, open-minded Christian scholarship and the advantages to true Christianity of the utmost freedom in inquiry and thought. It is a dangerous tendency of the crusader to mistake his conception of a cause for the cause itself, and Mr. Bryan did not escape that danger. In assuming that there could be no valid conception and interpretation of the Bible and of the fundamentals of Christianity other than his own, he weakened his advocacy of religion and did grave injustice to many of his fellowmen whose love of the Bible and loyalty to Christ were equal to his own. The most painful fact concerning Mr. Bryan is that, especially in these latter years, he spent so much of religious zeal and energy in the drawing of circles to keep men out at a time when there never was more need of drawing circles to take men in—promoting harmony, goodwill, and good understanding between men, and of encouraging intelligent appreciation of differences where differences are bound to exist. As a Christian "commoner" he might have performed a profound work in drawing men nearer to one another in a democracy of love. He was eminently fitted for that task, but he chose, unfortunately, to put his strength into divisive efforts in the realms of religious thought and scientific inquiry, where he was manifestly beyond his depths.

However, this is not a time to dwell upon Mr. Bryan's deficiencies or mistakes. His strength, and in large measure his influence, lay in his possession of solid qualities, and of virtues that not even his bitterest enemies could impugn. Nor did his strength and influence lie, as many suppose, in his native gift of oratory. That was a weakness as well as a strength. Mere oratory is not at present at a very high premium among the American people; in fact, there is a sort of reaction against it. One must look deeper to explain the position and influence of Mr. Bryan among many who were repelled by his politics and who did not share his Fundamentalism, as well as among those who accepted without question all that he represented.

What were these solid qualities underlying Mr. Bryan's influence? First and foremost was the fact that he was a man of clean life. In the thirty years of his public career not the slightest breath of suspicion has ever been cast upon his private relationships, and those who know state that his domestic life was very beautiful. It may be said that other men have been equally correct without being equally influential, but this privately virtuous aspect of his life became a sort of tradition concerning Mr. Bryan in much the same way as it did concerning Queen Victoria, and it had much the same effect upon the popular mind.

Associated with this personal and private morality was a public antagonism to vice. Mr. Bryan warred upon the liquor traffic which he regarded as a fundamental social evil, and in the ascendancy of the Prohibition cause he increased his personal influence through its advocacy—an advocacy the honesty of which we have never heard called in question. Politically, many, who never believed in Mr. Bryan's policies, and who regarded him as a demagogue, never distrusted his personal honor. They may have regarded him as mistaken, or incompetent, or even as dangerous, but they never questioned his essential love of his country or his faith in his own principles—or expedients.

In addition to this, also, Mr. Bryan was not lacking in boldness or courage. He could be firm and unyielding, as he demonstrated at the last Democratic Convention. In a sense his religion was a vital manifestation of these things, and it won him influence and admiration among those who like to see a man publicly confessing and standing by what he believes, no matter how much he may be scoffed at, or made the butt of cheap ridicule. Mr. Bryan has had the courage of his convictions, and he has held tenaciously to his purpose, though his convictions might have been more intelligent and his purpose more enlightened.

But now he has gone from us. Perhaps already he is exploring the realms of mystery, and is discovering things that were hidden. One daily newspaper has fittingly headed its editorial reference with the text, Now we see through a glass darkly but then face to face. Yes, we see darkly. The remembrance of it should make us trustful in our attitudes and generous in our judgments.

Religious Thought in C

MORE important than even the org ments in the religious life of a co nents of religious thought. Organiza vhen it is characterized by such ph nents as the church union movement portant chiefly as it reflects religious t

One cannot, therefore, easily over-e rance of the activities of a group of r
Canada who have established recent Journal of Religious Thought*, a bi-m n its second year. During his recen or the purpose of observing events in c consummation of church union, the wr ege of meeting and of friendly interc he group interested in the new pub arnest-minded, larger-spirited group e hard to find anywhere—men prof he discovery of truth and to its open, n range of interests and in the inclu owship the group extends beyond the n everal Episcopalians taking an active rise, both in its direction and in i
Also, though the editorial direction is i f the Dominion are represented on ectors and on the Editorial Commit
Brockwell King is Business and Edito

The first three numbers for the pr ore us as we write. The contribute nostly by Canadian writers, are not f the three issues containing article
American contributors. The general p lect Canadian opinion, and this is dis he editorial and book review column ast two features are of unusual meri ise, careful statement with discriminati oldness where necessary. One does n bler editorials than appear in the thr urvey. One, on Abraham Lincoln, is o st to Americans. It appeared in the April, and a brief but very intelligen
Lincoln's life and character is conc vords:

A truly great man is a world citiz nerely to his own country, and Cana vith the United States in celebrating ersary of his death, which took place

In the same issue is a striking editor
f the Radio, in which it is pointed ou is Looking Backward depicts as cha ear 2000 and after what has already Bellamy's Utopia, the progressive host vhen the conversation turns on the ma endance, informs the company that th avorite minister simply by adjourning
Journal, by the way, is loyal to the Br
r should we say to the French origi parlour) where he adjusts the instru hat this scientific achievement has con amy anticipated, the editorial writer ( able Episcopalian minister) insists tha
Church and public worship are intim hat we must guard very carefully aga

The Rewards of the Ministry

From a Recent Address by Rev. A. J. Cov

Secretary of the Congregational Board of Pastoral Supply

The compensations in the ministry is a ther that needs greater emphasis. The material r wards of the ministry have increased somewh in the last year or so. The tendency to rai salaries up to a better and fairer level h continued. Now and then there has been instance where a backward church has n seen its way to recognize financially the gre increase in living expenses; but there ha been many more where generous increases ha been made. And we hope that in the years come the minister will have a more adequa financial support.

But the rewards of the ministry are not dollars and cents. It might be unfortunate it were so. The minister's satisfactions a of a more permanent and enduring type. I practical experience with the men in the mi istry today we find clear indications that the men have food to eat that the hireling knowet not of. These rewards are not limited to th men of genius who have such insight, con passion, and power of expression that the mu titude always hears them gladly, but are th possession of the more ordinary men who co secrate what gifts they have to their Master service. The greatest reward is doubtless i the attainment of the type of spiritual li which the minister discovers in his fellowshi with God and man, and tries to establish in h parishes. But there are signs and promise on the way to cheer and sustain the ministe in his time of weariness.

When the bonds between minister and peop are so close that a minister cannot consider field with a triple salary in a splendid Ne England church because the sacrifices of h own people for him and their need of him s that juncture is so great, there is a kind c riches that moth and rust doth not corrup If a man is in some hill-town parish, and ha a few words one day with a young man wh chanced to be there temporarily, and year after is sought out by that same young ma and assured that the word spoken in seasor and well-nigh forgotten by the speaker, marke the turning point in his life and sent him ou to large achievement for the Kingdom, tha shows the value of seed sown by the wayside If a minister preaches in behalf of world-wid Christianity to his congregation of very lim ited means, and a score of years later som great bequest for missions comes from tha preaching, that is altogether heartening. I he longs for more of this world's goods, an his successful laymen tell him in all humilit their increasing regret that they had not give their lives to the more spiritually worth-whil things, that, too, cheers the ministerial pil grim on his way. When a young man, with young man's desire for immediate results an an ambition to see the Kingdom ushered i speedily in his community, finally discover that the Christian way after all is better tha any form of outward success, that discovery for him is one of the great spiritual revela tions of a lifetime and is worth more tha silver and gold.

These are among the rewards we are privi leged to see in the lives of the men with whom we have to do, and to have fellowship with such experiences and to have some minor part in shaping the conditions that bring them to pass, is one of the rewards of the servants of the Board of Pastoral Supply.

"Think what a man ought to be, and he was that."—Inscription on a tombstone in rural England.

The Social Significance of Leisure

Good and Evil of the Right and Wrong Use of It

By "Al. Priddy"

WITHIN the last half-dozen years the social workers and thinkers have be-me acutely interested in the development a technique which they assert may be pefully applied to quite a number of our rious "problems." And because this tech-que, in its application to a problem, is a yful, constructive, and very human one, en when applied to the sorriest and shab-est of our problems, a description of it and its results is of interest to the church.

The technique has to do with the organ-ation of our leisure time. Leisure time has ways had a theological significance from e Sabbath of rest to the proverb of the le hands. But a science of leisure time, most as exact as medical science, so that usic may be the pill for this, drama the nic for that, a playground the antidote for e other, is very modern and quite recent. A city or town playground equipment is longer an indefinite philanthropy; not cording to the social workers and the venile court judges and officials. To them is a definite formula which, applied to a ighborhood of boys and girls, corrects a rtain evil or, better, prevents very con-ete evils from existing.

A social workers' conference met on the est Coast within the year. No aristocrats social workers, these, but tackling the w, festering sores of drug addiction and lied grim problems. Their chief recom-endation was not medical but recreational. peakers traced the origin of secret vices to n anti-social form of existence; a leisure me wrongly spent. Pageants, plays, hikes, usic—preventives in the realm of organ-ed leisure—were urged effected at once.

Problems of Industry

A man's leisure time was a province ither neglected by social workers until ite recently. This came about through the eling that a person's off-hours were not potential in character and life as a man's ork hours. The hours of labor and the nditions of work were supposed to be the alms in which society suffered the most. he getting of the daily bread in sweat and il formed the central interest in the aver-ge social-minded worker's point of view. ur problems, from this angle, were princi-ally economic. The living wage, the work-g day, family labor, child labor, strikes, ckouts, unemployment, industrial accidents ere, of course, the uppermost problems to ceive attention, and the interesting social nd legislative developments that followed ere also programs and remedies which had to do with man at work, not man at play.

More than one manufacturer employing housands of men, and men who were spend-g liberal amounts of money to make the onditions of labor more humane, have lately aid, what one man said to me:

I don't care how broad and humane a olicy we may have in industry, it doesn't et far if we neglect the leisure time of the eople. On Saturday the factory may close own for the week-end with everything micable; right. But it's between Saturday and Monday when something happens; it happens when the men are on their own, spending their own time, not ours.

Industrial plants which have spent mil-lions of dollars in improving the working conditions of employees have, lately, been undergoing periods of drastic retrench-ment, claiming that it does no good to ex-pect that a thoroughly humane condition of labor is going to guarantee a thoroughly hu-mane response. And it is notable that the fiercest strikes in America—those most feared—are those which take place in the industries where the most attention has been given to plant and factory welfare. A wrongly organized leisure has so often been the actual strike cause which the experts, skilled in the purely economic, have failed to grasp. And throughout the United States today there are fine Christian men who em-ploy labor who will not understand why their men quit at a time when the employer is doing so much for them, until he realizes that it was not the fault of himself nor his factory, but the evils from a wrongly spent, vicious leisure that he suffered.

Recreation and Citizenship

A wise and thoroughly alert superintend-ent of schools said recently:

The splendid systems of education we in-stall in our schools go to wreck when the boys and girls are outside the building. Even recess time, in many cases, undoes all the fine work of the teacher. We've got to put a lot of time and thought in right organiza-tion of the leisure time. Leisure time is school time; an educative force we have failed to reckon with, as we ought.

Leaders in the church life have been keen to see the importance of rightly spent leisure upon the life of the church. One denomina-tion has conducted training schools for its clergy in which leisure time leadership in wholesome recreation has been given. An ambitious Methodist clergyman in Vermont is a type of many others. An important part of his church program which is printed by the year contains a thoroughly organized Recreation Department in which the leisure time of his people is filled with finely planned socials, skating parties, hikes, plays, pa-geants, stunt nights, and the like.

And not only has organized leisure come to a paramount position in these specialized realms, but cities and towns throughout America have lately begun to see the rela-tion between good citizenship and spare time. In thirty-five states there are cities and towns which have organized very defi-nite and representative committees of citi-zens to organize year-round programs of leisure time activities for the promotion of better citizenship. Playgrounds, golf links, swimming beaches, and camping sites are becoming rapidly the supplanters of the street corner, the alley, the blind tiger, and the other numerous breeding places of a debased conception of citizenship. The in-crease in the erection of community build-ings had its definite rise out of a new understanding as to the importance of an organized community leisure.

Wrong Uses of Leisure

A definite distinction had to be noticed between "leisure" and "organized leisure." And this is the nub of the whole situation. The critics whom the social workers and educators have to face when they urge the importance of organized spare time are those who have seen the sorry sights that leisure has produced. There are many manu-facturers who said to me, regarding this, substantially:

All this talk about mollycoddling folks by organizing their spare time and making it attractive is wrong—dead wrong. That's about all it will be, soon, all play and no work. What we want is more work. It wouldn't do the workers any harm if they added some more hours of work to their day, instead of trying to reduce 'em.

Such men, when asked to be more explicit, have opened up the whole vicious situation of wrongly organized leisure.

They have mentioned the gambling at the baseball games, the vices of the cheap dance hall, the bad repute of many industrial and town athletic contests, and—snobbery and liquor drinking at the private golf clubs.

This is organized leisure, but not of the right sort. It is organized for commercial purposes, never for the man involved. And the social workers of the country as well as the social thinkers are always very ex-plicit in their opposition to this form of leisure.

A large number of men and women, when approached for their view of this matter of organized leisure, resented the idea that a man's leisure time should be tampered with by trained organizers.

The educators and social workers, who have had this said to them, have been very quick to reply:

"That's the trouble. We have left folks to work out their own use of their leisure, and look at that mess! Boys in the alleys shooting 'craps,' men in the gambling houses, women on the streets! Picking up with the men and women who organize their recreations for them; the cheap, vicious crowd that makes its living from teaching our people to play—evilly!"

One policeman, in a Connecticut city, told me how the newsboys had lately taken up shoplifting. One of the larger boys had showed them how to work it and he took charge of their stolen articles: knives, etc. This same officer told me of a man who would pick up boys on the street, take them into an alley, and teach them different forms of gambling.

"Anyone who resents the expert director of leisure time," protested a settlement worker, "ought to see the experts that are let loose teaching our boys and girls and men and women how to play their own vicious games! There isn't a single, soli-tary item in all the grim list of human delinquency and crime but what has its teachers going about daily; you find them

Above the Clouds

By Mary Shaw Page

A mountain lake of pearly grey
Our eyes behold, far, far away,
A mimic lake of clouds so fair
That vanish later into air—
Soft clouds that bathe the mountains' feet
But scatter in the noonday heat.

Could we but keep our clouds below,
To what soul-stature might we grow!
Like mountain peaks we'd rise on high
Above the clouds that typify
Care, doubt, pain, misery, and fear
And all the evils of our sphere.

He who lives on this higher plane,
Serene and peaceful may remain,
Sustained by elements divine.
Through tears his eyes like stars may shine.
That life may we like mountains know,
Above the clouds that surge below!

everywhere; the panderer, the gambler, the leech, and the thief, out for fresh victims. And we're supposed to keep out and do nothing about it!"

Exhaustive research work has been done out in the city of Cleveland in this matter of leadership in leisure time, and the report, embodied in a small book recommending community organization for leisure, states that with the exception of very small children, the hundreds of individuals investigated confess that they had learned practically all their play life from someone else. The report goes on to show how the older or the smarter boy becomes teacher to a group; and shows the evil this can be unless the teachers are themselves taught in the highest ideals of citizenship through play.

More People at Play

"If you think that the American people really know how to make the most out of their leisure," remarked a man whose business it is to train community leaders, "just look at them on the sidelines, in the big auditoriums, in the vast ampitheaters, being entertained by a few, highly paid or honored specialists, and contrast them with the —well, the big folk meets over in Europe; that one that ushered in the Czecho-Slovak nation. In America there would be forty or fifty thousand people watching a group of fifty or so do something. Over in Czecho-Slovakia fifty thousand men, women, and children danced in a big folk meet; doing the thing for themselves, not just being an audience. Think of the great folk-singing contests; the big gymnastic affairs of the old world."

In regard to this ability of the old world citizen to be a participant rather than to be "audience," I saw a vivid illustration in a certain Massachusetts city. On the wall of a Bohemian social club I saw a large poster of a muscular working man, with arms folded. In the background were pictures of various gymnastic and rhythmic mass games. On inquiry I found that this special group of Bohemians was planning to send a delegate to this great "bund," to be held in a Middle Western city and in which thousands of Bohemians were to compete; men from the foundries, men and women, old and young; a truly old-world national recreation held here in America.

"It's time for the American people to get into the ring," declared a government official, "and learn how to do their own leisure time things; there's too much dependence upon the star system, and it isn't civically healthful."

An institute having to do with the health of the American people has been calling attention to the great number of premature deaths of very valuable and highly-trained citizens caused by a lack of participating in active leisure time recreations.

Certainly, from these considerations, it would hardly seem that the right use of leisure time is as yet a fine art in America. And any help that can be given in the art of using leisure for health and for citizenship would, certainly, be more of a help than a presumption.

This emphasis of organized leisure by social workers, educators, employers of labor, and others upon the immense possibilities for social and civic good is of great inspiration to the Christian Church because it centers an acute interest on the worthwhileness of a man's life. For it is in a man's leisure time where his real self will be revealed; not necessarily in his work, especially through an automatic machine. It means, of course, that in a technical, scientific way court judges, social agents, great philanthropies are urging the sanctity of human living.

There is hardly a social or philanthropic organization or an educational system which does not look forward hopefully to the curative and preventive powers of a well-organized system of leisure time activities, one that will reach the millions of the American people through folk song and folk dance, music, art, crafts, drama, social, and physical recreation. And in reaching these millions will tap the hidden spiritual powers of men; giving them leadership and filling their lives with joy.

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of Fog

As I and Keturah were chasing the Su around this old earth, we sailed past th Bay of Biscay. And our old Ford was honk ing its way through Fog, and warning tram steamers out of our track all the way fro Cape Finisterre to the shores of Sunna France. And the Fog Horn tooted nearl all the night, and then some.

Now I like the Ocean in most of its moods I like it when it is Calm, and when i frowneth; when it smileth and when it get teth its back up. But I have no love of Fog.

And I thought as I lay in my Berth, lis tening to the Foghorn, and noticing tha now and again the engine slowed up, an that sometimes there was an answering warning from another boat, how little use Fog is in Navigation or in Discussion.

For I know men who live and move an have their being in a state of Intellectua Fog. They reason not their course by char and compass, nor yet by clear vision fro headland to headland, but they go ever by Dead Reckoning in Fog.

Even so, I sat with a man on Deck, and he spake unto me of many things. And he had been to Colledge and had taken his Ph D. abroad, but he never had learned to think clearly. For he never began in his whole life, so far as I could judge, with a clear thought of what he wanted to say and finished it in the same sentence. For each time he would add, That is to say, or, By which I mean, or But if, or Although.

And I spake unto Keturah and said, There is hope for a man who is in Error, that he will go straight forward in a course that he doth plainly see, and will behold where he goeth, and turn again; but what hope is there for him that wandereth in a Fog?

And I said, There hath been much Bad Logick in all ages, and men have been taught in all generations to uphold the wrong by courses of Learned Argumenta-

(Continued on page 189)

A Call to a Forward Movement

By the Christian Church of China

(EDITORS' NOTE—The National Christian Council of China, at its third annual meeting held at Shanghai, May 13-20, 1925, adopted a call for a "Forward Movement by the Christian Church of China." Bishop Logan S. Roots, D.D., of Hankow, China, who has just reached New York, has kindly provided the following English translation which comes to "The Congregationalist" through the Committee of Reference and Counsel of the Foreign Missions Conference in North America. We print the "Call" in full, for not only is it one of the most hopeful documents that we have ever read but it presents with fine judgment and precision what seems to us to be the needed call for the church in America as well as in China.)

THE National Christian Council of China greets the churches throughout China in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior. Gathered in Shanghai from all parts of the country we have spent much time in considering the state of the church and the needs of China. We believe that the Spirit of God calls us all to a definite forward movement in and by the church in order that we may better serve the people as a whole.

Are not the notes of this forward movement three—truth, freedom, and love? Let us sound forth these notes with courage and clearness!

Truth

The Christian Church believes in the majesty of truth. We must seek truth with all our hearts, speak it with courage, act upon it whatever the consequences. To those who say it matters not what one believes we answer there is an eternal difference between truth and falsehood. To believe the former is life indeed; to believe the latter is fatal. The church is called to set forth the truth that Jesus Christ is the revelation of the Father and that in him there is salvation for men and nations. We have no cause to apologize for this truth or to fear for it. We welcome all honest enquiry, and we know that even bitter attacks and wilful misrepresentations cannot alter the facts on which the Christian Church rests. But this truth is not simply a matter of past history. The triumphant witness to truth rests upon the personal experience of the living Christ in his church today. This truth will be passed by contagion from one to another as it transforms our own lives. This is the chief method of evangelism.

Christianity welcomes truth wherever it may be found. The great truths seen by China's sages come from the one source of all truth which is in God. The church needs to make a far larger use of Chinese literature as a preparation for the full light to be found in Jesus Christ. We ask missionaries to study this literature with greater care and appreciation. We ask schools to give it a larger place in the curriculum. We plan, through our own committee, to make special studies in this field during the year so that all that is of worth in Chinese thought, culture, and customs may be retained and passed on unimpaired and even enriched to the new generation. In particular we plan to study whether the church cannot help its members to preserve and Christianize China's invaluable sense of corporate family life to commemorate ancestors and to maintain more fitly the attitude of respect to parents.

Even in our own schools and churches there are many who fall far short in their apprehension of truth. If we are to give the message we must have better education in the Christian religion and particularly in the Bible itself. We ask all who teach to consider the content of their religious teaching, to use the very best methods and to pay heed to their own spiritual lives that through them the truth may be passed on to their pupils. We are planning to give thought and attention to this matter through the year and we suggest the value of retreats for teachers where these matters can be prayerfully faced.

We do not pretend to know all truth. We want to maintain the scientific spirit ever eager to discover more, ever willing to restate and re-examine. There is no conflict whatever between true science and true religion. But humbly and with confidence we call our brethren to set forth courageously the fact that Jesus Christ is himself the Truth and to show how the nation may be saved through him. It is often hard to follow truth. It tears away the comfort of falsehoods and half-truths. But such comfort leads to disaster. This is the same with individual, church, or nation. Let us dare to be true!

Freedom

The church holds the principle of freedom to be fundamental and vital. This principle rests upon the worth of each man before God. Because Christ loved men and died to save them and set them free from the bondage of sin we know that men are of infinite value to God our Father. We proclaim the rights of all men, women, and children, and we must work for recognition of those rights just because we are named by the name of Christ.

It is by some supposed that the church depends upon and is subservient to earthly governments. That churches in the past have sometimes failed in this particular is clearly seen in history. It is therefore all the more necessary that the church in China make clear that it is a spiritual body owing allegiance only to God our Father and to Jesus Christ its living Head. The Christian should love his country, strive for its freedom and be loyal to its laws. Only if those laws are not in harmony with divine principles dare he disobey them. To the Christian freedom is not lack of all restraint, but true freedom means the increasing substitution of inward for outward control as man's spirit makes progress towards its goal. The Christian religion, then, can never be forced upon a man or a nation. We feel called upon to consider carefully whether in any degree we have departed from this principle in our teaching of religion.

In particular it is clear to us that there is still a lack of the most effective Chinese leadership in the church due not so much to scarcity of potential leaders as to a failure to secure conditions under which real leadership can develop. We call the churches, missions, and institutions of higher learning to study this question in order to see how far the hindrance lies in the foreign type of organization which gives little scope to the genius of the Chinese people and how far the control of work by foreign organizations and finance creates conditions unacceptable to those who might come forward. Bold action is needed in providing larger opportunity for the exercise of initiative and the right of experiment in re-shaping policy and in helping young leaders to work their way through the initial difficulties. Above all it is in comradeship, in the closest fellowship between older and younger, between missionary and Chinese, that this problem will be solved. These are days of transition and the path to freedom may be painful for all concerned. The goal, however, must never be in doubt.

Democracy has not always found church organizations which could meet its demands. For this reason it is necessary that the church in China shows clearly that it cares intensely and passionately for freedom. To set forth our Gospel without any form of compulsion, but so that all may freely take; to work out in our church life the best in democracy and not to get into political methods which mar the spiritual harmony—these are part of the church's task in her forward movement. To take the path of freedom always involves grave risks. There is a price to pay which we cannot evade. Let us dare to be free!

Love

The Christian Church is the creation of the God of love. Its every act and thought should be an expression of love—such love as we see shining forth from the life of our Lord and supremely from the Cross. For Christ first loved us and gave himself for the church and we have no right to be called by his name unless we love one another and all men. If we can show this love by the close personal relations between missionaries and Chinese, between learned and unlearned, between master and servant inside the borders of the church, we thereby become a bright and shining light to all the nation. If we can meet those who criticize us with patience, forgiveness, and a great desire to help them even in humble ways, we may bring them to understand that Christianity is not an aggressive and dangerous power in the midst of the nation, but rather points the way to harmony.

Alas! Christendom seems to many to be expressing itself more by gunboats and armies than by gentleness and forgiveness. The aggressive manifestation of Western civilization is no part of the Christian Gospel. We have to admit that no country is truly Christian and that many so-called are still, in some of their relations with other countries, denying Christ. This whole question is very difficult to understand for those who have received Christianity from the very same countries which have menaced and injured China in the past and which maintain huge armies and navies today. Scarcely less difficult is the position of the missionary who desires to dissociate himself from all that is un-Christian in his own nation, but who has a responsibility to it as a citizen in a free country. We are planning to make the most careful study of this matter so that when we next meet we may be able to see clearly what in the present situation in China is the expression of the Christian way of love.

Further, we would call on the mission boards to pay very special attention to the need for a right attitude of respect for and understanding of China on the part of those who come out as missionaries. It is possible by failure here to do harm rather than good even when the intentions are admirable. While recognizing an attitude of increasing friendliness towards China on the part of foreign powers generally we believe that when foreign governments carry out aggressive designs in China or fail to show due respect to her as a member of the family of nations, Christian love calls for plain-speaking especially by the Christian citizens of the country concerned. In the past it cannot be denied that there has been failure in this matter.

Love prompts us to care intensely for the oppressed and this is especially the case with large classes who are perpetually downtrodden. The forward movement of the church needs to include a determined effort to improve the condition of the workers, and the relation between employer and employee, and a fearless handling of all that is contrary to love in the social and industrial life.

What a vast field of endeavor opens before us! Love is no mere word to pass lightly from lip to lip. Love means a way of life that involves hard thinking, patient toil, suffering, and it might even be death. Love lived out by the church is the one triumphant answer to any who may oppose her. It was Christ's answer on the cross—Let us dare to love.

A forward movement by the church on these lines will naturally draw to itself the best elements in the country; it will knit the Christian and the scientist in patient search for truth; it will show how to ground democracy on unshakable foundations; it will give passion and power to all movements for social betterment.

In this movement the Chinese Church still needs the co-operation of its missionary friends, less in the future than in the past as those in authority; increasingly as comrades, willing to give the highest gifts of scholarship, Christian experience, and brotherly love in the spirit of the servant. For such a movement the generous giving of Chinese and foreign friends is needed, but the gifts should be made available in such a way that they impose no restraint on the free movement of the living spirit.

Thus will the missionary movement to China lose itself in the forward movement of the Christian Church in China. Thus will the church establish itself unmistakably before the nation as the representative of a spiritual religion rooted and grounded in love.

What will be the characteristic activities of such a movement? We would briefly enumerate ten:

1. The blameless life of the individual, the maintenance of church life and fellowship, and the exhibition of personal relationships within the church which explain to all the meaning of Christ's way of life.
2. Continued proclamation of the Gospel without patronage or compulsion and particularly by each individual in his own sphere so that Christ may be presented with compelling power as the Savior both of individuals and of the nation.
3. Retreats wherein an intimate fellowship is developed in the study of the Bible, in prayer and in facing the deeper issues of our life and work.
4. The improvement of our religious education in school and church that it may meet the actual need of the student and enable him clearly to grasp the meaning of Christianity.
5. A large output of literature spontaneously produced under no compulsion but that of the Spirit to meet the many new questions arising today, and to stimulate creative thinking in the church.
6. Patient and loving co-operation between missionary and Chinese in seeking a solution of the intricate problems of this transition stage in the church's life.
7. A thorough and sympathetic study of Chinese culture and literature and a greater use thereof in teaching and preaching.
8. A careful study of the international situation in the Far East and a determined attempt to apply the principles of Christ in this field.
9. A united and vigorous crusade against the social evils which bring the people into bondage and particularly against opium and militarism.
10. A new attempt to work out the meaning of Christian love in the home, in the factory, in business, in every sphere of life all of which must be claimed as fit fields for the actual expression of the principles of our religion.

The National Christian Council puts forth this call with a full sense of past mistakes and of our weakness in the face of many grave evils. Nevertheless it is put forth in the confident belief that, as we listen, we shall hear in these days what the Spirit saith to the churches and that the call of God always brings the assurance that his infinite wisdom, love, and power are available for those who dare to obey. Let us not be disobedient to the heavenly vision.

Our Camino Real

Santa Barbara Resurgent

Our friends in the East will want to read the facts about the Santa Barbara earthquake. Of rare beauty in its gifts of nature, romantic in its Spanish tradition, fortunate in its palatial homes and its choice people, there are multitudes that have loved this city of the mountains and the sea.

To have such a blow befall Santa Barbara was bewildering to us all. Any vicinage to the mountains is subject to earthquake. This old world of ours shrinks and shrivels, the crust folds and slides, there is a "fault" along the hills, and a neighborhood is shaken with the adjustment. Of course that is imperfect observation which charges all earthquakes to California. Just in the week there had been violent tremors in three states, in one case a mountain had formed a slide into the lake, and only because population happened to be sparse was there prevented great disaster to life. With no volcanoes in Southern California, we are no more liable to the tremors than other hill and mountain sections. And Santa Barbara—so calm and equable—we had not thought of disaster.

As usual the first reports were wildly exaggerated. To broadcast the statement that even Los Angeles was destroyed was a curious spasm of fear. Only Santa Barbara was shocked, not even the little towns near-by were affected. The agitation was along a line of 60 miles, with a breadth of 10 miles. And but a small area within the city suffered greatly. That was the area of business, most of the business plants falling or dangerously damaged. Even here some fine buildings survived with little injury, and the spoliation is charged to faulty construction. Most of the buildings were old, or if new were not of concrete sufficiently reinforced to stand such a strain. Visitors would be grieved at the ruins of the Arlington Hotel, the library building, the new Central Bank, etc.

Providentially coming at the hour before business, between six and seven, most people were at their homes, the streets nearly empty as walls fell into them, and the loss of lives but few—some 14—no more than the automobile casualties on a city's Sunday. Financially the loss has been severe, variously estimated from ten to twenty millions. When it comes to rebuild, however, Santa Barbara will spend fifty millions. Some of the banks are doing their work in tents; the people are sleeping on the lawns, the military forbid entrance to the despoiled district to all not holding passes. With heroic instancy, the turning off of electric current and gas supply saved the city from awful fire. There has been no suffering for want of water or of food. Before these lines are read from The Congregationalist, to a remarkable degree the residents will again be confident in their homes, State Street will be cleared of débris pretty much and opened to traffic, and the tides of business will sweep on as before.

What resiliency there is in human nature! The people are cheerful and unafraid. An open air theater was provided in three days. On the Saturday after the Monday earthquake, there was a procession on the Fourth of July, with speeches and sports. Deposits after two days were greater in the banks than withdrawals, and some new accounts were opened. The dust had not settled when plans were being drawn for a Better Santa Barbara. Great new hotels are to be erected, as well as the Arlington rebuilt; the schools will not be delayed in caring for all their pupils; the business district, formerly so uneven in its mingling of the unworthy with the beautiful, will be uniformly superb.

One good result of such a strain is the answer of the better traits of man to the challenge. How gracious and generous were the spontaneous offers of assistance from far and near! Oh, why cannot the hearts of men remain as gentle and responsive in all the usual business of the years? Fine instances of heroism came into expression. A participant of the experience writes of the choice comradery that has sprung up. For the time ing, it is a spiritual awakening of course: turning to the unseen and the eternal. There a dislodgment from ruts and conventions nd fears; an awakening of faith, a grasp toard "impossibilities." Undoubtedly the new anta Barbara will be greatly nobler than the d. A disaster, then? No, one of those spiritl dislodgments, which Horace Bushnell deribed in his immortal sermon. A new, finer a is ushered in.

As, too, geologists tell us that the quake is hardly likely to be followed by another in less than one hundred years, the people may be reasonably quiet in confidence. In volcanic country this hope might not be offered. In the case before us, the fault has come to its rest, and there may be no call for further adjustment even in a century.

And the churches? Their loss was painful, but shall they not be brave as men in business? The large new Presbyterian Church suffered greatly. The graceful little Unitarian Church threw forward some of its walls. The famous Mission crumbled badly, as did the Catholic Church on State Street. There was some damage to our Congregational Church, but probably it can be repaired. They share in the general lot. Their people will not be less courageous and sacrificial than the man of business, in preparing the resources for a great spiritual work in the Better Santa Barbara.

Yucaipa, Cal. CHESTER FERRIS.

The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches

VI. The Inherent Strength of Protestantism

By Professor Daniel Evans, D.D.
Harvard Theological School

N a recent article in a Catholic organ the inherent weakness of Protestantism is t forth. It is good to see ourselves as hers see us, though we cannot but be much rprised that we appear to them in such range shapes and figures. If we are as e appear, then we are very different than e think we are. If we appear thus as we , in the mind of this Catholic writer, it ay be that it is because his mind is the istorting medium, that we are reflected in is distorted and misshapen manner. Whether the one or the other explanation correct may become evident as we proceed.

It is held that the inherent weakness of rotestantism consists in its corruption of he message of Christ. Protestantism recgnizes no infallible teaching authority; it esorts to private interpretation of the cripture which makes for discord and disntegration, and so it will go the way of ll other heresies. The question, however, raised, why it has not already passed way? What has delayed its destruction? he answer given is that Protestantism borowed some truth and derived some relious life from the fifteen centuries of the eaching and experience of the church; the eople were religious and the reformers apitalized this religiousness and appeared o be giving the people the primitive teachng of the church. This gave it strength or a time, but it would have proved its eakness long ago did not the civil authorty come in to enforce the creeds of the rotestants. Nothing, however, can save rotestantism. It is fatally stricken. It arries the seed of death in it, because it as recourse to the Bible and not to the hurch, and its basic principle is the right f private interpretation. "It is satisfied ith the Bible as each one's unguided, unilumined judgment sees fit to construe it. ts inherent weakness is manifest in the esitancy and doubt in the minds of the reachers, and the anarchic religious conitions now prevailing. Protestantism is ut to the test in our country. Here it as no support from the state, and on every and signs of its weakness and decay are vident. It will soon pass away." Thus rotestantism is held up as the horrible xample and terrible warning to all who vould stray from the one true, infallible hurch.

The Protestant churches have their weaknesses. They all know them and deplore hem and are not ashamed to confess them, which shows that there is something wholesome and sincere in their lives. They do not consider themselves to be perfect; they are like St. Paul, eager to push forward to the prize of the high calling. And even like St. Peter himself who was quite conscious of his weakness and sin, even if the church that claims him is unaware of either. Weaknesses there are in all the Protestant churches, but they have their inherent strength, and it is well for Catholics to know and recognize this strength that they may not be deluded as to the passing of Protestantism and make ready for its burial. The inherent strength of Protestantism lies in its religious life. It does not live on the borrowed life and teaching of the Catholic Church, though it gladly participates in the common heritage that comes from the apostles and fathers and saints and mystics; but it has its own direct, immediate, original experience of intimate fellowship with God. It knows what salvation is as a matter of experience. It lives by faith in the Christ of God. It prays in the secret place within the chamber. It has communion with God direct, and not through priest or pope. The words of Luther still find us at our deepest depths:

> Wilt Thou go surely and meet and grasp God rightly, so finding grace and help in Him, be not persuaded to seek Him elsewhere than in the Lord Christ.
>
> Let thine art and study begin with Christ and there let it stay and cling.

The strength of Protestantism lies in this direct relation with God through Christ. All that hinders this relation is put one side; all that comes between God and the soul is swept away. There is no stopping in the Soul's ascent as priest, or pope, or saint; it worships God, not the creature.

And this profound personal experience in relation with God gives Protestantism a new ethical principle which makes it mighty in its moral life. The Reformation stood far more for a change of life than for a change of doctrine. It demanded the freedom of the Christian man in his relation to the world. He was saved by faith, for the interests of the Kingdom of God. He was not obliged to earn his salvation, but being saved by the free grace of God in Christ, he was required to live and work and serve as a free man. His life in all its daily tasks all its social relations was to express his new religious experience. He was to be free from all hindering restraints that he might be constrained by the love of Christ to serve the true interests of all men. All callings were essentially religious; there was no essential moral difference between the vocation of nun and housewife, priest and layman. They are "the religious" who live religiously and morally. Not the sphere of the service, nor the task, but the motive and the manner of the doing it were the important matters. Here is the moral strength of Protestantism that has made it such a mighty power in the modern world, and has recovered for the moral ideal the whole area of life.

The modern world is becoming more Protestant in virtue of this inherent religious and ethical strength of the Reformation. Ecclesiasticism of all kinds grows less in the appreciation of men and in power over them, but the Protestant principles of religious faith and ethical freedom grows ever greater in their extensive sway and intensive power.

Brief Notices of New Books

WHO'S WHO IN THE BIBLE, by E. FLETCHER ALLEN (Putnams. $2.00). Just what the title implies. Information regarding Bible characters in form convenient for quick reference.

HIGHWAYS AND HEDGES, painted by BERENGER BENGER, described by HERBERT A. MORRAH (Macmillan [A. & C. Black. London]). A new edition of a book built around its sixteen beautiful illustrations.

PARTIES FOR OCCASIONS, by CLAIRE WALLIS and NELLIE RYDER GATES (Century. $1.75). Suggestions arranged according to the calendar for parties for young people in their 'teens.

EVERYBODY'S PUZZLE BOOK, by MARY V. WORSTELL (Century. $1.50). Over 300 puzzles of 20 sorts—not cross-word puzzles, but supposed to be for those who have graduated from that elementary pastime.

COLDS: CAUSE, TREATMENT, AND PREVENTION, by RUSSELL L. CECIL, M.D. (Appleton. $1.00). The Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine in Cornell University describes the varieties, symptoms, and complications of cold and offers authoritative counsel concerning treatment and prevention.

BIBLE CROSS-WORD PUZZLE BOOK, by PAUL J. HOH (Doran. $1.50). Fifty-two puzzles based on the Bible. A book of solutions is also available.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS OF THE DAY!, by ELLIS PARKER BUTLER (Houghton Mifflin. 75 cents). The birthday reflections of the author of Pigs Is Pigs will commend themselves by their blending of good humor and good sense.

Fiftieth Anniversary of Brooklyn Church

Tompkins Avenue Celebrates Semi-Centennial

By Frederick L. Fagley

THE Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church of Brooklyn, N. Y., having the largest membership of any Congregational Church in America, has just reached its fiftieth year. When so many of our churches are celebrating their years by the centuries, some by one century, many two, and a few three, it is interesting to set down the record of this great organization of Christians.

DR. J. P. HUGET

Fifty years is a short time in the life of a city or of a denomination, yet in this short span of years this church has been organized, first meeting in a school house, then in a rented building, and next in its own house of worship, until it became in a few years the leader of the denomination in point of members, keeping that leadership even in the midst of a rapidly moving population.

The history of this church illustrates the way in which New York City, or any great city, does things. When a worth-while institution ministers to the life of a city, it prospers and grows by leaps and bounds as it gives itself in unselfish service to its people.

Eight years ago Dr. J. Percival Huget came to the Tompkins Avenue Church, and during these years with holy abandon he has given himself to its needs. So successful has been his ministry that though the church has set aside the names of more than five hundred to the "Inactive List," yet new people have more than made up the loss and the church still leads the fellowship.

THE GOLDEN YEAR

In commemoration of the anniversary the church is designating the current year as the Golden Year and the observance will include three features. One of these was the observance on June 7 at the June Communion Service of an Anniversary Sunday, with a sermon on "The Golden Year" and reception of members."

The second feature of the observance will be a more extended program, to be held next November. This will include the fall meeting of the New York City Association, together with the public services on Sunday and other programs. The third feature will be the emphasis on the work throughout the year, with the belief that in spite of all the difficulties arising from a shifting population and the problems of the modern city parish, the Tompkins Avenue Church has a work in the future worthy of its history.

The figures with reference to the number of members received during the fifty years are interesting. Four charter members are still living. The members received on Sunday, June 7, bring the total accessions during the half century to 8,663. After all removals by death, letter, and a rigid revision of the roll, the present membership is 3,200.

SIX PASTORATES

There have been in all six pastors during the fifty years. Rev. Charles D. Helman of Chicago was called to the pastorate and began his work on Jan. 1, 1876. Dr. Helman's work was successful from the first, and he was highly esteemed by the people, but his health failed rapidly and he died on April 20, 1879. During his short pastorate the work was well begun and a church of about 200 members was gathered.

Rev. Samuel M. Freeland of Newton, Mass., became pastor in January, 1879, but served a little more than a year. The church at the close of Mr. Freeland's pastorate numbered 272 members. The six years of service of Rev. George F. Pentecost, from Dec. 1, 1880, to January, 1887, were marked by rapid growth. The rented building in which services had been held was purchased and a branch building, known as the Park Avenue Chapel, was erected in another portion of the city. During Dr. Pentecost's ministry, 1,122 members were added and after the deduction of all removals, the membership of the church at the close of his service was 959.

Rev. Robert R. Meredith, D.D., of Boston, began his work in 1887. Very early in his pastorate the rapid development made necessary the erection of a new building. The present house of worship was dedicated Jan. 5, 1889. Dr. Meredith continued his work as pastor until 1902. During his pastorate some 3,000 members were received, and at the close of his pastorate the active membership, after all removals, was about 2,400. One of the notable features of this ministry was the great Bible Class attended by multitudes of people from all portions of the city.

In 1903 Dr. Nacy McGee Waters was called from the First Congregational Church of Binghamton, N. Y. He continued in active service until the time of his death in 1916. During the thirteen years of his pastorate some 3,000 members were received. Naturally the losses also increased, by death and removal, but the time of Dr. Waters' death the membersh of the church was, in round numbers, abo 3,600. In 1915 the Puritan Congregation Church united with the Tompkins Aven Church and the Park Avenue Branch w moved to the Puritan building, where it co tinued until 1923 as Puritan Chapel. O outstanding feature of the work of Dr. Wate was the inauguration of the Lenten Lectur which were given annually to large audienc throughout Dr. Waters' pastorate.

In April, 1917, Rev. J. Percival Huget, D.D of the First Congregational Church of Detro began his ministry, which has continued f eight years. He has also continued the Lent Lectures referred to above. The work at Pu tan Chapel was combined with that of t home church two years ago. The endowme fund, begun in Dr. Waters' pastorate, has be largely increased. There have been no exte sive building operations during the present pa torate but large sums have been expended repair and upkeep of the building and in very general remodeling of the parish hou including the installation of a large and mu used Social Room.

Since the death of Dr. Waters, 1,250 me bers have been received. Credit should given in this connection to Rev. John Frosc and Rev. Benjamin F. Wyland, assistant mi isters, who had charge of the work during t interim of a year between Dr. Waters' dea and the beginning of Dr. Huget's pastora During recent years there has been a thorou revision of the roll and as a result some 5 absent members have been placed upon t retired list. There have also been many movals but the membership of the church h ly maintained itself, in spite of these losses, the present membership is approximately 0.

TOMPKINS AVENUE CHURCH, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

he church property, including the endowt fund, is valued at some eight hundred isand dollars.

o record of the history of the church would complete without mention of the assistant ors. In addition to Rev. George E. Mern, the pastor of Puritan Church, who ced as associate pastor for a year after the on of the churches, there have been such standing men as Dr. Samuel Lane Loomis, known because of his long connection with American Missionary Association; Rev. hard Meredith, brother of Dr. Robert R. redith; Dr. Boyd Edwards, now of the Hill ool; Rev. John Froschl, who served at itan Chapel and the Park Avenue Church ten years previous to his tragic death in 9. Among the more recent assistants are r. Benjamin F. Wyland of Union Church Worcester, Mass., Rev. Ernest E. Youtz of st Church, Gardner, Mass., and Rev. Alfred Church of the Free Christian Church of dover, Mass. The present assistant is Rev. Pomeroy Cutler.

Interesting Comparisons

ust before taking up the report of the npkins Avenue Church I had read the truly narkable annual report of Rev. David J. rrin, Superintendent of South Dakota. In s report Dr. Perrin deals with the problem the small church with limited income and the heavy and difficult problems pastors of -spread mission churches face.

In comparison how interesting is the finanl report of the Tompkins Avenue Church. think many of our ministers will be intered in the business side of this great organtion. The total income for 1924 was $62,907. e main items of income were pew rents ounting to more than $12,000; envelope colctions of more than $16,000; Easter collecn of more than $7,000, and loose change in basket of about $65 per Sunday. Then re is a $5,000 income from investments. All gether this gives an average of more than ,200 per Sunday and this church fifty years o was simply a small group of Christians eeting in a school house.

The outgo is equally as interesting, with salies of more than $20,000; music almost ,000; printing and advertising of almost ,000; while almost $2,000 was spent by the acons for local charity. The missionary giv- of this church is according to their own te, and the last year their contributions were ,000 each to the American Board, to the Conegational Church Extension Society and to e Home Missionary Society. To the Home r the Aged, $500; to the American Missiony Association, $400, Ministerial Relief, $250, d to the Church Building Society and the ducation Society, $250 each. In addition to ose the church gave $475 to the New York ssociation.

The Outlook

This church has had a wonderful history, and doing a magnificent work. As Dr. Huget says his last annual report: "It is a great record. t is a source of justifiable pride, and still ore of thanksgiving. Most of all it is both rompting to and prophesy of equally signifint things yet to be undertaken and accomlished.

"That there are tasks unfinished and probms unsolved need in no wise disturb us. Our thers in the Faith met their difficulties and eir opportunities. In like manner we shall eet the present occasions and seek to add et other accomplishments to the inspiring and lengthening history of this church. This we resolve by reason of those high purposes of service for which the Christian Church stands, and in loyalty to those ideals which are the high heritage of our fellowship."

Testimonial to Dr. Peet

Copy of address accompanying the ancient Manuscript of the Gospels, given to Dr. W. W. Peet, on the occasion of his leaving Constantinople. Editorial reference to Dr. Peet's return to America will be found in this issue.

Kevork, the servant of Jesus Christ, and through the grace of the Holy Spirit Archbishop and the Acting Patriarch of the Armenians in Turkey from whom may salutation, love, and benediction come to Honorable Dr. W. W. Peet, the beneficient representative of the American Board of Missions in Constantinople.

> "Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only, in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall, in no wise, lose his reward."

The solemn Gospel oracle comes to our ears with a peculiar sweetness, especially at this time, when you retire from the work which you have carried on for many years, with great worthiness and perfect conscientiousness. Great is indeed our sorrow for your separation from us, for, in the entire course of your service, beginning particularly with the year 1895, for a period of more than thirty years, we have enjoyed your incessant care, so that the destitute Armenian, the Armenian widow, and the Armenian orphan recognize in you their father, who in the days of the misery of our Nation, never desisted from doing the possible for the relief of its sufferings. Moreover, you became a devoted laborer in the vineyard of God in word and in deed. We therefore present you with a specimen of our most ancient and most rare parchment manuscripts of the Holy Gospels, that you may be always reminded that, Armenians in the East, many centuries ago having received Christianity, became the heralds of the truth of the word of Life and that you may always keep in remembrance the grateful Armenian race, who still stands in need of your paternal affection and solicitude for relief of the distress which is still its lot.

On this occasion we bless also the undying memory of your benevolent life-companion, who became a worthy partner in your benefactions and whose tomb is and will remain with us as an unforgettable memorial of you two loving consorts.

And now, in the name of the Armenians in Turkey we express to you our gratitude for all your invaluable assistance and solicitude and we beseech the Lord that he may grant unto you to spend the remainder of the days of your life in peace and in well-being and to hear these blessed heavenly words:

> "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will set thee over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

The Acting Patriarch of Armenians,
(Signed) Archbishop Kevork Arslanian.
Constantinople,
March 28, 1925.

Summary of Archbishop's Speech

Delivered by the Armenian Acting Patriarch, Archbishop Kevork Arslanian, on the occasion of the farewell reception given by him at his home in Pera to Dr. W. W. Peet, March 28, 1925.

I wish to thank you for the honor you do me today by accepting my invitation to this farewell reception. I consider myself highly honored by your presence here, because your activity in this country for more than forty years has been so fruitful, so profitable particularly for the Armenian people.

I had the pleasure of meeting you for the first time in 1895 when I came to you with my tales of woe and found full sympathy and satisfaction as I had expected. I have since been called to a position of far greater responsibility and that, in critical times, with peculiar difficulties. I have appealed to you many a time in that capacity also and have always found in you your usual readiness to do all that was possible.

I cannot help recalling at this time my illustrious predecessors, who have had the good fortune of planning and of co-operating with you for the good of our afflicted nation. How often in their sore distress they have been comforted and encouraged by your wise counsels, by your deep sympathy for the suffering people, and by your generous benefactions. Some of them have already entered their rest, others still occupy important positions in the Church. I consider it my sacred duty in their name as well as in my name to express to you now our sincere gratitude.

But not only in their and in my name, but also in the name of all Armenians, it is my privilege to extend to you our hearty thanks, because it was mainly through your loving and self-denying efforts that our people in the days of their untold affliction became the object of the Christian sympathy and philanthropic assistance of the noble American nation.

You who are the worthy son of that great and magnanimous nation, became still greater because you forsook your peaceful and comfortable home and came to work in this country as a true follower of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. You identified yourself with the sufferers and devoted your life to the alleviation of the misery of the distressed, of the destitute, and of the orphan. In you we beheld the spirit of Christ and the noble philanthropic spirit of the American people whom you represented.

How can the Armenian nation ever forget the benefits which you, and through you your country, so abundantly bestowed upon it!

It is hard for us to part with you, not to have you any longer in our midst, but we feel also that you perfectly deserve to enjoy a rest in your own country after such a long laborious life consecrated to the good of your fellow men.

You have the full right to enjoy that rest in the bliss of the peace of conscience. But I will beg of you to always bear in mind this land, which became your adopted country and the Armenian people living here and to continue to extend to them your sympathy and care from beyond the ocean.

We are sure also that the American people as thus far so also henceforth will never fail to give to us the assistance we need so much, thus manifesting the true spirit of the Gospel, the spirit of charity.

I pray the God of grace to sustain and support you with his tender love and grant you many more days to labor still for his glory and for the glory of the Holy Gospel as devotedly and indefatigably as heretofore. I pray also that God may preserve the American people in peace and in prosperity and crown with success all their efforts put forth in the name of Christ.

With this prayer we bid you godspeed.

The Pastor Says: War is a temporary injunction issued by man suspending the commandments of God and the beatitudes of Jesus. —John Andrew Holmes.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

Temperance Lesson

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for August 16
Galations 5: 13-24

The early Christian church became very soon involved in almost exactly the same sort of questions that Christians and citizens are confronting today. The Christian gospel was a gospel of liberty. Jesus came to make men free. Even the very requirements of the Jewish law, he summed up for his followers in the new commandment of love. When he was asked concerning the sum and substance of religion he not only enunciated the two great commandments, that "one should love God," and that "one should love his neighbor as himself," but he added that on these two commandments depended the whole law and the prophets. By that very teaching he lifted the Christian above mere rules and codes into the atmosphere of spiritual privilege. It was not that he made the demands of the law any less; as a matter of fact, he made them a great deal greater, but he made the fulfilment of the law the expression of a free spirit rather than the mere satisfaction of legal requirements.

There can be little doubt that Paul fully understood Jesus in his teaching at this point. He may have been still in some measure dominated by his Jewish prejudice, for one very seldom shakes off entirely the effects of his early training, but in his larger moments of vision Paul saw very clearly the glory of Christian liberty, and in this Epistle to the Galatians he makes this matter of Christian liberty his essential theme.

In olden times, however, just as now, there were those who were more interested in quibbling about liberty than in making it the occasion of noble living. There were those who tended to say "because we are free we can do anything that we please." This attitude Paul rebukes in the most unqualified way. The fact that a man has freedom does not mean that he is free from the sense of obligation, or the duty of being considerate of the effects of his action upon his neighbor.

Paul lays down concerning this matter a very clear and estimable rule. He says that if people have the right ideal and are striving to make their lives as useful and helpful as possible there will be no difficulty. He goes straight to the practical distinction between good conduct and evil conduct, and the Christian life he defines as the life that approves the good and avoids the evil. "Walk in the Spirit," he says, and "ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh."

He points men to the fact that all through life there is a warfare between good and evil, and that if they will use good judgment they can easily discover the right side in that struggle. The fruit of the Spirit Paul defines carefully—"love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." On the other hand Paul likewise defines the "works of the flesh" and having made this clear distinction he defines in the sharpest way the true attitude of the Christian: "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with affections and the lusts."

The Golden Text of this lesson, though it does not appear in the lesson itself, should not be omitted. It is Paul's striking, terrible summary of the moral evidence of life: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." These words ring true today as they did for the world in which Paul wrote.

The struggle of good against evil goes on. There are still those who use their liberty immorally and selfishly and those who use their liberty for pursuing the higher and better paths of life.

He that would live above law must attain the life that is not against law. Perhaps we have unduly worried over negative commandments and have not trained our vision and our will sufficiently upon the things that are excellent.

From the Rocky Mountains

The Booker T. Washington idea of uplifting the colored man so as to win his rights by sheer merit is in the discard so far as concerns the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, whose annual convention has just been held in Denver. This plan was declared to have been tried and found wanting. The most cultured and successful colored men and women are still refused hotel accommodations, are herded into jimcrow cars, and are forced to live in segregated districts, regardless of merit, just because they are of African descent. The next move, according to the speakers at this meeting, is to educate and uplift the white race so that they will give the colored American citizen his constitutional rights.

The convention brought together a notable group of leaders. Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, editor of the Crisis; James Weldon Johnson, secretary of the Association; William Pickens, field secretary; Harry E. Davis, colored Ohio state legislator; Walter White, author of The Fire and the Flint, and many others were present. Two special Pullman cars brought the delegation from the East, and the group was entertained en route at a banquet in Chicago by a company of citizens headed by Miss Jane Addams of Hull House.

Several noted white speakers also brought messages to the colored delegates. These included Charles Edward Russell, author and veteran diplomat; Mrs. Florence Kelley, secretary of the National Consumers' League; Congressman L. C. Dyer of St. Louis, author of the Dyer anti-lynching bill; Ex-Governor William E. Sweet of Colorado, and Judge Ben B. Lindsey of the Denver Juvenile Court.

The colored people had every reason to be pleased with the reception given them in Colorado. The newspapers gave much space to appreciative reports of the addresses. The great City Auditorium was opened for the Sunday afternoon mass meeting which was broadcast from Station KOA of the General Electric Co. The leading city pulpits were filled on Sunday by colored speakers. Mayor Stapleton gave an address of welcome. The choir of the leading Presbyterian church of the city assisted in the musical programs.

But the Negroes needed no special assistance in the line of song. A chorus of 150 colored singers furnished wonderful music throughout, reaching special heights of power at the mass meeting when they rendered with thrilling effect, "Gloria in Excelsis," from Mozart's Twelfth Mass, and "Hark! The Deep, Tremendous Voice," from Haydn's "Seasons."

The climax of the program was reached the closing night when Sec. James Weldon Johnson received the Spingarn medal, given annually to the American citizen of African descent who has accomplished the most distinguished achievement. The presentation speech was made by Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, recipient of the medal in 1920.

The addresses were characterized by a bold and statesmanlike spirit. Ex-Governor Sweet in his address before the mass meeting demanded plain justice for all people, regardless of nationality. Charles Edward Russell declared: "The colored American will not cring He demands his rights, and he will not ta anything less. I want the Constitution to me all that it says."

Moorfield Storey, president of the Assoc tion, in his annual address said: "We a seeking no favors, no privileges. We ask on the rights which the Constitution and t laws of the United States accord every Ame can citizen."

Race segregation was bitterly opposed. "W cannot have jimcrowism, segregation, dise franchisement, and at the same time have ju tice, civilization, and peace," declared Picker

Secretary Johnson declared the purpose the Association to be the same as that of t founders of the country; justice, fairness, a equality. "If we succeed it will be well f us and for America," he said. "If we fail means the failure of democracy in America

Many white people in Denver felt that t speakers went too far in their demand Dr. DuBois is outspoken in his desire for ra equality in all lines, even to intermarriage both parties so desire. Charles Edward Ru sell declared, "I believe in absolute, unlimit social equality for the Negro." Secretary Joh son believed that legalizing intermarriage is t only safeguard for the purity of colored w men. "If a white man wants a black woman said he, "let him either marry her or let h alone."

Many felt that such utterances do mo harm than good to the cause of the color people. But, of course, in the addresses th were more qualified than the isolated quot tions would indicate. And one should alwa remember that the desire to mix the blood the two races usually comes from the whi man rather than from the colored people.

The spirit of the Association, while aggressiv was not militant. Secretary Johnson advocat that when there is a lynching the colored peop of that state refuse to work for any whi man until the guilty parties have been pu ished. But largely the idea advocated was use the influence of a united appeal for ju tice. "We shall leave weapons for the whi man," said one speaker, "and make our appe to justice and reason, and as the spirit is mo powerful than the body, and there is a heave above the earth, we shall march on until w accomplish our end."

The appeal for the colored man to solve h own problem has changed to a demand on t white man to live up to the Constitution th he holds sacred, and accord to the color man the full rights of his citizenship. It is bold and strategic change of base. It carri with it the possibility of a larger liberty tha the colored race has ever dared hope for. A it is hard to see how such a plea can perm nently be denied. So long as white men a given liberty and equality under the Constit tion, without regard to their education a prosperity, it is going to be hard to answ this demand of the Negro for his rights as a American citizen. W. O. Rogers.

Fear drives cowardly governments to ar ignorant serfs under the frightened pretext defence. A man, with his talent for gullibilit claps on his tinpot helmet, fixes his gas-mas dons his dusty, lice-harboring garments, a sallies forth unquestioning to the fray. I has been cunningly discouraged from any a tempt to think intelligently for himself. I has been trained to accept subjection as virtue: to worship abjectly at the altar fear, and offer himself to vain sacrifice unde the guise of country.—H. D. Bradley.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

Beauty and God

Why do we let ourselves live unresisting and unrepenting in the midst of ugliness—ugly houses, ugly rooms, ugly clothes, ugly dooryards, ugly towns, ugly noises? Why do we inflict ugliness upon other people? I stepped the other day into a shop where my ears were smitten by the strident notes of a cheap phonograph record, in which the nasal tones of a man's voice occasionally entering the mishmash made the horror all the greater. No doubt it was intended to be funny. But I am wondering what would be the effect upon the girls working in that establishment if a bit of beauty were presented daily to their ears, instead of ugliness.

"An ecstasy of joy ineffable" is what contact with beauty brings to the writer of a letter that reached me a few weeks ago. "Color," the letter says, "color brings with it a burst of music, and music itself has enveloped me in rainbow colors." Speaking of some local festivals of music and flowers,—"Experiences such as I had upon entering the room of Titian's paintings at the Louvre, where the beauty of form and color brought a burst of song, are being repeated." And I will match that memory with one of a first glimpse of the Turner room at the National Gallery in London. To come upon such revelry and joy in color may mark a turning point in one's thinking.

For the lower leads to a higher. The passion for earthly beauty leads to hunger for a beauty that will not pass; and through the experience of pain comes the increasing perception of Beauty at the heart of all things. After some words about a longing for beauty so intense that at times it is almost crushing, my correspondent hurries on to tell of being led by it to a deeper finding of God. "I have lived, ever, in the vast spaces of the universe, soaring in spirit from star to star," says the writer. "This illness has brought a fresh knowledge of spiritual forces and divine energy all about me. . . . Spiritual power becomes at times so real that it seems almost tangible. . . . With one of old, 'It is good that I have been afflicted.' I have gone further into the depths of God's being and of my own. . . . The blessed Christ and I have lived in close association. . . . How inspiring to know that the same power with which we are to work in the larger life is, even here, at our command."

When we find any true beauty we find the very vesture of God. That is why our churches should be beautiful, and worship should conform to the laws of beauty. It is, of course, possible to worship God in ugly buildings and with forms devoid of beauty; but it is harder. Something is missed, and that a very great thing. If the meeting-house is to be a house of power, it must be a place where souls are led into personal relations with heaven-born beauty and glory. The great value of a church service lies not in the preaching of duty, but in helping men and women and children into living and felt connection with something so immeasurably lovelier than the seen world can ever give, that they will inevitably be inspired to nobler living.

It was not the mission of Jesus Christ to give the world a piece of machinery called religious. It was his high purpose to help men to find comfort and peace and joy and inspiration in the God who is Love and Light and Beauty.

Closet and Altar

IN THE HOUR OF TRIAL

The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations.—2 Pet. 2: 9.

Temptation is as natural to us as it was to Jesus; and in itself it is no sin. Our very gift of thinking, the more it discharges its own function and weighs or considers possibilities, brings temptation in its train. This we cannot escape, nor is it desirable that we should. Temptation is the obvious penalty of a great privilege, the genius of which lies in debating opposites. On the one hand, remember that daily resistance ends by bestowing a sure mastery and builds up reserve strength. On the other hand, the only sin in temptation is when we play or sport with its suggestion. Sin enters when we slacken the curb, and let go the rein.—James Black.

None has reason to be ashamed because there are places into which he dare not venture, habits he fears to allow, indulgences upon which he cannot trust himself to look. Those who thus work out their salvation with fear and trembling are the bravest, manliest, and noblest of us all.—W. L. Watkinson.

Grant us a body pure within,
A wakeful heart, a ready will:
Grant us, by no deep cherished sin,
The fervor of the soul to chill.

Fill Thou our souls, Redeemer true!
With Thy most pure celestial ray;
So may we walk in safety through
All the temptations of this day.

We cannot sweep away the past and start afresh like settlers in some new country. We must enter professions and adopt pursuits which have existed long before us and which men of all sorts and conditions, evil as well as good, have contributed to mold to their present shape. . . . We have to do right not only in the face of, but often in combination with wrongdoers; to be sincere among the insincere; disinterested among the self-interested. . . . Nor are the issues before us always obvious. For the frontiers between good and evil are not easy of delimitation. . . . Hence no hard and fast rules can be laid down that will suit all the occasions that may occur. We have to extemporize courses of action as fresh circumstances arise. And all of this involves a constant strain not only upon our moral courage, but upon our tact and judgment, in comparison with which the seclusion of the cloister would at least be peace.—J. C. Illingworth.

Moses the meek failed in his temper. Abraham faltered in his faith, patient Job waxed irritable—let their example teach thee to take heed of thyself, lest thou also be tempted, and be cast down.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

O God, who knowest us to be set in the midst of so many and great dangers that, by reason of the frailty of our nature, we cannot always stand upright; grant to us such strength and protection as may support us in all dangers and carry us through all temptations; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen. Anglican Prayerbook.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Playing the Game

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic for August 16-22

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: Rules for the Game of Life.—II Timothy 2: 5, 15; I Corinthians 9: 24-27; I Peter 2: 11-17.

Light from the Bible Passages

If Paul was no athlete himself, he must have been keenly interested in the methods and achievements of athletes. He draws many of his most effective illustrations from that side of life. He noticed that they had always to keep and not break over the rules. They cannot go "as they choose." The Christian, too, must know and keep the rules for the right Christian life. Work is really a game, and it should be done in a way to win the approval of the judges. Half-hearted runners do not win. The contest for the Christian life must be carried on with continual urge. One who would win must keep his body in perfect training. The good athlete continually practices self-control. The good Christian must do the same. These are some of the rules proposed by this apostle of strenuous Christianity.

Leads for the Leader

Is the Christian life reducible to a number of rules, or is it a life controlled by a certain spirit? Even so, are there not certain well-established rules which one must follow?

Here are a few suggestions:

1. "Playing the game." Do we give up easily in our practice of certain things in the Christian life if we fail the first time in them? Do we go "at it" with an undaunted will? Can we overcome obstacles?

2. "Loyalty to the team." Are we always playing an individual game? Are we anxious that others should do their best, too? Are we concerned with the honor of our families, the society as a whole, or the church?

3. "Faithful in training." Do we want to make our own rules, or are we continually trying to know the Book better? Are we temperate in all things or do we run to excess in some? Do we seek more and more to follow our Great Example?

Thoughts for Members

Life is a game with a glorious prize,
If we can only play it right.
It is give and take, build and break,
And often it ends in a fight;
But he surely wins who honestly tries
(Regardless of wealth or fame),
He can never despair who plays it fair—
How are you playing the game?
Do you wilt and whine, if you fail to win
In the manner you think your due?
Do you sneer at the man in case that he can
And does, do better than you?
Do you take your rebuffs with a knowing grin?
Do you laugh though you pull up lame?
Does your faith hold true when the whole world's blue?
How are you playing the game?

—Anonymous.

A Moment of Prayer

Put into us, O Lord, fresh zest for the game of life. Keep us from yielding to difficulties, from heedlessness that deprives of gains which we should make, from failure to use all our gifts of body and soul to come through as winners for thy sake. Amen.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Problems of Life and Faith

FUNDAMENTALS OF FAITH, by HORACE BLAKE WILLIAMS (Abingdon Press. $1.25). The author's claim to discuss the fundamentals of faith "in the light of modern thought" is well justified in this volume, which is free from the special pleading that renders so many pages of practical apologetics worthless. The inherent quality of Christian conceptions, and not their outward form and accompaniment, is made the basis of the author's defense and exposition of Christianity. His standpoint is indicated in his statement that "the ability of Christianity to stand the final test of a religion will rest, in the last analysis, not upon its marvelous aspects, but upon its truth concerning the nature of the human soul in its relation to God, and to eternity."

SOME OPEN WAYS TO GOD, by WALTER RUSSELL BOWIE (Scribners. $1.50). In this volume the Rector of Grace Church, New York, has made a fine offering for "that multitude of men and women in our world today who are wistful for God, yet do not know how to find him." Dr. Bowie believes that the ways to God are along the line of "our truest and most unfettered thinking," and he does a great deal to make these ways open and plain. He discusses present-day needs and perplexities of faith and experience under the following heads: The Need of Religious Conviction, the Reality of God for Personal Experience, Jesus Christ, the Indwelling Spirit, and Why Belong to the Christian Church.

AN INTRODUCTION TO PHILOSOPHY, by JAMES H. RYAN (Macmillan). The author is Professor of Philosophy in the Catholic University of America. He writes with the college student particularly in mind, and though his own standpoint is that of dualistic realism he has sought to make a survey of the variety of philosophical opinions on the problems discussed. The book is valuable in its definition of technical terms.

YOGA AS PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION, by SURENDRANATH DASGUPTA (Dutton. $4.25), is a reference book for those already acquainted with the broader features of Indian mysticism. It is a commentary for western readers upon the philosophy of Patanjali, one of the six Brahmanic systems prevailing at the present day. The author treats of Yoga not so much in its popular sense as a technique of contemplation by which a soul finds release from the bondage of the world but rather as a philosophy upon which this technique rests.

Doran's Library of Philosophy and Religion

THE PHILOSOPHY OF RELIGION, by D. MIALL EDWARDS (Doran. $1.75). Professor Edwards is Professor of Philosophy of Religion and Systematic Theology at the Memorial (Congregational) College, Brecon, Wales. His aim in this volume has been to present in a simple and compact way a survey of the entire field of the philosophy of religion. His treatment is exhaustive in range, though not, of course, in detail. Its upwards of three hundred pages with bibliography and index make this book valuable not only as a students' handbook but as a permanent addition to the minister's library. Successive chapters deal with these themes: The Problem and Scope of the Philosophy of Religion, the Origin of Religion in the Light of Anthropology, the Physical Origin and Development of Religion, the Historical Development of Religion, the Nature of Religion and Its Relation to Other Activities, Religion and the Problem of Knowledge, Religion and Ultimate Reality, God and the Absolute.

PROBLEMS OF BELIEF, by F. C. S. SCHILLER (Doran. $1.25). A study of belief itself and of its problems, rather than of its contents, by an author who compels attention and who has made in this and other volumes a notable contribution to discussions in the field of psychology and religion. Some chapter headings reveal the author's development and the interest of the book:

The Nature of Belief, Implicit Beliefs, Debatable Beliefs, Half-Beliefs, Dishonest Beliefs, Make-Believe and Fiction, The Logic of Belief, The Will to Believe, Belief and Action, Belief and Survival-Value, and Truth and Survival-Value.

LIVING ISSUES IN RELIGIOUS THOUGHT, by H. G. WOOD (Doran. $2.00). "From George Fox to Bertrand Russell," is the scope of the survey, though this is intended to suggest the range of subjects rather than a chronological development. The ten essays in the volume center around that which discusses the need and character of the next revival of religion. The author is a scholarly, free-minded English Quaker, who is Professor of New Testament Literature and Church History at the Selly Oaks Colleges. His spiritual penetration and skillful criticism, especially of such modern non-Christian prophets as Bertrand Russell, H. G. Wells, and Bernard Shaw, give this volume great practical value and interest. It is with considerable confidence that we commend this volume to the attention of thoughtful readers.

IDEALISM AS A PHILOSOPHICAL DOCTRINE, by PROF. R. F. ALFRED HOERNLE (Doran. $1.25). The author as student and teacher felt the need of a book "which, like a map, would help a beginner to thread his way through the tangled mazes of idealistic theory." It is such a book that Professor Hoernle has himself written. We can conceive of few services more valuable at a time when mastery of the idealistic philosophy, whether accepted or not, would do much to save the world from the ravages of half-baked and superficial speculation, as dogmatic in its conclusions as it is hasty in forming them.

In Many Lands

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA: A SURVEY OF ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL CONDITIONS, edited by DR. JOSEF GRUBER (Macmillan. $2.00). Dr. Gruber is Professor of Economics at the Charles University in Prague. Over five years have elapsed since the founding of the Czechoslovak Republic. This book affords the American reader an opportunity to make acquaintance with the Republic, its resources, its problems, its progress, and its promise of future prosperity.

BRAZIL AFTER A CENTURY OF INDEPENDENCE, by HERMAN G. JAMES (Macmillan. $4.00). With illustrations and maps this volume presents in attractive form the story of Brazil—a story with which all Americans ought to be familiar. There is a chapter on the physiography, the history is summarized from discovery to recent times, and the present governmental system is adequately described. The resources, population, modes of life and industry, trade and commerce, individual states, and social conditions are all treated, and there is a final chapter of suggestions for the tourist. There are also a bibliography and an index.

VISTAS IN SICILY, by ARTHUR STANLEY RIGGS (McBride. $2.50). A well illustrated and delightful description of a most interesting country and its people. Invaluable for the prospective traveler, and vividly entertaining for those who must do their traveling by reading.

FINLAND AND ITS PEOPLE, by ROBERT MEDILL (McBride. $1.50). A useful guide to the "new Republic of the North."

THE LAND OF THE PHAROAHS, by REV. SAMUEL MANNING (Revell. $1.75). A new edition of a well-known book, edited and with a preface by James Baikie. It tells the story of the Egypt of yesterday, before excavations and travel had brought great change. A new chapter has been added giving a summary of the results of excavation since 1880.

THE CHURCHES OF ROME, by ROGER THYNNE (Dutton. $5.00). Thirty-four churches are described in detail, in addition to St. Peter's, and there are forty-eight page illustrations in half-tone. The author began originally for his own amusement a work which extends to nearly five hundred pages and which offers a survey instructive for the student of art and architecture, and unusually valuable for those who have been to Rome or who plan to go there.

THE EVOLUTION OF FRENCH CANADA, by JEAN CHARLEMAGNE BRACQ (Macmillan. $2.50). A French Protestant's sympathetic study of the progress of French Canada from 65,000 vanquished colonists to a people of 3,000,000. It deals with the historic backgrounds and also presents a survey of present conditions. It is an interesting volume, but it hardly senses sufficiently the problems of a country seriously divided racially and religiously.

TRAILS AND SUMMITS OF THE WHITE MOUNTAINS, by WALTER COLLINS O'KANE (Houghton Mifflin. $2.50). A glorified guidebook by an experienced mountain-climber and camper. The book is intended for beginners in mountain-climbing and it is simple and adequate in its information. It describes nineteen interesting climbs which can be accomplished in a day or less.

HERO TALES FROM MISSION LANDS, by W. P. NAIRNE and ARTHUR P. SHEPHERD (Doran. $1.75). There are many books of stories about missionary heroes. After one has read a number of them, one knows about what to expect. Occasionally, however, a pleasant surprise is due, as in the case of this volume. The authors have shown rare skill in the selection of incidents that are both interesting and significant in the life of the subject. Notes accompanying each story give the main facts and the historical setting, and the suggestive questions appended make the book an admirable text for a study group. Boys and girls, young people, and adults as well will enjoy reading this book, and the class leader seeking a fresh and stimulating text will find it here.

STORIES OF TREES, by LENORE E. MULETS (Page). Written in the form of simple stories delightful to read, this new edition of a favorite volume will be found instructive for children who as yet do not know the most common of our trees.

Poems and Plays

THE BEST POEMS OF 1924, edited by L. A. STRONG (Small, Maynard. $2.00). In the present condition of poetry a collection of "best poems" is bound to have a two-fold value, if the selection is made upon at all an eclectic basis. It provides a permanent setting for fugitive jewels, and it is likely to be at the same time a compendium of "horrible examples." The Best Poems of 1924 is no exception. The range of selection is wide and there are poems to which one will wish to turn again and again, but there is also sufficient verse to make one agree with Leonard Bacon (in the poem, The Mirrors of Grub Street, included in the volume):

I would swap all our whining and our clowning
For half an hour of Tennyson and Browning.

The editor's introduction to the present volume is timely for its discussion of principles of selection, its estimate of values, and its replies to criticisms of a former volume. The editor refers to the compromises that are necessary in compiling such a volume. "He cannot," he remarks, "let his own taste ride him altogether." One has a feeling that in the present volume he has been too generous toward other tastes; otherwise it is difficult to account for the inclusion among "best" poems of a number that seem trivial or bizarre—slight epigrams that a really great poet might forget having uttered.

THE VENTURE: POEMS by JEAN KENYON MACKENZIE (Houghton Mifflin. $1.50). Miss Mackenzie lived for 14 years among the Bantu tribes of West Africa, and her books, African Clearings and Black Sheep, have won her literary fame. One turns to these poems with high expectations. How deeply they are fulfilled is best evidenced by reproducing the sonnet which gives to the volume its appropriate title:

I never see a map but I'm away
On all the errands that I long to do,
Up all the rivers that are painted blue,
And all the ranges that are painted gray,
And into those pale spaces where they say:
"Unknown." Oh, what they never knew
I would be knowing—were it not for you
I would be off tomorrow with the day!

Then since I am at anchor at your door,
Befriend the wistful stranger; make me free
Of all your little country and its store
Of unknown things and wonders—spread for me
The chart and let me venture, till I find
The secrets of your beauty and your mind.

THE GREATEST OF THESE, by WILMOT EDDY STEVENS (Stratford Co.). Poems on religion, friendship, and love, the general spirit of which is indicated in the author's Christian quest:

A trusting faith,
A simple creed,
A tender heart
For those in need;
The strength to act,
The grace to wait,
A frank contempt
Of fear or fate.

MIRRORS, by MARGARET TOD RITTER (Macmillan. $1.25). Poems of a young writer, the quality of whose work has found recognition in wide and varied magazine publication. That is not always a proof of merit, but these poems are mostly characterized by vigor in conception and by strength and precision in technique.

POEMS OF PROGRESS, by HERBERT GAY SISSON (Lincoln Press, Dayton, O. $1.00). The poems of a business man who would ". . . rather play 'peek' with the baby

Than write the best 'pome' of the year."

Jingling, musical rhymes devoted more to progress in personal ambition and business success than to progress as a social ideal. One will not find here great heights or depths, but there is much good sentiment and common-sense philosophy. The book has already attained wide circulation.

PH.D.'S, by LEONARD BACON (Harper). The sub-title, Male and Female Created He Them, prepares one to expect delightful satire. The reader will not be disappointed. Mr. Bacon is going to have a real place among American humorous poets.

POEMS, by I. P. PATCH, D.D. (Times-Tribune Co., Altoona, Pa. $1.00. Order through The Pilgrim Press). Dr. Patch is a retired Congregational minister, a beneficiary of the Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief. The expense of publishing Dr. Patch's poems has been borne by appreciative friends so that proceeds from the sale will directly benefit the author. At least one of these poems, The Unknown Soldier, has appeared in The Congregationalist. Some of the poems are of primarily personal interest but the volume as a whole has wider reference expressing the genial spirit of one who believed in God, his country and his fellow-men. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, in a fine personal tribute to Dr. Patch's ministry, says this of his poetry:

Those who knew him will follow him sympathetically in the wide range of his songs from Nature to Friends; from Country to City; from National Pride and Glory to International Duty and Responsibility. Those who were denied personal acquaintance will find themselves very "friendly disposed" as they sample his spirit in his simple but stirring verses, and will feel within them all the heart beat of the pioneer and the patriot, which are the raw material out of which manly and moving poets are made; nor will they miss the flavor of that confident piety which, believing that "God's in His Heaven" cherishes the abiding, cheerful faith that "all's well with the world."

EARTH MOODS, by HERVEY ALLEN (Harper. $2.00). An attempt by a poet, whose former books critics have highly appraised, to put in poetical form some of the modern scientific conceptions of life. The evolutionary struggle from fire mist to man gives to the poetical, as well as to the deeply religious spirit a new significance to common things. It calls also, as a theme, for vastness of conception and largeness of treatment, and the first portion of this volume is of epic quality. In the section, "Other Poems," are a number of lyrical, narrative, and mystical pieces.

SANDS ON THE SHORE, by SUSANNE ALICE RANLETT (Morehouse Publishing Co.). This volume comes to us from the publishers of the Living Church, in the columns of which, and in those of other of our religious contemporaries, many of the poems have appeared. A large section of the book is devoted to "Religious Poems." The poems as a whole are marked by chasteness in form and feeling and by deeply mystical quality. We like particularly such poems as Things, The Veiled Guide, and The Wayside Flower, among many that are noteworthy.

WINDY LEAF, by FRANCES GILL (Macmillan. $1.25). Poems for children of great delicacy and unusual merit in which beauty of thought and expression is finely molded to the child mind. So excellent that grown-ups as well will find much delight in the volume.

AZRAEL AND OTHER POEMS, by ROBERT GILBERT WELSH. Preface by Charles Hanson TOWNE (Appleton. $1.50). Welsh was dramatic critic on a New York paper, writer of short plays and magazine verse. He lost his life in Bermuda trying to save from drowning a girl he did not know. His friend Towne collected these verses from various papers and magazines and writes a short tribute to the author. There is lilt and music to his poetry, a large variety of themes from An Easter Legend to Fiddlin' Murphy and real imagination and sympathy.

Plays

OLD ENGLISH, by JOHN GALSWORTHY (Scribners. $1.00). This play is said to have been well received when put on the stage recently in New York. Its dramatic quality centers in its principal character, nicknamed for his bulldog qualities, "Old English," a "Company Chairman," and dominating figure in the business world, who finds himself in old age, owing to a disastrous mining venture, with one foot in bankruptcy and the other in the grave. It provides material for realistic acting, but as a play to be read it is somewhat disappointing. We hope to discuss editorially a problem of interpretation and of moral and social values which the play emphasizes in the conception of "strength."

THE FLATTERING WORD, AND OTHER ONE-ACT PLAYS, by GEORGE KELLY (Little, Brown. $1.50). The author of these plays was for several years a vaudeville actor appearing in one-act plays of his own authorship, four of which are given in this volume. One, Poor Aubrey, became expanded into a full-length play, The Show-Off, which was one of the successes of last year. The title play is an amusing skit on the cleavage between the church and the stage.

JESUS, by ODIN GREGORY (Colony Pub. Co.). This is a second edition of a play concerned with the last two days of the life of Jesus.

Recent Fiction

WATLING'S, by HORACE ANNESLEY VACHALL (Stokes. $2.00). A modern department store in London is Watling's. Its owner is a self-made man with a charming daughter loved by a man of aristocratic family. The young man's character is broadened when he enters the business against the wishes of his family and eventually the old order gives way to the new. It is an absorbing story.

THE LOW ROAD, by ISABELLA HOLT (Macmillan. $2.50). Juliana chose "the low road" of marriage after several attempts at following the adventurous "high road" of a career. It is a clever attempt to picture the modern girl's unrest and her feeling that she is fitted for something superior to marriage. However Juliana eventually settles down to domestic life with far more contentment than is usually the case with girls of her temperament.

MIRACLE, by CLARENCE BUDINGTON KELLAND (Harpers. $2.00). The plot of this story depends on the curing of a blind man by prayers at the Catholic shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupré.

RED RIDING HOOD, by ELIZABETH JORDAN (Century. $2.00). Why an efficient young woman should be unnerved by the recurrent dream of a wolf and faint at a sound resembling a wolf's howl over a telephone is just part of the unusual mystery that distinguishes this story. It is light and attractive reading.

OBLIGATIONS, by ELIZABETH YORK MILLER (Century. $2.00). A new edition of a story which centers around a woman's sense of obligation to a man whom she had accidently injured in childhood.

SELWOOD OF SLEEPY CAT, by FRANK H. SPEARMAN (Scribners. $2.00). The story of a gambler who is also "quick on the trigger." He ultimately gives up gambling under the influence of a woman he loves but the interesting parts of the book are so inextricably woven with the idea of gambling and shooting "on the level" that the influence of the book is not apt to be wholesome for the young.

Any book mentioned in these columns may be obtained through the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Scales of Justice

By Rose Brooks

Aunt Margaret, unobserved, watched her small niece, Betty Breed, with puzzled eyes. Her guest for a month was Betty,—a welcome guest in the quiet, New Hampshire farmhouse —but, at times, a perplexing one.

Playing store with Betty under the old gnarled apple tree were Barabra and Marjory Allen, Aunt Margaret's neighbors, and as happy and rollicking a little pair of country girls as lived, the world over. Scraps of their conversation, drifting to Aunt Margaret's ears, as she sat mending on the piazza, had caused the puzzle in her gray eyes.

"She wears such funny shoes," came in Betty's voice. "She came to see Aunt Margaret the other day, and I never saw such funny shoes. I didn't know anybody ever wore high, laced-up shoes any more."

"I don't care if she does," came Barbara's swift defense. "Guess if she made you cold, slippery desserts when you had such a sore throat you couldn't swallow, you wouldn't care if she wore rubber boots!"

"Guess if she told you to help yourself to her raisin cookies without asking, guess you wouldn't—" Marjory's voice broke in indignation, and the rest of her loyal defense of "Miss Martha," a cherished neighbor, was lost to Aunt Margaret's ears.

"And she leaves off her gs," continued Betty's voice, cool and unperturbed.

"Mercy!" ejaculated Aunt Margaret, springing up in such haste that three spools rolled maddeningly out of reach under the couch. "Mercy! What ails that child! She's a dear, helpful child and I'm fond of her, but this constant criticism of every human being who comes her way! It's going to be cured! Dear Miss Martha! Where on earth are my old medicine scales, anyway?" and determined, if incoherent, Aunt Margaret threw her mending in a heap and took matters into her own capable hands.

Five minutes later, she walked serenely out the side door, a pair of balanced medicine scales in one hand, a jar of white pebbles, hoarded for the growing of indoor, winter lilies, in the other.

"Playing store?" she asked guilelessly, her quick eyes taking instant stock of the aura of superiority that Betty was casting about herself, and of the indignation all too apparent on the faces of Barbara and Marjory, who were taking little boxes and bottles off the improvised "store" shelves and packing them with decision in their market basket.

"We were," began Betty.

"We're going home," said Barbara briefly.

"We love Miss Martha and Mrs. Martin in the village, and 'Uncle Tom,' cause he makes us willow whistles and—and—" exploded Marjory, and Aunt Margaret, though she looked blank, understood completely.

"Who doesn't?" she asked warmly. "We all do."

"Mrs. Martin and Uncle Tom—" began Betty, but Aunt Margaret cut her short. "I've just telephoned your mother," said she, "asking if you may stay for luncheon. It's such a hot walk over the meadow, and she said you may, and Nora is this minute making cookies, and goodness knows what, and she says she is going to spread the table under the trees." As she spoke, Aunt Margaret gently unpacked the market basket, ranging little boxes and labeled bottles on the shelves. "I want to play, too. I'm tired of mending. See, I've brought my little old balancing scales. Every good store has scales. I'll play I'm all sorts of people, coming to buy. First, I'm Uncle Tom—"

"What are the pebbles for?" asked Betty, always curious. "To put on the shelf for lump sugar?"

"No, for me to play with. I may want them. You needn't weigh my groceries. Just leave the scales on the counter."

"But why did you bring them?" Betty was more curious still.

"Just for me to play my own game with. Now come, Miss Betty Breed, keeper of this store, I'm Uncle Tom and I want a can of salmon for my two cats—"

Betty, delighted always when her pretty aunt took time to play, took a little bottle off the shelf. "Aunt Margaret, don't you think Uncle Tom ought to have his hair cut oftener?" she began. "Barbara says,"—but Betty's speech stopped at sight of Aunt Margaret gravely dropping a white pebble into one side of the scales.

"We're weighing Uncle Tom," she explained cheerfully. "There's one pebble against him for letting his hair go untidy." Betty looked triumphantly at Barbara and Marjory. "And here's one pebble for him for pruning my roses for me, and never letting me pay him a cent. Says all the pay he wants is to see the roses," and quietly she dropped a pebble in the other side.

"His boots are muddy when he comes in the house," said Betty, and Aunt Margaret dropped a pebble against him.

"He shovels out my path every winter storm," and she dropped a pebble for him.

"He chopped all our wood last winter when father was sick," Barbara offered eagerly, and Aunt Margaret handed her a pebble.

"Poof! He did more'n that! Didn't he milk the cows a whole week?" Marjory and Uncle Tom were nothing short of chums. Aunt Margaret handed her a pebble.

"I don't care." Betty was an obstinate little Betty. "He doesn't own a necktie!"

"He has two chipmunks who trust him and come to him to be fed every morning, and he buys them peanuts when he hasn't much money and goes without something himself. Maybe a necktie. Pebble for each chipmunk," ended Aunt Margaret.

"And he gets the mail for old Mrs. Green, 'cause it's too far away for her to walk even to her box and he says he's her nearest neighbor and that's what neighbors are for."

"And he brought Mother a lot of iris bulbs to plant round our new little pond—"

Pebble piled on pebble till Uncle Tom's kindnesses were so many that not another pebble could be added. "How much better he is than bad!" said Aunt Margaret in great content. "Now I'll be Mrs. Martin."

Mrs. Martin she was, and Miss Martha by turn, and fast flew the tongues and fast piled the pebbles. Truly Aunt Margaret had carried the battle into Betty's own camp. In each case the result was the same. Betty was still an obstinate little Betty, and her observation was quick and her wits were keen. But loyal were Barbara and Marjory, and loyal was Aunt Margaret, and Mrs. Martin and Miss Martha came off victorious by great odds, as had Uncle Tom.

"Now," announced Aunt Margaret with unshaken cheerfulness, "now I'm Miss Betty Breed."

For an instant Betty showed symptoms of crying, but bravely and unexpectedly came the words, "All right. But I guess I won't come out the same way."

"One pebble for my brave little niece," said Aunt Margaret warmly. "And a big, fat pebble, too."

"Oh, Betty doesn't mean anything," said Barbara in quick sympathy.

"Another pebble for Betty, because there must be something fine beneath her surface if Barbara sees it," and Aunt Margaret added the second pebble.

"She doesn't know them the way we do," said Marjory so eagerly that Aunt Margaret gave her a hug. "Another pebble for Betty, vouched for by Marjory.

"She's a very helpful little girl about the house. She's very kind always to animals. She wipes the dishes for Nora every night," Aunt Margaret dropped three more pebbles and silence fell.

"There aren't any pebbles against me," said Betty, and down went her head in Aunt Margaret's lap. Again silence while Aunt Margaret gently patted the brown head.

"You haven't any of you said anything against anybody! You haven't said anything against me! I'm the only one that's said anything against anybody!" Betty's voice was muffled. The sentences were spaced by deep silence.

Aunt Margaret's answer was an uncounted handful of pebbles. "All for my own little niece because she was so quick to see! Fun! Well, you'll see what fun it is to find everybody has more nice things than unpleasant ones. Yes, every single body has. Just you look, and you'll find them every time. Mercy! There's Nora. Lunch time? Who'd believe it? The scales? Oh, I'll leave them,—my present to the store equipment."

(All rights reserved)

Neighbor Cricket

By Jean H. Brown

Ho! Ho! Neighbor Cricket beneath that gray stone,
What are you doing out there all alone?

Neighbor Boy, I am finding a place in the mold,
Where I shall be safe from the fierce winter's cold.

Then, good Neighbor Cricket, will you still sing your song,
That you have been singing the whole summer long?

No, no, Neighbor Boy, my singing is done,
When the days shorten up with the course of the sun.

But, oh, Neighbor Cricket, I much wish to know,
What will you be doing out there in the snow?

Neighbor Boy, if beneath this gray stone you will peep,
You will find that I'm snugly and soundly asleep.

OUR READERS' FORUM

Approves Mr. Boynton's Attitude

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

There are many good and helpful things in our paper, but to my mind the most vital and most needed message in a long time is in Mr. Boynton's "More Emphasis on the Spiritual" in the July 16th issue. He has pointed out the weakness of our present religious life, clearly and forcibly.

Experience at one National Council of the "loose, not to say unmoral" way in which the resolution business was managed has led me ever since to doubt the value of all resolutions passed by such bodies. If the coming Council would omit all talk of resolutions on debatable topics and find some way of rousing every local church to more emphasis on the spiritual, I believe the Recording Angel would note it as our greatest Council so far. In the hope that it may do so I nominate Mr. Boynton or some one like-minded for the moderatorship. Of course this is irregular, for I am not a delegate, but I think it may be permissible to give the delegates a hint of what stay-at-homes would like.

Redfield, S. D. ELIZABETH H. AVERY.

No Merger for the A. M. A.

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

While thinking of the proposed merger, there has come before me a paper regarding the American Missionary Association, so deeply concerned in this matter, written by the late Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, from which I quote:

I am more and more deeply impressed with the wide sweep of the work of the Association. It touches closely on questions which are taxing the statesmanship of the world. We know something about the matter as it stands in our own country. Yet comparatively few seem to realize how vitally the questions which arise in connection with our possessions and dependencies, as well as with the presence of the colored race in the Southern and the Northern States of our Union, affect the very core and liber of our character as a people.

It should never be forgotten, concerning the American Missionary Association, that it is dealing in its work with one of the great affairs of nations; that while it does not indeed have treaties and national policies to decide upon, it is dealing directly with the great principles and issues on which these policies must be founded: and while its officers are not numbered among the great rulers or officials of the nations, it is, through the acts of these officers, and through the work of the institutions which it maintains, dealing in a very immediate and practical way with problems which are instigating the movements of nations, perplexing cabinets, burdening kings and prime ministers, and plaguing the hearts of peoples; and that in thus doing it is outlining the great truths and upholding the great spiritual realities by which every policy must be judged and every issue decided.

We ought to realize the particular demands made upon the officers of the Association in such an enterprise, and upon those who are engaged in the different departments of its widespread work. The officers need to be men of statesmanlike grasp of great principles, of dominating facts, of threatening issues and opening possibilities; and yet they have an enormous amount of detail to attend to or to overlook.

The imperative necessity of the work, its infinite importance, its promise, and the great results already reached, are a constant spur and inspiration.

It seems impossible to think that anything less than all the forces now concerned in carrying on the American Missionary Association could deal with its difficult work, involving so many relations and situations which do not enter into the work of other home boards. It is also impossible to suppose that the income for its work would not, in case of a merger, very soon and greatly diminish. If its constituency in general will but consider the facts in the case, the Association will surely not be allowed to lose its individual and necessary place as heretofore, but rather receive increase of powers instead of curtailment.

Newburgh, N. Y. LYDIA HARRIS HAMLIN.

Regarding the Situation in China

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

The enclosed copy of the resolutions adopted by the American Staff present at Canton Christian College, Canton, China, on June 24, has been sent to me by my son, Raymond Thomas Rich, a member of the faculty, with the request that it be given publicity. The Shameen District is the foreign section of Canton. The incident is comparable to the Boston Massacre.

WILLIS DOANE RICH.

Boston, July 22, 1925.

The resolutions accompanying Mr. Rich's letter are as follows:

RESOLUTIONS OF AMERICAN STAFF PRESENT AT CANTON CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

Whereas, on the afternoon of June 23, 1925, a Chinese patriotic parade marching along the Bund and Shakee, Canton, was fired upon by Shameen troops, and

Whereas, the parade was proceeding in an orderly manner and was composed largely of students and workmen, unarmed and defenceless, and

Whereas, in consequence of the shooting, many were killed and wounded, including members of our staff and student body,

Be it therefore freely and voluntarily resolved, that we, American members of the Canton Christian College, express our horror and regret that such an outrage should have occurred, and

That we are of the opinion that the blame and responsibility for the merciless and unjustified assault rests upon those who directed the firing from Shameen, and

That we express to our Chinese colleagues, students, and friends our deep felt sympathy and our support, and

That since we feel that the world has been inadequately informed of the Chinese viewpoint, we are determined to co-operate with the Chinese in the presentation of their case, and

That we make our position known directly to the American Government and to the American people, with the hope that America will do all in her power to assist China in securing just treatment and in realizing her aims to free herself from foreign imperialism.

Unanimously adopted by the Seventeen American Staff Members at Canton Christian College.

(Signed) RAYMOND THOMAS RICH.

June 24, 1925.

The Congregational College Idea

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

In the consolidation of boards specific emphasis must be safeguarded. An institution outlasts a life. Important as the religious education of youth is, an institution dedicated to that high task along Congregational lines is still more important. The great work of the old Collegiate Education Society was reborn in the Congregational Foundation for Education. Needed attention to that type of work was thus emphasized. Increased financial aid was given to accredited institutions. Expert guidance was provided. Often the by-product of the Foundation, interest was many times larger than the direct help.

The Pacific University is the oldest institution of higher learning in the Pacific Northwest. The interest of the Foundation came at a critical moment. A small grant gave the trustees assurance of a president's salary. The conditions imposed aroused the State Conference and the Oregon Congregationalists. Thirty thousand dollars was raised to close the current college year without debt. The new president, Dr. John F. Dobbs, takes charge with the confident hope that 100 freshmen will join him in the first year of his administration.

In combining the educational interests into a single society it would be a serious loss to lessen in any way the Foundation idea illustrated in Pacific.

The new educational division of our work might well be called "The College and Education Boards."

Seattle, Wash. LUCIUS O. BAIRD.

Concerning Dr. Adams' Pastorate

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

In your notice of the death of Dr. James A. Adams, in the issue of July 2, it is stated that he was pastor of Pilgrim Church, St. Louis, 1883-6. The late lamented Coustaus L. Goodell was the honored pastor of that church during those years. Dr. Adams was pastor of the small Plymouth Church, which long since ceased to exist. Doubtless others will call your attention to the mistake but I am not willing that it should pass uncorrected.

Wichita, Kan. G. S. RICKER.

A Kentuckian's Viewpoint

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

If space permits I would add a word to the discussion of the "Scopes Case" and "Tennessee Situation." I do not reside in Tennessee, but within walking distance of the state line, and among people of substantially the same type. And you will remember that Kentucky missed by but one vote the distinction which has fallen to our Southern neighbor.

A careful reading of President Maurer's editorial discloses nothing to which I would take exception—unless it be that he has stated the case for Tennessee too mildly.

I am particularly displeased with the freedom with which the term "ignorant" has been hurled at our anti-evolution people. It is not a mark of superior culture to look with disdain upon those who have enjoyed less educational opportunities than ourselves.

These are mountain states, with the disadvantages and advantages of being situated a bit aside from the highways of travel. I can look from my porch across the hills enclosing the lonely mountain valleys where public schools must be discontinued with the coming of winter because what pass for roads are then entirely impassable, and remember that Lincoln was reared among conditions even more primitive and difficult. Perhaps there never would have been a Lincoln but for these mountains and mountain people. And who knows but future Lincolns may have been peering in through the windows at the Scopes trial?

Of course a large portion of these people fail to distinguish between theistic and atheistic evolution, as they fail to distinguish between the Bible and religion. They take their Bible straight, as they take their shooting—and their whiskey. But they are not wholly "ignorant." They know their own souls, and know how to take care of themselves in situations which might embarrass their critics—a kind of wisdom which may rank along with knowledge of books and scientific theories.

Granted the anti-evolution law was a mistake, and quite likely Tennessee would now repeal it if she could do so and save her face, it was a mistake made in good faith, and as a protest against errors more serious than found mention in the Dayton trial.

Our modern educational program has pretty much fallen into the error of substituting scholastic attainments for personality as a qualification for teaching. This error has descended from the universities down to the public schools —not passing by the denominational colleges. Granted we may have both personality and scholarship in the teaching profession. We are not likely to get both unless we go after them—and in the order of their importance. The Tennessee legislature made a mistake in diagnosing the disease, and prescribed the wrong remedy. But this was better than to ignore the disease.

Nor need we deplore too greatly "the shouting and the tumult" at Dayton. It is by such means that truth is promoted. More people are reading their Bibles and their text-books on science than ever before.

No doubt the trial would have been conducted with greater dignity and less mental confusion if the distinguished attorneys from abroad had left the matter to local talent. The purpose of the trial was not "martyrdom," but the bringing of the case before the higher courts, and the defendant will not be the loser by the experience.

We Congregationalists must not forget the days of Horace Bushnell and our fight for freedom. Tennessee is having much the same fight, doubtless with much the same issue. Modern science is here having her birth-pangs. Be patient. The man-child will be worth the pain.

Do not take the matter too seriously. We are not going to set up auto da fes nor establish a state religion. We are going to send our young people away to school, and gradually accustom ourselves to the new-fangled ideas they bring home. In a little while we shall be smiling at our monkey legislation, and forget it all. In the meantime give us credit for being sincere, devout,—and progressive!

Williamsburg, Ky. ALMON O. STEVENS.

Should We Build Cathedrals?

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

I am interested in the letter of William Colton Clark, appearing in your issue of June 11.

I agree with much that he says, but still believe that it would be an excellent thing to build a Congregational cathedral in Washington, and in our individual states, for two specific reasons.

First, it would be a bond of connectional union of churches severely individualistic in their standing and procedure, and thus would promote a sympathetic affiliation that would be much enjoyed, and at times might be distinctly beneficial.

Then, is it not a fact that the Congregational body is the oldest religious communion of the country, and, if for any reason it was necessary to designate a national church, this would give it pre-eminence in this respect. Of course, no such reason will ever arise, but I think our historical record is something to be kept in memory, and the cathedral in its special setting might perpetuate this.

In my own State of Iowa, at the present time, the erection of such an edifice in our capital city of Des Moines, would seem to promise much definitely stimulating and helpful, particularly for the first reason that I have given. We appear to have been losing ground in Des Moines, and the razing of the fine old Plymouth structure there, is a distinct set-back to our Congregational standing.

But if the old communicants of Plymouth, backed by the membership of the other Congregational churches in Des Moines, would rise to a high ideal, and contribute to such, so that every Congregational church in the State of Iowa would logically contribute, too, something might go up in the capital city that would be the very acme of usefulness, inspiration, and character-creating.

Such an edifice would stand for much, as every Congregationalist in the State of Iowa would have a part in it. I would not call it a cathedral, but select a name peculiarly our own, which would emphasize the warmth of Christian fellowship and the consciousness of nearness to God that Mr. Clark speaks of.

I believe that in Iowa, at least, a movement like this would feature activity and expression of inconceivable value to her Congregational churches.

Iowa City, Ia. GEORGE BENNETT.

A Helpful Hymn

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

On page 754 of the June 11th issue of The Congregationalist, the last item on the page is a quotation beginning: "You think the world ignores you as you pass along," and is given as Author Unknown. The following information may be of interest to you.

This is the second verse of a song entitled "When Your Life Rings True." It is Number 18 of Life and Service Hymns published by the Onward Press, Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va. The author is A. Printzian Bowen; the composer, B. D. Ackley, and the words and music are copyrighted by him, 1917. It is owned by the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, and published by their permission. The full hymn is as follows:

Does your life ring out for Jesus with a note of cheer,
Telling to the world he daily grows more dear;
It will vibrate through the distance with his love for you,
And come back in joyous echo, when your life rings true.

Chorus:

When your life rings true, when your life rings true,
There will be an echo, coming back to you;
When your life rings true, when your life rings true,
There will be an echo, when your life rings true.

You may think the world ignores you as you pass along,
Caring nothing for your stand against the wrong;
But no matter what your station or what you may do,
Worldly friends are quick to know it when your life rings true.

Chorus:

You may never know that you have help'd some one to win,
In the struggle for the vict'ry over sin;
You may never see the fruit of loving deeds you do,
But there is an echo somewhere, when your life rings true.

Chorus:

My grandfather, father, and I have all been Congregational ministers. At present I am working in the Presbyterian department of the Kingdom's Home Missions.

I still subscribe for The Congregationalist.

Tuscaloosa, Ala. I. ALVA HART.

Applied Psychology in Giving

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

The article by Secretary Brownlee in your issue of July 9 brings out a phase in the psychology of giving that needs to be emphasized. It is the idea of giving to causes in the concrete rather than to an abstract organization. Our present apportionment plan, with all its advantages, tends to create a condition of giving blindly—giving to a general fund rather than to definite objects. There is a loss at this point, educationally and psychologically.

In my seminary days we held a monthly missionary meeting, at which an offering was tak with no definite object in view. It was mere missionary money. At the end of each year decided by vote where it should go. I had t care of this fund. At one meeting a rep sentative of one of our missionary societ gave a stirring address, presenting the nee of the cause. When I passed the box for t usual offering, one student had a dollar b ready to put in, but paused to ask if the offe ing was for this special work. When I to him it was simply for the general fund, withheld the dollar and substituted a dime.

This was an object lesson in the psycholo of giving which has always stood by me. As pastor, in the arranging of church benevolenc I made it a point to bring up the several Co gregational benevolences in regular order in way such that the offering at any given tir would be for a definite object or cause, wi due enlightenment as to what the cause si nified. The plan worked.

With the coming in of the apportionme plan, it was not so easy to focus the attenti of givers upon particular causes. The difficul increased with the growing practice of pooli the offerings and centralizing the work of divi ing up the money among the several societie Half the trouble in getting people to give h always been the failure to get their attenti directed to worthy causes and their need Blind giving does not appeal. We must kee the apportionment plan, but we must also fi a way under that plan to get the vision worthy causes before the eyes of the people.

Shelburne Falls, Mass. D. H. STRONG.

Favors Merger with Presbyterians

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

After reading the article in The Congreg tionalist for June 11, 1925, headed "Not Read for Presbyterian Merger," I have been forced t meditate some and I find my reasoning, in th light of history and experience, not at all i harmony with that of the writer.

Is it not a fact that balanced progress ha and still does come through the associating t gether of three classes of folks? One clas pushes rapidly forward to new thought an discovery, another class holds tight to wha they have and that largely inherited, while third class is neither progressive nor reactio ary but seems to be the balance wheel in th interest of humanity.

It occurs to me that the Presbyterians repre sent the two former classes and are in need a balance wheel.

Then again I am reminded that Jesus sai that the whole need no physician but the sic The Presbyterians need us more today tha they did a few years ago or may ten year hence. A physician soon loses his standin when he refuses to answer a call, even thoug the road may be rough and long.

It seems to me that a merger would be good thing, even though it does take some tim to get the machinery to running smoothly. N new machine ever runs as smoothly as afte it has been in motion for a while. We hav learned to disagree in an agreeable way an if those who haven't caught the spirit yet ar to catch it, it will be through contact. Th germ of tolerance is not often found flying i space but is harbored in comparatively fe folks and if we put them in a "pest house there will be little chance for others to get i

If we refuse to answer the call when ther is a need, even though the road is rough, w surely can't expect to be called when there i no need, the road is smooth, and everything i in our favor.

Murdo, S. D. E. C. SALTER.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

Young People's Conferences

North Dakotans at Valley City

The third annual North Dakota Young People's Conference at Valley City was a great success. Nearly a hundred people were present, many of them driving from far distant points over muddy roads to attend the sessions. The principal speakers were Rev. E. L. Nolting of Madura, India, and Rev. H. T. Stock of Boston.

In addition to the excellent program provided, the camp was a success principally because of the fine spirit shown by the young people. Not only did they maintain throughout the conference a jubilant enthusiasm, but entered whole-heartedly into the camp program. Four classes were held each morning, led by Mr. Nolting, Mr. Stock, Mr. Nugent of Valley City, and Mrs. Nugent. In the afternoon there was a sport program under the direction of the athletic director, Rev. E. L. Bosworth, minister of First, Grand Forks.

The greatest tribute that could be given the camp is that such a large number of those present were there for the second and third time, and some, before leaving, expressed their intention to return next year. Considerable credit is due Supt. A. C. Hacke, Rev. George Ross, and Rev. T. L. Nugent of Valley City.

The Valley City Camp, held on the banks of the Cheyenne River at Chautauqua Park, was for the southern part of the state. Another camp is held at Velva for the people living in the northern part of North Dakota.

Texas Young People at Lake Worth

It was the first essay of the Texas Congregationalists, but the clans responded and the Young People's Conference, July 14-20, was a north-while success. A group of five drove 95 miles from the Panhandle, another of nine came 300 miles from Houston, a third of four in equal distance from San Antonio, and the total registration reached 80. The class instruction was of a high order, and the young people to a remarkable degree were loyal to the whole course. Each morning there were four classes and a recreation period. Rev. S. T. McKinney of Fort Worth had the Bible course; Miss Anna Estelle May of Boston, Young People and the Community; Dr. F. M. Sheldon, Oklahoma City, The Christian Life; Dr. A. E. Ricker, Dallas, The Conquest of the Frontier. The leadership in music was in the competent hands of Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Dickey, while Rev. W. H. Thomlinson took the recreational element in hand and made it a delightful feature for all.

The night services were a concert of noble excellence by Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Dickey, a lecture by Dr. F. M. Sheldon, an ordination service in which Mr. and Mrs. Dickey were set apart to the gospel ministry, following a council in which they were examined and approved, and a "stunt night" on Saturday given at the beautiful "Point" above the lake. Probably upwards of a hundred people were in attendance first and last. Lake Worth afforded boating and bathing, to the great delight of all, while the bugle calls by Mr. Thomlinson, marking all periods, as well as the share of his cornet and Mrs. Thomlinson's clarinet in the musical features were appreciated contributions to the daily order. Sunday, the closing day, was one of rich experience and uplift. Dr. Sheldon's messages at Morning Watch, the Sunday School session, and at Vespers were in his happiest vein, and the closing consecration meeting led by Miss Sophie Smith, with closing address by Dr. A. E. Ricker, was marked by a tender and purposeful spirit.

A federation of the young people of the state was effected with the purpose of promoting attendance next year. The president is Miss Sophie Smith, San Antonio, while Miss Ruth M. Ricker was chosen as the representative in the superintendent's office, and leaders in different sections of the state were provided. The common sentiment of the conference was not only that this session has been a success but that the young people of Texas will meet in similar assemblies annually hereafter.

A. E. R.

Pomona College the Host

The sixth annual conference of our Southern California Congregational young people was held June 29-July 6. In the Pomona College halls they came together about 300 strong, with a faculty of about 30. Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Gaylord were host and hostess this year as last. A great enthusiasm has been built up in the young people's groups of our churches for this gathering, and many are eager to be included a second time or more.

The periods for solid study were held in the forenoons; in the afternoons recreation; and in the evenings stunts, addresses, general programs.

At 8.30 A.M. were given ten courses on practical program building in the local church. There were three groups: for the younger high school, led by Miss Alice Lindsley and Rev. William Forshaw; for the older high school, led by Miss Hope Potter, Mrs. Lawrence Wilson, Mrs. James Enman, and Mr. James Wallace; for the college and business group, led by Miss Mary Annin, Rev. W. A. Tate, and Mr. W. G. Pierce.

There followed at 9.20 courses on "The Old Religion and the New World," given by Rev. A. D. Stauffacher and Prof. R. C. Brooks.

At 10.40 A.M. there was a choice of 20 courses in two sections. Section A: "The History of Congregationalism," Rev. Paul Davies; "International Relations," Rev. K. S. Beam; "Science and Religion," Rev. H. K. Booth; "Young People and the Life of Today," Rev. L. A. Wilson; "Interracial Problems in Southern California," Rev. J. K. Holmes; "Christianity in the Orient," by a missionary; "The World Youth Movement," Rev. Perry Schrock; "The Congregational Youth Movement," Sec. H. T. Stock; "Young People's Program Activities," Rev. E. D. Gaylord.

And Section B: "High School Life Problems," Supt. G. F. Kenngott; "Student Standards," Prof. R. J. Taylor; "Modern Use of the Bible," Rev. H. F. Burr; "World Program of the Church," Rev. J. K. Holmes; "Christianity in the Orient," by a missionary; "Interracial Problems in Southern California," Rev. Paul Waterhouse; "Young People and the Life of Today," Rev. Lawrence Wilson; "International Relations," Rev. K. S. Beam; "The World Youth Movement," Rev. Perry Schrock; "The Congregational Youth Movement," Rev. H. T. Stock.

For the evening vespers the young people enjoyed such leaders as Rev. Watts O. Pye, Rev. H. T. Stock, and others. Those stunt nights, mixers, receptions, the play by the

Fathers and Sons in the Ministry

XXIX. The Hiebs

Rev. Louis Hieb, of Hartington, Neb., was a missionary in Ceylon under the Y. M. C. A. two decades ago, and there the son Stephen was born. Returning to America, Mr. Hieb was pastor in Colorado, served under the Y. M. C. A. during the war, and more recently was pastor in Franklin, Neb. He is now serving the Hartington Community Church, a union of the Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian Churches.

REVS. LOUIS AND STEPHEN HIEB

* *

Stephen graduated from Doane College, studied a year in Oberlin Seminary and one year in Union. During the past year he has been specializing in education at the University of Nebraska, from which institution he has obtained his master's degree. He expects to go to Ceylon in the fall under the American Board and welcomes the opportunity to go back and give himself to missionary service in the land of his birth. A sister, Helen, is secretary of the mission at Foochow, China.

Pomona young people, and the pageant by the Claremont group—all these got hearty welcome. As the Glorious Fourth came in the week much was made of it in the afternoon and evening, with an address by Rev. G. B. Oxnam of Los Angeles on "The Characteristics of an American." Also a Sunday furnished a lofty peak of inspiration; with the morning sermon by Rev. A. F. Stauffacher of the Claremont Church, an afternoon organ recital, and the annual Communion Service which the young people conducted, and the discussion at Vespers, "Our Conference Youth Movement."

From some of our Congregational churches the delegates prefer to go to the Christian Endeavor Conventions. Others perhaps are represented at both. The choice more generally, however, now is with the distinctive Congregational Young People's Conference. The element of thought is seen by the program to be strong and significant. Nor is the fun less abundant; and the fellowship is attractive and abiding. The permanent results for character and leadership are valuable beyond estimation.

C. F.

Kansas Conference

The sixth annual conference for young people and the fourth for pastors and church workers, recently held at Eureka Park, Manhattan, was the best ever. More young people registered for work than in any previous year, and a more devoted, earnest body of young people could not be found anywhere. Courses were offered in Bible, Methods of Church Work, Missions, Congregational History, and Pageantry. Rev. R. A. Eusden, pastor of Plymouth, Lawrence, was dean of the school and proved himself a real leader and general. Finances were handled by Rev. W. E. Dull of Lenora, and the conference paid all expenses with a small balance in the treasury.

Twenty-seven churches sent delegates and the total enrollment was 128. Lenora led, with 14 in attendance, and Douglass and Cumberland came second with 11 enrolled.

The conference offers a four years' course, and Miss Francis Black of Douglass and Karl Bosworth of Kiowa completed the work and will be awarded Leadership Training Certificates. Eight other young people have completed three of the four years' course provided. It is interesting to note that more than 500 young people have been present at one or more of these conferences.

The vote of the young people was unanimous for a similar camp in 1926.

From East to West

MAINE

Growth at North, New Portland

The first year of Rev. M. W. Russell's work as pastor of NORTH, NEW PORTLAND, which ended July 1, was a remarkable year. The church membership nearly doubled. A Cradle Roll of 34 names, of which Mrs. Russell is superintendent, has been added to the Sunday School. The church attendance has largely increased and is still growing, and a wonderful interest has been created among the young people of the community. May 24 was a great day for the church, when 23 persons were baptized and received into full membership. It was a beautiful sight to see whole families, father, mother, and children, come to the altar together, also 16 boys and girls from the Sunday School. One aged gentleman of 92 years was there.

A young people's choir has been organized and now furnishes the music. The choir is giving sacred concerts each Sunday evening. This is the result of personal work and a united effort on the part of the pastor, his wife, and the church members. During the year 33 were received into the church, 30 on profession.

Sunday, July 19, was observed as Children's Day, when eight infants were christened and one adult baptized and received into full membership. North New Portland is a village of about 200 population.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

New Finnish Worker

Rev. K. O. Julin has come to the state to work among the Finnish Congregationalists. This work was carried on for ten years by Rev. Wilhelm Leeman, who is now with the Massachusetts Bible Society. Mr. Julin has had experience in work of this kind at West Paris, Me., and later under the direction of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society. He will make Troy the center of his work in New Hampshire, and from there will visit the Finnish colonies in different sections of the state. It will be his endeavor to co-operate with the pastors of the English-speaking churches in bringing especially the younger generation of the Finnish folk into closer contact with the older churches.

Church Night at Rindge

RINDGE, Rev. B. A. Dumm, pastor, observed Church Night early in July with great success. There was a picnic supper on the church lawn, followed by a baseball game participated in by the young people. A Congregational World Service program was presented by Mrs. Eula Hale and participated in by 17 others, and the evening closed shortly before nine o'clock with the American Board's lecture on "The Ministry of Healing." This midweek gathering, with capacity attendance, is the auspicious beginning of purposeful church activity under the leadership of the new pastor, Dr. Dumm.

Improvements to Church Plants

During the summer months extensive improvements to the plants of many churches of the state are being undertaken.

At GORHAM, Rev. William Sinclair, pastor, during the pastor's vacation the roof of the church building is to be shingled, the auditorium repainted, a new carpet laid, and a new lighting system installed. Funds are in hand for these renovations.

At WOLFBORO, Rev. J. E. McMartin, pastor, the parsonage is undergoing complete renovation, new plumbing, steam heating, painting, and papering being included in the improvements. The cost is about $3,000.

At PITTSFIELD, Rev. W. I. Sweet, pastor, an addition is being made to the church building to provide a church parlor and other social rooms.

New Organs

FIRST, DOVER, Rev. L. E. Purdum, pastor, reports the sum of $4,200 on hand toward a $15,000 organ. "We are going after the rest," is the motto of church and parish.

FIRST, DOVER, Rev. L. E. Purdum, pastor, reports $4,500 raised toward their new pipe organ.

Work for Young People

BERLIN, Rev. E. W. Moore, pastor, reports the organization of a Young People's Society, and the attempt is being made to enlist the services of the young folk in ushering, taking the offering, etc.

Rev. W. D. Hoag of ANDOVER has started a Sunday service at Potter Place, an out-station of his parish. This service is for young people only, and the adults are excluded, the pastor insisting that they attend services at one of the regular times. This children's church mak uses of pageants, Biblical plays, etc., rath than a sermon.

Two new Sunday Schools have been start in the ALSTEAD Larger Parish: one at Firs Alstead, and one at South Alstead. The form church holds services but six months of t year. This work is in charge of Rev. J. M McLaren.

Special Days Observed

June 28 was observed as "Automobile Da at HARRISVILLE and MARLBORO, Rev. S. Long, pastor. All owning cars were asked bring them to church loaded with passenger MADBURY, Mr. Ray Danforth, student su ply, observed "Madbury Day" on a recent Sa urday, when the boys and girls and many the older people of the community came to t church and worked at improving the lawn.

Rededication at West Stewartstown

Early in July a service of rededication the church building and grounds was held WEST STEWARTSTOWN, Miss Harriet H. Albe pastor. Extensive improvements have bee carried out, including renewal of the found tions of the church building and parish hous re-decoration of the interior, renewal of t carpet and furniture, extensive grading of t exterior, and the preparation of a vacant lot the rear for a community playground. Ge erous assistance for this work was given b people of all denominations and of no denom nation residing in and visiting West Stewart town.

At the special service the pastor gave t historical address, and was assisted in the ser ice by Rev. J. R. Henderson of Colbrook, Re W. S. Frye of Canaan, and Secretary E. Stearns of the State Conference. This churc has lately become self-supporting, having me all its local expenses, and also made substa tial contributions to the wider enterprises our denomination.

MASSACHUSETTS

Hanover Center to Have Parish House

Under the expert leadership of Rev. H. Titus, HANOVER CENTER is in the midst of campaign for a $10,000 addition to the churc to meet the need of facilities for religious edu cation. Work will be begun the last of August Plans include a two-story building: on t first floor primary room and kitchen, with as sembly hall and four classrooms above. Th basement will provide for heating plant an Boy Scout headquarters. Changes will als be made within the present edifice, the galler removed and the interior of the auditorium re decorated. E. Ashton Perry, of Perry Pictures Malden, a former member of the church, among those actively interested.

Fine Work in Country Parishes

The work in the yoked fields of SOUTH WIL LIAMSTOWN and NEW ASHFORD, a home mis sionary outpost in the extreme northwes corner of the state, had practically lapsed fo a year previous to the coming of Rev. H. V Blackford in November. Since his arrival, new interest has been stimulated in the entire field. Sunday Schools have been organized i both churches, and a Christian Endeavor So ciety in South Williamstown, led by the pas tor's wife.

A new preaching appointment has been opened at a village five miles from any church During the winter a prayer meeting service was held weekly in New Ashford with some social features following, that brought out a larger average attendance than the regular Sunday services. Children's Day in South Williamstown was a red letter day for both church

d school. In connection with the regular ogram of the Sunday School, a pulpit Bible as presented in memory of Miss Charlotte eming, also a baptismal bowl in memory of rs. Minerva Gardner, presented by her three ughters.

Four new members were received, and 19 bies were baptized by Rev. W. M. Crane, e County Missionary.

ev. Frank Crook Leaves South Egremont

Through the resignation of Rev. Frank Crook SOUTH EGREMONT, a constructive ministry six years has been closed. During this riod, Mr. and Mrs. Crook entered heartily o all the varied interests of the community, d by their wide contacts not only endeared emselves to the members of the parish but de the little White Church a real commu- y center.

In recognition of their work a farewell re- ption was tendered them June 29. On this asion expressions of appreciation were ven by Rev. C. T. Chase of Great Barring- n, Mr. Ray Spurr, Deputy of the State ange, and Deacon C. T. Williams. As ther tokens of appreciation, Mrs. Crook was esented with a gold wrist watch by the rl Reserves organization. In behalf of the urch, the Grange and the Community Club, e pastor and wife were given a substantial n of money. Mr. Crook was also the re- ient of a fountain pen from the Pierian ys' Club. Mr. Crook begins his new work Groveland Aug. 1.

nor Mayflower Women

On June 24 the National Society of the D. R. dedicated at Plymouth a Memorial Foun- n in remembrance of the women of the May- wer. The address of the occasion was given Dr. Ashley D. Leavitt, Brookline. The morial is located near-by the Rock, and sists of a tapering pillar set in a circular in and bearing a large granite basin ve with a spraying water jet. On the sea- rd side of the pillar, in Tennessee marble, the figure of a Mayflower woman carrying a le. The presentation was made by Mrs. thony Wayne Cook, president, and accepted General Sweetser for the state.

ins at Central, Dorchester

CENTRAL, DORCHESTER, is steadily growing strength. On Easter Sunday there were accessions, on Children's Sunday, 16; June five. During July the church maintains a cation Bible School Tuesdays and Thurs- ys from 10 to 12. The course includes wor- p and study, recreation and handwork.

Bequest to South Acton

By the will of Mrs. Georgia E. Whitney of ston, SOUTH ACTON later receives $5,000.

CONNECTICUT

iny New Members for Center, Torrington

June was a banner month in the life of NTER, TORRINGTON. Signal honor came to fellowship in the reception of 117 new mbers, 83 of whom united on confesssion, nging the roll up to 1,035. In recognition of se achievements, the pastor, Rev. A. B. tten, has been asked to speak at a confer- ce of our National Council at its session in shington, D. C., next October, on "Recruit- for Church Membership." Mr. Patten was en the degree of D.D. by Colby College in ne.

RHODE ISLAND

g Day for Near East Relief

ARMENIAN, PROVIDENCE, Rev. J. M. De- yan, pastor, stands as an American and eralizing influence amid thousands of the

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

No doubt one way the prophets were per- secuted was through the handing up of nouncements for them to read when they wanted to prophesy.

race which is not closely attached to its own Gregorian faith. On Near East Tag Day $2,500 was realized as 30,000 carnations were distributed. Thirty young Armenian graduates from the schools and college were gathered in the church for a social. The pastor for two terms is the Moderator of the Armenian Eastern Union of Congregational Churches which, covering churches east of Chicago, recently met in New York.

NEW YORK

Gift to Church at Canaan

CANAAN has lately received a handsome gift from the Palmer Heirs, former residents of Canaan, now in California. The owners of the land on which the church stands, to which before this the church had no title, have presented it with a deed conveying the ownership of the land on which the building stands, and a spacious lawn in front, 60 feet deep, running along a highway for about 200 feet, and of most of the ground occupied by the parish house. That building, formerly a schoolhouse, stands partly upon private property. With the gift came a letter from one of the givers, expressing the undying affection they have for the church that was theirs in earlier days. The property has been surveyed, a map has been made, and boundaries have been set.

Much credit is due to the energy of the trustees, especially of William M. Hall, the chairman, by whom a search of the title was carried out and the necessary papers were prepared. Rev. W. T. Bartley is pastor of Canaan.

FLORIDA

Ordained Twenty Five Years Ago

The 25th anniversary of the ordination of Dr. Elisha A. King, pastor of MIAMI BEACH, was observed July 12. Rev. H. R. Core, ordained at Kelley's Island, O., 20 years ago, at which service Dr. King presided, preached the sermon on "A Minister's Ideal." The crowning event of the service was the reception of 21 new members. This number of new members and a church full of people in mid-summer at Miami Beach is a record event and reveals much activity.

Dr. King began his pastorate in Marysville, O., where he was ordained. He has held pastorates in Sandusky, O., Yakima and Seattle, Wash., and San Jose, Cal., and has been for nearly four years at Miami Beach. Mr. Core has been at Homestead, Fla., for more than a dozen years where he went for his health. He now owns a grape fruit farm and a fine dairy. During this period he has served as pastor of the Coconut Grove Church, and has held supply positions in numerous churches. He has been for a number of years Registrar of the South East Coast Association.

A new social activity has been inaugurated this summer by the Miami Beach Church. A Neighborhood Club has been established in a small settlement a mile or more from the center of the city. The club meets once each week for socials, entertainments, and better acquaintance in the neighborhood. The Sunday School sends conveyances to this new neighborhood, carrying many children to the school and returning them to their homes.

The pastor conducts a Bible class during the summer which meets Tuesday nights. In

NOTICE

The National Council Office desires to have a complete file of pictures of former moderators. Pictures are desired of the following:

REV. W. I. BUDINGTON
HON. L. S. FOSTER
HON. W. B. WASHBURN
HON. LORRIN A. COOKE

Any information that will assist in securing these pictures will be greatly appreciated.

Address, National Council Office
287 Fourth Ave. New York City

FIRST MORTGAGES and REAL ESTATE BONDS

Interest 7% Semi-Annually

On Improved Income Florida Real Estate

Loans confined to Tampa and South Florida

Principal and Interest Guaranteed

Write for booklet and information

GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

EMPHASIZING COLLEGE PREPARATION — SPRINGFIELD
MacDuffie School For Girls
ONE YEAR TUTORING COURSE — MASSACHUSETTS

Post-Graduate Course in Music and Household Arts
PRINCIPALS
John MacDuffie Mrs. John MacDuffie

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.
THE LESLIE
A quiet, cosy little House by the sea. Now open. Private baths. Descriptive booklet. 21st season.

MINISTERS—Have you books you no longer need? If so, why not try an ad in our classified columns in an effort to dispose of them? Some other pastor may want to purchase them.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

OLIVET CAMP On beautiful Lake Geneva
Williams Bay -:- Wisconsin
NORMAN B. BARR, Superintendent

Comfortable and sanitary accommodations. Abundance of good food well cooked and served. Board and Lodging, $12 to $18 per week per person. Bungalows, Cottages, and Tents furnished for light housekeeping, $12 to $30 per week; $30 to $75 per month; $65 to $160 per season, June 15-Aug. 31. For information or reservation write to Olivet Camp, Jedd C. Landwair, Manager, Williams Bay, Wisconsin.

August Rev. W. V. Meredith, associate pastor, will have full charge while Dr. King is on vacation. He will preach a special series of sermons on "St. Paul," having made a special study of the theme last year at Union Seminary. J. H. L.

Palm City Members Do the Work

A "free-for-all" work afternoon was given on the church grounds of PALM CITY. The uneven surface was leveled, grass was planted, the parsonage yard filled in, and a ditch dug to drain the grounds in rainy weather. A much needed sidewalk in front of the church was also provided by one of the members. Miss Ruth Sergeant is pastor.

LOUISIANA

Thirty-One Years at Kinder

Rev. Paul Leeds has served KINDER 31 years. During this time the character of the territory has changed from that of a lumbering to an agricultural region. Within the boundaries of his parish a neglected tribe of Indians was found. Mr. Leeds, with his broad sympathy and great heart, made friends with them, and the result is that 80 per cent. of the tribe are now church members. During these 31 years the total salary of Mr. Leeds has been $17,675; of this the C. H. M. S. has paid $10,500.

ALABAMA

Twentieth Anniversary of Thorsby

The 20th anniversary of THORSBY was celebrated early in July. The pastor, Rev. J. E. Each, is also supplying Mountain Creek and Deatsville. The Christian Endeavor Society at Thorsby sent a delegate to the Blue Ridge Conference who brought back an inspiring report. After the burning of Bates Hall at Thorsby Academy the auditorium of the church was used for the assembly room of the academy.

ILLINOIS

DeKalb Debt Liquidated

Rev. F. M. Webster has just completed seven years of ministry with DEKALB. The church had been in debt until recently because of building enlargement made just before Mr. Webster became pastor. The basement of the building has since been improved considerably, two more pianos purchased for Sunday School work, and several stops added to the pipe-organ, so that it is now one of the best in the city. The whole indebtedness has now been raised and the church finishes the year free from debt.

The number of members received during these seven years on confession is 154; by letter 106, making a total of 260. The present membership is 430. There has been a net increase in the resident membership of 137. The Sunday School is organized under three heads and is now doing better work than at any time under the present pastorate. All departments have excellent equipment. New members have been received at every Communion service.

New Parish House for Park Manor

PARK MANOR, CHICAGO, has just dedicated a beautiful parish house, erected at a cost of $75,000. The exercises extended over the week of May 31 to June 7. The church was organized in 1891 with a membership of 36, and had 31 members in the Church School. The church now has a membership of about 700, with a large Church School, and its building is the center of many activities.

The new parish house just completed is designed to meet these needs. It is built of brick and stone, is 35 by 79 feet, with complete modern equipment. It has also a four-story addition, 18 by 29 feet, providing kitchen facilities, shower baths, and locker rooms, living rooms for the caretaker and a tower uniting the church edifice and the parish house. The auditorium has a fully equipped stage, and arrangements have been made for the use of motion pictures; the second floor has an ideal arrangement of classrooms and provides offices for pastor and secretary. There is also a fully equipped gymnasium on the third floor. It is planned now to have the parish house open throughout the entire week.

The planning for the new parish house was begun under the administration of Rev. J. R. Heyworth and continued by Rev. R. E. Zeigler, who died suddenly about two months before the dedication of the building. To these two pastors, to Mr. Fred W. Bishop, William F. Mulvihill, and others of a group of laymen, credit is due for the erection of this beautiful, serviceable building. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Dr. G. T. McCollum of the Church Building Society and many of the Chicago churches were represented in the dedicatory services by pastor and delegates.

KANSAS

Resigns from First, McPherson

Rev. C. E. Sayre has just closed a three years' pastorate at FIRST, MCPHERSON. During this time a new $50,000 church building was erected and a $6,000 pipe organ installed. Almost 200 members have been received during the pastorate, and every department of the church work thoroughly organized. Mr. Sayre has accepted the pastorate of First Unitarian, Wichita, and will enter upon his work in the new field Sept. 1.

MISSOURI

Missouri Resolutions

Among the business propositions to come before our National Council will be the suggestion of a National Congregational Church at Washington, D. C. The Missouri State Conference, at its recent meeting, had this matter presented by Rev. W. C. Timmons, pastor of First Church, St. Louis, which is called "The Mother of Protestantism West of the Children of Three Generations

have successfully conquered childhood's dreaded affliction—whooping cough aided by ROCHE'S EMBROCATION.

Rubbed on the chest it brings speedy relief by loosening the phlegm.

Always have ROCHE'S handy for emergencies. It is just as effective for croup, bronchitis and colds on the chest. All Druggistsor

E. FOUGERA & CO., Inc., New York
W. Edward & Son, London, Eng.

ROCHE'S EMBROCATION

Fights Whooping Cough and Croup

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

CAMPS AND VACATION PLACES

Quinneh Tuk—Spend August vacation at Quinneh Tuk, Northfield, Mass. Cottages and tents. Modern conveniences.

Boarders wanted at Maple Lawn Farm. Bathroom, beautiful shade trees, real farm food, a delightful place for a rest. $14.00 per week. Chas. E. Baker, New Boston, N. H.

Boarders wanted on farm. All modern conveniences. Splendid lake, swimming. Best of cooking. Accommodations for family all summer. Mrs. John E. Aldrich, E. Woodstock, Ct.

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., in the vicinity of the White Mountains. We offer the comforts and conveniences needed for a successful vacation and rest. No hay fever. Lower rates to those who come in June and July. Booklet. A. J. Newman, Prop.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, homelike rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

PASTORATE WANTED

Pastorate wanted—Milwaukee or Iowa preferred. Both college and seminary training. Interesting preacher, efficient pastor, good executive. Nearly a year Milwaukee Near East Relief representative. Rev. Albert A. Robertson, 2100 Vine St., Lincoln, Neb.

Pastor wishes church in rural or semi-rural community. Federated or union church in Southern New England preferred. Address "M. A.," Congregationalist.

HELP WANTED

Wanted—Strong young woman, able to drive car, to become member of family of four in Brookline the last of September. Chief duty will be to take to and from school boy of 13 who has difficulty in walking. Write to Dr. David N. Blakely, 87 Milk St., Boston.

Wanted, Sept. 1, young man assistant for social and religious work with boys and young men. Address C. F. Hersey, New Bedford, Mass.

TEACHERS WANTED

Lincoln Institute of Kentucky, child of Berea College, only well equipped colored Normal and Industrial School in the state, beautifully located 22 miles east of Louisville, undenominational but deeply religious, needs a teacher of Bible and English, also a teacher of English. Mature white woman preferred. $600 and living for 36 weeks a year. Few incidental expenses. Large opportunity for service. Fall term opens Sept. 30. Address Rev. A. Eugene Thomson, Lincoln Ridge, Ky.

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

PASTOR WANTED

Wanted—An up-to-date, wide-awake minister. Address Maggie Percy, Clerk, Congregational Church, Crawford, Neb.

POSITION WANTED

Desire position to teach in high school, Science Department. Address "F. T. I., Congregationalist.

Organist and choir director desires position in Michigan. W. J. S., 313 South Fourth Ave., Ann Arbor, Mich.

MISCELLANEOUS

Mail Order Printing. Ask for quotations. 500 envelopes and 500 letterheads or statements or billheads, $5.00. The Print Shop, E. Northfield, Mass.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes, packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wastieless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

ississippi." The conference passed a resolu-on heartily endorsing the recommendation for new and outstanding home for First Church, ashington.

manuel, St. Louis, Lays Cornerstone

The corner stone of IMMANUEL, ST. LOUIS, as laid July 19, by special services conducted the pastor, Rev. L. L. Steadman. After the positing of certain manuscripts in the copper x of the corner stone, the stone was put into ace by Supt. A. R. Atwood. An address was ade by Dr. F. G. Beardsley.

NEW MEXICO

edication Day at Gallup

The dedication of the new building of MEXI-N, GALLUP, Rev. J. M. Moya, pastor, was ld on June 21 and was an occasion of great . A little over two years ago Mr. Moya ganized a small group of Spanish-speaking ople into a Congregational church. Services ve been held in the home of the pastor, every om in the little house being occupied, with ny standing outside the doors. The new use of worship is therefore greatly ap-eciated by all. With the aid of the urch Building Society, a building of ple but attractive design, in the mission le of architecture, has been erected. Aside m a commodious auditorium, there are rooms Sunday School and social purposes. On the day of dedication, a considerable number of the members of our American church and friendly citizens of Gallup, who have shown great interest in the undertaking, were present. On this occasion, a subscription of $800 toward the completion of the building and its furnishings was raised, and this despite the fact that many members of the church are out of work.

DEDICATION DAY, GALLUP MEXICAN CHURCH

NORTH DAKOTA

Ordination of Edwin Goodbird

Independence Church on the Indian Reservation was the scene recently of the ordination service of Edwin Goodbird, probably the first Indian to be ordained to the Congregational ministry in the state. Eight churches were represented at the council. The examination was held in the morning, dinner being served under an arbor, in charge of an Indian committee. The ordination service was held in the afternoon—a bilingual service, everything being interpreted into English except the prayers. Robert Hall, son of Dr. C. L. Hall, who had known Mr. Goodbird all his Christian life of 20 years, gave the charge to the candidate.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Canton Pays Off Debt

CANTON, Rev. P. J. Hansen, pastor, has paid off a troublesome debt of $859 in less than two years' time. Extensive repairs, including painting of the exterior, are being made on the parsonage. A good delegation went from this church to the Yankton Summer Assembly.

Enlarged Space for Cresbard Work

By means of volunteer labor, the basement of CRESBARD'S house of worship, which had not been used for more than ten years, the walls having caved in, was restored to a usable condition. The farmers brought their teams, and men in town used the shovel. When the church was ready for the cement work, a heavy storm washed out the temporary foundation, necessitating a second cleaning of the basement. The church now stands on a good foundation, and the improvement furnishes excellent room for social purposes.

COLORADO

Rev. W. O. Rogers at Denver

WASHINGTON PARK, DENVER, recently spent $1,500 in putting the property in repair. It is now in excellent condition for work. Rev. W. O. Rogers is making splendid progress in the work. A charter membership list of 19 has already been started.

WYOMING

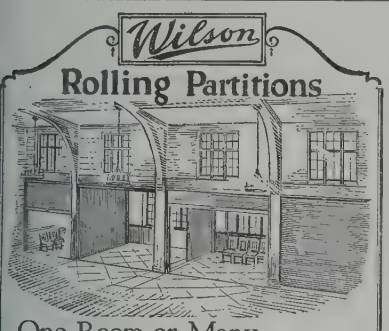
Casper a Growing Church

Audiences at CASPER are still growing under the preaching of Rev. A. E. Cook. The morning congregation in the American Theater has been over 800 and the evening service in Odd Fellows Hall has reached 300. Fifty new members were recently received to fellowship, 23 of them by confession. A Men's Club has been organized with 35 members.

IDAHO

Large Accessions at Pocatello

POCATELLO has received 102 into membership, nearly all of them on confession of faith,



One Room or Many
As Occasion Demands

BY the use of Wilson Rolling Partitions large rooms can be quickly transformed into smaller ones for classes, meetings, etc. They are easily operated, and roll out of the way, vertically or horizontally. Can be installed in old as well as new buildings.

Send for 40 page Catalogue No. 11

THE J. G. WILSON CORPORATION
ESTABLISHED 1876
11 East 38th Street New York City
Offices in all principal cities

THE HALL ORGAN COMPANY
WEST HAVEN, CONN.
High Grade Pipe Organs
Churches Masonic Halls Residences

Individual Cups
Over 50,000 churches use Thomas Service. Self-collecting Tray saves one-fourth cost of others. Catalog and Trial Free.
Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 5 Lima, Ohio.

Organ Builder Tuning Repairs
WILLIAM O. LYNCH
16 Everett Ave. Dorchester, Mass.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B

Vivid with meaning throughout the ages

Sweet and precious are the memories evoked by the rich mellow tones of Deagan Tower Chimes
Stirring the innermost depths of human emotions these Golden Voiced Chimes exert a powerful influence for good throughout the community, thus making them, indeed, the memorial sublime.

Deagan Tower Chimes are played by the organist from electric keyboard. Standard sets $6,000 and up.

J. C. Deagan Inc.
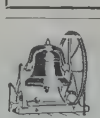
Established 1880
169 Deagan Building, Chicago, Ill.

Belfry Plans
When building or remodeling your church make sure that the belfry provides for chimes. We gladly co-operate so that if chimes are offered as a memorial they can be readily installed

CHAIRS
designed and built for
CHURCH and SUNDAY SCHOOL
Special catalog
JOHN A. DUNN COMPANY
Established in 1839 at
Gardner Massachusetts



McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND
220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

in less than a year's time. The congregations are taxing the capacity of the church, and a new building in the near future seems inevitable.

MONTANA

Church Organized at Lone Rock

A church of 40 members has just been organized at Lone Rock School District, nine miles in the open country from our little church at Florence.

CALIFORNIA

Recognition Service for Bayshore, Long Beach

Having reached a point in development to assure stability, BAYSHORE COMMUNITY, LONG BEACH, called a council for recognition, June 22. Rev. P. H. Schrock of Santa Ana was chosen moderator and Rev. Isaac Fleming of Los Angeles scribe. The council was heartily unanimous in voting to welcome the church into the Los Angeles Association.

At the evening service parts were taken by Rev. G. T. Simons, Rev. P. F. Schrock, Rev. H. K. Booth, Supt. G. F. Kenngott, Rev. W. R. Marshall, and Rev. F. P. Rosselot.

In this rapidly growing neighborhood, the membership has advanced to 58. Led by their minister, Rev. G. N. McCreery, they are working on an ambitious program to serve the community in an adequate structure.

Congregationalists Lead at Asilomar

Congregationalists led the list of registered delegates at the Missionary Education Movement Conference at Asilomar, July 8-18, with 127 out of 386. Twenty-eight churches were represented, 19 in the Southern California Conference and nine in the Northern. There were present two pastors, three educational directors, four representatives of mission boards, and one veteran missionary whom we delighted to honor, Miss Gertrude Cozad of Japan. The Southern Conference had just held a large and successful meeting for its young people at Pomona College, and the Northern Conference one July 27-Aug. 3 in connection with its annual meeting, which goes to show that this M. E. M. Leaders' Conference has a distinct place, making possible better results in the special denominational young people's groups as well as in the individual churches.

OREGON

New Arrivals in Portland

Portland is rejoicing over the coming of the following new pastors: Rev. J. N. Pendleton to PARKROSE, Rev. W. F. Westwood to UNIVERSITY PARK, and Rev. Ray Palmer to FOREST GROVE. Another newcomer in the state is Dr. J. F. Dobbs of Massachusetts, who has accepted the presidency of Pacific University.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

BARTHOLOMEW, ROY, Maplewood, Mo., to Riverview Gardens, St. Louis. Accepts.

BUELL, S. H., Springfield, Mo., to Texarkana, Ark. Accepts.

MOORE, ADNA, Flagler, Col., to Second, Colorado Springs. Accepts.

OBERLIN, C. D., Union City, Mich., to Rochester. Accepts.

PATTERSON, A. H., formerly of California, to New Hartford, Ct. Accepts.

PRITCHETT, L. C., Chicago Seminary, to Montrose, Col. Accepts.

SCHWAB, B. T., to Flagler, Col. Accepts.

STEADMAN, L. L., Rochester, Mich., to Immanuel, St. Louis, Mo. Accepts.

WALKER, J. I., Osage, Ia., to Prospect Ave., Kansas City, Mo. Accepts.

WARD, A. E. B., Fall River, Mass., to Loudon and Loudon Center, N. H. Accepts to begin Oct. 1.

WILLIAMS, T. Y., South, Chicago, Ill., to First, Kansas City, Mo. Accepts.

Summer Supplies

JOHNSON, HERMAN, Athol, Kan., to be student supply for the summer. Mr. Johnson expects to enter Chicago Seminary this fall.

WILSON, A. H., Orono, Me., to be summer supply at Salisbury, N. H. At work.

Resignation

BROWN, H. L., assistant, Alstead-Langdon Larger Parish, N. H. Effective July 31.

Ordinations

DICKEY, J. M., and Mrs. Christina R., o., Lake Worth, Fort Worth, Tex., July 17. Sermon by Dr. F. M. Sheldon; other parts by Rev. Messrs. A. E. Ricker, Frank Atkinson, S. T. McKinney, and J. L. Smith.

LOCKE, O. L., o., Prospect, Prospect, Ct., July 8. Sermon by Dr. B. W. Bacon; other parts by Rev. Messrs. W. F. Maylott, W. D. Carroll, H. D. Gallaudet, F. C. Allen, W. M. Owen, and Sherrod Soule.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Concord, South	1	2

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Obituary Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

TAFT—Henrietta Read, wife of Rev. Jay N. Taft, Los Angeles, Cal., died in Fulton, N. Y., July 21, after nearly 43 years of most happy married life and Christian service.

ARTHUR M. BRIDGMAN

Arthur M. Bridgman, dean of State House journalists, who died at Winchester, Mass., July 18, was among the prominent men identified with this church. A brother of the late R. L. Bridgman, he was born in Amherst, graduated from its college (Phi Beta Kappa) in 1873. His newspaper career began as correspondent for the Springfield Republican and at the State House in 1874. He was owner and editor of several newspapers in Lynn, Brockton, Holyoke, and other cities. He founded by legislative act its semi-weekly Bulletin and the Daily List of hearings. Mrs. Bridgman, a native of Stoughton, died recently.

REV. ANDREW GIBSON

Rev. Andrew Gibson, late of Seal Harbor, Me., entered into the rest of God early Thursday morning, July 2, from the home of his beloved daughter, Mrs. Pauline Coy, East Hartford, Ct. His health had suffered a serious collapse soon after the turn of the year, and he had not been able to carry on his work since. His call to the heavenly home was, therefore, a welcome release from weariness and from an unavailing though courageous effort to recover. Though reluctant to lay down the weapons of a splendid warfare and leave his loved ones, he answered his Master's call to a higher service with the same obedient, triumphant faith with which in his youth he answered his call to service here below.

Andrew Gibson came to Cambridge, Mass., from Scotland at the age of eight. He was educated in the schools of that city. He was trained for the ministry at Bangor and Union Theological Seminaries. He was a graduate of the former institution. He held pastorates in Massachusetts and New Hampshire, but the greater part of his ministry was in Maine, his last work being at Seal Harbor. Here, as in his other pastorates, he endeared himself to the people, as became manifest by the ready, active, beautiful way in which the all-year residents and the members of his summer constituency alike rallied to his support in his last weariness.

Mr. Gibson was a quiet, unobtrusive man. He was a good preacher and belonged to that splendid class of rural pastors who with but scant recognition manage to give richness of soul to our social life. His intuitions were soundly evangelical and his sermons were pervaded with the notes of saving grace. As a pastor he was unwearying in his devotion. He was great in his humanities, and the vicissitudes of a single soul caused him to forget himself completely. This trait showed itself to the very end, and to those who watched him during his last illness was given convincing evidence that the goodness of character does not share in the breakdown of the body and the decay of the intellect.

Mr. Gibson was a Mason and also an Odd Fellow. He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Pauline Coy, and her husband, a granddaughter, four sisters, and a brother. These and many others mourn his passing, but their mourning has become a sacrament, for it is made radiant with the blessed assurance that this life is orbed with glory and that to die is gain.

J. J. M.

HARRIET G. HOLMAN

Harriet G. Holman of Kingston, Mass., passed on to her reward July 2. She joined the State Street Church of Portland, Me., in her early life and also the church in Quincy, Mass. For the

Rockford College for Women

Founded in 1847 for Modern Women

A COLLEGE of distinguished graduates, fine traditions and high standards of Christian scholarship. Chartered as college with Beloit by Congregationalists, February 25, 1847. A.B., B.S., and A.M. degrees. Majors in Education, Art, Social Service, Home Economics, Music and Secretarial studies. A campus of wooded acres on Rock River, 88 miles from Chicago. All girls participate in athletics. An intimate college with many student activities.

Write for catalog and book of views.

Wm. A. Maddox, Ph.D., Pres., Box C, Rockford, Illinois

SEA PINES School of Personality for Girls

THOMAS BICKFORD, Founder

Outdoor life. Training in self-discovery and self-direction. Stimulating ideas of health, responsibility. Christian influence. One hundred acres, pine groves, seashore. College Prep ratory, Cultural, Secretarial and Athletic courses. Arts. Crafts. Dramatics. Music. Corrective Gymnastics. Recreation Camp July and August. Summer Courses and Counselorship Training for older girls and young women.

Miss Faith Bickford, Miss Addie Bickford, Directors Box V, Brewster, Mass.

The Training School at Vineland, New Jersey. Devoted to the interests of those whose minds have not developed normally. Schools, shops, farms, research laboratory. $1,200 per annum. E. R. Johnstone, Director. C. Emerson Nash, Superintendent, Box 404.

WALNUT HILL SCHOOL

15 Highland Street, Natick, Mass.

A College Preparatory School for Girls. 17 miles from Boston. 46 Acres. Skating Pond. Athletic Fields. 6 Buildings. Gymnasium.

MISS FLORENCE BIGELOW, Principal

UNUSUAL

Educational Opportunity

FOR YOUNG LADIES who wish to spend a year of study in Florence, Italy, in healthful home surroundings. Courses under recognized professors in Italian, French, History, Art and Music, Recreational work in Fencing, Horseback Riding and Dancing. Trips during the winter to Rome, Perugia and Siena. School term October to June. Best references given and required. For terms address THE SECRETARY, Box 142, Cambridge, Mass.

The Pratt Teachers' Agency

70 Fifth Avenue, New York

Recommends teachers to colleges, public and private schools in all parts of the country. Advises parents about schools.

et twelve years she has belonged to the Church the Pilgrimage at Plymouth, Mass.
A host of friends mourn the loss of a true ristian woman, a loving companion, and a voted wife.
Burial was at Laurel Hill Cemetery, Saco, Me., Sunday, July 5.

COL. LYFORD A. MERROW

Col. Lyford A. Merrow, a native of Ossipee, H., was laid to rest in its village God's Acre, rly in July. His active interest in youth was ndless and inspirational. His service was own far beyond the borders of the town and urch he loved: member of the executive committee of the International Y. M. C. A., trustee of ngor Seminary, treasurer of Boston University, trustee of the American Youth Foundation, d many other educational and philanthropic titutions.
He maintained his actual membership with sipee Congregational Church, although a resint of Malden, Mass. The breadth and nature his interests is well illustrated in acts permed when advised in June that the end of e was near. From his bedside in Ossipee he tated letters to the boys and girls of the vn congratulating them upon youth and posilities; urging prayer and daily Bible read-. "Be honest at all times by following God's mmands and the world will make way for ı." The same day he sent a message to the n of Ossipee. Speaking as the last surviving le member of his church, he said: "The church eds you, you need the church and all it stands ."
The funeral service was largely attended by ociates in the paint and oil trade, other busiss, and reform and educational organizations. e pastor, Rev. F. H. Baker, and Dr. W. S. hearn of Boston University officiated. Dur the service and illustrative of his wide inence a memorial hour was kept by boys and ls in a camp at Shelby, Mich.

Events to Come

TIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.
ES OF SHOALS CONGREGATIONAL SUMMER CONFERENCE, Star Island, off Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 10-24.
RTHERN NEW ENGLAND SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H., Aug. 10-17.
RST ANNUAL CONGREGATIONAL YOUNG PEOPLE'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE AND SCHOOL OF METHODS, Lake Cobbosseecontee, Winthrop, Me., Aug. 22-29.

Northfield Summer Conferences

NERAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS, Aug. 1-17.
SSACHUSETTS CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR INSTITUTE, Aug. 17-24.

State Conferences

HO, Boise, Oct. 20-22.
NTUCKY, Evarts, Oct.
RTH CAROLINA (Colored), Beaufort, Sept. 23.
RTH DAKOTA, Dickinson, Sept. 15-17.
AH, Salt Lake City, Oct.
SHINGTON, Seattle, Oct. 6-8.
SCONSIN, Appleton, Oct. 5-8.

Parables of Safed the Sage

(Continued from page 170)

n, but while this is bad enough, it is bet- than that men should go forth into life, ving received an Education, or what sseth for it, but Undisciplined Minds, so at they wander in Endless Fog, and no ghorn to keep other Vessels out of their y.
And Keturah said, Dost thou really think at Intellectual Uncertainty is worse than oral Evil?
And I said, Nay. But the ships that are nk by Pirates are less fewer in number an they that go down through Collision Fog.

With the Schools and Colleges

Commencement at Carleton

Commencement at Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., was observed for the 51st time when a class of 136 seniors received their degrees in Skinner Memorial Chapel. One graduate secured highest honors. Twelve magna cum laude honors and 31 cum laude honors were granted in the graduating class. Rev. V. P. Eastman, '03, who formerly served in China under the American Board, secured his Master of Arts degree; Dr. Watts O. Pye of the same class, head of the Carleton Fenchow Mission of the American Board in Shansi, China, was honored with the degree of D.D. The commencement address was delivered by Dr. Albert Parker Fitch, well-known Congregational theologian and a member of the faculty.

Pastors of the local churches assisted in the baccalaureate service which was held the day before commencement. On the evening of that day Dr. Pye spoke at the vesper service on the situation in China. The college dinner, which about 400 persons attended, and the college play, "The Romantic Age," occurring on the day after commencement, were the final events of the week-end.

Gifts for Pomona

With 1,000 alumni and visitors present during the week, commencement at Pomona College was the climax of inspiration and encouragement. President J. A. Blaisdell was able to announce that the campaign for funds had netted the college a million and a quarter dollars during the year towards the three million. Particularly loyal has been the contribution of the alumni—whose average age is not over 30 years—of $214,196. They voted to continue the campaign which will undoubtedly secure all conditional gifts including that of $50,000 from the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. Also they gave unanimous approval to the plan now meeting with general consent among the leaders of the institution for the enlarging of Pomona College by the addition of affiliated residence colleges. Among the pledges of the year, a prominent one has been that of $60,000 by the Harwood family for the erection of the Margaret Burton Harwood Memorial Hospital, to be constructed in the near future.

President Blaisdell preached the baccalaureate sermon in the Greek Theater. At the graduation exercises the address was given by William Bennett Munro of Harvard, on "The College at the Crossroads." Diplomas were conferred not only on a class largest in size of any similar college of arts and sciences west of the Mississippi River, but remarkable in that while 200 registered as freshmen, there were 189 graduates. In addition nine candidates received the Master's degree; the degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon Mrs. Susan B. Dorsey, Superintendent of Schools in Los Angeles; and the degree of D.D. upon Rev. Daniel F. Fox, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Pasadena. An interesting item of the celebration was the conferring of recognition upon 14 students in "Reading for Honors," which is declared to have taken first place over other major sports on the campus.

The summer session enrolls 250 students, double that of last year. Largest numbers chose courses in education, but closely following were the groups in drama and music.

C. F.

If the press of the world would adopt and persist in the high resolve that war should be no more, the clang of arms would cease from the rising of the sun to its going down, and we should fancy that at last our ears, no longer stunned by the din of the battle, might hear the morning stars singing together and all the sons of God shouting for joy.—John Hay.

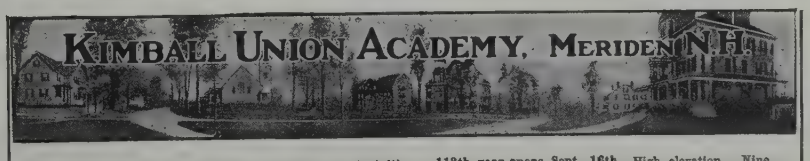
PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA
Sixtieth Year Opens August 17, 1925
Prepares men and women for
The Pastorate — Social Service
Religious Education — Foreign Service
Research
Practical Instruction. Opportunities for Self-Support.
Facilities of University of California.
Graduate Degrees. Faculty of Ten.
Modern and Commodious Buildings under Construction.
COME TO CALIFORNIA TO STUDY
HERMAN F. SWARTZ, President

Gordon
A Graduate School of Theology and Missions, of high scholastic standards and evangelical loyalty. Degree of B.D.
Theological, Missionary, Religious-Educational College course of 4 years, college standards, broad curriculum. Degree of Th.B.
NATHAN R. WOOD, President
Gordon College of Theology and Missions, Boston, Mass.

Bangor Theological Seminary
The 110th year opens Sept. 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor, Maine.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

EVERY CHURCH
should furnish at least as many men for the Christian Ministry as it uses for itself. Think of it! Some Churches have never furnished a leader for Christian service.
The Chicago Theological Seminary appeals for your best young men, to train for all branches of Christian Leadership.
Will you help?
OZORA S. DAVIS, President,
5757 University Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.



A Congregational preparatory school with a moderate tuition. 113th year opens Sept. 16th. High elevation. Nine buildings. 100-acre farm. Separate dormitories for boys and girls. Gymnasium. Playing fields. Outing club.
DR. FRANCIS E. CLARK, President of Trustees. CHARLES ALDEN TRACY, A.M., Headmaster, Meriden, N. H.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries — Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton — Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton — Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady, Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Henry Smith Leiper, M.A., Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries

Rev. A. V. Bliss, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,050.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associatae Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F.
100 East 42d Street, New York

Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies and Congregational ministers seeking pastorates. Maintained by the Congregational Conferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chairman.

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secretary and Missionary Education Secretary
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and Adult Education Secretary
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Secretary
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Education Program including Social Service, Missionary Education, Student and Young People's Work; aids Ministerial Students, University Pastors; directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christian Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of the denomination for the publication and distribution of The Congregationalist, church school equipment, quarterlies, lesson text books, teachers' magazines, children's and young people's weekly papers, and books for home and church use, with book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Manager
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregationalist
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Congregational House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas. Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIOR, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbut, Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIFIC, 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W. C. Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec. Sec.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H. H. Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY UNION. Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasurer. Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Congregational House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, a constituent of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, represents the churches of Massachusetts in their home missionary work. The Society solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditional gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Frederick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; Rev. John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AID. Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, also bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Columbus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. E. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BOSTON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object is the establishment and support of Evangelical Congregational Churches and Sunday Schools in Boston and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; C. F. Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Sears Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely for Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites contributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuity Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, a constituent of the National Society, solicits contributions, administers Special Trust for Churches and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hartford.

RISIBLES

We heard lately of a man who was inveigled to representing his family at a church supper, and being alone, all he did there was to eat. He ordered an oyster stew. He was not satisfied, and calling the volunteer waiter to his table he entered his complaint:

"Say, there's just one oyster in this stew."

"Sh!" said the waiter; "not so loud. Before you know it you'll be having them all wanting one."—Whiting in Boston Herald.

Customer—"I want a quarter's worth of carbolic acid."

Proprietor—"Vell, dis is a pawn shop; but mister, we have razors, ropes, and revolvers."—Centre Colonel.

She—"No, John, I can never marry you. We have nothing in common."

He (with some spirit)—"No, you are mistaken; I think that you are beautiful and you certainly concur in that opinion."—Texas Ranger.

Mrs. Prof.—"My husband's so careless. His buttons are forever coming off."

Mrs. Prex (severely)—"Perhaps they are not sewed on properly."

Mrs. Prof.—"That's just it. He's so careless about his sewing."—Bucknell Belle Hop.

"At the house party I mistook a celebrated millionaire for the butler and tipped him a dollar. Afterwards we had a good laugh over the affair."

"A whimsical episode, to be sure."

"Yes, but he never handed back the dollar."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

When a minor Philadelphia County Court was about to open its session recently, the discovery was made that the court crier was absent. A substitute was provided and the court had barely taken up a case when a breathless messenger boy dashed in with a telegram signed by the absent crier. The missive was handed to the judge, who read:

"Wife's mother died last night. Will not be able to cry today."—Brooklyn Life.

A Holyoke man in Worcester found that he had spent all his money, and began looking about for a chance to earn some. Seeing a lot of men digging for the foundation of a new building, he asked the foreman if he could go to work.

"Sure," said the foreman, "help yourself to a shovel."

Picking up an idle shovel the newcomer worked away for a couple of hours. Finally, when he paused for a rest, one of the men who was working beside him said:

"I don't seem to know you—where do you live?"

"I live in Holyoke," replied the newcomer.

"What the deuce are you doing here?" asked the other. "All us Worcester men are giving a day's work free to help build the new Presbyterian Church."—Boston Globe.

She hurried into the shop as though she had not a moment to spare.

"I want a book for my husband," she said. "It's his birthday tomorrow, and I want to give it to him as a present. Show me what you have, please," she continued, without pausing to take breath. "Nothing too expensive, mind—and I don't want anything too cheap, either. He's not very fond of sport, so don't show me anything in that line. For goodness' sake, don't offer me any of those trashy novels, and, no matter how much you try to persuade me, I don't want anything in the way of history or biography. Come, now, I'm in a dreadful hurry. I've already wasted too much time here."

"Yes, madam," replied the assistant, as he picked up a little red-bound book. "Here's an excellent volume entitled, 'How to Manage a Loud Speaker.'"—Tit Bits (London).

"You certainly have your nerve to charge me seventy-five cents for that piece of meat," said the careful housewife.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the polite butcher.

"Would you kindly tell me how it is that I can get the same cut at Wilson's market for fifty cents?"

"I can't say, ma'am. Perhaps Wilson has taken a fancy to you. He is a widower and you are very beautiful. Unfortunately, for me, I—yes—it's seventy-five cents."—Washington Cougar's Paw.

American Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches. Bequests and Annuities are solicited in order that the House may be freed from mortgage indebtedness and the Association thus enabled to furnish our Missionary Organizations with business offices at minimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Rev. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hubbard, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

Beacon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816

Home visitation and personal missionary service in connection with our churches. Emergency relief. Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contributions and legacies gratefully received and scrupulously administered.

William Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. Parker, Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

Incorporated 1829 Boston Reorganized 1922

Seaman's Friend Society, Inc.

This Society, reorganized in 1922, now fully represents the Congregational Churches of New England in its practical, social and religious work among seamen. Has finely equipped Bethels at 287 Hanover St., Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Rooms at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. The Society provides dormitory accommodations, reading and recreation rooms, religious services, pool tables, and games of many kinds, a restaurant, a canteen, shower baths, postal and banking facilities. Donations and bequests solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis. President, Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore L. Busfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. Com., Franklin P. Shumway; Office 618 Congregational House.

American Seamen's Friend Society

(Incorporated 1833)

The only American undenominational international and national Society aiding seamen. Maintains a Sailors' Home and Institute at 507 West Street, New York City. Loan libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing from New York. PUBLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00). Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided. SUPPORTED by contributions and legacies. John B. Calvert, D.D., President; George Sidney Webster, D.D., Secretary. Clarence C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 79 Wall St., New York, to whom contributions may be sent.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday Schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. Carver, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder* and *The Advance

August 6, 1925
Vol. CX No. 32

Copyright, 1925

All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook 163
Editorial—Dr. Peet Returns to America 165
The Death of Mr. Bryan
Religious Thought in Canada
The Scopes Case in Chicago
From Our Western Editor 168
The Rewards of the Ministry, by A. J. Covell 168
The Social Significance of Leisure, by "Al Priddy" 169
Above the Clouds, by Mary Shaw Page 170
The Parable of Fog 170
A Call to a Forward Movement 171
Our "Camino Real"—Santa Barbara Resurgent 172
The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches, by Daniel Evans 173
Brief Notices of New Books 173
Fiftieth Anniversary of Brooklyn Church, by Frederick L. Fagley 174
Testimonial to Dr. Peet 175
The Congregationalist's Bible Class—Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson 176
Our Invalid Parish—Beauty and God 177
Closet and Altar 177
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic 177
Among the New Books 178
With the Children—Scales of Justice, by Rose Brooks—Neighbor Cricket, by Jean H. Brown 180
Our Readers' Forum 181
News of the Churches 183
With the Schools and Colleges 189

Two Companion Books to Your Bible

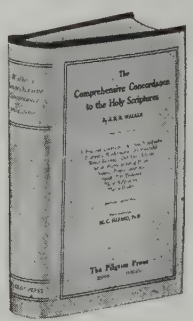
Especially Helpful to

Ministers, Teachers, and All Bible Students

WALKER'S COMPREHENSIVE CONCORDANCE TO THE HOLY SCRIPTURES

By J. B. R. WALKER

This concordance is the best practical text-finder in English. It contains fifty thousand more references than in Cruden. In Walker's Concordance all serviceable words, and only serviceable words, are retained.



"We know of nothing to equal it in completeness and handiness. It will be the inseparable companion of many a Bible student."—Herald and Presbyter.

Published in two Editions
Cloth, $3.00; Leather, $3.75

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN MODERN SPEECH

(Revised Edition)

By RICHARD FRANCIS WEYMOUTH

This scholarly and reverent translation will clarify many obscure words and phrases which have heretofore been only vaguely understood. If you have gotten into the habit of reading the Bible mechanically because of its very familiarity, read Weymouth's New Testament and gain fresh inspiration and help.

Some Contrasts in English

From other modern translations. From the Revised Weymouth

Matt. 3: 13-14
Jesus came . . . to get baptized	Jesus coming . . . to be baptized
I Cor. 15: 29
What is the meaning of . . . getting baptized	What will those do who are baptized
Matt. 12: 1
They started to pull some ears of corn	They began to gather ears of wheat
II Cor. 11: 4
You put up with it all right	Your toleration is admirable
II Tim. 1: 14
Has done me a lot of harm	Did me much mischief

Editions and Prices

12mo Edition with Notes

No. 1	Cloth, boards, gilt top	$2.00
" 2	Cloth, boards, indexed	2.40
" 3	Cloth, boards, India paper	2.50
" 4	Leather	2.90
" 5	Leather, indexed	3.50
" 6	Leather, India paper	4.00
" 7	Persian morocco, divinity circuit, India paper	6.00
" 8	Turkey morocco, limp, India paper	6.50

Pocket Edition without Notes

No. 1 P	Cloth	$1.50
" 2 P	Cloth, India paper	1.75
" 3 P	Leather, India paper	2.50
" 4 P	French morocco	3.25

Congregational Publishing Society

(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston
156 Fifth Ave., New York
19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 33 August 13, 1925

Photo by H. A. Robie, Lyndonville, Vt.

Looking Out Upon the White Mountains from Mount Agassiz

MAKING THE CHURCH MORE EFFECTIVE

By William E. Gould

For Your Children's Story Hour

BIBLE STORY BOOK

By Frances Weld Danielson

Fathers and mothers seeking books of Bible stories for their children should be careful in their selection. Many of those which have had a wide vogue are wholly lacking in literary distinction and, worse still, are likely to give the child an inadequate and unchristian idea of God. Surely, few living writers are as well qualified as Frances Weld Danielson to introduce little children to the Book of books.

Here at last is a thoroughly satisfactory book of Bible stories for little children. They are selected in accordance with educational standards and are retold in the simplest language, yet retain much of the quality of literature from the greatest Biblical narratives on which they are based.

They are printed in large, clear type, suitable for children. The stories are arranged chronologically. However, each story can be told or read by itself, independently. Profusely Illustrated. Attractively bound. Printed in large, easy-to-read type. $2.00

Seven Fascinating Books of Ethical Stories

The fascinating stories in these books appeal to the imagination of boys and girls under twelve years of age. Though in no sense "preachy," they have a real value in suggesting religious and high ethical standards of living in their play, school, and everyday social relationships.

THE GOLDEN GOBLET

By Jay T. Stocking

A collection of stories that will not fail to appeal to the most imaginative of boys and girls. While always awake to the opportunity of teaching moral truths—either directly or allegorically—they will not fail to interest the youth of real red blood and masculine mind.—The Transcript. $1.25

WHY THE CHIMES RANG AND OTHER STORIES

By Raymond MacDonald Alden

"Why the Chimes Rang" tells of a little boy whose small but sacrificial gift proves greater than that of a king's crown. In this collection of charming stories is also the "Knights of the Silver Shield" and nearly a dozen other equally well loved stories by Mr. Alden. $2.50

JOHNNY BLOSSOM

By Emile Poulsson

Although a genuine boy, he is a right-minded little fellow with earnest, child-like spirit; and he can never be thoroughly content until he has had his mother's full forgiveness when he has been naughty, or, if he has wronged anyone, until he has made restitution. $1.50

THE KNIGHTS OF ANYTOWN

By Jeanette E. Perkins

Twelve stories of children who try to make "Good Neighborhood Street" of "Anytown" worthy of its name. It aims to help children to recognize the spirit of love which hovers over God's children everywhere. $1.50

THE REST OF THE FAMILY

By Jeanette E. Perkins

Twelve stories of absorbing interest on the subject of World-Wide Sympathy and Brotherhood. $1.50

THE MAGIC GIFT

A Flag Story by Nannie Lee Frayser

A noble, patriotic flag story which has thrilled thousands. It has never failed to thrill and arouse a deeper appreciation of the "Stars and Stripes." A most fascinating fairy tale voicing devotion, loyalty, truth and love. 50 cents.

THE CITY THAT NEVER WAS REACHED

By Jay T. Stocking

These stories have just the touch of magic so dear to the heart of the child, and yet the note of reality in them saves them from being mere fairy tales.—The Presbyterian Advance. $1.25.

Congregational Publishing Society
(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston
156 Fifth Ave., New York
19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | August 13, 1925 | No. 33

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh — News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D. — Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

The "Ripple of Disagreement"

"A MINISTER'S Wife and Daughter," writing to the Christian World, takes strong exception at one point to the address of Dr. J. D. Jones at Hackney College, to which editorial reference was made in our issue of July 30. This woman thinks that Dr. Jones' reference to his twenty-eight year pastorate at Bournemouth as one in which he had "never known a ripple of disagreement with his people" might prove "misleading to young people and might cause them to think the path of a minister and his wife is a rose-strewn one." Also, while not in any way impugning Dr. Jones' ministry, she thinks that in his explanation of this unrippled experience does imply and unjust and unfortunate reflection upon many ministers who have been equally faithful in pulpit and pastorate.

Dr. Jones had given as the explanation of never having had "even the crumpled rose-leaf" in his ministry the fact that he had been a pastor as well as a preacher, and as a consequence his people were all his friends. "But," inquires this correspondent, "what about such subjects as total abstinence, non-resistance to evil, love of enemies, fair dealing in trade, etc? Have these caused no disagreement?" She also raises the question of the extent to which outward success and the absence of financial difficulties make for an unruffled ministry.

I maintain [she writes] that Dr. Jones has not had the real test of the ministry. Let his congregations, for some reason or other, decline and the income of the church drop, and that will be the testing time. Dr. Jones might then see something sadder than a crumpled rose leaf, and, instead of a ripple, the waters might go over his head, for nothing upsets church officials more than these things.

And she adds:

Many known to me have suffered greatly, and many mininsters who have tried to be pastors as well as preachers will, I am afraid, have had an extra bitter drop added to their already full cup by Dr. Jones' remark. But, after all, it is only when the waters go over our heads that we know who have given lip service and who have given heart service. And perhaps many of us who have had experience of the deep waters know better what love and loyalty really mean than those who have not even known the ripple.

The Real Tests of a Ministry

IT is as much a mistake to assume that "successful" pastorates are matters of environment and circumstance in which pastoral faithfulness and wisdom are secondary factors as to assume that apparent ministerial failure is due to lack of faithfulness, ability, and wisdom. Eminent pastorates, like that of Dr. Jones at Bournemouth, are not matters of fortunate circumstance. In the main, back of all such pastorates is conspicuous ability, combined with unusual qualities of self-discipline, administrative capacity, and single-minded application to pulpit and pastorate. There is profound truth in the statement which a prominent minister, himself among the "successful," once made to the writer: "There are no easy fields." One must recognize quite plainly that in the ministry, as elsewhere, men often blame failure upon circumstances and conditions that any impartial observer would explain by sheer lack of faithfulness or of wisdom. Many a man who has considered himself a martyr has deliberately thrown away opportunities of achievement from which another man, equally loyal to truth, but better guided, would have developed a great ministry. That man is wise who before too readily attributing his failure and disappointment to his fidelity to principle and his high idealism inquires diligently whether there may have been fault in himself or in his methods. Moreover, if a man despises in his heart what often passes for "tact" but what in reality is little removed from sheer subservience, opportunism, and cowardice, there is all the more reason that he should earnestly seek that true tact which is as much the characteristic of the real Christian as it is of the real gentleman.

When all is said and done, however, it should never be forgotten that the noblest ministries have been exercised in seeming defeat and failure, and that the tests of the ministry can never be in appearances. The ministry of Jesus led to the Cross, and the triumphant ministry of Paul was shaped in its very details by hostility and persecution. There have always been, and there will be for a long time to come, situations where a minister who would be true to himself and to his God must court hostility and possible failure. Paul recognized this when he qualified the injunction to "live peacably with all men" with the words, "if it be possible." The quality of the highest ministry is not found in its absence of scars, but in its evidence of "the marks of the Lord Jesus."

A Committee on Mercy and Relief

NOTHING more vitally displays the soul of a Christian nation than the impulse with which it moves to relief in the presence of some great tragedy, whether it be at home or abroad. With all her shortcomings, America's elements of Christianity are manifest upon such occasions, and, as has been frequently pointed out, the response in time of need is not one of mere humanitarianism for it comes almost entirely from the people of the churches. It is Christian support that constitutes the strength even of agencies of relief that are non-religious in organization.

Recently in urgent situations the churches, in addition to other agencies, have acted on their own behalf and have made their power felt. But in the main the impulses of sympathy and helpfulness have lacked prompt and effective expression because organization has been slow. To remedy this defect, and to provide for future emergencies the Federal Council of Churches has organized a Committee on Mercy and Relief as a standing committee of the Council, which will include members designated by the authority of the various denominations comprising the Council. Congregationalists will be represented on this commitee by Dr. Nehemiah Boynton and Mrs. Albert J. Lyman.

The functions of this committee will be obvious. The primary function will be that of enabling the churches to act promptly and unitedly, in their own name, in securing funds for the relief of suffering when great emergencies arise. Such occurrences as the famine in China four years ago, the suffering in Germany two years ago, and the Japanese earthquake illustrate the kind of occasions with which the Mercy and Relief Committee of the Council expects especially to deal.

But the committee will serve other useful functions as well, and may serve as a central clearing-house through which the Churches may consider, if desired, their relationship to general agencies of relief. The value of such a committee will be immediately recognized.

The All-Church Press

OUR attention has recently been called to what its promoters describe as "the largest religious newspaper enterprise in the South"—an enterprise which has several years of successful effort back of it, and which shows signs of flourishing. This enterprise is that of the All-Church Press, which, under Douglas Tomlinson, president and founder, publishes in Dallas, Houston, and Fort Worth, Tex., and in Memphis, Tenn., a substantial weekly newspaper devoted to what is happening in the churches. These papers, while almost exclusively church publicity and general advertising sheets, have manifest value in furthering the interests of the churches and in gaining public attention. Probably their success in securing the general support of the churches lies to some extent in the fact that they are not organs of opinion, and in fact have no distinctively editorial columns. Also their news is limited to what is going to happen, so there are no embarrassments of comment or discussion. The effect of such limitations will, of course, be obvious in the All-Church Press weeklies. Inevitably the panorama of church activity presented in such a way is more formal than vital, and the absence of discriminating judgment implies a lack of that individuality and sense of direction without which religious journalism can never rise to a high level. None the less, the enterprise is unique, and within its limitations, eminently successful and useful. It would perhaps help to make the church as prominent a factor in the life of other communities as it is in this Southwestern area if someone in these other communities had the enterprise to work the field of church publicity with the same energy and initiative that have characterized the All-Church Press.

Ugliness and Untidiness

SPEAKING recently at Paton Congregational College, Nottingham, England, Dr. J. Morgan Gibbon expressed an indictment of the ugliness and untidiness of places of worship, which unfortunately applies all too widely in America also, though through the Church Building Society and other agencies Congregationalists have been doing much to remove this reproach. Probably the influences that have made for architectural monstrosities in church structures have been here, as in England, mid-Victorian. At least the most horrible examples seem associated with that period. In one respect, however, viz., in the matter of untidiness, Dr. Gibbons' indictment would apply to churches which in original building are noble and stately. In New England especially one is often shocked at the contrast between the beauty of the outward form and situation of the church building and the badly arranged and often exceedingly untidy interior. Inadequate attention has been paid to plan and order. Dr. Gibbons' words are worth quoting, though perhaps it should be stated that they were contained in an address upon preaching in which the supreme emphasis was laid upon truth rather than upon beauty, and in which he expressed for the theological students whom he was ad dressing the hope that God might deliver them from being "fancy preachers." Of church architecture Dr. Gibbon said:

Our chapels in the country are the ugliest blots on the landscape; mean, neglected, dirty, the architecture is vile, but apart from that the structure is often made up of the cheapest materials. The places are visibly neglected. Outside stand the notice-boards, with the remains of ancient posters blistered in the sun and rain, peeling off in the wind like scabs of a fever. Every house of worship, day and night, ought to be a silent, impressive sermon in stone.

A Misunderstanding in Los Angeles

A CORRESPONDENT sends a strange letter concerning the unfortunate situation that has developed in Wilshire Boulevard Congregational Church out of the cleavage between Dr. Dyer and Dr. Aked; a cleavage which apparently is accompanied by a cleavage in the congregation. We have no intimate knowledge of the facts of the situation nor do we deem it any part of The Congregationalist's mission to interest itself in misunderstandings that may arise in local churches. In church life as elsewhere there always have been such misunderstandings and probably there always will be. One may remember that even such good men as Paul and Barnabas were not able to journey together but found it advisable to go in different directions.

It is regrettable that so much general publicity of a sensational nature should have developed out of the Los Angeles situation, but this is more or less inevitable, especially under the present conception that the daily press has of what constitutes religious news. It is also regrettable that this misunderstanding should have developed at a time when the Wilshire Boulevard Church had attained such conspicuous success in the building and dedication of the new church. It is our hope that out of this misunderstanding a more favorable situation may arise and that the church may continue in its sphere of service.

Our correspondent seems to blame the matter upon the Congregational polity. "Here," he says, "is the result of your boasted independency—a mere rope of sand. In the Presbyterian Church the Presbytery would control absolutely, but all the Conference can do is to give advice, diluted at that."

We do not know what may be our correspondent's interest in the matter but his distress over the situation has apparently blinded his vision and warped his judgment. It has been our observation that church quarrels are very much the same whether they occur in independent churches or in churches where the centralized authority is more highly developed. Nothing, for instance, could exceed in bitterness some phases of the split of the Presbyterian body in Canada over the matter of Church Union. We seem also to recall in individual churches—Presbyterian, Methodist, Episcopalian, and even Roman Catholic—dissensions fully as acute as this in Los Angeles. Our correspondent is entirely at sea in his notion that authoritative polities deal with these matters more effectively than does Congregationalism. On the other hand most Congregationalists are very glad to recognize in these things the independency and responsibility of the local church. We are very glad that there is no outside power that can take action and control what might, after all, be a very unjust solution of a local difficulty. We can only express in such circumstances our Christian sympathy in a non-partisan way, in much the same way that we might perhaps long ago have seen the contention between Paul and Barnabas from the standpoint of each man's partial statement of the case, and we may also express the hope that grace and good judgment may yet triumph over a very difficult situation, and that whatever charges or faults there may be, all concerned may be brought to view the matter in a large-minded way and pursue whatever future course may be possible or necessary with an eye to the glory of God.

We would not refer to this matter had it not already been widely discussed in the press, and had not our correspondent brought to our attention what seems to us an entirely unjust attack upon the Congregational polity.

* *

Dr. Nash of the Congregational Foundation for Education writes us that since the announcement in The Congregationalist concerning the Foundation's plans for the immediate future, a slight modification of these plans has been made. After Sept. 1, John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman of the Board, will be in charge of the Chicago office, thus saving Dr. Bennett the necessity of interrupting his graduate study at Columbia University.

On Hearing Vacation Supplies

DESPITE the twain-line declaring otherwise, West does meet East. Pulpits near-by, in Chicago, on the Coast, and at points south are hearing visiting messengers. Clear and challenging utterances they are, well delivered, thoughtful, given for a verdict, modern in illustration. We welcome this annual privilege of our congregations. If at church, they see new personalities and are attentive to new voices. Unusual points of view are presented, prejudices met, visions strengthened.

Meanwhile there is a possible tale to be adorned. It was emphasized lately by a remark made to us by a layman after listening to the "supply": "I wish our minister would preach like that!" We replied, "Probably he did, yesterday, with a different congregation and in an environment presenting no intimate parish problems to eat up time and nerve all last week—very likely he did preach just like that." Our audience of one seemed interested, so we added: "There is much to be said about your pastor and all other located ministers that is too often overlooked. Your comment reminds us of a similar reaction by a woman who heard a celebrated preacher give a lecture to a crowded assembly. When reported we asked, 'How many times do you suppose the speaker has given that address?' In the silence we volunteered that probably twenty-five times was the minimum and for dimensions in magnitude all the way to Russell Conwell's figures with 'Acres of Diamonds.' Further, we said, 'Any time your own minister has in degree such an opportunity to produce well-beaten thought, using cameo-like phrases, he, too, becomes magnetic, and people say of him just what you have said of the supply preacher. For he is a different man in pulpit or on platform.'

"There is something more still, and much to the point. Occasional lecturers—vacation preachers—do not speak to the same groups each week. But your minister, often with but slight variation in audiences, addresses identical congregations twice each Sunday, and if he has a mid-week service, a third time weekly. Suppose you had to present clear, helpful thought, from attractive angles, with fresh and compelling illustrations, to the same folk? Minds may be alert but bodies are wearied. The minister, too, is often burdened with the trials and anxieties of his parish and—"

"Hold on," said our listener. "My minister's stock has gone up fifty points. When I hear him again I'll give him my most encouraging word."

So we pass this on. Enjoy your vacation supplies. Make the most of them. Meanwhile, if your own minister is also preaching, believe that he, too, is inspirational. And appreciate him the more on his return because you realize his problem as a fixed preacher to the same congregation.

* *

The hymn, Cavell, by Rev. Allen E. Cross, D.D., originally published in The Congregationalist and later republished along with a musical setting by Laura Sedgwick Collins, was sung recently under unusual circumstances in connection with the ceremonies at the fifth annual Magna Charta Night of the New York Fort Society. Brigadier General S. Herbert Wolfe, who was present on this occasion, stated that he stood in the very spot where Edith Cavell was shot, and spoke in high praise of what he designated as the touching tribute in Dr. Cross' hymn and Miss Collins' music.

Two Congregational Prophets

CONGREGATIONALISTS, the more vitally they express the spirit that has created their fellowship and constituted its most distinctive bond, are the less inclined to attach particular emphasis to Congregational truth, or to Congregational truth-seekers and expositors. They welcome truth by whomsoever it may be spoken, and they are not the more disposed toward its acceptance because it happens to be spoken by one who bears their own denominational label. None the less there is, at times, if not a sense of denominational pride, at least a sympathetic appreciation in contemplating the conspicuous contribution to religious thought of those with whom we share a common attitude and faith, though these do not find expression either in sectarian consciousness or in mere identity of opinion. It is in this spirit that we associate the survey of a few recent books with Congregational Prophets.

Dr. W. E. Orchard on Fundamentals

First is the eminent minister of King's Weigh House Chapel, London, England, in two books of prime importance, Foundations of Faith: vol. I, Theological, and Christianity and World Problems (both published by Doran, and each $1.75). Dr. Orchard is a Congregationalist in outward affiliation, and in his essential spirit and approach to life and truth, despite his emphasis upon catholicism and his description of himself as a Free Catholic. As is well known, some time ago he had himself ordained by an Eastern patriarch, and he has introduced into the service at King's Weigh House an elaborate symbolism and practice more commonly associated with historic Catholicism, Eastern or Roman. We confess that we are among those who regard these departures as of little significance, if not as actually inimical, in relation to true Christian catholicity. We cannot believe that the Congregational witness to Christian catholicity is ever likely to find wide expression in such ways, and the more any presumed "catholicity" demanded from Congregationalists such expression the more surely would many of us refuse to regard it as truly catholic.

We rejoice, however, in that liberty within Congregationalism which enables Dr. Orchard and those associated with him to express their religious convictions in their own way, and we refer to this matter only to remind those who might be repelled by the superficial aspect of Dr. Orchard's catholicism that here is a real thinker and prophet, a man who has a profound grasp of fundamental truth and a keen and unerring perception of its bearings and relationships. In the first volume, Foundations of Faith, in such chapters as The Existence of God, Can Man Know God, Creation, Evolution and the Fall, Miracles, etc., he comes straight to the heart of present problems of faith, while in the other volume, Christianity and World Problems, he comes similarly to the heart of the world's challenge to Christianity and Christ's challenge to the world. The issues of faith are stated in a tremendous way. The heights of Christian conception are as mountain-peaks towering above the soul and it is in such writings as these that one begins to understand what it means to be a Christian.

C. J. Cadoux

Less known in America, but highly regarded in his own land is C. J. Cadoux, whose books, The Christian Crusade (Dutton. $1.50) and The Message About the Cross (George Allen and Urwin), are before us. We were impressed with these books before we knew anything about their author. Who's Who, and other sources, failed to yield information, until one day Leyton Richards dropped in to see us. To our inquiry, "Can you tell us anything about C. J. Cadoux?," Mr. Richards replied with an enthusiastic, "Well, I should say so," and he proceeded to assure us that Professor Cadoux, though not so popularly known as some Congregational leaders in England, occupies a conspicuous place in scholarship and Christian thought. A Mansfield College man and former Old Testament tutor, who shares with Dr. T. R. Glover the distinction of being a layman with a D.D. degree (in this case from London University and not honorary), Dr. Cadoux is now professor at Yorkshire United College.

The Message About the Cross, Professor Cadoux subentitles A Fresh Study of the Doctrine of the Atonement. In less than a hundred pages he has packed an immense amount of careful thought with equally careful references. To a field where much literature is obscure and difficult it brings unusual clearness and precision of statement. It is just the book for an age in which in reaction from over-theorizing concerning the Atonement men are tending to ignore all theories and to find Christianity fully expressed in the life, character, and teaching of Jesus without attaching special significance to his death. Professor Cadoux's general attitude may be gathered from this statement:

The Christian [he writes] who has no use for Calvary, whether in his ethics, his theology, or his devotions, is missing the straightest and plainest path to that ultimate reality which is in the heart of God.

In his pages, however, one does not find a sentimental recoil to conservatism, or the special pleading of one seeking to be orthodox at all cost. On the contrary one finds the most open-minded inquiry, with a straight facing of the facts, and with a corresponding value attaching to the author's conclusion which is that the Cross is the central fact in divine and human experience. The whole subject is treated in a thoroughly practical way. We should like to see this volume have a wide circulation in America. Whether its readers will agree with Professor Cadoux's conclusions or not they will find in his book a challenge to basal thinking about the Atonement and a setting forth with great precision of the issues that must be faced in such thinking.

The Christian Crusade, sub-entitled A Study of the Supreme Purpose of Life, and dedicated to "The Younger Christian Generation" is the sort of book on practical living that one would expect from the author of The Message About the Cross. Here is the same sort of vital challenge to human aims and conduct, a testing of life according to ultimate standards of value. For personal life, for Church and Church School, Professor Cadoux has able counsel and guidance. His chapter on the Sunday School is at once so revolutionary both in relation to older methods and to some of the newer theories of religious education as to make it distinctive. Broadly speaking he thinks that the Church is weak today largely because of the failure on the part of the laity to co-operate in the priestly functions of the ministry. Over against all methods in the Church School he sets the ministry of personal influence and friendship, and he thinks that "the most crying need of the Christian Church today is a revival—both extensive and intensive—of the personal ministry of friendship among the young." The least satisfactory pages of this volume we find in Professor Cadoux's discussion of pacifism. He states the pacifist position, which is his own, with great clearness and power, and he expresses much trenchant criticism of militarism and of militaristic religion to which there can be no reply. None the less he leaves out of the reckoning some factors which many believe cannot be left out, and despite his large-minded and excellent spirit he is not quite fair toward those who are neither pacifists nor militarists, but whose attitude might be defined as that of Lincoln, who hated war but who did not shrink from what he conceived to be clear and inevitable duty.

Here, however, is a prophet and more than a prophet; a real ambassador of Christ, who writes with the authority of saint and scholar. The voice of this Congregational layman ought to be heard more widely throughout our fellowship. We shall count it a joy if these words help in making him better known.

The Time for Ministers to Speak Out

By Rev. Carl S. Patton, D.D., Contributing Editor

I HAVE never felt that the matter of evolution needed to be preached about. In thirty years in the pulpit, I have devoted just two sermons to the subject. I should probably not have done even that if evolution had not been pushed to the front and made a live issue by the fundamentalists. I contented myself with showing in the first sermon, what the doctrine of evolution really is, and why the scientists believe in it. I tried to clear it of the false and grotesque interpretations given to it in the utterances of the fundamentalists and in much popular newspaper reference. In the second sermon I tried to show the bearings of evolution upon religious thought, indicating in what ways it is a positive help to the Christian.

I do not know that I shall preach any more sermons on the subject now. My people know where I stand. I have not insisted on my point of view, but have explained it frankly and fully. I have not tried to make evolutionists of my people, but I have tried to show them that Christian people need not maintain an attitude of hostility to one of the fundamental scientific ideas of the time.

It is my impression that many ministers, though believing in evolution, have refrained from speaking of it or from fully explaining their position on it, for fear of introducing merely controversial matters into the pulpit, and perhaps of disturbing many good people who have never investigated the matter and to whom it might be difficult to make the preacher's position clear.

But I believe it is time, now, for the ministers to speak plainly on this subject, and that a failure to do so will perpetuate the possibility of such misunderstandings and such ill-directed controversies as that through which we are now passing. The minister who believes in evolution either knows enough of the scientific aspects of the doctrine, or can easily learn enough, to explain to his people what it does and does not mean. In a sermon or two which will leave his own position clear, in midweek lectures, given either by himself or by some Christian teacher of biology or geology or zoölogy in his community, he can clear away many popular misunderstandings. He can prepare the way for those of his people who care to go further in the matter, and can recommend books which they can read, and can offer to talk with them about any difficulties they encounter in the subject.

This present controversy is our opportunity, not to force upon our people any ideas that do not approve themselves to them, but to show them at least that Christians have no need to array themselves against scientists, and that knowledge is always a help to religious faith.

The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches

VII. Protestantism and Progress

By Professor Daniel Evans, D.D.
Harvard Theological School

IT is the boast of Catholics that the Catholic Church is the same yesterday, today, and forever. It is immutable amidst all the changes of the world; it remains the same, whatever differences may arise in all things else; it is raised above the temporal vicissitudes of the world while other institutions are subject to them. As the Romans boasted that Rome was the Eternal City, so the Catholics boast that the Catholic Church is the Eternal Church. There are, of course, some things to justify this claim, but it is not wholly true, and even Catholic writers, certainly those of modernist tendencies, not only admit, but proclaim the historical development of her creed, worship, polity, tradition, and the papacy. Nevertheless, one thing is clear, the Catholic Church is generally suspicious, wary, even fearful of progress, and at times fiercely opposes it.

Protestantism, on the other hand, rejoices in progress; it welcomes changes; it recognizes differences; it feels itself a part and factor in the developing world; it believes profoundly that "He who sitteth upon the throne maketh all things new." It is not suspicious, nor wary, nor fearful of progress, but expectant, confident, and fearless in this changing order, this advancing world.

It contains the principle of progress within itself. Its principle of faith, its direct relation with God, and its devotion to his will inevitably make for progress within its own life. Since God is not static, but dynamic, since there is always more life in him than has found expression in any age, and since his purpose is to establish his Kingdom and rule in the hearts of men, and in all their affairs, faith in him and devotion to his will make for advance. It confesses it is not perfect; it acknowledges that much in the Reformation needs reforming; it rejoices that it has within itself the power of self-reformation, and feels the urge which drives it to ever greater perfection. It is like the stream that purifies itself as it flows on; not like a stagnant pond. And in the course of the centuries it has been purifying itself of those Catholic remainders in it, which it took over from the church, such as the authoritative temper, the creedal dogmas, and undue sacramentarianism. If the Catholic onlookers explain the historical continuance of Protestantism up to this time, by the many things it took over from the church, there are some Protestants who, being really Catholic in temper, confuse these remainders with the real principle of Protestantism, and are fearful of its true spirit. Protestantism is nothing if not progressive. It is a challenge to all forward-looking spirits.

While it contains within itself this principle of progress, Protestantism had the good fortune to begin its career coincidentally and co-terminously with the new forces of the modern world and thus to become a part of, and a factor in, its great, progressive movements. These forces had the future in their keeping; they broke from the medieval world, and the church civilization, and moved out into the new free world and created a civilization independent of church control. The nations were demanding the right to be free, to develop their own lives, and to contribute their glory to the new world. The social groups, and institutions, and classes were making the same demand within the nations themselves. The modern world with its new temper, outlook, ideal, interest, and urge to fuller life swung into the procession of the ages and took the place of leadership.

And Protestantism became the religion and the morality of these new national and social forces. The leadership of the world, therefore, passed from the Catholic nations and countries to the Protestant nations and countries. It is this that makes Protestantism a world event, that gives it immense importance in history, and makes it the powerful force in all progressive countries today.

In proportion to its purification of its Catholic remainders, and to its independence from entangling alliances with the state, and to its fidelity to its own central principles, Protestantism has had powerful influence in making the modern world. It has made for the democratic family, popular education, the free state, the free church, larger social freedom, and the right and privilege of making social experiments in the interest of fuller life, and further progress.

The tasks of Protestantism are not yet finished. There is and always will be "unfinished business" for Protestantism. It must continue to make this world the sphere of the Kingdom of Heaven; to permeate all interests and vocations with its ethical spirit; to spiritualize all the relations of life with its religious temper; to produce the free men and women who will serve their nations and social causes "as unto the Lord"; to let these free men control the world and to have the confidence that they can do it better, free from church authority, and subject only to their own consciences and Christ and consecrated to their fellow-men. It remains the great task of Protestantism to make free men devoted to the higher interests of the world.

Seek with study and with prayer for the most clear and confident convictions; and when you have won them, hold them so largely and vitally that they shall be to you, not the walls which separate you from your brethren who have other convictions than yours, but the medium through which you enter into understanding of and sympathy with them, as the ocean, which once was a barrier between the nations, is now the highway for the never-resting ships, and makes the whole world one.—Phillips Brooks.

My Father's House, A House of Prayer for All Nations

Tune—Ellers

By A. R. Stephenson

We thank Thee, LORD, for giving all a home,
While in the tangled paths of life we roam,
Where certain welcome waits the longing mind,
Where strength, love, purity and peace we find.

Within these walls of Thine O quench our pride,
All unkind thoughts to men for whom Christ died,
With lowly reverence ever may we pray,
And learn to walk with GOD from day to day.

Here may the sinful lose his load of sin,
Here may the careworn find GOD's peace within,
Here may the lonely one a comrade gain,
Here may the mourner know GOD's balm for pain.

Here may we learn to tread without a fear
The path of duty by our Christ made clear,
Here may we gain the Truth that makes us free,
Here may we yield our lives, O LORD, to Thee.

The Bulgarian Tragedy

(EDITORS' NOTE—The following article comes to us through Prof. A. C. Lane of Tufts College, a Congregational layman and loyal friend of "The Congregationalist." Prof. Lane had asked his cousin, Miss Elizabeth Clark, a missionary of the American Board in Bulgaria, for light on the Bulgarian Tragedy. In reply Miss Clark sent the accompanying article, for the translation of which she is responsible, but which was written by Dr. Pencheff, an editor, who is also a national representative.)

In this little slandered country, placed at the heart of the eternally stormy Balkans, events come to pass which have great influence in the peace of Europe.

A band of conspirators cross the western boundary, and on April 14 make an assault on the King. Fortunately the life of the King was saved, and the conspirators intended to return whence they came to hospitable (to them) Jugo-Slavia. Two days later was done the evil deed in the cathedral of Sofia, under the ruins of which 150 citizens, including 12 generals, the mayor, the chief of police, and other representatives of authority, met their death.

Evidently the conspiracy had mobilized all its forces and was trying to take over state control by aggression, to form a labor-village-government, on the Moscow plan. Placed in a position requiring legal self-defence the government (state) took quick and energetic measures.

The various parties forgot their mutual animosity to combine for the support—not of Minister Tsankoff—but of the state. Thus there was created in the country a state of inter-party armistice. On the other hand the conquering powers granted to Bulgaria, through a conference of their representatives, the right to muster 10,000 additional troops until the first of June.

The first of June came. As the Allied Powers were not willing to change their decision, Bulgaria had to discharge her militia and be satisfied with her regular paid army of 30,000 soldiers.

But we ask—have the reasons which required the vote of the conference of ambassadors been removed? Has the danger of Bolshivism been driven from Bulgaria and the Balkans? A more thorough consideration of the situation would convince every observer that Bolshivism in Bulgaria is indeed in general retreat, but the danger is far from being overcome. Deceived in its hopes, pillaged, and unjustly treated, the Bulgarian natives seem to be riotously inclined. On the other hand, Moscow does not cease to conspire, believing that in attacking Bulgaria she is attacking at the weakest point of resistance the peace of Europe.

In the third place the agrarians and communists who have taken refuge in Jugo-Slavia organized and united in a solid front continually send bands into Bulgaria to commit outrages and political murders to keep up in the country a condition of constant anarchy.

So long as Moscow continues to conspire and Belgrade to favor the plots of the emigrants against their own country, it is impossible to think of the pacification of Bulgaria and the crushing of Bolshivism. The newspaper Temps said that the danger of Bolshivism is a general one and therefore there must be a united battle against it. In Sofia this "united battle" is taken to mean that to Bulgaria must be given the means of self-defence.

A regular—instead of a paid—army, an increase in its number of at least 10,000—this is the most vital request of this nation. With regard to the emigrés, the Great Powers should force Jugo-Slavia to send them into the interior of the country and destroy their military camps placed in the immediate neighborhood of the west boundary of Bulgaria. However, in Sofia they are sceptical as to the granting of these legal helps. It is evident that a weak and agitated Bulgaria is desired by the Balkan capitals, a Bulgaria which can become an easy prey to her neighbors. In this respect the Pernic mine is an important factor, being very near the Serbian boundary.

We have said that this Bulgarian tragedy is due not only to the outside influence of the emigrés and Bolshivists whose action is identical, but also to the riotous spirit in Bulgaria herself.

Being engaged in warfare against organized force, the government of Tsankoff has also been drawn into the use of force.

In Hungary the Bolshivic reaction created Admiral Horthy; in Italy, Mussolini; in Bulgaria, Tsankoff. The reprisals of the law often overstep the boundaries of law, blood is shed freely in this hapless land, and hatreds grow continually greater and more irreconcilable.

It is evident that the war against Bolshivism pre-supposes other means besides the power of arms. A policy working for internal pacification should treat not the results of the evil, but its first causes.

As far as these causes lie outside of the ability of Bulgaria, that is Moscow and Belgrade, their cure is the duty of the Great Powers. As far as they are purely internal, their cure belongs to the political parties of the country.

The legal parties in opposition whose official exponent is Mr. Malinoff, chief of the democratic party, are face to face with their duty and, they believe they will fulfil it.

On the first of June the discussions of the National Assembly were renewed. First the "Broad" Socialists through their mouthpiece Mr. Sucrizoff, filed a question regarding the general policy of the government. The other parties are preparing to do the same. In political centers it is insistently said that parties in opposition will unite forces to put an end to all violations of law and reprisals. They will seek a joint conference with the prime minister. After that an audience with the King will probably be requested.

The crisis through which Bulgaria is passing is not only a moral and political one, it is also national, because it refers to the question whether she shall be governed by a dictator or by a democracy. The democratic party wishes to re-establish respect for law and the Assembly, to supply the lawful needs of the masses in the country, and by satisfying them to withdraw them finally from the seductive attractions of the red siren.

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Monument

We were in London, I and Keturah, and as we drove about, I beheld an High Monument, with the bronze statue of a gentleman upon the top. And I spake unto the Chauffeur saying, I recognized Lord Nelson on the top of a tall post in Trafalgar Square, but this gentleman's personality has faded out of my memory. Who was he?

And the Chauffeur answered, saying, I drive by 'ere hevery day, but I never 'eard tell who the bloke was.

And that evening I walked abroad, and I said, I will go and read that bronze gentleman's name on the base of his Monument.

But when I came to the Monument, there was no name on the base, and if there was one higher up I could not see it.

And two young women came by, as it were Shopgirls or Stenographers. And I inquired of them, saying, Whose Monument is this?

And they both looked up as though they had passed the Monument every day and had never seen it. And one of them answered, I do not know whose Monument it is. It is not mine. And they both laughed and went their way.

And I inquired of a Policeman and a Postman, and I learned nothing.

And I returned to the Inn and spake unto Keturah, saying, There are two ways of consigning a man to Oblivion. One is by the deep burial of his memory, and the other is by elevating him so high above the heads of humanity that no one knoweth or careth who he is. And there are other ways of doing that beside Monuments.

The Sea-Gull

By Kate W. Grant

Oh, thou quiet plumaged sea-gull,
Who goest along thy untrodden ways
So sure, swift, and skillfully sailing,
Glistening or dark against the sky,
Ascending high or gliding down
To parallel the water line and skim!
Would that I had thy steady sureness,
Thy balance, ease, and fearlessness!

Seemest thou to know His laws
Of gravitation, skill'd manipulation
Of thy great wings with unerring accuracy,
Confident and soaring in unknown spaces,
Hearing not the roaring surf,
The banging, spanking sound of waters,
Seeing not the clutching curlings,
Thou dost arrive right royally.

So God would have us wing our flight,
Yielding to all that's best, abandoned
To His will, as gulls the elements fight
Or yield, thus gaining poise and power.
We then might soar, or, falling away,
Would but momentum gain and force
To carry us further aloft and afar
To the One who guides all destinies.

Making the Church More Effective

Suggestions from a Business Man

By William E. Gould
Kewanee, Illinois

THE thought has often been expressed in recent years that the church is not measuring up to its opportunities. No one will deny that there is certainly room for improvement in the church. With this thought in mind, these few suggestions may be helpful.

For the purpose of bringing what I have to say to the reader's attention in as clear a manner as possible I am going first to set out four suggestions, and then discuss them in order. They are as follows:

1. The Protestant Church should make a greater appeal to the instinct of worship in man.
2. The concept of God and the universe as set out in church creeds should agree with modern thought and science.
3. The church should be of more actual material service to the world.
4. A more effective council of churches should be organized.

First: The Protestant Church should make a greater appeal to the instinct of worship in man.

It is clear to all that man has certain inborn instincts and emotions, common to all, but stronger in some individuals than in others. Among them are fear, hate, love, maternity, sex, jealousy, patriotism, and many others. One of these instincts is the instinct of worship. From the earliest recorded time down to the present, man has always worshiped something. Every nation, every tribe, every degree of man, from the highest to the lowest, worship some thing. The heathen worships his idols, the Chinese his ancestors, our forefathers worshiped the god Thor in the forests of Great Britain and Europe.

This instinct is inherent in man and can be and should be gratified and fed. It seems to me that our modern Protestant churches do not appeal to and gratify this instinct as much as it is possible to do. It would seem that the church might be much strengthened in this respect.

The probable cause for the neglect is found in its history. The Roman Church became imbued with formalism to too great an extent during the Middle Ages, and the Protestant Church broke away. In breaking away the rebound was too great and informalism took the place of formal worship. It went too far in its simplicity—as a pendulum swings from one extreme to the other, so swung the church. The best ground is the middle ground.

The instinct of worship should be kept in mind in the building of a church which should be for worship only. There should be a parish house for general church functions and activities. The church itself should be in the form of a cross, or at least rather longer than wide, and not square or round or filled with many corners and angles. The light should be subdued, the building conducive to silence, the furnishings quiet, and all tending to increase the spirit of reverence in the worshiper. The music should be soft, quiet, and inspiring. It seems to me that much modern choir music does not put the hearer in a spirit of reverence or worship.

In the matter of the service much time should be given to the individual. He comes to the church to worship, so give him a chance to do it. Let him pray, let him keep silence, above all let him worship God and let the entire service have that one thing in mind.

The sermons should be short and spiritual. The church is not the place for a lecture nor is it a college class-room. The sermon should not be strongly educational, and should neither scold nor chide, but be spiritual and uplifting.

The instinct of worship is born in man, and the whole church building, service, music, and sermon should appeal to and feed that instinct.

Second: The Concept of God and the universe as set out in church creeds should agree with modern thought and science.

We here tread on dangerous ground, where a controversy which seems about to split some of our larger denominations is even now raging.

One should approach this subject with prayer, and fear, and trembling.

There is little doubt, however, that some radical change must be made in order to appeal to the younger, educated mind. The old folks who cling to the old ideas are fast passing away. Another twenty years will see many of them beyond, and their places, if they are taken at all, will be filled by the young, more or less college bred men and women.

WILLIAM E. GOULD

If the church is to hold the new class that is coming to it, it must measure up to modern ideas. The educated young will not stultify themselves, and the church will either go without them or will have to conform to modern ideas. The younger generation will go with the church if the church measures up to the best modern thought. If it does not, the best of the young people will either not go with it at all, or if they do, it will be only a half-hearted or perfunctory service.

Of course the thought that comes forward is: What is the modern concept of God and the universe? What should we believe in order to be abreast with modern thought? One would probably say one thing and one another. Modern thought is not yet clear enough nor belief crystallized enough to say.

It would seem that men of science and the best theologians should strive to evolve some common ground wherein science and religion could meet. We believe that there is a God, we know that the world and the universe exist. There is a common ground, but where is it?

Third: The Church should be of more actual material service to the world.

This suggestion will not need much argument or defence. It goes almost without saying that if the church is useful to society it will live, and if it is not, it will die.

The question arises: Is the church useful to society? Would our communities miss some of the churches, if they ceased to function? The answer is that they would not. I live in a little city of 20,000 population. There are about twenty to twenty-five churches. I feel very sure that if half or three-quarters of them would quietly close their doors the city would be none the wiser. I doubt if they would be missed. Is that not true in most places? Even our largest churches are open only a few hours on Sunday and the influence of those hours is not a very vital thing to the community.

In our city we have a Welfare Council which looks after the poor and needy. They are not affiliated with any church and the business district is solicited for funds for this organization. It functions well. We have a civic nurse in our city and the organization looking after that work is independent of any church. It solicits funds and cares for the sick.

Our churches do a very little of that kind of work, but what they do is small compared to the civic organization. Why do the churches not do more of this sort of work?

The church must serve the people if it is to live. Why a pastor who puts in his time preparing two lectures a week to be listened to by a more or less indulgent congregation? Why not a secretary, like a Y. M. C. A. secretary, rather than a preacher? Why not a minister who ministers rather than a preacher who preaches? At least have the secretary, and if the congregation is able, then both a preacher and a secretary.

The church should do the welfare work spoken of a moment ago—it should do the civic nurse work. It should run an employment bureau. It should serve the community so faithfully that if it should close the whole town would know it and miss it.

This thought leads to the suggestion that there are far too many churches. A few properly manned and financed could do great good, while many poorly provided and hard put to it for funds are all but useless. Perhaps one could almost say they are an added burden to the community. The sleepy ones should be closed.

This will be hard to do. Each denomination suffers from its own particular brand of church politics. The "ins" want to stay in and enjoy the prestige and the emoluments of the higher position and the "outs" want to get in. The laity of the church must rise up and say that there is too much overhead, too much duplication, too many burdens added to the community. The laity must say to both the "ins" and the "outs": "You are all out and we are going to consolidate."

Consolidation is the order of the day. Railroads unite, banks amalgamate, stores consolidate. They do away with expensive overhead charges, and thereby serve the country better. Why not apply the same principle to the churches?

Why should a $100,000 church plant, centrally located, be open only a few hours per week when many people need the comforts and aid such an institution might give? If our little city had only four or five churches instead of twenty or so, they could, in my opinion, serve the people better.

Service wins. The useful remains. This is ue in business. It is true in the natural orld and it is true with churches. Are you aving trouble with your church? Are there roblems? Yes, there are. The one sure, time-ied remedy is service. If your church serves ell enough, problems will disappear and roubles will vanish.

Fifth: A more effective council of churches. In order that the church may be more effec-ve it would seem that some more powerful entral organization should control the Prot-stant churches. We have the example con-inually before us of the great Catholic organ-zation with its absolute head and perfect rganization. It will probably be impossible, ith our multitudinous denominations, ever to ave so effective a control as our Catholic riends have, but at least it can be approached.

We have our Federal Council of Churches hich is supposed to have a beneficent over-ight over all Protestant churches. It is a ost commendable organization and is doing great work, but it does not go far enough. t does not have power nor sufficient control ver the many denominations. It is only ad-isory when it should be largely mandatory.

In order to make our churches most effective hey must be organized much after the fashion f the great business organizations—such as he Steel Trust, if you please, or the Standard Oil Company, or any of our great railroad ystems which are now still further organizing nd combining.

Great organizations and reorganizations are the order of the day. The church properly to function must follow this modern trend. Why not a United States Federation of Churches that would have the same control over its de-nominations that a holding company in busi-ness has over its subsidiaries? This would do away with duplications both at home and in the foreign field.

This would eliminate non-productive and un-necessary "plants." It would stimulate and put in the proper zeal, enthusiasm, and spirit where necessary. It could and would co-ordi-nate the religious schools and colleges. It might even go so far as to smooth out the differences in church doctrines and thus bring them to a common ground.

Business has its trusts and its chambers of commerce, local, state, and national. Railways have the interstate commerce control by law. Banks have the state and national supervising departments under the law. Why not the churches a similar control?

Admitting the necessity and the desirability, the question which is most important is: "How to do it?" If this matter could be left to the laity in the form of a referendum, as success-ful labor unions do, it might be accomplished.

The heads of the great denominations will naturally not want to have any portion of their power usurped, but for the greatest good to the greatest number the rank and file of the members will probably welcome such a super-organization. Organizations and centraliza-tion are the order of the day; why not extend it to the churches in a big way?

A Beginning

To sum up the matter, it seems improbable that all of the suggestions discussed herein can be generally adopted or become effective at once. However, a beginning can be made. If any one of these suggestions can be adopted it will, in my opinion, add to the usefulness of the church. If more are used the effective-ness of the church will be still greater.

It is said that the church today is not fully meeting its opportunity. Let us strive to cor-rect this. If the church is hide-bound by old traditions and obsolete customs, if it is held in check by a useless and poor service, it is the duty of its loyal members to make great, and, if necessary, drastic changes to meet the new conditions which have arisen in the world. The church should be a great and useful adjunct in the march of civilization. It has been in the vanguard in the past; it should be and it may be in the vanguard of human progress in the future. If necessary, it should break what-ever thongs are holding it back and add to itself whatever is necessary in order that it may go forward more swiftly.

The home, the church, the school, and the state are the great things that make for prog-ress in the world. These four should be co-ordinated. They should be harmonized. They should be harnessed together as a great team and all pull together to advance civilization to make the world better and to increase the goodness and usefulness of its citizens. To-gether their pull is enormous—apart it is small. Together it is great and lasting success in the highest degree. A Perfect Civilization!

The Church's Overhead

(Editors' Note—This article comes to us from a well-known minister who is now in a prominent pastorate in the Middle West.)

"Well, what's the answer?" you ask at the end of your editorial on my friend Walter Dyer's survey of "The Pastor's Overhead." In a word, I believe the answer is in the phrase I have chosen for my caption: it's the church's overhead.

As soon as I finished your editorial I opened a desk drawer where I keep various "embryo" material, and drew out a paper I wrote two years ago on "The Church's Overhead." It was written at a time when I had been strug-gling desperately with this same problem and believed I had found the answer, although it brought no help to my own problem and I don't suppose it will be of much service to others. I put it "straight" to my own trus-tees and I suspect they thought it was undipl-omatic and let it go at that. I was then in another field, with a salary of $2,100 and free use of a parsonage and an "estate" that would have needed a $10,000 salary to maintain. Here is the essence of what I wrote then.

The particular overhead I have in mind is the church's overhead, especially that of the country church. For so long that we've un-fortunately got used to it, the minister has been hired at "so little per year and free use of the parsonage," with no question as to whether the parsonage was one that suited his needs and income or not. He could "take it or leave it." Having taken it, it was up to him, thereafter. Somebody else would take it if he left it. It was assumed that he would use the most convenient bedroom for a "study," though not necessarily the one his predecessors had used; and so far as the church had a "church office" it was in the same bedroom. Its equipment was such as he happened to have gathered through the years and had saved out of the wrecks of previous movings. In addi-tion to this equipment which he provided, such items as heat, light, telephone, stationery, travel on account of the church for long dis-tances or short, the use of an auto if he had been so fortunate or unfortunate as to have secured one, were all his lookout. In fact, I doubt whether one church in a hundred has ever given a thought to these items in fixing the salary. For four years and a half (six years now) my car was always at the service of the church and used almost entirely in my work for the church, and the church never spent a cent for the car or its use or upkeep. It was a personal gift from a friend outside the parish.

For years I've tried to budget my salary in advance, but never could work any of the pre-pared schedules. If I left food till the last item, we could have nothing to eat; if clothes, we must go naked; if heat and light, we must shiver in darkness in winter and make the best use of daylight saving time in summer. Or, if we insisted on food, clothes, heat, and light, I could not do my work for the church accord-ing to my business standards. No telephone, no correspondence, no travel (I'm not think-ing of pleasure jaunts but the ordinary going to and fro that seems essential for keeping alive the fellowship and sharing the team-work of the churches and doing pastoral work), no books certainly (and this has been almost lit-erally the case)—none of these things were pos-sible, although my recent churches had cared for the item of stationery used directly for the church.

I never could see just what was the matter except that there wasn't money enough to cover the essential items; so we have bungled along, using every cent of extra income from summer preaching, fees, occasional addresses, writing, and personal gifts, for running expenses.

An article by Mr. Babson in The Congrega-tionalist (about two years ago) seemed to throw some light upon my problem, though he did not mention what I have in mind. I studied my three-year average in the light of his fig-ures. In the matter of "accumulation," I found, I am within the limit. As for food, though you might not guess it, we have been 20 per cent. underfed; for instead of spending $650 on food, my wife, who long ago learned to make left-overs palatable, has fed four of us for about $535, a little more than $2.50 per week per person. Clothes are about 20 per cent. below his allowance. But in the matter of "operating expense" it is quite the other way. The items under that heading make a total almost exactly $500 above Mr. Babson's al-lowance. A careful study of these items con-vinces me that it has cost me from $400 to $500 per year to keep the church going, and that if the church did not see fit to put these items in its budget I ought at least to be given credit on the treasurer's books for having con-tributed to "current expenses," in addition to my apparently small cash pledge, a sum from two to four times the amount contributed by the wealthiest families in the parish.

Is this the answer? It is only one man's experience, but from what I know of the cir-cumstances of men in the ministry I fancy you could gather enough items of the same sort to fill several numbers of The Congregationalist. But no good would come of circulating these among the ministers who are at present wrest-ling with this problem. Nothing will come of it until the successful business men who are directing the business of our churches and know infinitely more about the importance of overhead than we do will face up to the situa-tion squarely and make "The Pastor's Over-head" become "The Church's Overhead." The financial problem of the minister will still be serious enough, even then, but there will be a measure of relief in the direction of justice much to be desired. There is bound to be "over-head" in the business of a church as well as in any business. Why not put it where it belongs? That is in the church's budget of current expense, and not in the pastor's budget of family expense.

The Pastor Says: What I fear about evolu-tion is that men will yet be passing laws to hush up their descent from us, anthropoid creatures of today.

Have You Tried This Method?

The Valve of Dramatization in the Church School

By Elizabeth Miller Lobingier

Author of "The Dramatization of Bible Stories" and of "Dramatization in the Church School"

AS the guide opened the door of the class-room, the visitors stepped inside. To their surprise they saw that one side of the small room was transformed into an improvised stage. At that moment a boy in costume stepped forward and explained that they were glad to have a few visitors present, because they were going to dramatize their lesson. "Instead of discussing our lesson, 'The Preaching of John the Baptist,'" he explained, "we have decided to take the parts of the characters in this story, and to act it out ourselves."

There they were, the members of this church-school class, in simple but effective costumes, ready to dramatize their lesson story. One of the visitors turned to her guide. "I thought this was a Bible class," she said. "We never do it this way where I come from."

"Is that so?" the guide replied. "We often do it this way here."

Why did they "often do it that way" there? Undoubtedly one of their reasons was that they recognized the value of dramatization as an effective method in teaching. The teachers in this church school were alert to the modern point of view in pedagogy, namely, that in the learning process it is necessary to employ a variety of methods. The visitor represented the attitude (which fortunately is rapidly passing) that the "Sunday School lesson" must always be taught in the same way, i.e., by telling the story and then asking questions about it.

Dramatization is one of the methods which are used as aids in teaching. Its use is coming to be so prevalent that in the literature of this field one constantly finds the expression, "the dramatic method in teaching."

Why is this method considered of such great value? The following are some of the reasons that may be given:

1. Dramatization is but an outgrowth of the play impulse which all children possess. The smallest child imitates in play the activities of his mother and of others around him. The play of a little child is almost entirely concerned with dramatizing the events and experiences within his environment. He "plays" train, fire-engine, Sunday school, house, and numberless other activities. He is learning about each activity, and it is becoming more and more a part of his experience every time he plays it. A little child's mastery of his environment is in large measure achieved by dramatizing the activities of others in his play. Teachers are recognizing this fact, and are using the natural play interest, expressed in the desire to act it out, as an aid in teaching.

Courtesy of Rev. Frank S. Scudder

HANNAH DEDICATING SAMUEL TO THE LORD
As given by young people in Honolulu

2. Through dramatization new and permanent interests are developed. When children play a story, they enter intimately into every detail of it, and new and abiding interests begin to come as results of this experience. A mere reading, or hearing, the story could never do this to the same degree.

3. Dramatization is a means of securing lasting impressions. Children do not forget the story that they have played. It is a well-known fact that we are much more likely to forget what we hear than we are to forget what we do. It is difficult to over-estimate the importance of activity in the formation of our ideas and standards. A child may be told about the gentleness of David, and advised to become like him in this respect. But it is after he has taken the part of David in the dramatization, and tried to interpret that phase of his character that he begins to form an adequate conception of gentleness. There is no learning process through mere passivity; learning comes through activity on the part of the child. Dramatic work affords ample opportunity for such activity.

Courtesy of Rev. Alton L. Hall

FROM "THE ROCK," A BIBLICAL DRAMA
As presented in Bishop, California

4. One of the most important benefits from dramatization comes through the experience of working together in a group. The social values resulting are as important as any benefits derived from intimate contact with the story dramatized. Children learn to work harmoniously with others in this way; they come to appreciate the best efforts of others; they learn to subordinate their own desires to the will of the group; they come to be more interested in promoting a successful result than in magnifying their individual personalities.

5. The experience which a child must necessarily have through the very process of dramatization will help to develop in him initiative, resourcefulness, self-expression, and other desirable qualities of character.

From the point of view of the church school, dramatization may serve two functions:

(1) It may be used as a method in teaching. In this case the teacher is mainly concerned with the development of the children who are doing the dramatizing, and not with the final result of the play. Dramatization employed for this purpose is always charac-

ed by great informality and spontaneity. children make their own play from the . They act out the story, and use their words to express their thoughts. They do write out the play in the beginning and the parts; they simply play the story igh, over and over again, changing it in l and action each time. There is constant t on the children's part to make the play er and more finished. After they have it hey want it, they then write it out. In way the final product may not be perfect an artistic point of view, but it does esent the best effort of the children, under guidance of the teacher, and the final uct is their own. In this free and in- al method there can be nothing superim- d upon the children. Even in this infor- method, however, the final product may very pleasing indeed.

2) Dramatization is also used in connec- with church-school work for the sake of rtainment. On special occasions, or for purpose of raising money, a play is fre- ntly given. Here, where the aim is pri- ily to please the audience, those who partici- in the acting are given parts to learn from ay already in dramatic form. The method of procedure in this case is formal, and the emphasis is placed upon the learning of parts and acting according to the direction of the person coaching the play.

Both of these uses of dramatization are valuable in connection with the church school. Each, however, has a different aim, and this should be carefully considered. Dramatization used as a method in teaching has a place with all ages and classes in the church school. It is particularly valuable when used with small children, although adults may learn by the same method. With beginners and primary children the utmost freedom should be allowed. The children simply "play" the story, and there is no attempt whatever to get a finished result. If they play the story once during the lesson period, that is often sufficient to accomplish the teacher's aim.

In the junior and junior high school departments the children may work upon their dramatization and consciously try to secure the most beautiful result possible. Although they are making it themselves, skillful guidance is necessary on the teacher's part. The wise teacher is not afraid to let children express themselves because she fears that they will not say what she wants them to say. She guides their thoughts by questions, and lets them make their own decisions.

At about the senior high school age the young people are ready for dramatic work from a more formal point of view. They are able to interpret a play which already has been put into dramatic form, and at this age they should come in contact with, and study, the best literary productions in written drama. There are many dramas already in print that have religious themes or are based upon Biblical stories. These, of course, vary greatly in value, but some are well worth presenting in connection with church-school work. The children of the senior high school age who have been taught during preceding years through the dramatic method should be all the more capable of entering appreciatively and with understanding into a play which they are to present for the sake of entertainment.

During the past four or five years the literature on the subject of dramatization in religious education has increased rapidly. This literature includes collections of religious drama in finished form, books dealing with the principles underlying the use of dramatization as a teaching method, and books which include practical suggestions for workers in this field.

Taking the Children from the Streets

What the Vacation School Does for the Community

By Rev. William C. Towart

HERE is only one kind of community and one kind of church that cannot have a rch Vacation School and that is a church community where there are no children. l it is only under such conditions that any sonable excuse can be given for omitting h a school from the religious program of community. The vacation school idea is well established today to need any argu- nts put forth for its existence. Every wide- ake leader knows that in no branch of the rch's activities is there such an opportunity real constructive work as this organization rds. Coming as it does at a time in the ld's life when it is free from school duties l all that is involved with those duties, it is sible to do as much real educational work ing the month of July as the church school able to do in the whole year.

But think of the problems that face you en you suggest the school! Surely we would e to have one! But who will put it on? w shall we secure funds? Where shall we the teachers? Who will run the school? w these things just loom up like the rock Gibraltar! And so in numberless communities year after year goes by and no school is organized. Golden opportunities for doing a constructive piece of religious education under ideal conditions are lost. The church laments the fact that the average child in the church school only receives twenty-four hours' religious education in the year and yet refuses to make it possible for that same child to have sixty additional hours during the vacation period.

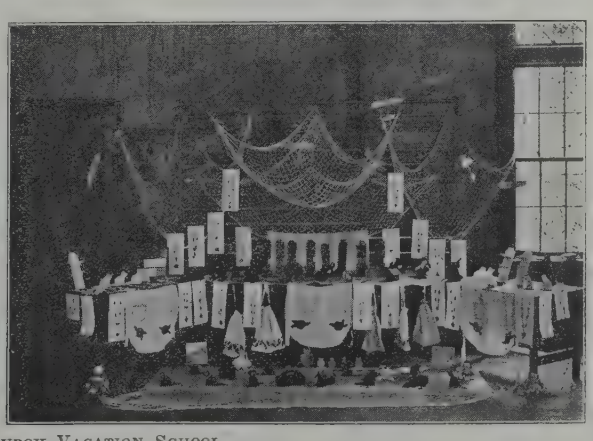
Solving the Problems

Here is how we solved these problems in our own community. In the first place, there must be a real desire to have a school. One person must take the lead. Ours is a community school with four churches participating. We called a meeting of the pastors and three leading members of each church, and after talking the matter over we had a union service with a stereopticon lecture showing the growth and work of the movement. This informed the members in general on the subject and created a good deal of interest.

The joint committee met again and voted to have a school. Sub-committees were formed. One was a finance committee. It was left to each church to use its own method of raising the necessary money. Two churches made it a part of the regular budget; another made an appeal from the pulpit; and one pastor called on several of his laymen. A treasurer was appointed who received the money and paid the bills. This treasurer opened a special account in the bank for the purpose.

Another committee took care of the advertising. This consisted of making posters and displaying them in the library and stores, as well as writing articles for the local paper. Pulpit notices were also given and before the school opened the community was well prepared for it.

The teacher problem seemed to be the most difficult task, and the pastors were made responsible for getting as many as possible from their respective churches. Then the work was outlined and a few evenings were set aside for teacher training. The enthusiasm among the teachers was almost as great as among the children themselves. I took charge of the school and after outlining the courses each one was assigned their part. Most of the teachers were to lead in the handwork period, so they



Some of the Results of a Church Vacation School

Part of the work accomplished by the Primary Department of the church at Bennington, Vermont were given a course in that part; and each one made every piece they were to supervise before they came to the school. This is essential to the success of the school. The expressional or handwork activity was developed along a four-fold line,—something for self, something for the home, something for the community, and something for the church.

An Important Feature of the Church's Work

The school opened and has been a success since the first day. It is now as much a part of the church program of our town as the regular Sunday worship or the church school. No piece of work has done more to cement the churches together than the church vacation school. We now have a community committee on religious education composed of the Protestant churches and the Y. M. C. A., with active co-operation from the Public Library and other organizations. We began our fifth year on the sixth of July. All the churches are enthusiastic, the money comes easy, and the school is cared for almost entirely by young people from the High School and those home from the colleges.

The Effect

As to the effect of the school in the community perhaps the following written by one of those who visited the school and printed in the local paper is the best testimonial:

Editor of the "Banner":

Just home from the final session and exhibition of the Church Vacation School, I am meditating upon what a hundred or so of us Benningtonians have seen with our eyes. . . . How many of Benington's busy men and women sense what all this means? How many, who love God and country, appreciate the things that have been accomplished, but which cannot be exhibited? Not merely that a hundred children have been off the streets a "out of mischief" during thirty vacation da to the relief of many weary mothers. Not o that a group of willing young people who l childhood and Christ have worked together an inspiring and important task for thirty d without ever asking one another, or the c dren, "What church do you belong to?" N only that some classic Bible verses and bea tiful songs have been stored away in youth memories. Not this: less obvious, but no the less important result: a hundred of tom row's citizens have received, at a most impr sionable period of their lives, one more stro and pleasurable impulse toward reverence f God and country, respect for authority of pa ent and teacher, helpfulness toward neighbo they have learned to mingle, without sense incongruity, song, prayer, and useful lab Such men and women as these, one can read see, will be the world's safeguard in these ve ominous days when the very "foundations a shaken." Such youth as these this town—"a town"—needs much more than new factori new laws, or new ways to lay the dust.

Moving Pictures in South Africa

Used to Quell Strike Outbreak and for Education by Missionaries

By Frederick L. Fagley

THE use of motion pictures to quell a strike outbreak and to restore order in the great mining camp at Johannesburg, South Africa, will be one of the interesting missionary stories told by Rev. Frederick B. Bridgman of the Transvaal, a missionary of the American Board for Foreign Missions at the meeting of the board in connection with the meeting of the National Council of Congregational Churches to be held in Washington, D. C., in October.

Dr. Bridgman and his assistant, Rev. Ray E. Phillips, are stationed at Johannesburg, where are located the vast mines of the Rand. The workers for these mines are brought down from the hills and forests of the interior. These vast hordes, numbering between 200,000 and 300,000 men, are housed in huge compounds or barracks. Here they live in a more or less primitive fashion, working in the mines during the day, cooking their food in rough out-door furnaces, and idling their time in gambling, vice, fights, and dances. The ignorant black easily falls a prey to all the vices of the white man and there are many to lead him into all sorts of vice for a profit.

Mine authorities provide for the physical native: they feed and house him well, but as yet have provided nothing in the way of wholesome outlet for his social nature. After the native's work is done, and his dinner is eaten, there are several hours before he retires to his bunk for the night. These hours are idle hours, and with native as with white man, it is true that the Devil finds plenty for idle bodies to do. During these hours drink is made—skokian, kill-me-quick, raspberry, and other famous drinks with a strong kick in them.

Meeting a Mine Strike Crisis

In 1922 a strike broke out among the workers that threatened not only the mines but the city as well. The ignorant blacks fell an easy prey to agitators, and they milled around and were on the point of open rebellion. If they had rebelled, they would have carried destruction far and wide. Then it was that Dr. Bridgman and Mr. Phillips brought in their moving picture machines, set them up, and began grinding out good old American pictures.

The effect was immediate. The blacks roared at the comics, were amused by the other pictures and after a short time the temper had so changed that they cheered the missionaries who had entered the compound but a little time earlier at the risk of their lives.

As the show continued the result was magical. Screams of delight greeted the moving figures on the screen. Then as the objects were made out, the immense crowds sat in silent wonderment, except occasionally when a certain scene set them off in howls of delight. As gradually the wonder wore off, tongues were unloosed and a veritable bedlam of voices accompanied the showing of the film, each black spectator trying to tell his friend all about it. After the danger of outbreak passed by the missionaries continued to use the moving pictures with the people.

Animal pictures made an immediate hit. Comedies of the old crude sort, with a good deal of action, were liked. Simple adventure stories such as "Shep, the Dog Hero" were appreciated. Travel pictures showing the surf riders in Honolulu, the reindeer drivers in Lapland, or the pottery makers of India, were received with wonder. And of course the topical weekly current event pictures, showing the world in action, provided a valuable educational feature. An hour's program of films provided wholesome food for discussion for the compound population for the entire week. Compound managers r ported long discussions taking place arou the burning braziers on the following eve ings. Some of the men remembered with re ish that picture which showed King Geor and Queen Mary in the curious carria which bore them to the opening of Parli ment. Others expressed doubt that there we so many white men in the world as had bee shown at the unveiling of a monument London. All of them expressed their convi tion that no man could do the acrobatic tric which had been shown in the acrobatic fil It must have been faked.

Amusing things happen during the show In a certain compound the compound ma ager and other mine officials were present wi other friends. They were seated near th center of the dusky audience. A snake fil was being shown. The puff adder and bo constrictor had been greeted with bate breath. Then the scene changed, and a bi black snake was shown rapidly moving towar the front of the picture. This was too muc for the natives in front. With a yell the jumped to their feet and fled backward treading over their friends and pushing ove the row of Europeans. When the frightene natives realized what they had done, the were still more terrified. They rushed t eir rooms and buried themselves in their ongings. The Europeans, however, treated e matter as a good joke, peace was restored, d the program proceeded.

Playing Cage Ball at Johannesburg

In addition to educational, comic, and in-est films, others are being made to pro-ote a "Safety First" movement, warning the tives as to dangers underground, and on e surface. European officials and miners, th their families, frequently attend these ows. They find the pictures excellent for eir children. Compound managers often re-rk as to the value of the films in keeping e natives in good humor. Some insist that nking is not so prevalent as formerly.

Other Missionary Methods

Among other methods used by Dr. Bridg-an and Mr. Phillips to interest and educate ese natives are organizations of native Boy outs, called Pathfinders, and athletic leagues the boys, field hockey for the girls, and ubs and societies for the men. A lecture oup is conducted for educated native men o have studied in school, and during the e years since its origin, more than one hun-ed and fifty of the leading Europeans of uth Africa have spoken to this group on rious subjects more or less connected with erests important to native life in that land. In speaking recently of the work being done South Africa Dr. Bridgman said, "We have 0,000 men going to school through our films. ey all read the pictures; it is the universal nguage. An average audience is about 00, most of them heathen. They would not down and listen to a missionary talk, but ey were glad to sit and look at the picture. ey were glad to listen to the hymns. They re glad to bow reverently as we prayed r the blessing of God upon them. Every nday these thousands are brought to see rist and to hear of Christ."

"The missionaries can guide the channels ich shall mean life abundant. We believe e are in Africa by the purpose of God to lve the racial difficulties as well as to save dividual Africans. We believe that in some ys we are being thus used. The natives, stead of saying, 'Every white man is our emy,' are now saying, 'We did not know at so many white men loved us. We come contact with them in the clubs and open rums. We find that many white men really ve us and have our interests at heart.' This s done away with the bitterness and the titude of hopelessness in the situation."

In addition to Dr. Bridgman, other speakers o will take part in the program of the nerican Board meeting are, Dr. George E. hite of Salonica, Greece, Irving M. Chan-n of the Philippine Islands, Dr. John J. anninga of Pasumalai, Madura, India, and ev. Wynn C. Fairfield of Taiku, China.

Dr. C. H. Patton of Boston, the Home Sec-tary, will report that it is impossible to ep pace with the greatly increased demand r new workers in many fields. An appeal ill be made for increased funds that the merican Board may enter new fields and crease the force in other fields where new eds are developing.

This bi-ennial report of the American Board Commissioners for Foreign Missions will ow that the board has on its pay rolls 780 issionaries—ministers, educators, transla-rs, physicians, nurses, industrial and agri-ltural experts, and business agents. Asso-ated with these are 5,710 trained native orkers.

To this board has been assigned the task Christianizing 65,000,000 of the earth's opulation in Europe, Asia, Africa, and Latin America. The American Board is the oldest missionary society in America, having been organized in 1810. Through all the years it has been sending consecrated men and women into all parts of the world with a message of hope and good cheer.

Dr. Lucien C. Warner

Dr. Lucien C. Warner died on July 30, 1925, at his residence, 2 East 45th St., New York City. He was born in Cuyler, N. Y., on Oct. 26, 1841, and has resided in New York since 1873. He attended school at Lincklaen, Chenango County, during his boyhood and prepared for college at the DeRuyter Academy, Cortland County. In 1860 he went to Oberlin College, where he graduated in 1865. During his college course he enlisted with other schoolboys in Company K, 150th Regiment, Ohio Volunteers, and was on duty at forts in and around Washington until the fall of 1864, when he was mustered out and returned to his college. After graduating from Oberlin he entered the medical department of New York University, graduating there with the degree of M.D. in 1867. He also received from Oberlin College the A.M. degree for graduate work in 1870, LL.D. in 1900, and from New York University LL.D. in 1917.

Dr. Lucien C. Warner

Dr. Warner was one of the pioneers in health lecturing, and for six years after his graduation from New York University he lectured throughout the country on health subjects with his brother, Dr. Ira DeVer Warner, who died in 1913. In the fall of 1873 Dr. Warner settled in New York City in the practice of medicine, but his strong inclination for business led him to give up the practice of medicine, and in 1874 Dr. Warner organized together with his brother, Dr. Ira DeVer Warner, the Warner Brothers for the manufacture of corsets, which business was incorporated in 1894 under the name of Warner Brothers, Bridgeport, Ct. In 1900 Dr. Warner organized the Warner Chemical Company, 415 Lexington Ave., New York City, of which he was the Chairman of the Board of Directors at the time of his death. He was also a director of the Home Insurance Company and other corporations.

From 1880 to 1895 he resided in Harlem, where he took a great interest in all matters of philanthropic and benevolent natures in his neighborhood. In 1895 he built a country home at Irvington-on-Hudson, where he resided until he returned to New York for his permanent residence in 1902. Dr. Warner was a deacon of the Broadway Tabernacle Church, in which he has been an active worker during his residence in New York City. He has also taken an active interest in all of the National Congregational Societies, being a Corporate Member of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, former President of the Congregational Church Building Society, and member of the American Missionary Association. He has been a leader in the affairs of the Congregational Council, and was a delegate to the World's Missionary Conference at Edinburgh in 1910. He was especially interested in the Y. M. C. A., having been Chairman of the New York State Committee from 1893-1895 and of the International Committee from 1895-1910. He has remained a member of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. since his retirement from the chairmanship up to the time of his death. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of Oberlin College for over 50 years, and presented his Alma Mater with two buildings, one for the Conservatory of Music and the other for a gymnasium.

He was a member of the University Club of New York, the Adirondack League Club, the Scarsdale Golf Club, the New York Chamber of Commerce, and other societies.

He married Keren Osborne Warner at McGrawville, N. Y., on April 12, 1868. Mrs. Warner survives him with four children, seven grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. The children are Mrs. Agnes W. Mastick, wife of Senator Seabury C. Mastick, Pleasantville, N. Y.; Franklin H. Warner, White Plains, N. Y.; Lucien T. Warner, Bridgeport, Ct., and Mrs. Elizabeth W. Gallowhur, wife of Lieut.-Col. William G. Gallowhur, Scarsdale, N. Y.

The funeral was held at the Broadway Tabernacle Church on Sunday, Aug. 2, and interment was in the family masoleum at Woodlawn Cemetery.

Tributes from Associates

A prince and a great man in our Congregational Israel has fallen, and we shall feel the loss in many fields of activity. His keen ability in business, his intelligent interest in problems, his sympathetic advice given gladly and freely but only when desired, his constructive labor, so often in evidence at the meetings of committees, societies, and of the National Council.—all these made him a man of mark within our fellowship.

The same qualities of mind and heart were recognized in the educational world and in the world of business. In both he had achieved an outstanding position and occupied important posts. His wealth was held as a means of service, and all good causes found a generous response when he was convinced of their worth.

He walked with God in daily life on earth; in fuller life, and rejoicing in fullness of new vigor, he walks with God in larger fields of effort.

Charles H. Baker.

Dr. Warner was for many years a trustee and director of the Board of Ministerial Relief, and took great interest in it. He attended the meetings of the Board with the utmost regularity. When the way opened for the creation of the Annuity Fund he gave much thought to that and was much interested in the origin and successful development of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund. He was long President of the Congregational Church Building Society, a corporate member of the American Board, and an officer of the American Missionary Society. Until in recent years his health began to fail, he attended the meetings of the societies and never lost his interest. His advice was always greatly respected and rarely failed of adoption.

He was in many ways the wisest and most experienced of our Congregational representatives, and his death occasions a loss long to be felt.

HENRY A. STIMSON.

At the time of his death, and for many years prior thereto, Dr. Lucien C. Warner was the senior member of the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association. He was elected to membership in that Committee in 1892, and served thereon continuously from that date until his death, a period of 33 years. For many consecutive years he was Chairman of that Committee and a member of the Finance Committee, bringing to the Association the invaluable aid of a wise, clear-thinking, and devoted Christian business man. The length of his term of service made him particularly valuable as an adviser, as he was able to give to those associated with him that mature judgment which can only be acquired as the result of long experience in considering the serious problems that continually arise in the work of a great benevolent organization such as the American Missionary Association.

He will be greatly missed by all those who have been associated with him in that work.

IRVING C. GAYLORD.

Northfield Foreign Missions Conference

Dear Congregationalists:

I want to tell you of some surprises I met with at the Conference of Women's Foreign Missionary Societies held at Northfield, July 14-22. I have always loved the cause of foreign missions ever since, as a small child in Auburndale, I played with sundry small Pettees and Pixleys and Chandlers who were gathered under Mrs. Walker's motherly wing. And in later years I have often found inspiration in the meetings of our Congregational Woman's Board. But recently I have lived much with young people, and coming more and more to see life through their eyes, and to wish that they might be kindled for world service, I have rather lost my interest in missionary meetings attended largely by women of my own generation. And I will further confess to a fear lest in our absorption in denominational needs and methods, we were failing to get this subject across to the youth of today, on tip-toe as they are for big achievments.

So my first surprise on reaching Northfield was girls, scores of them,—and having ridden with some of them from the station to the lovely hill-top campus, the next thing I noticed was tents,—hundreds of them, in straight lines and curved lines, under pine trees and oak trees, bordering the green lawns and overlooking the valley. Such jolly looking tents, just the kind girls love to occupy, and by that time I was not surprised to learn that these were occupied by no fewer than 600 girls. A little later I discovered that 150 of them were Congregational girls living in Camp Aloha, which Miss Helen Calder founded fifteen years ago, and which has set the pace for all the other denominations. We were lodged in Gould Hall, had the joy of looking out of the window each morning and seeing and hearing the Aloha girls march singing up to breakfast, looking like an animated rainbow, with their spirited leader, Miss Ruth Seabury, at their head.

And so from that morning hour, on through the day, we met youth at every turn, chatting in groups as they walked to and from their classes; or spread over the crest of Round Top at the Sunset Vesper service, or marching, two hundred and fifty strong, down the aisles of the Auditorium, singing, "Lead On, O King Eternal." On the last night of all, six of these girls had stars pinned for them on the Northfield Service Flag in honor of the world-service upon which they will enter this fall.

Our hearts burned within us "as we felt the uplift and on-push of all this strong young life, the church of the future, which is to carry the torch of world-friendship when it drops from our hands." If any of you are inclined to worry about "the younger generation," just visit "the valiant six hundred" in their tents at Northfield.

But my greatest surprise was to realize after a day or two that we were really gathered at a great peace conference. As the delegates present represented many different denominations, we were freed from the necessity of considering denominational details, and could come together on this common platform—that World-Friendship is the most important objective of Foreign Missions. So from the very first this was the watchword of the conference.

At a daily forum on the subject of International Co-operation for Peace, under the leadership of Mr. Edward C. Carter and later of Miss Bertha Conde, we were encouraged to bring to light some of our race prejudices and inquire of ourselves, "how we got that way?" We also discovered that certain terms descriptive of international relations produced an unpleasant reaction in our minds, and the question was, "How can this be, if we are Christians?" We were made to realize as never before that it is "the un-Christian aspects of our common Christianity which are doing more than anything else to block the way to a good understanding between nations and therefore to world peace and that, unless the average man realizes his world citizenship and shoulders its responsibilities even at some sacrifice to his personal interests, World Peace will not be won. This means that the Christian Church in America must be "internationally minded."

As a result of this forum, practical suggestions were drawn up for use by churches, communities, and individuals, copies of which may be ordered from M. H. Leavis, West Medford, Mass., at ten cents a dozen.

A practical course contributive to international understanding was offered by Miss Mary C. Peacock, based on the textbook, New Days in Latin America, by W. E. Browning. In this group we discussed the reasons for the present lack of a good understanding between the two Americas, and came to the conclusion that a knowledge of the facts in regard to the racial characteristics, economic possibilities, and educational and religious needs of our neighbors to the south will go far to wipe out misunderstanding and prejudice. For this reason the churches are urged to study this book and the corresponding one for young people, Looking Ahead with Latin America, by Stanley High.

On account of a conflict in the conference schedule we who chose Miss Peacock's course could not have the privilege of attending Mrs. Montgomery's class, based on her own book, Prayer and Missions. This conflict was a source of great regret to many, because of our unanimous conviction that the crux of the whole matter, for the whole world, lies in the deep, constant current of sincere, believing prayer which may run underneath the life and work of the Christian Church everywhere—prayer made intelligent by a study of wor facts and made electric by a new contact wi the personality and the redeeming motive Jesus. This book by Mrs. Montgomery shou be in the hands of every woman in our church this winter, to add its stimulus to our pray life and, through that channel, to our wo as well.

I think it would be safe to say that t highest note of the conference was struck Bishop McDowell on Sunday morning, in masterly sermon on the words of Jesus, "Y are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I co mand you." As we listened, we found ou selves in imagination sitting with the grou gathered about the Master. Through t preacher's sympathetic interpretation, the wo translated "command" lost its irritating qua ity and there came home to us with fres power the message that our claim to Jesu friendship rests, not only on our willingne to sit at his feet, but on our ability to sha his redemptive purpose and carry on his r demptive work. Some years ago the Christia Church stopped talking about "saving souls She is confronted now with a world that badly in need of being saved from the fea suspicion, and selfishness which make for wa and only the coming of the Prince of Pea in the hearts and lives of his "friends" ca accomplish this.

Listen! The voices of Aloha girls come f you from their tents on the green hill-to singing:

Sunlight is shining o'er mountain heights,
Earth's radiant loveliness thrills with he youth;
Moonlight is gleaming o'er waters,
As Northfield now beckons to follow the truth

Join now in brotherhood, spreading the Gospe
That warfare and discord may cease.
Let us in humble devotion march forward
And follow the Christ, Prince of Peace.

Yours for World-Friendship,
CATHERINE B. GATES.

Wellesley Hills, Mass.

Tribute to Ambassador Bancrof

In the death of Edgar A. Bancroft, our am bassador at Tokyo, we lose a really constructiv student and advocate of interracial understand ing, at a time when we particularly need suc a representative of true Americanism befor the people of Japan. Mr. Bancroft, in an inte view just before leaving San Francisco for hi post, referred to his training in Knox College acknowledged that he was at least an adhe rent if not a member of the Congregationa Church, and expressed satisfaction that h had been able to take such a large share i the work of the Chicago Commission on Rac Relations which studied the race riot of 191 He was chairman of that commission and di a large share of the work in compiling it comprehensive and significant report, "Th Negro in Chicago." The few months of hi service in Japan have been inadequate to ac complish the purpose he had in mind, an inter pretation to Japan of the better spirit o America. But if we may judge that recen notable utterances of Japanese statesmen ex pressing their faith in America reflected it some measure his influence then his brief oc cupancy of this responsible post at a critica time was not without worthy achievement. Hi scholarly and Christian approach to this new race problem between Orientals and Occiden tals, as shown in his frank discussions both i public and private before he left San Francisco promised results as valuable as those whic will continue to flow from his work with th commission on the Negro in Chicago.

San Francisco. GEORGE W. HINMAN.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

When the Whippoorwill Came

It was on a transatlantic freighter that a young Englishwoman taught me that delectable old Somersetshire ditty, "The cheerful arn 'e blaws in the marn," clear through to the pleasing information that "in London there be kings and queens, a-settin' all of a roa." During long hospital days the song helped me with its jocund mood. In those days, too, Nancy Lee would stand and wave her hand upon the quay, until I came to the culmination of the whole matter in the chorus, and sang that the sailor's wife the sailor's star shall be. Then, deserting the sea, I would haply, with a soft humming sound in my throat, think of that beloved eye, beloved star, which many, many have found so near and yet so far; and I would remember my father with his guitar, after the day's work was over, and how I learned that song from him.

Ballads such as these, the sweet old Scotch songs, a bit of a Chopin waltz or nocturne, a passage in a Beethoven sonata, some soaring notes from a Dvôrak fantasia, the Jerusalem Chorus from Gallia—they have woven magic spells for me in days when little occupation was possible save that of going over them softly with pursed lips or with the contracted muscles of my throat. The rain, even the snow, might fall gently upon my bed out on the roof, but while I waited for a nurse to come and wheel me within doors the memory of a few notes from an oboe's song could whisk me away on dreamy wings to warm uplands in a sunny clime, for a little share in the happy afternoon of a faun. I could find laughter in my mind, even if my own throat could not accomplish the beloved chuckle of the little Scotsman, in declaring in rollicking measures with Harry Lauder that "I love a lassie." Or I could be merry on London streets with Lizer to delight my fancy, while I assured her in my best cockney that if she let herself "die in old mide she'd 'ave only 'erself to blime." And then there was a loved bit of eighteenth century Couperin. And the Humoresque. Here, though, let me not enlarge; it happened to be one of life's high days when first I heard those lilting strains.

And then the hymns, and the Te Deums, and the thunderous ascension chorus that carries Elijah up to heaven in a chariot of fire, and the soaring notes "of an endless alleluia."

But I must check my recollecting fingers. Only this I cannot refrain from. On a time Heaven itself sent the music. It was the dead of night, and still in those surroundings of Mystery and Pain. Through wide-open door and windows the throbbing voice of the great city, hushed now to all but its eerie midnight vagueness, was making itself dimly heard. All about me lay the sick. And suddenly—oh, my heart, stand still and listen! A wonder-note fresh from the woodlands.

"Whippoorwill! Whippoorwill!"

I held my breath.

Somewhere he had lost his way, and with relief had found that hilltop, and that bit of garden-spot surrounded by hospital, and a tree to rest upon; and there, far from his kind and his beloved woodland stillness, he sang out his sorest song strong and sweet.

"Whippoorwill! Whippoorwill!"

Peace fell upon the night. And upon my spirit.

Closet and Altar

THE HOLY CITY

He that overcometh, I will make him a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go out thence no more: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, the new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God, and mine own new name.—Rev. 3: 12.

It is only man's fellowship which will save the world, man's fellowship in Christ; and that is, as Augustine knew, the most glorious City of God, whether we see it now as a wayfarer through this fleeting course of time among the faithless, or in that security of its everlasting seat for which we now patiently wait till righteousness shall turn again to judgment, and it shall win the final victory and the eternal peace. —William Holden Hutton.

The Hebrew prophets struck a new note in their ideal—the note of holiness. The city yet to be must be a city of God. When holiness is the supreme passion of the people, so that there shall be nothing secular, nothing unclean, nothing profane, in their thought and life the city of secure peace and ordered well-being shall be built. That is the note which can be heard, clear and dominant in every prophet.—W. H. Clow.

City of God, how broad and far
Outspread thy walls sublime!
The true thy chartered freemen are
Of every age and clime,

One holy church, one army strong,
One steadfast high intent,
One working hand, one harvest song,
One King Omnipotent.

How purely hath thy speech come down
From man's primeval youth!
How grandly hath thine empire grown
Of freedom, love, and truth.

How gleam thy watchfires through the night
With never-fainting ray!
How rise thy towers, serene and bright,
To meet the dawning day!

In vain the surge's angry shock,
In vain the drifting sands;
Unharmed upon the eternal rock
The eternal city stands.

Samuel Johnson.

We shall do no good in the world, until under the practical dominance of the Divine Spirit we come to know, beyond a shadow of doubt, that the holy city is not something to be longed for in the heavens of God, but something to be builded in the earth which is His also.—Percy C. Ainsworth.

Give me some part, my Father, in making ready for the coming of thy holy city in the earth. Give me vision, lest I spend myself in transitory things. Open my eyes to see thee present with thy people, that I may keep a cheerful and courageous faith through all perplexing experiences. Make my heart serene and strong, as befits a citizen of thy dwelling-place that even now is coming down from heaven to earth. Kindle in my thoughts a wholesome discontent with folly and a righteous anger with injustice and neglect that spoil Christ's inheritance in man. And let the song of the heavenly Jerusalem echo in the joy of my heart as I go about thy work. Let the full triumph come when thou wilt, but let me joyfully remember that the time of thy desire and my endeavor is today. In the name of Christ. Amen. Isaac Ogden Rankin.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Deadly Poisons of the Christian Life

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic for August 23-29

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: Perils of Envy, Anger, and Hatred.—Matthew 5: 21, 22; I John 3: 11-15.

Light from the Bible Passages

The Christian life aims in two directions: toward God and toward our fellow-men. The Sermon on the Mount is mainly concerned with the latter. All sin against our fellows is not on the outside. Murder is horrible, but there are other sins against others as bad. There is unexpressed murder in the heart. For that we shall be held accountable before the Great Judge. No amount of worship or of gifts can set us right before God. There is a very close relation between love for God and love for man. John declares one to be a liar who says he loves God, and at the same time hates his brother. No one can be a true child of the Father who does not have love for all the Father's children.

Leads for Leaders

There are two basal thoughts for life: first, that we are children of God. How are we to represent him? Are we worthy of his love? Do we express our love to him? The other thought is, that we are all brethren, whether we will or not. How does our love to them show our love to him? Note how inevitable is the progress from envy to anger to hate.

1. Hate is a poison to our own souls. Think how it affects our outlook on life; how it creates a bitterness within that spoils everything for us.

2. Hate is secret murder of the one whom we hate. Jesus laid down this principle. Modern psychologists confirm it in their studies.

3. Hate is the enemy of peace. Note how it has been at the heart of many wars. Can men fight one another unless they hate first? Think of the propaganda of hate which always accompanies a war; and the aftermath of hate. What about Europe today? Can we hate any nation and still be Christian?

Thoughts for Members

"Hatred is self-punishment."

"Unless we realize our sins enough to call them by name, it is hardly worth while to say anything about them at all. When we pray for forgiveness, let us say, "my temper," or "untruthfulness," or "pride," "my selfishness, my cowardice, indolence, jealousy, revenge, impurity." To recognize our sins, we must look them in the face and call them by their right names, however hard. Honesty in confession calls for definiteness in confession.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

Envy withers at another's joy,
And hates what excellence it cannot reach.
—James Thomson.

He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.—Proverbs.

A Moment of Prayer

We thank thee, O Father, for that unfailing exhibition of love which thou dost show us and all thy children. Thou canst still remember in kindness us who are so unworthy and who give thee so many reasons for disappointment. Keep us from failing in such love of thee and our fellows as shall make impossible envy and anger and hate. Amen.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Pagan Prophets: France and Shaw*

Our title needs no defense. Neither Anatole France nor George Bernard Shaw has claimed to be Christian. In fact each in his way has been deeply critical of Church and of Christianity, though each had much in common with the ultimate ideals of true religion. It was Shaw, it may be remembered, who wrote, There is only one religion, though there are a hundred versions of it. Possibly both France and Shaw each expressed his version of that one religion. At any rate, if pagan, both were prophets. Shaw, as has often been remarked, was, and is, very much a Puritan; France was anything but a Puritan, as this self-revelation of M. Brousson's volume shows. France attained the distinction of a place on the Roman Catholic Index—a distinction that Shaw would have attained had he lived in France or in any country where Romanism is at all dominant.

How much the two men had in common is evident in the description in Mr. May's fine biography of the meeting of France and Shaw in England.

Following a reception of France by the Fabian Society, when the eminent Frenchman had begun his address with the customary, Mesdames et Messieurs, and had then added as he bowed to Shaw, et le Molière d' Angleterre, France had advanced at the close of his address to Shaw, flung his arms around him and kissed him on each cheek, while Shaw, visibly embarrassed, had rallied himself and returned the salute. This outburst was more than the affectionate and appreciative greeting of one man of letters for another. It was an expression of a sense of camaraderie, a communion of aim and spirit.

Yet the two men were very much unlike, as these volumes also disclose. France has been, perhaps, a little more fortunate in his Boswell, for his secretary, Brousson, has recorded his master's sayings with a skill and brilliance that impart to the record itself an eminent place in literature. He has reproduced personality and atmosphere with amazing success, whereas the brilliant conversations in Mr. Henderson's book reveal about as much Henderson as Shaw and do not conceal the string upon which the pearls of wisdom have been strung or the method by which they have been put together. The Table Talk of G. B. S. could all be reduced to phonograph records—mighty good records, too, interesting, stimulating, and well worth listening to, but records none the less. Brousson's book, however, is France himself—just as it claims to be—a book to be read and re-read, whimsical, delightful, in spite of the fact that there are pages not for Puritans.

Of this phase of Anatole France we may say little. Mr. May discussess it with good judgment in his Biography, which ought to be read as a suitable introduction to Brousson's book and for the proper enjoyment of the latter. Despite phases of his life and philosophy of which no Christian could approve we are among those who find something very beautiful and almost saintly in the author of The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard and who certainly find something very noble, and of the highest moral quality, in his attitude toward the Dreyfus affair.

Here are three books of vivid interest opening to the reader alluring pathways of discussion and critical insight.

*ANATOLE FRANCE: THE MAN AND HIS WORK, by JAMES LEWIS MAY (Dodd, Mead. $3.00).

ANATOLE FRANCE HIMSELF, by his SECRETARY, JEAN JACQUES BROUSSON (Lippincott. $5.00).

TABLE TALK OF G. B. S.: Conversations on Things in General Between George Bernard Shaw and His Biographer, by ARCHIBALD HENDERSON (Harpers. $2.00).

Two Missionary Biographical Sketches

JOHN WILLIAMS OF THE SOUTH SEAS, by NORMAN J. DAVIDSON (Doran. 65 cents). The story of this famous missionary who was martyred at Erromanga is here briefly told in a manner to illustrate the heroic character and daring nature of Mr. Williams. The main incidents in his career are portrayed in an interesting manner.

BISHOP BOMPAS OF THE FROZEN NORTH, by NIGEL B. M. GRAHAME (Doran. 65 cents). William Carpenter Bompas was of French extraction with all the traditions of French knighthood and chivalry. They lived in England and the family on his mother's side was partly Royalist and partly Puritan. The best qualities of all this ancestry came out in the man who, after several years of service as an English curate, answered the call for volunteers to work among the Indians and Eskimos of the Northwest. The story is full of stirring adventure and struggle with the forces of nature and men.

The Church School

PROJECTS IN WORLD-FRIENDSHIP, by JOHN LESLIE LOBINGIER (University of Chicago Press. $1.75). Dr. Lobingier has already placed leaders in missionary education under deep obligations by his former book, World Friendship in the Church School. In this volume he carries still further the development of educational ideals suggested in the former. The first five chapters present a stimulating and illuminating discussion of the value of missionary education in the general program of the church and some very helpful suggestions as to the use of the project principle in religious education. The remaining four contain detailed descriptions of projects that have been successfully carried out in primary, junior, junior high school, and senior high school departments. It is an exceedingly valuable and usable contribution to the important cause of teaching world friendship and should be in the reference library of every school.

ONE HUNDRED PROJECTS FOR THE CHURCH SCHOOL, by MILTON CARSLEY TOWNER (Doran. $1.60). The title of this book seems a trifle inaccurate. It contains, not one hundred projects, but this number of special activities carried out in connection with eight main projects. This confusion of terms seems to be due to the fact that the author treated the project as a method of work rather than a principle of approach. A more consistent concept of the true nature of the project principle might do away with the distinction made between the project and "other methods" mentioned in the introduction. It is quite true that these methods must be employed, but they should be included in the working out of the project rather than being distinct from it. Despite this difference of viewpoint, the book contains material of great value. The definition of the project in the opening chapter is good, the main projects are worth while, and there is a wealth of suggestive material.

METHOD IN TEACHING RELIGION, by GEORGE HERBERT BETTS and MARION O. HAWTHORNE (Abingdon Press. $2.50). This is one of the most comprehensive textbooks on the teaching work of the church school that we have seen. It discusses in a careful and scientific manner the principles that underlie all successful teaching in their particular application to religious education. It then devotes eight chapters to method under the heading of Classroom Procedure, covering such topics as Project Teaching, Story-Telling, Dramatization, Manual Arts, and Discussion.

The authors have avoided a common defect of books that cover so many aspects of a subject, that of superficiality. Each topic is treated in a careful, scientific, yet not too technical manner and with frequent illustrations from actual practice which make the meaning plain.

A glance at the table of contents might lead one to think that an important item in the curriculum of religious education had been omitted, but mission study and service is included under the heading of Social Service. A somewhat fuller treatment of missionary education and its contribution to the new curriculum of religious education might not have been amiss. The chapter on "Teaching the Art of Worship" is exceedingly suggestive and helpful.

At the close of each chapter are a number of well chosen questions for discussion and references for reading and study. It is unfortunate that The Amateur Poster Maker, by Miss Perkins, could not have been added to the reference list on the Manual Arts. This book is one that will richly repay careful study by any church-school leader or pastor and will be a valuable textbook in the community school or training class.

Week-Day Religious Education

CURRENT WEEK-DAY RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, by PHILIP HENRY LOTZ (Abingdon Press. $2.00). The growing importance of week-day religious education leads one to welcome another and later survey of its tendencies and progress, such as this of Dr. Lotz. To many thoughtful leaders this movement seems to promise much toward the reconstruction of the curriculum and the improvement of methods. Its value lies not so much in the gaining of additional time as in the opportunity it provides for demonstrating the religious values of many educational activities not as yet welcomed in most Sunday schools.

It must be confessed, however, that too few of the week-day schools now in operation show evidence of appreciating this opportunity. Too many of them are following old lines without any critical consideration of their fitness, a fact which was plainly shown in Mr. Shaver's survey for the Religious Education Association, in Dr. Cope's book on the same subject, and is confirmed by this more recent study.

Dr. Lotz has done a piece of work which seems to be about as thorough as the conditions permit. Unfortunately, it is the excep-ional church school of any kind that understands the value of adequate records or scientific evaluation of its work. Dr. Lotz appreciates his handicap to accurate survey work and makes allowance for it. His study covers a brief history of the movement, its objectives, program, equipment, leadership, and organization, with a chapter on evaluation that is interesting and suggestive. The book will be of great help to those contemplating the beginning of such work as well as to those who are now engaged therein.

Poetry

BITTER BREW AND OTHER POEMS, by CALE YOUNG RICE (Century. $1.50). This new volume well sustains Mr. Rice's reputation, though it justifies its title in emphasizing the somber and poignant aspects of life and of poetic mood. An exception to this mood is in Lines Written for the Dedication to Kentucky of "The Old Kentucky Home," a poem symbolic of the optimism that dominates Mr. Rice's spirit in spite of his passing taunts at life and love. We quote the last stanza:

Therefore we dedicate today,
On this Kentucky loam,
A heart-song that is every man's,
A home that is each man's home.
And though rebellious strife may shake
The future's very beam,
This Hill shall shrine the sanctity
Of hearth-fire and roof-tree,
Whereunder love may always shape
The destiny we dream.

A PILGRIM'S SCRIP, by CALE YOUNG RICE (Century. $1.50). An anthology of poems by the same author which are of special interest to travelers. The poet has himself been among the "world wanderers" to whom he addresses his volume.

Fiction

FRANKLIN WINSLOW KANE, by ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK (Houghton Mifflin. $2.00). This novel by the author of The Little French Girl was brought out 15 years ago and has now been published in a new edition. "It is an unforgettable book because it enshrines a beautiful character," says Hugh Walpole.

THE GEORGE AND THE CROWN, by SHEILA KAYE-SMITH (Dutton). As a girl in her teens the author of this story showed striking ability in character-drawing, a gift markedly evident in this tale of plain folks of the English countryside. The two inns, the George and the Crown, across the street from one another, furnish the leading characters, Dan Sheather and Ernie Munk, sons of the proprietors. Especially is the reader given the power to see into the soul of Dan, an unselfish, slow plodding youth whose devotion to those he loves is strong and lasting. Incidental characters in the story are strongly pictured. Subtle humor adds to the charm of the book.

LAST HOPE RANCH, by CHARLES ALDEN SELTZER (Century. $2.00). Another of those stories where life on a Western ranch or the desert seems just one shooting adventure after another.

PAID IN FULL, by IAN HAY (Houghton Mifflin. $2.00). "Ancestor worship," the flippant members of the younger generation called it when their mother trained them to model their lives day by day upon the rather lofty standards of conduct of a father whom they believed long dead and could not remember. Unfortunately he was not dead and the return of the engaging rascal is the foundation of a fine, wholesome story by the well-known author of The First Hundred Thousand.

The portrayal of children and more mature members of the younger generation as well as several older characters will be found delightful and amusing while the career of the father in America before America entered the war provides the author with an opportunity for discussing Americans at this period in a most tactful manner.

Brief Notices

TABLE SERVICE, by LUCY G. ALLEN (Little, Brown. $1.75). A new revised edition. The author is Director of the Boston School of Cookery.

DEAR FAMILY, by PEGGY ANN (Abingdon Press. 75 cents). Peggy Ann is an American girl who in a series of lively letters describes her experiences when she goes out as a "contract teacher" to a girls' school in South America. She merely desires to see the world and pay her expenses as she goes. She rather despises missionaries but her attitude changes as she comes in contact with their work and she ends by marrying a missionary.

THESE WOMEN, by WILLIAM JOHNSTON (Cosmopolitan. $2.00). The laudable purpose of making women more comprehensible to men and men to women and thus smoothing away the difficulties in the paths of their happiness is the objective of this book. "Are wives ever satisfied?," "Why men won't marry," and similar subjects are discussed with much shrewdness and sufficient humor to make pleasant reading.

A LITTLE BOOK OF FRIENDSHIP, collected by JOSEPH MORRIS and ST. CLAIR ADAMS (Geo. Sully & Co. $1.50). The editors have gathered together the classic prose selections on friendship from Cicero to David Grayson. Montaigne, Bacon, Addison, Emerson, Thoreau, and Hugh Black are some of the other notables whose essays are used. It is a notable collection made more usable by an introduction to each essay and a short biographical note.

THE EARLY ADVENTURES OF PEACHAM GREW, by ROY HELTON (Penn Pub. Co.). A quaint and fascinating story of childhood happenings, told by an author with a keen sense of humor and with the ability to see through the eyes of a child. Black and white drawings by Edward Shenton add to the attractiveness of the volume.

THE TALMADGE SISTERS, by THEIR MOTHER, MARGARET L. TALMADGE (Lippincott. $2.00). "Movie fans" will, of course, be interested in this book which, in addition to its personal side in which a fond mother tells of her daughters' accomplishments in the new world of moviedom, incidentally tells a great deal about that world itself. The well-known humorist, Ellis Parker Butler, contributes an introduction in which he suggests that documents like this may have great value to the future historian of the art of motion pictures.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

The Macedonian Call

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for August 23
Acts 16: 6-15

If the Bible were considered merely as literature, what book could be found which has been richer in its bequeathment of striking incidents; incidents and experiences that have become symbolic and to which allusion is constantly made in every sphere. Eden becomes a symbol of a state of innocence. The Promised Land, even among unbelievers, becomes an expression for social hope. Calvary becomes a symbol of suffering and martyrdom even for those who have no personal faith in Christ. And the Macedonian Call of our lesson becomes a symbol.

The meaning of this Macedonian Call in history can hardly be over-estimated. One recognizes immediately what it meant for the world when Columbus discovered America. Was the introduction of Christianity into Europe any less crucial or significant even in its outward effect upon history? One may well doubt it. But when one comes to judge the spiritual effect, Paul's response to the Macedonian Call was of far more overwhelming importance. No doubt Christian religion would sooner or later have come to Europe, but through Paul it had its beginnings in a very pure stream. Possibly it was because of this fact and the excellence with which Paul made the beginnings that Christianity was enabled to endure later periods of persecution and the more dangerous influences of political association and corruption and to persist throughout the centuries.

What was the nature of this call? Did Paul's vision in the night express in some way his awakening thoughts and hopes? Was he thinking about Europe? Were his eyes looking thitherward? It is quite possible, in fact it is likely, for Paul had a strange longing for new adventures and untrodden ways. There is no reason to suppose that this vision in the night was other than a dream, but it was a dream of great reality and of very vivid meaning for Paul. It left no doubt in his mind concerning his duty. In verse 7 we read that Paul and his companion had intended to go into Bithynia "but the Spirit suffered them not." Just how this spiritual inhibition was manifested is not made clear, but Paul was evidently quite as certain that he must go to Macedonia as that he should not go to Bithynia. In Paul's description of his conversion which he gave to King Agrippa, he summed the Damascus experience by saying, "Whereupon, O King Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." The same immediate impulse to obey the vision was manifest in this case. He did not speculate about the matter; he did not delay, but sailed at once, and having crossed to Greece came to Philippi, the chief city of Macedonia.

His ministry had immediate success. An enterprising business woman, Lydia, a seller of purple, seemed to be the first convert. Whether she had heard before of the Christian way or not is not evident, but she was a devout woman who worshiped God, and she immediately responded to Paul's exposition of the Gospel. She invited Paul and his companion to be her guests, but they had not long to enjoy her hospitality, for trouble almost immediately developed and Paul and Silas were thrown into prison. The dramatic experiences in connection with this imprisonment are the subject of our next lesson, and along with this lesson they illustrate the way in which quiet experiences resulting from faithful teaching and preaching as well as the more spectacular and dramativ events went to the founding and upbuilding of the Christian Church.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Tom and Frank Play Gypsies

By Evangeline Weir

Tom and Frank were spending their vacation with their uncle who lived on a big farm. There was an old white horse and a wagon which they were allowed to use. It was great fun to hitch old Fanny to the wagon and go to the store to buy things for their aunt or uncle.

One day a party of gypsies passed by the farm. The boys were greatly interested and immediately wanted to play gypsies. Their uncle said they might take old Fanny and the wagon for a few days, camp in the woods, and ride about to see the country.

Their aunt packed them a box of canned goods and a basket full of nice cold meat, cheese, eggs, and other good things. She gave them each a blanket and a pillow to sleep on at night. Uncle fastened a bunch of hay to the wagon and put corn and oats in a bag for old Fanny to eat.

"I wish we had a few things to sell," Frank said when they were ready to start.

Uncle thought a moment, then said, "I know what you could sell. I bought a lot of tinware and baskets at a store sale last winter. They were so cheap I took the whole lot. I will give you some. I'll put price tags on them so that you can sell them like real gypsies."

When the last thing had been placed in the wagon, the boys got in and drove away feeling very happy. They passed by green woods and along pleasant roads until they came to a farmhouse. Frank carried a basket of tinware into the yard where a woman was shelling beans.

"Don't you want a new pot to cook your beans in?" Frank asked.

"I surely need one," the woman answered. "Mine is old and bent."

She looked his wares over and bought not only a pot but a bucket and ladle.

The boys were delighted with their first sale. They ate lunch as they rode along. Soon they came to a big wood where some trees had been cleared away and they decided to spend the night there. Old Fanny was unhitched and given oats and hay. The boys carried stones and built a place to make a fire. They filled it in with sticks and soon had a good fire over which they cooked their supper. It was great fun, and they laughed and talked until Tom suggested that they should go to bed.

The blankets and pillows were placed inside the wagon, and the boys rolled themselves up in the blankets; for it was cool under the trees. They were soon asleep. Frank, however, was awakened by the motion of the moving wagon. He couldn't understand it, for old Fanny had been taken from the shafts and tied to a tree for the night. Frank kept very still. He knew the wagon was going down a steep hill, and he could see a dark figure on the driver's seat. An awful thought came to him. Somebody had stolen the horse and wagon and all its contents. He could not see out of the back of the wagon, for a bundle of hay was strapped across it for the old horse. He really did not know what to do. He put his hand lightly on his brother, but he was fast asleep. Frank peeped again. The man had a big hat on his head, pulled well over his ears. Perhaps he did not know the boys were there. Frank thought in that case it would be a good idea to keep quiet until morning. He was certain of one thing, he never wanted to be a gypsy again.

Up the hills and down the hills and over bridges the wagon passed. Suddenly Frank felt Tom's hand on his lips, while in his ear he whispered, "Who is driving?" Frank did not answer. He was thinking of a way to catch the thief. There was a strong rope beside him, several yards of it, which his uncle had given him to sell. He knew how to make a slip loop and he was quietly making one under cover of the blanket.

The man was leaning against the side of the wagon. He had evidently gone to sleep. Quickly Frank threw the loop over his arms and shoulders and drew it tight. There wasn't the slightest sound or movement on the part of the stranger on the driver's seat. "He must be deaf and dumb," Tom whispered.

"Perhaps he is dead," Frank replied.

"They'll think we killed him," Tom again whispered.

They gave the rope a slight jerk but the man made no sign.

"I am sure he is dead," Tom said, "and we don't even know where we are."

"The lines are hanging down and Fanny is just going where she pleases. I hope she takes us home."

Suddenly the man moved. He tried to lift his arms, but found them fastened to his side. "Hello," he cried, "who tied me up in this fashion?"

Not a sound came from the blankets.

"We are coming to a big hill," the man said. "You better loosen my arms so I can drive it."

Just at that moment old Fanny slipped and dashed down the hill at full speed. They were all spilled in the road. The man managed to slip the rope from his arms and was trying to get Fanny on her feet. The boys saw his face for the first time.

"Bill," they cried, for it was their uncle's hired man who had followed to see that they were safe, and who had played a joke on them.

(All rights reserved)

A Baby Flicker's Great Adventure in Mackinaw

By Frances Margaret Fox

Mother flickers and father flickers must teach their babies everything that baby flickers ought to know. We can't understand what they say, of course, because we do not talk their language. The father and mother flicker, whose nest was in one of the big old oak trees beside the stone house where the four little White girls live in Old Mackinaw, certainly must have taught their babies not to look down tall chimneys; it isn't a safe thing for any baby bird to do.

Father and mother flicker were wise birds; they knew that Vera and Charlotte and Genie and Baby Ruth loved them and would do them no harm, but even so they never ventured too near the little girls; they didn't care to be held in small hands.

They were handsome birds, too, and belonged to the good old Woodpecker family. Both father and mother flicker wore bright red feathers in the shape of a crescent across the back of their necks, and black feathers in crescent shape on their breasts; their heads and necks were gray-blue and father and mother dressed exactly alike except that father had black cheek patches. They both wore suits of brown and brownish-gray, trimmed across with black bars in the back. Their feathers were whitish-brown underneath, decorated with black spots. The linings of their wings and their tail quills were bright yellow and the birds were bigger than robins.

It was a beautiful sight to see father and mother flicker go flying across the lawn because the yellow in their outstretched wings shone like gold in the sunshine.

The flickers' nest was a deep hole in the trunk of the oak tree; and it is believed that there were six children in the family.

Anyway, one of these baby flickers longed to see the world before he was old enough to fly. He used to climb to the top of the nest and look around about before he had feathers enough to keep him warm. He must have been a trial to his family. The father and mother had enough to do getting food for their hungry children without having to talk to that one child about his carelessness. It is believed that the little fellow almost fell out of the nest two or three times when he was leaning over his doorstep watching Vera, Charlotte, Genie, and Ruth, who played under the trees all summer long.

The flicker babies always went to bed early; so did the little White girls, except when there was company or some other excitement. The flicker babies were always up and ready for breakfast early, early in the morning; but sometimes when they had been up too late the night before, the little White girls slept in the morning until the sun was high in the sky.

After the flicker babies were big enough to leave their nest and take care of themselves, they lived for weeks in the tree near the stone house and the baby flicker, that used to climb to the top of the nest to look out, had a chance to see the world at last.

He flew high and he flew low, and ate ants wherever he found them. Always he went to bed early and awoke at dawn to hunt for his breakfast and to seek new adventures. He was a great cry-baby, like all young flickers, and often used to cry about nothing at all. The time came, though, when this baby flicker had something to cry about; and it happened because he was always poking his nose in strange places, to see more of the world than his father had before him.

One night the baby flicker tucked his head under his wing and went to sleep early as usual. That same night the four little White girls walked out under the stars with their father and mother, and all the clocks in the village struck ten before they turned their footsteps home again.

As usual the baby flicker awoke early, ate breakfast, and started out to see the world; he flew high that morning and forgot his father's probable advice about chimneys.

The four little White girls didn't awaken early; neither did their father nor their mother. It was still in the Mackinaw world and the family in the stone house slept and slept and slept. It is hard to tell how long they might have slept if Vera and Charlotte and Genie and Ruth hadn't been rudely awakened.

The four little White girls sat up in their beds and wondered what could be the matter, en they heard a terrible crying downstairs. was the queerest crying noise that they had r heard in their lives. Their father dressed ckly and went downstairs to find out what s there.

(Continued on next page)

t was the baby flicker. He had tumbled rn the tall chimney into the fireplace and re he was in a great, strange nest and he n't know how to get out. That was why cried and cried. When Vera and Charlotte Genie and Baby Ruth came downstairs to their visitor, the baby flicker tried to fly ough the window.

Whang-bang!" he went against the glass, he couldn't get out of that queer big nest, ie cried again, and cried and cried.

fter breakfast the four little White girls carried the baby flicker round the neighborhood to show all their friends how a baby flicker really looks when he is held in small hands. They talked about his feathers, and about his beady black eyes, his sharp claws, and his long pointed beak and his tongue. And that baby flicker kept fighting all the time. He pecked at the little girls' fingers and clawed at them with his feet and tried to get his strong wings free.

At last the baby flicker was allowed to fly away and he was glad.

"Don't perch on our tall chimney nor any chimney again," Baby Ruth called after him as he left them to go flying high; and the baby flicker didn't, at least not that day.

(All rights reserved)

Our Readers' Forum

Against Merging A. M. A.

the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Iay I add my word of protest against the posed merging of the American Missionary ociation with our other benevolent societies? s is a day when the cry for simplification concentration is loud and urgent, and tly so, I think, but is it not possible that e of the gain may be offset by a loss in tical wisdom?

he work of the A. M. A. among the vari- colored peoples of our land for these many rs has been unique and valuable in the eme. The Negro race has made wonderful ancement since the Emancipation Proclama-, much of which it surely owes to the lance of the A. M. A., but are these people e ready to stand alone as yet? I hope due heed will be given to Dr. Brownlee's cle regarding Logic and Psychology pub- ed in a recent number of The Congregationalist. It seems to me that the voice of e who speak from inside knowledge of e matters should be heard with great re- t even if not agreed with by all.

hope, too, that The Congregationalist may inue its separate identity.

aybrook, Ct. CAROLINE E. MCCALL.

onds Nomination of Dr. Bradley

the Editor of The Congregationalist:

r. Blanchard beat me to it in nominating Dan F. Bradley for the next Moderator he National Council, and he stated the ifications admirably. At least I can have honor of seconding the nomination most tily.

Thiting, Ind. T. A. STUBBINS.

Prohibition and Evolution

the Editor of The Congregationalist:

any people, both in this country and ad, are drawing an analogy between the raint upon liberty of teaching which the nessee Anti-Evolution Law imposes and raint upon liberty of action which it is ned the 18th Amendment and the Volstead impose. But the two cases are very dif- nt, for in the one case instructors in state- orted schools and colleges are forbidden to ent to students for study a well estab- d theory of modern science; in the other, are forbidden to manufacture and sell a uct that modern science declares is harm- to individuals when taken into their sys- in any but small amounts, and through viduals to society.

he cases would be somewhat similar if the nessee law forbade the teaching of the ation theory" as it is given in Genesis.

ho is competent to decide what is harm- to human bodies if not the physiologists? Who can tell how life was developed on the earth if not biologists? What physiologists are agreed is harmful to human bodies in quantities ordinarily taken into them, the state has a right to forbid the sale of; and whatever theory of creation the main body of scientists support the state should allow and command to be taught.

Prohibition of the liquor traffic is logical and just. Prohibition of the teaching of the theory of evolution is neither logical nor just.

WILLIAM BARNARD SMITH.

Brookline, Mass.

A Libel on the "Kaffir"

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

May a stranger passing through the country call attention to the series of skeletons in the Zoölogical Museum of Harvard University where a label needs changing? Next to the gorilla, and dwarfed beside his massive bones, is the puny skeleton of the lowest grade of man, and on the other side of him stands the framework of an indigenous Australian. Next to these in order stand Chinaman, Red Indian, and Caucasian.

By some curious lapse the first and lowest of the five human skeletons, which apparently is taken to represent Africa's contribution to the human race, is labeled "Kaffir."

This is a serious libel on an order of mankind which is physically one of the finest and by no means the least intelligent. It is, of course, the skeleton of a Hottentot or Bushman, and even before the series of skeletons is rearranged, as it well might be, the libel on the "Kaffir" would perhaps be deleted.

Boston, July 27. A. N. R.

The Modernists' Concern

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

President Maurer's sympathetic concern for the "church folk of Tennessee" is most timely and Christian. There is tremendous danger that when the predestined verdict against Mr. Scopes is received, the "church folk of Tennessee" and elsewhere will class all together the self-constituted counsel for the defence and the world of Christian modernism, including President Maurer and the editor of The Congregationalist. As President Maurer clearly puts it:

The burden of the argument rests upon modernism to show that a scientific account of life in a modern world is an affirmation of the values and the faiths which the religion of Jesus supplies.

When this case comes before a higher tribunal for review, as it is almost sure to, Christian modernists should make it their first concern that their interests should be represented and directed by Christian counsel of the highest character. We are thankful for volunteers from the radical wing of liberalism, but Christian modernists should never allow themselves to be driven to rely upon this class of counsel alone. A lawyer whose Christian character and standing is as unassailable as his legal ability, like ex-Secretary of State Hughes for example, should be placed in charge of the case on appeal. As President Maurer has so finely and sympathetically pointed out, the Christian modernist has two things to win, the final verdict and the "church folk of Tennessee" and many elsewhere.

CHARLES RUSSELL BRUCE.

Van Cleve, Ia.

Pastoral Visitation

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

I have been reading your editorial regarding the ideas of Dr. Jones on "pastoral visitation."

English life is one thing: American conditions are different. There are many sides to the discussion of "Pastoral Visitation." The size of the active membership is one; the nature of the parish is another, whether it be residential, apartment hotel life, or lodging house conditions. The activity of the church life enters into the matter.

In a large, active church of over 1,500 members, there are three insistent demands to harmonize: (1) Preparation for a "worthwhile pulpit ministry calls a man to his study desk for hours of undisturbed concentration: (2) pastoral visitation of the most helpful kind, where sick room and hospital ministry is most effective, including service to the sorrow-stricken and arrangements for funerals, calls a man from his desk, and the hours of such need happen morning, afternoon, and night; (3) executive work and meeting of public demands call the minister from both.

How to harmonize these demands, with sane respect for time and strength, and some slight regard for the minister's family, is not an easy matter.

Pastoral visitation should not be an attempt to meet traditional or whimsical expectation but to render real life service as a thoughtful shepherd for his sheep. Church sheep may sometimes be unreasonable and selfish.

Why not discuss this big subject on all sides? Why be afraid to introduce new ideas? Why not make the love and care, the thought and sympathy of the whole church the important thing? Then the call of the pastor, or assistant, or parish visitor, or deaconess, or deacon, or officer, or neighbor member, would express that love and care. Upon such a thought thousands of wonderful calls could be made and a more wonderful atmosphere of friendship prevail.

The central fallacy is that a call does not represent the church care unless the pastor makes it.

Greensboro, Vt. ALLEN A. STOCKDALE.

Too Much Tinkering

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

I have been interested in the current discussion as to combining publications. My experience in rural and village churches would indicate that the greater part of the present readers of the Missionary Herald and American Missionary would be cut off from that source of missionary knowledge. I do not say that they could not afford the higher priced paper. I believe that the price would look to them disproportionately large, and that many would fail to subscribe.

I want to protest, also, against the elimination of the A. M. A. as a separate society. I believe its name and its work have such a place in Congregational affection that certain practical gains from consolidation would be far more than offset by sentimental loss.

Why be so everlastingly tinkering with the machinery? Many of our laymen are getting impatient over it, and think that the power connections are more important than structural changes. Let's use the machinery we've got and not be overhauling it all the time as though it were a hard used automobile of the vintage of 1913. When our laymen see that we are really going somewhere, they'll be all ready to join in making the trip!

Amesbury, Mass. E. L. BAKER.

With the Schools and Colleges

Training School for Women

The 16th annual commencement exercises of the Congregational Training School for Women at Chicago marked the completion of a year that brought to the students enlarged experience and increased appreciation for things cultural and spiritual. The season was a happy one both for students and interested friends. The four graduates are young women of enthusiasm and ability who could be recommended to positions of responsibility without misgiving, and this sense of trust gave the keynote to all of the commencement events.

The baccalaureate address was given by Dr. T. G. Soares, of the Hyde Park Congregational Church. His interpretation of the question, "Can Christianity Be Exported?" gave the graduates a definite conception of the task that becomes theirs in aiding in the constructive growth of a Christianity which shall unite all men in a true brotherhood of helpfulness. The entire service was a challenge, offered in a spirit of interested friendliness, to meet the problems of every day with fine courage, calm trust, and undisturbed assurance, in the realization of God's ever present guidance.

This service was followed in the evening by the presentation of a pageant, written and produced by the class in religious drama and pageantry. Under the helpful but never dictatorial direction of Miss E. May Munsell, instructor in Bible, the class accomplished a finished piece of work which impressed the audience with its depth of conception and its beauty of presentation. "The Voice of Prophecy" evidenced the students' appreciation of the high spiritual import of the prophetic voice and acknowledged their recognition of the value of the human appeal which that mighty voice has made through the ages. If proof were needed of the quality of work done at the Training School, this pageant might easily stand as a complete justification of a high scholastic standard consistently maintained.

On Friday evening, following the Corporation Dinner, where good fellowship was abundant, the graduating exercises were held in the Hyde Park Church. Rev. A. W. Palmer talked with the graduates and those privileged to be present, upon "The Fine Art of Living." With characteristic sincerity of purpose and depth of meaning he stated the ever troublesome problem of an individual's relationship to life. With no uncertainty he explained that the possibility to live finely, helpfully, and beautifully is a matter of discipline and courage upon the part of each human being, wherever he finds himself, however discouraging may seem his situation. "The Fine Art of Living," he made clear, is set aside for no group with special attainments; it is a democratic art, which brings with it joy and peace, which bestows upon all who practice it, an increased ability to serve rightly and to aid constructively.

The Welcome to the Service of the Church by Rev. V. C. Marriott and the Consecration Prayer by Rev. H. W. Walker added further notes of dignity and seriousness to the exercises. The presentation of the diplomas by Rev. J. W. F. Davies, President of the Board, was a ceremony of real significance, as friends realized that these graduates had pledged their time, their interest, their ability to a "Fine Art of Living," that should express itself in terms of constructive, intelligent service.

On Alumnae Day, after a pleasant luncheon at the school home, the alumnae met together to welcome the class of 1925 and to talk frankly of their shortcomings, their hopes, and their plans. Letters were read from a number who could not be present, letters that told of activity along many lines and that expressed gratitude for practical training that had enabled them to do their work with satisfaction rather than apology. The experience of these graduates leads them to the conclusion that the best of our young women from our schools and colleges would do well to consider a course in the Congregational Training School for Women to fit themselves for rewarding and much needed work in religious education.

Already there are new registrations sufficient to fill the places of those who are leaving. The demand for adequately prepared workers is a constant and increasing one and it is hoped that the attendance next year may establish a new record.

Commencement at Whitman

The baccalaureate sermon at Whitman College was preached this year by Pres. S. B. L. Penrose. A rather unusual feature of the service was the reading of the Scripture lesson by the class president, and of a prayer provided for the occasion by the vice-president. President Penrose took the theme of his sermon from Rev. 7: 14, "These are they which came out of great tribulation." After the sermon the class standing read the following response:

We pledge our utmost loyalty to this our College, and promise to make ourselves worthy of her training by rendering lives of service. We consecrate ourselves, our talents, and training to constructive planning and effort, and promise to faithfully labor in our days that when we are called to give an account of our stewardship, we may not be found unprofitable servants. Before God, we will endeavor to live our lives and to labor so as to bring honor to the name of Whitman, in memory of him for whom our College was founded.

President Penrose, in offering his annual report, laid his resignation before the Board of Trustees after 31 years of service. The trustees refused to accept it but in consideration of his disability from partial blindness decided to elect a new vice-president charged with representing the college on the outside, with special reference to finance. It was announced that $650,000 had been raised as the result of the recent campaign, including $125,000 promised by the General Education Board. The sum of $250,000 has been paid in. It is now proposed to build a women's dormitory, work to begin next fall, the immediate funds to be secured by the sale of bonds. The report proposed a plan for a Lower College composed of freshman and sophomores, and an Upper College for only those of scholarly attainments.

Dr. L. E. Anderson, who has been connected with the college for over 30 years, also resigned for an extended stay in the East.

The honorary degree of M.A. was conferred on Miss Katherine Harriet Blynn.

Olivet Commencement

The 65th annual commencement exercises of Olivet College were held June 7-9. The baccalaureate sermon was preached by Dr. Ernest Bourner Allen of the class of '95, and the commencement address was given by President Charles McKenny of the Michigan State Normal College, an Olivet graduate of the class of 1889. Thirty-four graduates received their diplomas, of whom 20 also received limited teachers' certificates which enabled them to teach anywhere for a period of four yea at the end of which time they are eligible f life certificates. The degree of D.D. w granted to Rev. J. L. Maile of Los Angele a former student, and Rev. Demas Cockli for 37 years pastor of the Congregation Church of Traverse City. Mrs. Mary Mar of Lansing, Mich., who graduated 60 yea ago, and Mrs. Mary Hosford Noble, who grad ated 50 years ago and whose father was o of the first teachers of the college, were amo the alumni present.

This commencement completes five years college history since the reopening in 192 In that time the budget has more tha doubled, $75,000 has been spent in major i provements, practically all bills for curre expenses have been paid, the new dining roo has been completed, and substantial additio have been made to the endowment. The ou look for the years ahead is most favorable.

The trustees regretted to receive the resign tion of President Paul F. Voelker, under who enthusiastic leadership during the last fi years the college has made substantial pro ress. Dr. Voelker resigns on account of i paired health. He has accepted the presiden of the Battle Creek College connected with t Sanitarium, where he will have opportunity f rest and treatment. He will continue friendly relationship to Olivet and has the be wishes of all its constituency. A Faculty E ecutive Commitee of six members, togethe with a special committee of the Board Trustees, consisting of Mr. George R. Wilso of Chicago, Chairman of the Board, Mr. N. Klock of Benton Harbor, Chairman the Executive Committee, and Dr. Erne Bourner Allen of Oak Park, Chairman of t Endowment Committee, will have charge the college during the coming year. Negoti tions are already under way for a new pres dent. The Endowment Fund Campaign wi proceed as originally planned.

Death of Michigan Leader

Michigan loses one of its foremost religiou leaders in the death of Mr. J. H. Engle, Ex ecutive Secretary of the Michigan Sunda School Council of Religious Education, a Lansing, on Aug 1.

He was born on a farm in Lancaster County Pennsylvania, Feb. 28, 1865. At ten years o age, he united with the Brethren in Chris Church, and when fourteen years old moved t Kansas, with twenty-six families of the church there to establish a farming community wit the church as its center. Mr. Engle's fathe led the company to Kansas, serving as a bisho of the church in that community, and later i Africa. After teaching in the public scho for ten years, Mr. Engle entered the Univer sity of Kansas. From the university he wa called to the general secretaryship of the Kan sas Sunday School Association. So successfu was he in this position that he was retaine for twenty-five years. In 1921 he became th Executive Secretary of the Michigan Sunda School Association.

His record of achievement since reachin Michigan is a long and notable one. Amon his first accomplishments was the reorganiza tion of the Michigan Sunday School Associa tion into the Michigan Sunday School Counci of Religious Education. This reorganizatio admitted official representatives of seventeen Protestant denominations to the Executiv Committee of the Council, and made the coun cil the agent of these denominations in th field of co-operative religious education. He built up a staff of eight full-time workers, an succeeded in organizing all but two counties i the state as auxiliaries of the State Council

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

A Rewarding Rural Experiment

That seems to the people of NEWBURG, IOWA, nteresting experiment in rural church work ne two weeks' Daily Vacation Bible School ch they have just brought to a close.

he school opened on Monday morning with on the roll, this number growing, within a days, to 80, all of whom, save two or e, are of the constituency of our own rch. The ages admitted were from six to inclusive. Sixty-four was the largest num- in attendance on any one day and 50 was smallest.

ne faculty consisted of 16 members, some whom were present only as occasional sub- tes or as helpers, while most of them were he job practically every day, some of them . Interest in the school, among both pupils teachers, mounted daily, and a unanimous was cast for a similar school next summer.

ne engaging thing about this rural experi- —and it was a rural experiment, for (1) as the first thing of its kind attempted in community, and (2) this is a strictly l enterprise, with about 95 per cent. of the tituency on the farms—is that both in- ctors and pupils in most cases came from nces of from one to four miles, part of time over very muddy roads and in spite nclement weather. Also it must be noted the presence of some of the pupils and ructors meant that pressing domestic duties orn plowing or other important work had ke second place. "Seek ye first the King- " was the enacted watchward for two weeks.

a large extent, the courses outlined in Mayflower textbook for primary pupils, the Junior Citizen book for juniors were . The school convened at two o'clock and d at 4.30. One hour was devoted daily to ual construction work. The other one and alf hours was given to a devotional period, ruction in Bible and character building, ory work, singing, stories, directed play, calisthenics.

ne afternoon was given to a tour into Grin- noting all places of interest, visiting the ege Museum and spending an hour at rill Park where the children made active of the playground apparatus. This was an educational excursion for the kiddies.

e picnic for pupils and their mothers was ned for and carried out on Tuesday follow- the closing of the Vacation School.

ildren's Day was observed on the Sunday the school ended. The program followed large measure the procedure of the Vaca- School exercises, with the processional and recessional, the gift song march, recitation nemorized Scripture and the singing of s the two groups had learned, together other exercises that carried out the spirit ideals of the school. A brief address was n by the pastor, Rev. S. O. Smith. The day School Superintendent made an appeal a Children's Day offering was taken for day School Extension work.

he above program gave the parents and r members of the audience a sort of pano- ic picture of what had been done for the ren during the previous two weeks and, measure, showed what was achieved. The faction expressed was rewarding.

n exhibit of the articles made, consist- of game boards, spool racks, basketry, sew- scrap-books, posters, cut out objects, kites, , hammocks, and a miniature home by each rtment, all furnished in paper furniture, window drapings and floor coverings (hand- e), had been arranged in the basement of the church. The audience was invited to in- spect this array of hand-made products before going home. It was enough. All present, in- cluding parents who had sacrificed valuable time and the help of the older children at home, and those who had conducted the school, went away feeling that the sacrifices made and the hard work invested were not too great for the results obtained.

Iowa Assemblies

The Iowa State Conference has sponsored this season two successful young people's sum- mer gatherings. The first was held at Grinnell the early part of June; the second at the Y. W. C. A. camp on Lake Okoboji in July. At the Grinnell summer assembly, all the fine equipment of Grinnell College—quadrangle, dormitories, class rooms, chapel, and athletic fields, were made available for the uses of the young people. At Okoboji the splendid equip- ment of the camp, plus all the loveliness of earth and lake and sky, added greatly to the profitable enjoyment of the week.

This was the first year in which a venture was made of holding two assemblies. The re- sults justified the experiment, for practically twice the number of young people were in attendance. While the Grinnell Conference covered, geographically, two-thirds of the state and three-fourths of the churches, the Okoboji Conference came within eight of reaching an equal attendance. The total attendance ap- proximated 225 young people, who registered for the courses, exclusive of part-time regis- trations and the teaching staff.

At both assemblies the daily schedule and

You too, can Earn $100 a Week

I Will Show You How, Without Investment, Experience or Training, You Can Make $400 in 30 Days and Be on the Way to a Big Success

W. S. COOPER of Ohio, finds it easy to earn over $500 a month selling Comer All-Weather Topcoats and Raincoats.

R. A. PRENTISS was working in a factory at small pay. He has made as high as $945 in a single month selling Comer All-Weather Topcoats and Raincoats.

C. T. BROOKS of New York, who finds it easy to average $18 a day and has made as high as $90.20 a day selling Comer Coats.

FREE

I am now offering my representatives a Dodge Touring Car as an extra reward in addition to all other profits. If you write at once you will be given the same opportunity.

IF you are making less than $50 a week, write to me at once and I will show you how you can more than double your income. You can be your own boss—you can work wherever you please—two hours a day—three hours a day—six hours a day—and make from $2 to $4 for every hour you work.

Inside of thirty days you can own a thriving, prosperous business without investing any money. You can become one of the big money-makers in your community by mailing the coupon below.

Simple as A B C

I am one of the largest manufacturers of high-grade topcoats and raincoats in America. In every community I appoint a representative and this representative has the same opportunity of making money as most merchants, doctors or professional men have. My representative doesn't have to pay rent nor salaries nor take any of the other ordinary business risks and expenses. All the profit he makes he keeps for himself.

People like to buy direct from the factory, for all the money saved by selling this way is passed on to the customer. They know all about Comer All-Weather Topcoats and Raincoats. They know they are big bargains. It is a common thing for one of my representatives to make $20 in a single day, and every dollar they make is net profit. J. C. McCardell of Pennsylvania did. In two days' time Mr. McCardell made $58.20 clear profit for himself. Wm. E. Pyne made $16 in one evening. T. D. Wick cleared $13.60 in two hours.

I want you to act as my representative, and all you need to do is call on my customers and send me their orders. It is the most pleasant, dignified and profitable work that anyone can do.

Build Up a Permanent, Profitable Business for Yourself

I don't want you to think that this is any temporary proposition. You will soon find, after you get started, that your business grows week by week and month by month. Every year's business is bigger than last year's. And when you become known as a Comer representative, business will roll in just for the asking.

Make $2 to $6 on Every Sale

That depends on how much time you devote to this proposition, You can make anywhere from $50 to $100 a week. R. A. Prentiss of Massachusetts made $945 for one month's work, and A. B. Spencer earned $625 in one month's spare time. W. J. McCrary jumped his earnings from $2 a day to $16,800 in three years—and I could go on and on telling you about my representatives who have met with equal success. I make it easy for you to make an enormous income. I not only furnish you with all the information you need but I tell you where to go, what to say, and how to make money.

Big Profits At Once

If you will mail the coupon at once I will explain how I will arrange things so that you will get your profit the same day you earn it. If you make $20 in one day you will have that $20 in cash in the evening of the same day. You don't have to deliver the coats or collect the money due. I do that. When you drop an order into the mail box you are through, and you have your profits in your pocket.

No Experience Needed

You don't have to invest any money and you don't have to put up any capital. Selling experience is not necessary, but if you have it, so much the better. Some of my most successful representatives who are now making from $50 to $100 a week never had any previous experience of this kind. These representatives started in just as I am offering to start you. And they soon discovered that this was the easiest way they ever heard of to make big money.

How to Get Started

Just send me your name and I will tell you how to start on this proposition, even if you can devote only one or two hours a day to it. Later on, when you find out how much money you can make and how delightful the work is, then you will want to put in your full time.

I have paid thousands and thousands of dollars in cash to the readers of this publication who are now my representatives. They realize what a wonderful opportunity it is. As soon as you join our organization you will have an opportunity to become a member of the Comer Thousand A Month Club and will be offered thousands of dollars in cash in addition to your regular income.

Don't Delay—Write Today

Don't wait until someone else gets in ahead of you. Just mail the coupon and I will send you all the details of my offer. I will show you how you can have a permanent, profitable, honorable and pleasant business that will bring you a bigger income than the average merchant, doctor, lawyer or banker. I will show you how you can make $100 a week without working as hard as you are now. Don't miss this chance. Tear out the coupon and mail it to me right away. This is the big money-making opportunity you have been waiting for.

C. E. COMER, The Comer Mfg. Co.
Dept. 13-B Dayton, Ohio

IMPORTANT

The Comer Manufacturing Co. is one of the most successful businesses of its kind in the world, with 12 years of experience back of it. It owns and occupies a modern concrete steel building with 65,000 sq. ft. of floor space where it manufactures all of its merchandise. The business has been built on the policy of giving exceptional values to customers, and fair, square treatment to its representatives.

JUST MAIL THIS NOW!

THE COMER MFG. CO., Dept. 13-B
Dayton, Ohio.

Please send me, without obligation or cost on my part, copy of your booklet and full details of your proposition. Tell me how I can make from $50 to $100 a week.

Name.....

Address.....

Print or write plainly program were substantially the same. Emphasis centered on three major topics: (1) Bible study and Biblical Interpretation, with courses on the Religion of Jesus, the Prophets, Social and Ethical Problems; (2) Historical and missionary subjects including History of Congregationalism, Heroes of the Christian Church World Service Work, and missionary lectures on India and Turkey; and (3) Specialized Leadership Training, which took in such special courses as Methods of Young People's Work, Elementary Methods in the Church School, Personal Problems and Leadership Ideals, Dramatics, etc.

The general management was under the able direction of Rev. E. M. Adams, Conference Director of Religious Education. The teaching staff was drawn largely from the state and was greatly strengthened by the assistance of Sec. H. T. Stock of Boston, and Prof. B. W. Robinson of Chicago Seminary, the latter teaching at both conferences. The missionary lectures, which proved a popular and helpful feature, were delivered by Edward L. Nolting and J. J. Banninga of the Madura Mission, India; and by Miss Susan Orvis of Turkey. The convocation hour, always deeply impressive, was taken by various speakers, among them being Dean Graham of Oberlin, H. H. Lindeman of Yankton, S. D., and W. W. Pickett of Fort Dodge, who was the convocation speaker at both assemblies.

The young people were remarkably responsive to every high and noble appeal. They conducted morning prayers, had charge of the service of worship at the convocation hour, and shared largely in the vesper service. The social and athletic features came into prominence and contributed much to the promotion and good comradeship. The success of the Okoboji Conference may be attributed to the splendid cooperation given by the pastors of Northwest Iowa, and especially to the effective leadership of Rev. C. P. Bast of Rock Rapids, whose experience in this type of service in other states proved so valuable in this instance. P. A. J.

At Tilton, N. H., for Forty Years

The resignation of Rev. Cassander C. Sampson from the active pastorate of TILTON, N. H., after a continuous service of 40 years, and his retirement from the ministry deserves more than a passing notice. He has been made pastor emeritus by the Tilton Church, and granted a salary for life. The present summer he is passing at his old home in Harrison, Me., for needed rest and recuperation.

Mr. Sampson was born in Harrison, Me., Sept. 2, 1850. He was graduated from Bowdoin College in 1873, from Andover Seminary in 1878, and was ordained in 1881. His pastorates have all been in the state of New Hampshire: at Gilmington Iron Works, Pembrook, and since June, 1885, at Tilton. He has seen his church grow and expand until it is one of the most prominent and influential Protestant churches in the vicinity. At the last Communion service on June 28, ten persons united with the church, six on confession. Mr. Sampson was never married.

During his last week in Tilton, there were two notable receptions in Mr. Sampson's honor. On Monday evening there was a banquet arranged by the local Chamber of Commerce. Speakers included Norris Cotton, of Washington, D. C., Major W. H. Tricky, Commandment of the State Soldiers' Home, and Headmaster George L. Plimpton of the Tilton School. Rev. A. M. Dunstan, President of the Chamber of Commerce, presided, and presented the guest of the evening with $100 in gold, from the members and friends present.

On Wednesday evening an audience of 400 people met in the auditorium of the Congregational Church to pay their respects to their retiring pastor. Attendants from the other Protestant churches joined to pay their tribute to Mr. Sampson, whom they termed "the first man of Tilton and Northfield." A former resident of the community, Prof. H. F. Simp Jr., of Ithaca, N. Y., was the speaker of evening and gave a long history of the g work Mr. Sampson has done in the past years. At the close of the program, a p of $200 in gold and a bunch of 40 roses, resenting the 40 years of service, were sented to the honored guest. Mr. Sampson sponded in his usual quiet manner.

At the last meeting of the State Confere at Nashua notable resolutions were passed forwarded to both Mr. Sampson and the ton Church, felicitating both church and pa on the success of this long and unbroken r tionship. H. B.

From East to West

HAWAII

Central Union, Honolulu, Calls Minister

CENTRAL UNION, HONOLULU, has exten a call to Rev. Philip Allen Swartz, associ pastor of Third Presbyterian, Rochester, Y. It is expected that Mr. Swartz will cept the call. Dr. Herbert A. Manchester at present acting pastor of the church.

Annual Meeting of Evangelical Association

The 103d Annual Meeting of the Hawai Evangelical Association was held in the toric Kawaiahao Church in Honolulu, J 13-18. Delegates gathered from the vari islands of the Hawaiian group. The Mod ator was Rev. Henry K. Poepoe, pastor of Kaumakapili Church, Honolulu. The Hawai churches are the backbone of the organizat and represent the oldest of the groups, considerable strength is shown in the Ja nese, Chinese, Union, Filipino, and Portugu groups. The Communion service, in which th groups participated, is a beautiful evidence Christian unity.

The churches have laid great stress this y upon the work of evangelism and a report w presented by the Committee of Fifteen, sho ing that 1,265 new members had been receiv on confession of faith and 265 by letter fr other churches.

This year marks the first time that t Hawaiian Evangelical Association has co into a relationship with the Congregatio denomination known as the "Constitu State." The request of the last association w forwarded to the Commission on Missions a at the January meeting this request w granted and the new relationship w established.

As a representative of the mainland Co gregational churches, and of the Moderator the National Council, Dr. Rockwell Harm Potter, who was unable to accept the invit tion to be present, Dr. Carl S. Patton of L Angeles, Cal., attended the meetings. His se mon on "Hunger and Love" was one of t great spiritual experiences of the week meetings.

The Central Union Church gave a tea par for the delegates and Hon. Wallace R. Fa rington, Governor of Hawaii, gave a receptio

The most popular of the many functions w the Song Contest in which choirs from vario islands or churches in the islands participate There were choirs from Kauai, Maui, Ha Church at Hilo, Hawaii, Kawaiahao Churc and from other churches, a total of nine choi in all. About 3,500 people packed the lar tabernacle where the contest was held. T winner of the first prize of $100 was the Kau choir. Haili Choir won the second prize $50, while Maui and Kawaiahao choirs ti for the third prize. The large audience i

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA
Sixtieth Year Opens August 17, 1925
Prepares men and women for
The Pastorate — Social Service
Religious Education — Foreign Service
Research
Practical Instruction. Opportunities for Self-Support.
Facilities of University of California.
Graduate Degrees. Faculty of Ten.
Modern and Commodious Buildings under Construction.
COME TO CALIFORNIA TO STUDY
HERMAN F. SWARTZ, President

Bangor Theological Seminary
The 110th year opens Sept 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor Maine.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

HARTFORD
W. Douglas Mackenzie
President
Theological Seminary
Dean, M. W. Jacobus
School of Religious Education
Dean, E. H. Knight
Kennedy School of Missions
Dean, E. W. Capen
Through these associated schools Hartford offers full training for:
1. The Christian ministry.
2. Religious education and social service.
3. The foreign field.
Each school has its independent faculty and its own institutional life, and together they form one interdenominational institution with the unity of common aim and spirit.
HARTFORD SEMINARY FOUNDATION, HARTFORD, Conn.

The Chicago Theological Seminary
IS A GOOD SEMINARY
It has trained more than 2,000 men for the Christian Ministry, and is worthy of your support.
OZORA S. DAVIS, President,
5757 University Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

ed members of the United States Fleet, in Hawaiian waters, as well as members visiting Congressional party who were ing a tour of Hawaii and the Philippine nds. The contest was exciting and en- iasm was high. The visiting choirs have singing in many places throughout the and flooding it with wonderful music.

addition to the regular sessions of the ciation, there was the usual meeting of day School and C. E. Association, a School Methods for Daily Vacation Bible School , and conferences of Chinese, Japanese, Filipino delegates to consider their work their respective national groups.

ext year the association will be held at ua, Hawaii, where the first landing of mis- aries took place in 1820 and the Moderator iat meeting will be Rev. Stephen L. Desha, pastor of the Haili Church, Hilo, Hawaii.

reception was given by the Hawaiian d Filipino Center to a large group of the) Filipino members of the United States t now in port. Massed bands of Filipino icians played thrilling music for the occa- and speeches were made by Secretary of e Raymond C. Brown, who came as the ernor's special representative, by Labor missioner Ligot, and by a representative of visiting seamen.

r. H. W. Metcalf, head worker of the ino Center, presided. After the program, refreshments were served by some Fili- women under the leadership of Mrs. Ligot Miss Caroline Bissinger of the Y. W. C. A.

OREGON

epts Call to Parkrose, Portland

he people of PARKROSE, PORTLAND, are tly encouraged over the coming of so able ader as Rev. J. N. Pendelton, who has just d two years of distinctive service at lon.

es Condon After Successful Two Years

wo years ago Rev. J. N. Pendleton under- the work of CONDON and now has ac- ed a call to Parkrose, Portland. During pastorate the church was remodeled, the en enlarged, a bell installed, the basement vated, and a piano placed in the church. lots adjoining the parsonage have been hased. During the two years 63 members received into the church, which has made t gain of 50. The work among young le has prospered. More than 100 young le are enrolled in the Christian Endeavor eties, there are 40 Boy Scouts and 20 p Fire girls. The pastor has organized cared for two Sunday schools in the out- district, with a total enrollment of 125.

CALIFORNIA

Carl Patton Delegate to Honolulu

a representative of the National Council the Home Missionary Boards, to the Con- ace at Hawaii, Dr. Carl Patton of First rch, Los Angeles, took the month of June or vacation in Hawaii.

the annual spring fete, the ladies enter- d a number of guests, among them Mrs. F. Day, formerly for many years a power his church.

an all-day meeting several hundred women ved particularly valuable first-hand infor- on on the subject of the American Indian. ng the speakers were Mr. Conser of Sher- Institute, Mrs. Louis Gillespie, District rman of Indian Welfare in the Federation Women's Clubs, Mrs. F. M. Mitchell, Pres- rian missionary in Arizona, Mrs. De Porte, for the Y. W. C. A. looks after Indian coming to Los Angeles. Mr. Samuel Pet- tigrew, a Navajo Indian, and Miss Lucy Wolcott of Long Beach sang groups of Indian songs.

Dr. Wilde of the church has been giving a series of valuable lectures to the Mothers: "Preparation for Parenthood," "Behavior Problems," "Child Nutrition," "The Story of Life," "The Trend of the Modern Youth."

An interesting book comes from Rev. C. W. Wilcox, now a member of this church, telling of his experiences as a missionary for years in the Dark Continent, The Man from the African Jungle.

Great things in the building line will be launched one of these days. The women of the Church Work Society have inaugurated a treasury known as the "Woman's New Church Foundation Fund."

Leaves Claremont for Albuquerque

After several years' service among the boys at CLAREMONT, Rev. Josiah Poeton leaves for Albuquerque, N. M., where with Mrs. Poeton a position is taken in the Rio Grande Industrial Institute. As the church sends its A. M. A. contribution to the institute, they are making in this transfer of workers their relations still more vital with that work. Mr. Poeton has been active in his service of youth, one of his last deeds being to go with the Boy Scouts for ten days to camp at Cleghorn Mountain. The church and college were hosts to the First Annual Scout Encampment and Rodeo of the Old Baldy District, with about 300 attending. In the athletic tests, the local troop carried off second honors. A farewell reception was given by the church to Mr. and Mrs. Poeton, July 8, and they will leave in August for Albuquerque to take up their work Sept. 1.

The annual Vacation Bible School was held June 16 to July 17, with an attendance of about 100. An interesting and time-honored custom of the church has been the holding of

UNUSUAL
Educational Opportunity

FOR YOUNG LADIES who wish to spend a year of study in Florence, Italy, in healthful home surroundings. Courses under recognized professors in Italian, French, History, Art and Music, Recreational work in Fencing, Horseback Riding and Dancing. Trips during the winter to Rome, Perugia and Siena. School term October to June. Best references given and required. For terms address THE SECRETARY, Box 142, Cambridge, Mass.

BRIDGMAN SCHOOL FOR BOYS

DR. and Mrs. Howard A. Bridgman will open their home in Shirley Center, Mass., this autumn to a limited number of boys between the ages of nine and fifteen.

THE appeal of the school will be to those who value a healthful physical environment, careful supervision, a home atmosphere, thorough instruction, and the effort to build character.

MR. James Chester Flagg will have charge of the academic work. He is a Dartmouth graduate, has taught in former years at Milton Academy and Hackley School, was Headmaster of the Danforth School in Framingham, and for the last three years has been connected with Lawrence Academy at Groton.

DR. and Mrs. Bridgman have been instrumental since 1922 in rebuilding and reorganizing Lawrence Academy. Prior to that time Dr. Bridgman was Editor of The Congregationalist.

Address BRIDGMAN SCHOOL, Shirley Center, Mass.

Rockford College for Women

Founded In 1847 for Modern Women

A COLLEGE of distinguished graduates, fine traditions and high standards of Christian scholarship. Chartered as college with Beloit by Congregationalists, February 25, 1847. A.B., B.S., and A.M. degrees. Majors in Education, Art, Social Service, Home Economics, Music and Secretarial studies. A campus of wooded acres on Rock River, 88 miles from Chicago. All girls participate in athletics. An intimate college with many student activities.

Write for catalog and book of views.

Wm. A. Maddox, Ph.D., Pres., Box C, Rockford, Illinois

MILWAUKEE-DOWNER COLLEGE

Milwaukee, Wisconsin

Standard Academic Courses for B.A. and B.S. Degrees.

A Four-Year Course in Home Economics for the B.S. Degree.

A Four-Year Course with a major in Fine and Applied Arts or in Music, for the Degree of B.S. in Arts.

A Two- or Three-Year Academic Course, completed by work in an approved hospital, for the Degree of B.S. in Nursing.

A Three-Semester Diploma Course in Occupational Therapy, completed by work in approved hospitals.

MISS LUCIA R. BRIGGS, President

For catalogue address the Registrar

The Fisk Teachers' Agencies

120 Boylston St., Boston 225 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Birmingham, Chicago, Kansas City, Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles. Everett O. Fisk & Co.

GRINNELL

A College of Liberal Arts for Men and Women.

Applications for admission in September, 1925, are now being received.

An illustrated booklet will be sent on request.

Address:

Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, (Dept. C.)

EMPHASIZING COLLEGE PREPARATION — MacDuffie School For Girls — ONE YEAR TUTORING COURSE

SPRINGFIELD — MASSACHUSETTS

Post-Graduate Course in Music and Household Arts

PRINCIPALS

John MacDuffie Mrs. John MacDuffie

weekly cottage prayer meetings. May 24 was observed as Education Day, with the sermon in the morning by Prof. R. J. Taylor, on "Putting the You into Youth," and in the evening by Prof. Raymond Brooks on "A Moral Challenge to Parents." Planning for its material expansion, the church has purchased the properties of S. J. Mead and L. A. Koch, adjoining the church location. In pursuance of a custom of several summers. the Women's Union has been meeting on the Fridays in July to work on the lavendar, which they are growing in preparation for the fall sale. The young people of this church answer to the call to share in being hosts to the Southern California Congregational Young People's Conference.

OKLAHOMA

Tulsa Church Completes First Year's Work

Sunday, May 10, marked the close of the first year's work of FIRST, TULSA. About a year ago, Rev. L. J. Marsh came to Tulsa to look over the field to see whether it would be practicable to organize a Congregational church. The first service of worship was held Sunday, May 18, 1924. Dr. A. E. Ricker preached the sermon, after which a temporary organization was affected. Regular services were conducted by Mr. Marsh and others until July 1, when Rev. J. G. Duling of Minneapolis became pastor.

The Sunday School was organized Oct. 5, 1924, with 15 present. The enrollment is now 76. On Dec. 14, Mr. Marsh conducted t services. After preaching the sermon, he r ceived 49 members into the church and effect a permanent organization, adopting a cons tution and electing officers and appointi committees.

L. J. MARSH, A. E. RICKER, J. G. DULING

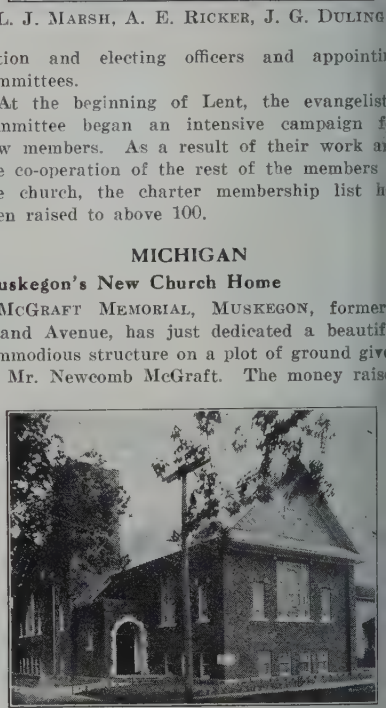
At the beginning of Lent, the evangelist committee began an intensive campaign f new members. As a result of their work a the co-operation of the rest of the members the church, the charter membership list h been raised to above 100.

MICHIGAN

Muskegon's New Church Home

MCGRAFT MEMORIAL, MUSKEGON, former Grand Avenue, has just dedicated a beautif commodious structure on a plot of ground giv by Mr. Newcomb McGraft. The money rais



MCGRAFT CHURCH, MUSKEGON, MICH.
New house of worship on dedication day enabled the church to ta care of all bills. A dramatic scene was enact on dedication evening when after the financi statement as regards the new church had be read by Supt. J. W. Sutherland, Dr. Archiba Hadden announced that Mrs. Edith McGra Wickham had sent two more checks in ad tion to her initial pledge of $6,500; one f $5,000 to be used as an endowment and o for $2,500 to be used as seemed best to t church. Those having part in the dedicato service in addition to Dr. Hadden were: I Herbert Jump of Ann Arbor, Dr. W. E. C lins of First, Muskegon, Rev. Stephen Vaugh of Shelby, and Supts. Sutherland and Harg Rev. G. W. Atkinson became pastor of t

The NORTHFIELD East Northfield, Massachusetts
VACATIONING NEXT MONTH?
September is wonderful here. Why not come? Mountain beauty. Golf, other sports, excellent food and accommodations. Write for Illustrated Booklet.
AMBERT G. MOODY, M-r.
East Northfield Mass.

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

CAMPS AND VACATION PLACES

Quinneh Tuk—Spend August vacation at Quinneh Tuk, Northfield, Mass. Cottages and tents. Modern conveniences.

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., in the vicinity of the White Mountains. We offer the comforts and conveniences needed for a successful vacation and rest. No hay fever. Booklet. A. J. Newman, Prop.

A Few Guests can be accommodated in an attractive Colonial house near lake, 30 miles from Boston. Electricity, bath, telephone, good home cooking, shade trees, beautiful walks and drives. An ideal place for rest and recreation. Reasonable. Address Mrs. G. M. Rogers, Westboro, Mass.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, homelike rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone. Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

HELP WANTED

Wanted—Young woman as church secretary with training in religious education. Address Rev. W. S. Steensma, First Congregational Church, Jackson, Mich.

Wanted, Sept. 1, young man assistant for social and religious work with boys and young men. Address C. F. Hersey, New Bedford, Mass.

POSITION WANTED

Wanted—Position as superintendent of schools or master of high school, by a college man with post graduate work at Columbia and successful experience. Best of references. Economic conditions in a mining district have unexpectedly dispensed with superintendency. Address C. H. W., Agamenticus Heights, Gloucester, Mass.

Northfield graduate, 1925, desires position as nursery governess October 1. Marjorie T. Peet, Kent, Ct.

Desire position to teach in high school, Science Department. Address "F. T. I., Congregationalist.

SUPPLY PASTOR

Rev. Sidney K. Perkins, lately of Ashburnham, Mass., and formerly at Manchester, Vt., has removed to Haverhill, N. H., and is available for pulpit supply.

PASTORATE WANTED

Pastor wishes church in rural or semi-rural community. Federated or union church in Southern New England preferred. Address "M. A.," Congregationalist.

TEACHERS WANTED

Lincoln Institute of Kentucky, child of Berea College, only well equipped colored Normal and Industrial School in the state, beautifully located 22 miles east of Louisville, undenominational but deeply religious, needs a teacher of Bible and English, also a teacher of English. Mature white woman preferred. $600 and living for 36 weeks a year. Few incidental expenses. Large opportunity for service. Fall term opens Sept. 30. Address Rev. A. Eugene Thomson, Lincoln Ridge, Ky.

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wastleless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

A Good Boarding Place

Are you looking for a good boarding place with a Christian family? Just try an ad in our classified columns, and you will be fully repaid for the small amount it will cost you.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.
THE LESLIE
A quiet, cosy little House by the sea. Now open. Private baths. Descriptive booklet. 21st season.

rch in 1921 and has worked untiringly for ear in superintending the construction of building. He has made a great contributo the work. Without his leadership the building would probably not have been sible. The church is situated in a fast wing part of the city and apparently has reat future.

OHIO

niversary of Springfield Church

The recent celebration of the 75th annisary of FIRST, SPRINGFIELD, has given new and enthusiasm to the church. At the niversary banquet eight members who had n members of First for more than 50 years re guests of honor—Miss Ellen Folger, Miss E. Allerton, Mrs. A. E. Elifritz, Miss Ida
ger, Dr. G. D. Grant, Mrs. Mary Frantz, ss Sarah Frantz, and Mr. E. A. Fay. Lets from former ministers—Dr. E. A. Steiner, H. A. Atkinson, and Dr. A. W. Evans—ught great pleasure to the occasion.
An interesting historical pageant was one the features of the celebration, various epies showing the organization of the church, beginning of the first Christian Endeavor iety in central and southern Ohio, and the le School at work. The closing episode was dramatization of Henry van Dyke's The ng's Jewel, showing in parable the work of st Church in leading people to seek the
th. It was dramatized by Mrs. W. C. H.
gel. The Spirit of the Church was taken
Miss Elizabeth Riegel.

NEW YORK

signs from Plymouth, Lockport

Dr. N. M. Pratt, for five years pastor of YMOUTH, LOCKPORT, has resigned from that rch and is now in England with Mrs. Pratt.
rough arrangements made by the World Alice for International Friendship through the Church

EMBROIDERIES, ALTAR LINENS
PULPIT GOWNS, CLERGY AND
CHOIR VESTMENTS, CLERICAL
CLOTHING Estimates on Request
J. M. HALL, Inc.
9 East 35th St., New York
Tel. Caledonia 8648

CHURCH WINDOWS
AND
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
BRONZE AND MARBLE
Jacoby Art Glass Company
Dept. 54 2700 St. Vincent Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1114 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND
220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
9 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

We pay fabulous salaries to those who purvey our cheapest entertainment, but a starvation wage to those who bring refreshment to our souls.

Churches he is preaching this summer in England and Scotland.

CONNECTICUT

Newent's Sons in the Ministry

The contributions of the Lisbon or Newent Church to the ministry and to missionary service is one of unusual interest and influence for a country church. It has never had a large membership but it has always had devoted and faithful men and women who believed and still believe that the greatest privilege a Christian has is to publish the gospel of our Lord. It celebrated its 200 years of history with appropriate services in September, 1923. At the present time there are enrolled in the Bible school 36 Polish and Russian children who attend regularly all the services or the church. The church is hoping that from one of these a teacher and minister may be won who will be able to reach the people of his own race. Hanover Church is a daughter of the Newent Church. Rev. W. J. Reynolds is minister of Newent. The record is as follows:

LIST OF MINISTERS WHO CAME FROM LISBON

(An n designates Newent parish; an h designates Hanover parish; an f indicates a foreign missionary or minister to the heathen; a p denotes Presbyterian; b Baptist; m Methodist Episcopal; s Separatist. The names without a letter are of Congregationalists.)

	Born	Died
Joseph Lovett, n	1705	1785
Timothy Allen, n	1715	1806
Nathaniel Whitaker, D.D., np	1731	1795
Joseph Lathrop, D.D., n	1731	1820
Aaron Kinne, n	1742	1824
Samuel Kirkland, nf	1741	1808
Nathan Perkins, D.D., n	1749	1838
Stephen Tracy, n	1749	1822
Jonathan Powers, n	1764	1807
Esra Witter, h	1766	1833
Amos Read, nb	1756	1838
Ebenezer Willoughby, nsb
Caleb Knight, h	1771	1854
Richard Hudson Benedict, nb	1781
James Abel, hp	179–	1868
William Potter, nf	1796
Jonathan Smith Green, hf	1797
Prof. Beriah Green, h	1800
Charles Fitch, h	1804	1844
Horace Bushnell, h	1802
Dr. Rufus Smith, h
William Albert Hyde, n
Hiram Averill Tracy, n
Anson Perkins Brooks, h	1801	1848
John Perkins Brooks, h	1816
Caleb Read, nb	1780
Levi Read, nb	1783	1872
James Read, nb	1793
William Randall Palmer, np
Charles Lathrop Ayer, h
Samuel Henry Lee h
Nathan Lynde Lord, M.D., nf	1821	1868
Joseph Hebbard Philips, nm
Harry Foote	1916

Licensed to preach by Baptists in Mission in Detroit.

Rev. R. A. Christie Called to Middletown

FIRST, MIDDLETOWN, has called to the pastorate to succeed Rev. Douglas Horton, who went to Leyden, Brookline, in February, Rev. Ralph A. Christie of Florence, Mass., who graduated from Hartford Seminary in 1911. Mr. Christie has accepted the call and resigned his pastorate at Florence. Mr. Horton graduated at Hartford in 1915 and his predecessor, who is pastor emeritus, was the veteran Dr. A. W. Hazen, also a Hartford man of the class of 1868.

MASSACHUSETTS

Dr. Willmott Accepts Athol Call

ATHOL is rejoicing in Dr. B. A. Willmott's acceptance of the call to the pastorate of that church, where he will begin his duties Sept. 6. Last spring Dr. Willmott served for several weeks as supply pastor at Athol, giving the church new impetus and so endearing himself to his congregations that a call to the permanent pastorate has been extended. Although Dr. Willmott's health is improved, he feels that he can accept the pastorate for one year only, but with the hope that he may be able to continue longer to serve the church. His work as supply was marked. The attendance increased from about 225 to 500.

Boylston, Jamaica Plain, Welcomes Missionary

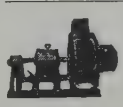
Miss Mary E. Kinney, for 25 years a Woman's Board missionary in Turkey, a teacher in the Girls' School at Sentari, and a member of BOYLSTON, JAMAICA PLAIN, spoke at that church recently, the last Sabbath the church was opened before her return to Turkey after a short furlough.

Miss Kinney's father was treasurer and deacon of Boylston Church until his death. She related the interesting narrative of the nine years since her last visit home, of the refugee camps in Egypt and her girls' school work in

Church Furniture
Pews Pulpits Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
Dept. D.
CHICAGO 14 E. Jackson Blvd.
BOSTON 69 Canal St.

Pulpit Gowns
and Choir Vestments
CUSTOM TAILORING
FOR CLERGYMEN
Pulpit Hangings & Bookmarkers
Cox Sons & Vining
131-133 E. 23rd Street, New York

ESTEY
PIPE AND REED ORGANS
Estey Organ Co.
Brattleboro Vermont



ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B.

Organ Builder Tuning Repairs
WILLIAM O. LYNCH
16 Everett Ave. Dorchester, Mass.

BIBLES of every description, size and price. Buy from your own Publishing Society.
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston
156 5th Ave. New York
19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

Turkey. Several of her Armenian pupils, homesick for the land so distant, were in the audience and greeted her with intense joy. Many old members and personal friends met her at the informal reception after the service.

Boylston Church closed for the summer vacation and re-opens Communion Sunday, Sept. 13, when 13 new members will be received.

Not "Shut-down Sunday" at the Church

"Shut-Down Sunday" is part of a period when the mills of Holyoke cannot run, as the water is drawn out of the canals that repairs may be made. During this period thousands leave the city for vacations. GRACE, HOLLYOKE, announced that it would not be "Shut-Down Sunday" at the church, however. Instead Aug. 2 was a Day of Victory, with a reception of new members followed by a mid-summer Communion. At the open air service in the evening a patriotic pageant was given, and special music was also a part of the program.

Completes Successful Year at Central, Chelsea

Miss Beryl I. Bartlett, graduated this June from the Boston University School of Religious Education, who for two years past has done educational and social service work at CENTRAL, CHELSEA, will return in September for full-time service. She will have complete charge of the varied week-day educational program of this cosmopolitan church, besides directing its regular Church School.

MISS BERYL I. BARTLETT

Miss Bartlett began her full time work at the end of June by organizing and directing a vacation school in the downtown district to care for 250 children of different races and nationalities, in the sustaining of which three churches, representing as many denominations, co-operated. Miss Bartlett's particular aptitude for this type of work, joined with her long and careful preparation for it, promises large results.

A Stoughton Layman

The obituary notice of Arthur M. Bridgman, printed in the last issue, should have stated his church affiliation as the Stoughton (Mass.) Church, and not Winchester.

Remembrance of Things Past

By JOHN RAYMOND HOWARD

An eighty-year life-story—of youth, education, travel, war-time, journalism, and over fifty years of New York publishing; with memories of Fremont, Beecher, Mrs. Stowe, Grant, Greeley, Raymond, Bryant, Longfellow, Lowell, John Lord, Abbott, Hillis, Joseph Jefferson, Henry Irving, Charlotte Cushman, Gladstone, Browning, Mrs. Browning—and other interesting folk.

"A personality-filled volume. . . . The veteran editor and publisher writes in an easy vein."—Providence (R. I.) Journal.

"We can hardly realize the debt we owe to writers of reminiscences. . . . There have been many illuminating recitals of this character, but none in late years of more charm than this."—"F. P. H.," in Boston Transcript.

All Booksellers, $3.25. By mail, $3.40

THOMAS Y. CROWELL COMPANY, NEW YORK

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

HART, W. W., Inglewood, Cal., to Buena Park. At work.

JOCKINSEN, J. P., Pilgrim, Lansing, Mich., to First, Manhattan, Kan. Accepts to begin Sept. 20.

KEITH, C. C., North Abington, Mass., to associate pastorate, Eliot, Roxbury. Accepts.

MILLS, G. S., formerly of Second, Bennington, Vt., recently acting pastor, Wellington Ave., Chicago, Ill., to permanent pastorate, Wellington Ave. Accepts.

SLADE, W. F., First, Manhattan, Kan., to South, Chicago, Ill. Accepts.

WILLMOTT, B. A., formerly of Eliot, Roxbury, Mass., to Athol. Accepts for one year.

Resignations

BRIGGS, L. B., First, Milford, Ct.

DAVIS, O. L., assistant, First, Clinton, Mass.

PRATT, N. M., Plymouth, Lockport, N. Y.

Personals

STEELE, REV. A. T., pastor of First, Colebrook, Ct., was admitted to the Connecticut bar, July 7.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
RHODE ISLAND
Pawtucket	4	10
VERMONT
Greensboro	1	6

Events to Come

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

ISLES OF SHOALS CONGREGATIONAL SUMMER CONFERENCE, Star Island, off Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 10-24.

NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H., Aug. 10-17.

FIRST ANNUAL CONGREGATIONAL YOUNG PEOPLE'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE AND SCHOOL OF METHODS, Lake Cobbosseeconttee, Winthrop, Me., Aug. 22-29.

Northfield Summer Conferences

GENERAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS, Aug. 1-17.

MASSACHUSETTS CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR INSTITUTE, Aug. 17-24.

State Conferences

IDAHO, Boise, Oct. 20-22.

KENTUCKY, Evarts, Oct.

NORTH CAROLINA (Colored), Beaufort, Sept. 23.

NORTH DAKOTA, Dickinson, Sept. 15-17.

UTAH, Salt Lake City, Oct.

WASHINGTON, Seattle, Oct. 6-8.

WISCONSIN, Appleton, Oct. 5-8.

Personals

GORDON, REV. C. E., retired, preached on Sunday, May 17, in First Church, Pomfret, Ct., where he was ordained to the ministry exactly 41 years ago on that date. He preached with his usual vigor of younger days. His son, Rev. E. R. Gordon, of Greensboro, Vt., assisted him in the service.

MACKENZIE, PRES. W. D., of the Hartford Seminary Foundation, Hartford, Ct., is spending the summer as usual at his home in the Muskoka Lake region, Canada.

WALKER, REV. J. F., Assistant Home Missionary Superintendent for Colorado, is able to be out of the hospital after a terrible siege with erysipelas.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Obituary Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

BLISS—A cablegram announces the death, July 25, at 82 years, of Anna E. Bliss, Litt.D., President Emeritus of Huguenot University College, Wellington, South Africa.

REV. JUSTUS NEWTON BROWN

Justus Newton Brown, born in Huron County, Ohio, May 23, 1844, lived a long and varied and always useful life. Coming to Oberlin in youth, he entered college at 16, but was delayed by thr years of service, 1862-65, in the Civil War, a graduated in 1867. Marriage to a schoolma Hattie A. Sparhawk, and a year of teaching Ripon College, Wis., followed with ordinati at Talladega, Ala., Oct. 23, 1870, and graduati from the seminary in 1871. This was later f lowed by post-graduate study at Oberlin, a also at Andover, where he graduated in 187 For three years, from 1871, he owned and edit the Oberlin News: and then with his old brother, Henry, he was at Talladega, Ala., whe the brothers had organized under the Americ Missionary Association the college, as colle pastor and instructor in the Theological Depa ment.

Pastorates followed at Wilton, N. H., 187 Charlotte, Mich., 1879; Owatonna, Minn., 188 then editorship of the Northwestern Congre tionalist at Minneapolis, from 1889, with p toral supply at Excelsior, and Fifth Ave., M neapolis. He was pastor at Paola, Kan., 189 pastor and teacher at Salt Lake City, Ut 1889; in business at Cleveland, Ohio, 190 pastor at Eliot, Me., 1903; Ashland, Me., 190 proof reader for Lippincott, 1912; lecturer the Anti-Saloon League, 1913; library assista at Oberlin, 1915; teacher of Greek, College Ch lain and Assistant to the President, Piedm College, Demorest, Ga., 1919. The wife of youth died at Demorest, and he married younger sister, who cared for him tenderly un his death, June 30, 1925, of paralysis. T funeral was at Demorest, the burial at Oberl July 3, 1925. The Brown brothers marri sisters, and the four are buried side by si The brief service at the grave was conducted Rev. J. G. Fraser, a double classmate, colle and seminary.

J. G. F.

JUDGE GEORGE M. CARRINGTON

George M. Carrington, of Winsted, Ct., h entered upon the 90th year of his earthly l when he entered into eternal life on June 16. completed an upright, useful, Christian cour marked among men.

He was born in Hadlyme, Ct., the son of home missionary pastor, whose name he bo and his mother was the daughter of Rev. Fr erick Marsh, who served 40 years in Winches and left a worthy name in the noted ministe list of Litchfield County. Judge Carrington r true to the form of his excellent heredity.

His Alma Mater was Williams College, wh he was graduated in 1861. In 1870 he est lished himself in the insurance business in W sted, which he carried on successfully for ov fifty years. He became one of the communit "most useful citizens" and rightly earned the ti of the "Grand Old Man."

He served as Judge of Probate for nearly years and retired only because of the law lim as to age. He was honored with important off in the community and commonwealth, and a public position he held he deemed a public tru

He took a lively and devoted interest in orga ized religion, being a long time deacon of t

(Continued on next page)

J. S. WATERMAN & SONS, INC.
ESTABLISHED 1859
UNDERTAKERS
Local and Suburban Service

(Continued from preceding page)

cond Church and Moderator of the General Con-ence. For nigh on to thirty years he was an tensely interested and widely influential corpo-tor of the Missionary Society of Connecticut d the Fund for Ministers. In spite of age, orm, and distance, he could be counted on to be esent at the meetings of the Board and the cord of regular attendance stands the highest ring nearly three decades of office.

He was a "Christian Chesterfield," gracious d genial in spirit and charming in companion-lp, wholly devoid of guile. He held conserva-ely to precedents and practices of his house-ld of faith. Theologically he kept in pace th modern thought and in touch with the reli-ous life of today.

A "great man has fallen in Israel" by his cease, and may his mantle descend upon one orthy to wear it. S. S.

CHAUNCEY PINNEO HULBERT

As Dartmouth was gathering for her 156th niversary on June 19 last and the class of 15 for its tenth reunion, from the old College urch floated forth the organ notes of hymns of ith, as a large group of college and class friends d relatives were assembled to do honor to a re soul, Chauncey Pinneo Hulbert, gone so rly on his quest to the world beyond. The rial was under the ancient pines in the near-cemetery where lies the dust of many of his cestors. The services were in charge of the v. Professor A. W. Vernon, D.D. His tribute as in part as follows;—

Chauncey Pinneo Hulbert came of noble stock. e was of the sixth generation in unbroken se-ence of Congregational ministers. He was the n of Henry Woodward Hulbert, D.D., now stor at Groton, Ct., the grandson of Presi-nt Calvin Butler Hulbert, D.D. of Middlebury, ., the great-grandson of Rev. Henry Wood-rd, missionary in India, the great-great-grand-n of the Rev. Professor Bezaleel Woodward, -founder of Dartmouth and the great-great eat-grandson of President Eleazar Wheelock, D., founder of Dartmouth College, who, in rn, was the great grandson of Ralph heelock, fellow student with John Milton at are College, Cambridge University, England. He believed in learning. He was graduated om Dartmouth in the class of 1915—and his assmates at their tenth reunion have come re as bearers. He was graduated from Union heological Seminary with the degree of B.D. 1921. He had won his Master's degree at olumbia in 1920, and that not sufficing, took nother at Harvard in 1923, where he was the rancis Parkman Fellow in History during 21-2. He taught at Radcliffe in 1923-4 and Simmons in 1924-5 and had an appointment Assistant Professor in History at Tufts Col-ge for the coming academic year.

He believed in sacrificial service for the glory God. During his college course he served as acon in this very church. He taught at Robert llege, 1916-17. He volunteered for Y. M. C. A. ork in France in 1917. He served in the United ates army from 1918 to the end, being com-issioned as second lieutenant. He delighted the beauty, majesty, and subtle marvels of ture. It fitted his nature as it did Wheelock's. e was at home among the ferns and the moun-ins and under the stars.

It was but natural, therefore, that he chose r his life's companion Carolyn Palmer Gulick, so of America's nobility, a lover of the out-of-ors, a believer in education, well-equipped for actical service, a disciple of Christ.

It was also but natural that unusual service r God and humanity had already been ren-red in home and college and camp in the brief ars of this union. Camp Lanakila at Lake orey prospered remarkably under their joint anagement. Their children, too, are already gned for service, being named Ralph Wheelock ulbert and Harriet Farnsworth Hulbert.

O hollow wraith of dying fame
Fade wholly; while the soul exults
And self-infolds the large results
Of force, that would have forged a name.

GRANVILLE W. NIMS

Rev. Granville W. Nims died at the home of s daughter, Mrs. R. E. Horton, at Huntington, I., May 31. Born in Roxbury, N. H., July 17, 348, he was educated at Kimball Union Acad-ny, Amherst College, and Union Theological minary. After his first pastorate of one year Greenwich, Ct., he continued his study of eology at the University of Berlin for two ars.

Mr. Nims was pastor of the First Congrega-onal Church at Walton, N. Y., for 31 years, and afterward successively pastor at Troy, N. H., and West Glover, Ct., rounding out a ministry of nearly 50 years. This ministry was marked by spirituality, by energy, by scholarly thought, and by broad, human sympathy.

DR. ROSWELL O. POST

Dr. Roswell Olcott Post began this life at Logansport, Ind., Oct. 1, 1850. He entered into the reward of his earthly life at Jacksonville, Ill., June 9, 1925. His ministry extended over 42 years. Willsboro, N. Y., Logansport, Ind., Springfield, Ill., Conneaut, O., and Jacksonville, Ill., were the scenes of his active Christian service. In the Congregational Church, Jacksonville, Ill., services were held in his memory. A large number of friends gathered with the members of the family in testimony of the fact that this nobleman of God had not lived in vain. The service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. G. E. Stickney, assisted by Rev. M. L. Pontius of Central Christian Church, Jacksonville, for many years a close friend of Dr. Post.

Great convictions, loyalty to truth, faithfulness to a given task, were predominant characteristics of Dr. Post. He possessed a rare personality and retained the friends he won. His interest in world topics continued until the hour of his passing. He was a real friend to a countless number of people who will declare with him that his soul is uninjured by the great adventure which we call death.

At the close of his active pastorate he went to Conneaut, O., where he rendered distinguished service with the Red Cross during the war. Several years ago he returned to Jacksonville, Ill.

His life continues through his good wife and three sons and a large number of friends who have felt the inspiration of his life and are living upon higher levels because he lived. One who knew him best has said, "Strength and loyalty were his dominating characteristics and he never faltered in living up to that which he believed to be right."

REV. EDWARD P. SALMON

Rev. Edward P. Salmon died at Madeline Island, Wis., July 23, at the age of 83 years. For over a quarter century Mr. Salmon invested mind and heart in the charming summer resort on Madeline Island, the largest of the "Apostle" group, where he breathed his last. This resort, the "Old Mission," with its little chapel, a relic of early missionary enterprise among the Indians, dating from 1839, is his unique and worthy monument. He was very jealous for the "atmosphere" of the place and here, in the chapel, the guests of the Mission gather each Sunday morning for a service conducted by some minister invited to spend his vacation on the Island. The distinction of the chapel is that it is the building wherein the first missionaries of the American Board in the Northwest Territory carried on their work.

Though forced by fragile health earlier in life to leave his chosen calling, the ministry, he followed a successful business career, still holding fast his early ideals, until failing health led him to the quiet life of reading, contemplation, and friendly contacts with his more intimate circle of kindred minds.

For many years Mr. Salmon was a member and a wise and devoted leader in the First Congregational Church, Beloit. Deeply interested in Beloit College and serving for a period on the Board of Trustees, he helped to shape its policy and to determine its type as a Christian college.

His spirit was one of simplicity and deep sincerity. His avidity for new truth and his mental alertness to the last were alike remarkable. In his religious philosophy he was a Christian optimist. For him evolution spelt purpose, progress, and infinite hope. Toward the end he expressed himself as tired of theological controversy and as finding his satisfaction in distinctively religious and mystical literature. Admired for his qualities of mind and beloved for the sweetness of his character, the influence of his personality will long abide.

A simple and appropriate service was held in the chapel conducted by his pastor, Rev. W. W. Willard, of the First Congregational Church, Beloit, and Rev. W. A. Rowell, a former pastor of Union Church, Hinsdale, Ill., both of whom were sojourning on the Island. The interment was at Beloit.

WILLIAM HALLOCK SMITH

Rev. W. H. Smith died July 24 at his home in Aurora, Ill. He was born in Tellippallai, Ceylon, Aug. 10, 1850, the son of missionaries of the American Board.

He was graduated from Hartford Theological Seminary in 1878. He had several home missionary charges in Illinois, but was obliged to retire on account of ill health.

He was a member and deacon of the New England Congregational Church of Aurora. He left many friends and the tributes to his memory were beautiful.

Bishop E. D. Mouzon's Latest Book

THE MISSIONARY EVANGEL

Delivered as the Fondren Lectures of 1925

Press reports and personal comments proclaim this series of lectures as of exceptional interest, profound thought, eloquently delivered, and containing inspiration and instruction which should be given not only to Methodism, but to all the Christian world.

CONTENTS

I. The Evangel and the Bible.
II. The Message Concerning the Human Soul.
III. The Christian View of God.
IV. The Gospel of the Cross.
V. The Sanctification of All Life.

191 pages. 12 mo. Cloth binding. $1.50.

Published by the Cokesbury Press — ORDER FROM YOUR OWN RELIGIOUS BOOKSTORE Missionary Education Tours

offer

—absolutely first class travel and hotel accommodations
—every opportunity for sightseeing —unusual contacts with the life of the countries visited —a view of missionary work at first hand
—a maximum of enjoyment for a minimum of expenditure

Full program includes

Mexico—starting October 12th, duration three weeks
Around South America—sailing November 7th, duration three months
Around the World to Egypt and Palestine—sailing December 12th, duration four and a half months

For information, address

MISSIONARY EDUCATION MOVEMENT

John Cobb Worley, Travel Secretary

150 Fifth Ave., New York 517 Western Mutual Life Bldg., Los Angeles

FIRST MORTGAGES and REAL ESTATE BONDS

Interest 7% Semi-Annually

On Improved Income Florida Real Estate

Loans confined to Tampa and South Florida

Principal and Interest Guaranteed

Write for booklet and information

GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY

Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton
Rev. William E. Strong

Associate Secretaries
Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Ernest W. Riggs

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady, Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Henry Smith Leiper, M.A., Miss Lucy B. Crain, Corresponding Secretaries
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries
Rev. A. V. Bliss, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associatae Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York

Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies and Congregational ministers seeking pastorates. Maintained by the Congregational Conferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Covell Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chairman

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secretar and Missionary Education Secretar
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and Adul Education Secretar
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Secretar
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Educatio Program including Social Service, Missionar Education, Student and Young People's Work aids Ministerial Students, University Pastors directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christia Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of th denomination for the publication and distributio of The Congregationalist, church school equi ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, teacher magazines, children's and young people's weekl papers, and books for home and church use, wit book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Manage
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregationali
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Congrega tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas. Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIOR 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbu Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIFI 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W. Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec. Se

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONAR FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H. Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONAR UNION. Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasurer Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Congrega tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, constituent of the Congregational Home Missio ary Society, represents the churches of Massachu setts in their home missionary work. The Societ solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditions gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Fred erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; Rev John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewal Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL AI Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, als bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Colum bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BOS TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object is th establishment and support of Evangelical Congre gational Churches and Sunday Schools in Bosto and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; C. Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Sear Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely fo Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites con tributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annuit Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superin tendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasure Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, constituent of the National Society, solicits con tributions, administers Special Trust for Churche and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Rev Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William F English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Hart ford.

orthfield General Conference Opens

The Northfield General Conference for Christn Workers opened its forty-third session g. 1. This year the delegates to the conence find faces familiar and unfamiliar ong the leaders. Mr. W. R. Moody, son of vight L. Moody, presides at the meetings as ual. Rev. John A. Hutton, D.D., pastor of Westminster Congregational Chapel, London, England, is again to be a visitor at Northfield; Rev. James Reid, remembered for his addresses in 1923, will be present, and Melvin E. Trotter, Superintendent of the City Mission, Grand Rapids, Mich., will speak at a number of the meetings.

Three new speakers whose presence should be a source of great inspiration will be Rev. W. Fearon Halliday, Lecturer in Theology in Selly Oak Colleges, Birmingham, England; William Louis Poteat, LL.D., President of Wake Forest College, Wake Forest, N. C., and Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, D.D., pastor of Park Avenue Baptist Church, New York City.

Rev. Mr. Halliday, who has been Examiner in Theology and Philosophy in Westminster College, Cambridge, England, and is the author of "Reconciliation and Reality," will not only address the full conference several times, but will also deliver a series of lectures before the ministers' meetings in Russell Sage Chapel. Dr. Poteat, who has been president of the North Carolina Academy of Science, and lecturer at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, will deliver several addresses on practical Christian problems. Dr. Fosdick has not made known the subjects upon which he will speak, but it has been announced that he will speak Aug. 11, 12, and 13. G. L. C.

American Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches. Bequests and Annuities are solicited in order that he House may be freed from mortgage indebtedness and the Association thus enabled to furnish ur Missionary Organizations with business offices t minimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Rev. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hubard, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

Beacon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816
Home visitation and personal missionary service connection with our churches. Emergency re. Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contribuns and legacies gratefully received and scrupusly administered.
lliam Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. rker, Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

orporated 1829 Boston Reorganized 1922

aman's Friend Society, Inc.

This Society, reorganized 1922, now fully repents the Congregational urches of New England its practical, social and gious work among sea-n. Has finely equipped thels at 287 Hanover , Boston, and at Vine-d Haven, and Reading oms at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. e Society provides dormitory accommodations, ding and recreation rooms, religious services, l tables, and games of many kinds, a restau-t, a canteen, shower baths, postal and bank facilities. Donations and bequests solicited. ntributions received on an annuity basis. Presnt, Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., . J. Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore Busfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; as., Charles F. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. n., Franklin P. Shumway; Office 618 Congreional House.

American Seamen's Friend Society

(Incorporated 1833)
The only American undenominational international and national Society aiding seamen.
Maintains a Sailors' Home and Institute at 507 st Street, New York City.
Loan libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing m New York.
PUBLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).
Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.
SUPPORTED by contributions and legacies.
JOHN B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE NEY WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary.
CLARENCE C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 79 Wall St., w York, to whom contributions may be sent.

American Sunday School Union

lladelphia, Pa. Founded 1817
National, Interdenominational. Establishes and intains Union Sunday Schools in the outlying al districts of the country. Publishes and culates moral and religious literature. Helps churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundan work, not duplicated by any other agency. pported by voluntary gifts. Contributions soted. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. ntributions and communications relative to rk in any part of the country may be sent to New England office.
W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

RISIBLES

Advertisement in Scotch paper: "Prices are on the up grade, but we can still do you at the old price."

"Where'd you get the black eye, Mike?"

"Sure, it's in mourning for the guy that gave it to me."—Columns.

Old Gent (who has just sat on a young man's hat)—"Good gracious, what a start you gave me—I thought it was mine."—Yale Record.

"God made woman both beautiful and foolish," remarks a clever cynic—"beautiful, that man might love her; foolish, that she might love him."—Tale End.

Ham—"That death scene was a riot."

Egg—"How's that?"

Ham—"The corpse got the hiccups."—Wabash Caveman.

"Rafferty," exclaimed Mr. Dolan, "your boy threw a lump of coal at my boy!"

"That's a Rafferty for you! When he feels there's a principle at stake, he doesn't think of expense."—Washington Star.

Horace—"What did your wife have to say when you came in at four this morning?"

Maurice—"Didn't have a word to say."

Horace—"S'matter, tongue-tied?"

Maurice—"No, I put cement in her beauty clay."—Bowdoin Bear Skin.

As a steamer was leaving the harbor of Athens a well-dressed young passenger, approaching the captain and pointing to the distant hills, inquired, "What is that white stuff on the hills, Captain?"

"That is snow," replied the Captain.

"Well," remarked the lady, "I thought so myself but a gentleman has just told me it is Greece."—Sailor's Magazine.

"Jimmy," said the fond mother to her little eleven-year-old son, "did you eat that cake I put in the cupboard yesterday?"

"No, Mother," said Jimmy. "I took it, but I gave it to my teacher."

"You shouldn't have taken it," reproved mother. "But it was very kind and generous of you to give it to your teacher. Did she eat it?"

"Yes, I think so," was the wise retort. "She wasn't at school today."

"I stood up for you yesterday."

"Thanks, old man, I appreciate your kindness in not allowing people to slander me."

"The prof was taking a vote on the dumbest man in class. And I stood up for you!"—Record.

ongregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder* and *The Advance

August 13, 1925
Vol. CX No. 33

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year: in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage. $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook 195
Editorial—A Misunderstanding in Los Angeles 197
On Hearing Vacation Supplies
The Time for Ministers to Speak Out
Congregational Prophets—An Editorial Message 198
The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches, by Daniel Evans 200
My Father's House, by A. R. Stephenson 200
The Bulgarian Tragedy 201
The Parable of the Monument 201
The Sea-Gull, by Kate W. Grant 201
Making the Church More Effective, by William E. Gould 202
The Church's Overhead 203
Have You Tried This Method?, by Elizabeth Miller Lobingier 204
Taking the Children from the Streets, by William C. Towart 205
Moving Pictures in South Africa, by Frederick L. Fagley 206
Dr. Lucien C. Warner 207
Northfield Foreign Missions Conference 208
Tribute to Ambassador Bancroft 208
Our Invalid Parish—When the Whippoorwill Came 209
Closet and Altar 209
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic 209
Among the New Books 210
The Congregationalist's Bible Class 211
With the Children—A Baby Flicker's Great Adventure in Mackinaw, by Frances Margaret Fox—Tom and Frank Play Gypsies, by Evangeline Weir 212
Our Readers' Forum 213
With the Schools and Colleges 214
Honorary Degrees 214
News of the Churches 215

Radio-Mats

Will Increase Your Offering—Make Your Announcements Stick—Add Interest to Your Illustrated Service

WHAT THEY ARE

Radio-Mats are a film the size of the standard glass slide, enclosed in a mat and carbon, which can be written upon with typewriter or stylus.

Any announcement, song, Bible verse or other matter, which can be written on a space 3 x 2¼ inches may be placed thereon.

After writing your message, remove the carbon and bind between two cover glass, and your slide is ready for use.

Every User of Stereopticon or Motion Picture Should Secure a Supply - Box of 50, $1.75

Cover Glass 5c each, $4.75 per 100 Binding Strips 40c per 100; $3.00 per 1,000

PRINCIPLES of ADVERTISING

By DANIEL STARCH, Ph.D.

A BOOK YOU WILL ENJOY

This book deals with the principles of Advertising; and is of real value to anyone wishing to increase their business, or put over a message of any kind thru advertising.

Postpaid, $5.48

The Evangelical Christian and Missionary Witness

A monthly magazine—full of interesting and instructive materials, for all Christian people.

Published in Canada

Canada and U. S. $1.50 per year

Foreign $2.00 per year

HERBERT S. MACE

Our Motto SERVICE

OUR SPECIALTY: CHURCH ADVERTISING

Advertising Materials, Bulletin Boards, Stereopticons, Church & Sunday School Supplies

Box 497 C REDLANDS, CALIF.

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 34 August 20, 1925

First Congregational Church, Kalamazoo, Michigan

The church celebrated its 90th anniversary June 14, 1925. Rev. T. T. Phelps is the pastor.

FRIENDLY RELATIONS WITH CATHOLICS, by Daniel Evans

MALPRACTICE UPON YOUTH, by Theodore M. Shipherd

The Story that Never Fails

The American Board is Fighting Through

Letters from mission fields, churches, and friends, to the American Board heap up their evidence of loyalty, determination, and willing sacrifice.

From distant India, the station of Wai, in the Marathi Mission, comes a draft for $8.00 with this message:

> "We have heard with sadness that the American Board is in financial difficulty. We recall how the little church in Antioch sent gifts to the Jerusalem Christians when they were in trouble. This example has lead the Christians in Wai to send you a small gift.
>
> Fifty-three adults and 65 children in our boarding school join in the gift. The children have mutton at one meal twice a month. We asked our matron to give up one of these two meals of mutton and send its value to you. Our gift is small, but we ask you to accept it as an expression of gratitude.
>
> We are your humble Christian friends,
>
> In their behalf, P. N. Gaikwar."

And they gave up one of their two meat meals that month!!

A MESSAGE JUST RECEIVED — All members of the Marathi Mission, Indian and American alike, have resolved to contribute 5% of their salary for the next six months to help meet the deficit of the American Board. Such an example should swell the stream of gifts during these remaining few weeks.

Here is a letter from Rev. Merrill Isley, in Aintab. When they heard the news, the Armenian Christians, remnants of massacre, scattered friends clinging to the faith after sufferings and hardships beyond words, gathered their offerings for us. The missionaries and Armenian Christians sent $135.

Some friends have made increases of $1,000 in their gifts. Old folks of 93, and 85, have sent $10 with sacrifice. A dozen have sent their entire tithe for a full period, out of meager incomes.

The books close September 8th. The gifts have increased through July, but we need the earnest help of every friend from now until September 8th. Do you want to give again? Can you find friends willing to send a check?

A Big Deficit Means a Big Retrenchment

Make check payable to F. A. Gaskins, Treas., 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | August 20, 1925 | No. 34

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D.
Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

Understanding Roman Catholics

A VALUABLE service has been rendered by Professor Daniel Evans in his series of articles on the Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches, which comes to a strong and constructive conclusion in this issue. Fairly and frankly Professor Evans has stated and interpreted the facts. In this case, as we are likely to learn in other cases, the facts show that the other fellow is better than some of us may have supposed. We can see his mistakes and our own mistakes. We can see also that we have much in common. Professor Evans does well to emphasize the fact that we should cultivate good will and friendly relations with our Roman Catholic neighbors. As fellow-citizens and fellow-Christians we do well to be tolerant, magnanimous, ready to learn of each other, ready to help each other. We do well to develop co-operation in the "furtherance of common causes." Co-operation in work for the good of all is one of the best and surest ways to overcome human difficulties, and to make progress.

New Leader in Massachusetts

THE election of Dr. Frederick H. Page of Waltham to the position of President of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society for full-time service, under the new plans for the Society, seems to be an ideal choice. Dr. Page is one of our wisest and most constructive ministers. His pastorates in Lawrence and in Waltham have been long and notably successful. He has given valuable service upon various Congregational boards, and as President of the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society. In co-operation with his competent associates Dr. Page will give strong and inspiring leadership to the churches of Massachusetts.

Religious Discussion Outside the Church

THE reference to recent magazine articles upon religion in the summary by Rev. W. Bertram Chandler elsewhere in this issue will be read with interest. Mr. Chandler remarks, "Whilst the church is neglected by many, religion remains a matter of intense interest." We are not sure that we would entirely agree with the characterization of much of the discussion of religion outside of church circles as "intense." Our observation has been that a great deal of the magazine discussion of religion is exceedingly superficial and incompetent. The discussions in the Atlantic Monthly have been conspicuous exceptions, but it is amazing to discover from time to time how little many who write in the secular press and magazines very glibly and dogmatically concerning the church, actually know about the church either in its present life or in its past history, even when they are men of some distinction in their own fields. Likewise it is equally appalling to discover how little grasp of the background of philosophical thought and Biblical criticism is present in the minds of many writers who discuss in the same spirit of off-hand authority the deepest matters of religious thought and practice. The failure to perceive that knowledge and training in a particular field is necessary for intelligent and adequate discussion of matters within that field, is only a part of the general tragedy of incompetency.

One would welcome much of this wider discussion of religion in the general press and in magazines were it really intense and thoroughgoing. The fact of the matter is that the church in its interest, in its scholarship, in the thoroughness of its consideration, is still the greatest field for discussion of religion. It is only occasionally that outside of the church one comes in such discussion upon the sort of light, leading, and competency which one expects to find, and which one actually does find, displayed today on the part of outstanding scholars within the church.

Getting Rich Quick in Canada

CANADA'S "most profitable industry today," says William J. McNulty in the Current History magazine, "is the manufacture of the poisonous liquor, which is poured into the United States." He continues:

Fortunes are made over night. Attracted by the immense profits made from the operation of breweries, former clergymen, lawyers, manufacturers, merchants, and others of equal social standing are investing in the brewing industry. In one instance the controlling interest is held by an ex-clergyman. In two years this brewery was converted from a losing venture into a great financial success and each month finds the profits growing greater. . . .

But what of the future? Mr. McNulty predicts:

The future historian may write of the era beginning with 1920, that an acid test of the moral development of civilization was offered when an awakened social consciousness began to revolt from having any part in sanctioning the traffic in mentally and morally degrading pleasure-poisons; that for a time after that sentiment was expressed in prohibitory laws, the worship of the almighty dollar, of which Americans had been charged, broke out in a mad scramble among the crudely selfish to secure as many of those dollars as possible by selling the forbidden poisons to their thoughtless and misguided fellowmen. After the test was over, a new aristocracy arose, an aristocracy of moral leaders whose instincts of human brotherhood were admired and emulated. The get-rich-at-any-price people were left to themselves, unenvied, unadmired, unable to attain the social recognition they had hoped their wealth would secure.

Some such evolution would seem to be the necessary outcome of the financial operations here described.

Those who get rich by such methods can hardly hope to be honored or respected by honorable people anywhere.

* *

Other parishes might make a note of the interesting item contained in a Massachusetts call recently accepted: in addition to salary and parsonage, "use of the telephone and five tons of coal." Now is the time to enter the latter item.

A Problem to Be Solved

HOW many of our readers have seen or sensed the facts set forth by Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd in his brief article in this issue of The Congregationalist? This is not a criticism of all colleges but undoubtedly it is a fair statement of what happens in some colleges; is it not? Science and philosophy and the Bible are so taught by some professors in some colleges that many students break away from their old moorings of religious faith, and some of them may never again find moorings of religious faith. Alas, moral break-down too often follows. How serious and how far-reaching is this problem?

Here is a strong argument for the Christian college. Our youth are bound to fare forth in the search for truth. They should know the truth—the truth of science, the truth of history, the truth of life, "the truth that makes men free." The danger is in half-truths, in the method of presenting half-truths by those ill-qualified for the teaching task.

How highly favored are those whose student steps are led through the paths of science, philosophy, and scholarly Bible study by teachers of strong Christian faith and sound Christian character. Many a life has been inspired and its course in Christian service determined by the personal influence of a professor who walked with God as he walked with boys upon the campus, and who taught his students truth in such ways that they too, walked with God as they gained the light on life that college education gave them.

As the student gains more knowledge and is trained to more intelligent thinking, his spiritual nature should be nurtured and grow. The ideal college serves in the co ordinate development of body, mind, and spirit, neglecting no part of that three-fold task.

Do we not need to demand more insistently Christian professors and instructors, and should we not support more loyally the Christian colleges in which such standards are maintained?

The Ku Klux Parade in Washington

THE Ku Klux Klan advertised itself with a big parade in the city of Washington a few days ago. It was a mass march of a large number of people clad in long white robes and funny, tall white caps, and it was a rather tame affair. Those who expected trouble were disappointed. There was no rioting, no disorder, no drunkenness, no excitement. The Klansmen were prevented by law from wearing the masks of which they are fond so there was no mystery about them, and they simply marched and marched on Pennsylvania Avenue. The curious crowds looked on—and let them march. The police and military guards were out in full force, but they had no difficulties. There was to have been a great outpouring of oratory at the Washington Monument after the afternoon's parade, but a thunderstorm poured down just as the oratory started, and stopped it. A big cross was burned over on the Virginia hills in view of Washington the next night, to give a dramatic finish to a two-days' gathering.

It was interesting to note that comparatively few of the hooded order came from the South. The wave of Klan enthusiasm has passed from the South into the Northern states. If it is not taken too seriously it is likely to pass altogether. Undoubtedly most of the Klansmen think they are crusaders in a good cause. We believe they are mistaken,—at least in their methods—certainly in their propaganda against different racial and religious groups. But the surest way to keep such a fanatical movement going is to persecute its members. They should be held strictly to the law; but violent and unprovoked attacks upon the Klan are indefensible. All good citizens are bound to recognize the right of peaceable assembly and free speech. Recent Klan riots reflect discredit upon all who are responsible for them.

The British Coal Mining Problem

GREAT Britain seems to be going into the coal business, and awkwardly indeed. It comes out of threatened strike. For several weeks William C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the Admiralty, had vainly tried to mediate between the coal mine owners and the miners in an effort to reach an agreement on wages and avert a threatened general strike. Then the Premier, Stanley Baldwin, assumed the rôle of mediator. As master of the great iron foundry of Baldwin's, Ltd., the Premier is said to understand industrial problems on both sides, and he has a deep-seated sympathy, we are told, with the workers.

A court of inquiry set up by the Government made its report on the coal mining situation. It declared against "a method of fixing wages which allows indefinite dimunition"; that "wages at some agreed minimum rate must be charged before profits are taken"; that "there is room for improving the efficiency of the industry"; that "further collective action on the part of the collieries would enable facilities and resources to be used in common to greater advantage and would promote more economic working." The report said further: "It is also for consideration whether the industry should remain in isolation or co-ordinated with other enterprises."

Mr. Baldwin tried to work out an agreement on the basis of this report. But the miners were bound to strike unless the owners canceled their notice to end the existing wage agreement, and refused to accept the proposed cut in wages while prices are above the pre-war level, which would mean, they said, a return to the worse than intolerable pre-war conditions. The owners asked how they could pay wages at the present scale when the coal industry is losing millions of dollars a month.

Premier Baldwin solved the immediate problem of averting a strike and lockout eight hours before they were due. But he piled up some bigger problems unsolved. He promised that the Government would subsidize the coal industry for nine months from Aug. 1. Wages will be kept up and profits for the owners will be paid. That sounds pretty expensive for the Government —no one knows how expensive—and evidently the people, already distressingly overtaxed, will have to pay still heavier taxes. A dangerous precedent has been set. Other industries may demand subvention under threat of strike; for example, in the railway and transport industries. Of course the Government headed by Premier Baldwin has come under violent attack by the opposition.

The coal mining problem is to be studied by a royal commission, which will seek a scientific remedy for its problems. Meantime, unemployment continues, with Government-paid benefits (doles) increasingly a serious and unwholesome burden in England. Is Government ownership coming?

It is easy to criticize but difficult to point the way to economic and industrial readjustment. No permanently successful method will be found until trade flows more freely in the world markets and the burden of taxation is reduced for keeping military and naval establishments. The problem, to a large degree, is an international problem.

On Being a Contributing Editor

By Gaius Glenn Atkins, D.D., Contributing Editor

I HAVE never clearly understood what being a contributing editor means. We lend distinction, of course, to the first page of The Congregationalist, though we do crowd the Table of Contents to the back cover. We might even at first glance seem to give the suggestion of too much weight. If The Congregationalist were a sailing craft a seaman would be tempted to say that "she was down by the head" with editors, but since our weight is largely moral the paper keeps an even keel.

A contributing editor naturally always reads the periodical which so honors him, from cover to cover, feeling strongly that it is a publication to be trusted for its excellent judgment. Those issues in which his—or her, I beg Miss Woolley's pardon—contributions appear are generally read twice, and a natural uncertainty as to when they will appear or whether they will appear at all makes our denominational organ an eagerly awaited guest at the contributing editorial desk. We may also reasonably be expected to pay our subscriptions promptly and always say a good word for the paper.

But the most significant thing is the reaction of the position upon the contributing editor himself. We are, if I may say so, folk of resource with our pens or typewriters or stenographers; we administer colleges and write books and preach sermons and govern a state. When we were approached by the management and asked to write once a quarter, we very likely felt that our opulent genius was being limited. We felt equal to the whole editorial page once a week. Now I cannot speak for my associates, but I shall end my term quite humbly. If I had the whole editorial page I would not know what to do with it; once a quarter is a strain on my invention.

Most of us indulge in fond imaginings of what we could do with the other man's job. We know the difficulty of our own from the inside; the constant call for seasoned judgment, the weight of responsibility which never lifts, the endless drain upon our resource, and the weariness which attends creative absorption even in simple things. But the other person's work is likely to look easy, and when our own is grown wearing through much confinement to it, or trying through some want of success in it, we persuade ourselves we could do something else better; or else in answer to some unsatisfied pressure of our own spirits we crave new forms of self-expression.

But it commonly cannot be done. There are in the conduct of any task numberless contributing experiences which are the final secret of any creative mastery, and if a man has won this funded faculty in any one thing through inner fitness, time, and training, he ought to be content. I used to sail with born seafaring men who could steer a boat from the feel of the wind on their faces and leave a wake like a straight edge when my wake would, as they kindly said, "break a snake's back." Who can estimate what a wealth of experience makes possible the unconscious response of tiller touch to wind and wave in sailing even a thirty foot sloop till he tries it himself.

We are rarely conscious of our dependence upon our own funded faculty in our life enterprises until we venture outside their frontiers. Then we are pulled up short and a truer understanding of this would save us from those heady adventures into other fields of action which too often cost us dear. Being a contributing editor gives one a saving sense of one's own limitations.

It should also give one a much needed respect for the other man's work. An inconsiderate impatience with other people is one of the outstanding phases of present-day temper. Labor generally is coming in for its full share. The men who dig our sewers and build our sky-scrapers and draw off cauldrons of white hot metal and run red bars through rollers get more blame than praise for their wearing toil. It might not be a bad idea to make us all contributing workmen for a season. If we should blister our hands with a pick-axe once a quarter, or tend one of Mr. Ford's lathes on the midnight shift for a week, or play tag with red hot rivets on a steel beam twenty stories up, we might end with a new sympathy and respect for our fellow workman.

Or else the workman might be a contributing employer for a time, co-ordinating complex processes, and keeping a great organization in action, and meeting the pay roll on time, and sustaining credits, and forecasting markets, and selling his output in a competitive market. He also would be kinder in his judgments after a revealing turn at such an avocation.

We are impatient of our politicians and governors and the like. Suppose we should become contributing mayors and governors and presidents, and have Detroit or Massachusetts or the United States in hand for a day. We would doubtless come down from such high places with a new understanding of the welter of forces at the center of which our executives and legislators stand, and very likely more tolerant of their sins of omission and commission and with a sound respect for what they actually get done.

I am gaining, as a contributing editor, a new respect for editors. I do not say editorials—at least not unqualifiedly. It is possible that the experience may hereafter diminish the respect we have for such pronouncement. "Why," we shall be saying, "should we take this judgment as infallible? We were once editors pro tem. ourselves. They must be human."

But we shall respect the pen—or typewriter—which has no time to linger over words and caress phrases, but which must "go" from start to finish and say its say clearly and with popular appeal, and respect still more the mind with hooks to it which catches out of the current of events the themes worth writing about, and the changing phases of human interests and gets through them in a telling way, stopping when it is done. Being a contributing editor is particularly good for a preacher.

I extend this sympathetic understanding to the editors of this publication. They do once a week what the rest of us can't manage once in three months. They steer a fair course through the welter of theological and social opinion. They know that plain speaking on almost any theme is likely to peeve somebody and lose a subscriber when most religious papers have no subscribers to spare, and they do it constantly, wisely, and well. If the denomination as a whole were made contributing editors we should have amongst us a new appreciation of The Congregationalist. There is no end to a line like this. It would help the churches if preachers should become contributing laymen and laymen contributing parsons.

The hard attitude of America toward Europe might be much softened if we all should become for a season contributing Englishmen, so sharing the sorrow of homes in almost every one of which there was left a vacant place, and the economic stress of great industrial centers which face demoralized world markets with diminishing natural resource and bear a burden of taxation which takes almost a third of the average income; or contributing Frenchmen with a like burden of sorrow and an old, old fear; or even contributing Germans sitting amidst the moral wreckage of pride and empire; or possibly contributing Russians buried for a season beneath the entire ruin of society.

The surest way to understand another man's outlook is to share his experience. Here is an open and not too much travelled road to a solidity of human fellowship we are still far from possessing. Perhaps this is what a wise man meant long ago when he said, "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

Baxter the Puritan: A Pastor of Pastors*

SOMEWHERE, though we cannot now recall where, or by whom expressed, we came recently across the judgment of a very competent critic that, despite many rivals in its field, Richard Baxter's The Reformed Pastor still remains, after the lapse of nearly three centuries, the best discussion of the pastoral life and its relationships. This opinion is reflected by Baxter's latest, and exceedingly able, biographer, Dr. Powicke, in the conclusion of the preface of a volume devoted largely to the study of Baxter's own pastorate at Kidderminster, a period and phase of Baxter's life hitherto inadequately treated by his biographers, though Baxter himself, as Dr. Powicke points out, regarded the Kidderminster pastorate as the chief work of his life. Dr. Powicke says in his preface, after summing up the incentives toward this valuable study of Baxter:

Nor can I help setting down the conviction that in Baxter the Pastor—which includes Preacher—a modern pastor may still find the richest possible incentive to all

*A Life of the Reverend Richard Baxter, 1615-1691, by Frederick J. Powicke (Houghton Mifflin. $4.00).

Richard Baxter: Puritan and Mystic, by A. R. Ladell (S. P. C. K., London; New York, Macmillan).

that is best and highest in his vocation, whatever may be the width of his difference from Baxter the Theologian.

The Soul of the Puritan

Baxter was born in the parish of High Ercall, ten miles east of Shrewsbury, five years before the Pilgrims came to America. His life until its close in 1691 spanned the stormy period of the Revolution and Protectorate and the new perils for nonconformists of the period of the Restoration. Nor was Baxter in the closing years of a saintly life to escape these perils. When almost seventy and so ill that he was scarcely able to stand before the court to make his plea he was arrested and hailed before the notorious Jeffreys, pronounced guilty of sedition, assessed a fine far beyond his power to pay, and imprisoned. When James II, out of policy, chose a more lenient course, and had Baxter released after-two years, the saintly pastor's life work was already ended, for he was too much weakened for further toil.

The tragic, yet glorious, climax in Baxter's life was the natural result of his early choice to suffer with the people of God, and this choice was all the more noble in view of the fact, well verified in Baxter's trial, that he might have had the highest preferment—and a bishopric—had he chosen to conform.

Yet Baxter was never really a nonconformist—an independent certainly, even to some extent an individualist, but not temperamentally a nonconformist. His nonconformity was of moral and spiritual necessity, not of preference. His passion was for unity and catholicity, and he never shared the sectarian consciousness that has been all too conspicuous in many nonconformists. Yet Baxter became a nonconformist through choice occasioned by moral necessity. At about twenty years of age he became acquainted with some "very zealous godly nonconformists in Shrewsbury." The prosecution of these godly people by the Bishops for departure from prescribed order of worship strongly moved the young and serious-minded Christian, to whom as yet conformity had been a matter of course. He sympathized with the persecuted nonconformists, but his own conclusions were at first so favorable to conformity as to lead him to subscribe to and accept episcopal ordination. It was an age, however, when even tolerant men, conformable in temper, were forced into independency and nonconformity by the implacable intolerance of ecclesiastical bigotry; and Baxter, if never fully a nonconformist in temper, became most thoroughly a nonconformist by conviction.

A Pioneer in Religious Education

Touching our own age at many points this saintly minister of the seventeenth century seems most significant in two respects. At a time when we are disposed to regard ourselves as specialists, if not innovators and discoverers, in what we call "religious education," which tends constantly to become a department of study, and a phase of the church's work, instead of the deepest and most important function of the whole church, it is worth while to consider the thoroughgoing and effective way in which this Puritan pastor three centuries ago planned for the careful instruction of his parish. Dr. Powicke has gone into such matters with considerable detail, based upon painstaking investigation of Baxter's pastoral activities. He says that for a period of five years, except for a day or two, Baxter was apparently not absent from his parish, and that with his assistants he practiced what he had declared it to be, in his sermon before Cromwell, a chief duty of the Government to support—the instruction of the people in Christian truth. "He had become an enthusiast for catechizing," says Dr. Powicke, and describing his methods during these years spent entirely for, and with, his people he adds that these years were "the richest in self-devotion and results" of Baxter's whole ministry.

Then, too, Baxter is significant for our time in the way in which in an age of controversy and violent partisan reaction he appears as a man of no party, or as above party. Not that Baxter was a man of compromising or weak spirit, or actuated by any sense of expediency. On the contrary he was a man of determined individuality and with the courage of his opinions. But he perceived the high ideal of true religion and sound patriotism above the turmoil of strife in church and state, and he denounced the narrowness and intolerance of his own side with something of the firmness with which he opposed the intolerance of ecclesiastical authority.

It is in the hope of such vision that lifts men, even when they are submerged in the conflicts and controversies of their time, above the field of strife that the way of progress lies. Probably the most optimistic phase of present-day life is found in the fact that in spite of the seeming dominance of partisan bitterness between fundamentalist and modernist there never was a time when so many people were seeking to find and apply the vision attained only by rising above party. Men of such purpose will find inspiration in Baxter's example in an earlier age.

Was Baxter a Mystic?

The title of Mr. Ladell's volume is interesting in view of Dr. Powicke's blunt assertion concerning Baxter that "he was no mystic" (p. 126). Both biographers are right. No man is quite devoid of mysticism, and while Dr. Powicke has concentrated largely upon Baxter the practical pastor, Mr. Ladell has related his study more toward Baxter's later years and his general place as saint and writer in the religious development of the seventeenth century. Mr. Ladell's book has special interest as a study of an outstanding nonconformist, and in some measure of nonconformity, by a loyal adherent of the Established Church. A mere nonconformist reads with some amusement his anxious disclaimer in the beginning of his volume lest his sympathetic interpretation of Baxter and his times should be regarded as indicating any personal nonconformity on the part of the author. But this is, in fact, an evidence of the naïve honesty which Mr. Ladell brings to his task. His study is more general and less in detail than that of Dr. Powicke but it is fair, illuminating, and inspiring, a most delightful little volume. Mr. Ladell perceives that "Puritanism emerges, not merely as an obsession, not merely as a revolutionary and disintegrating force, but as an ideal positive and inspiring, and above all, deeply, fundamentally spiritual." "The creative aspect of Puritanism," he says, "is all too generally overlooked," and he upsets some rather common notions in his claim that the Puritans conspicuously "pursued happiness," sharing with all the mystics the quest of "joy in God."

The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churche

VIII. Sustaining Friendly Relations with the Catholics

By Professor Daniel Evans, D.D.
Harvard Theological School

IT may seem an impossible task, and indeed undesirable, to try to sustain friendly relations with the Catholics in view of the fact that there are these great differences between them and us. If we think a man or a group or an institution wrong, how can we have friendly relations with him or them? How shall they walk together unless they be agreed? Well if the difference were moral, then it would be difficult; but if it is primarily intellectual, then it can be done. If we think the Catholics bad folk, and if they think us bad folk, then there's no use of talking about friendly relations. If, however, we think they are good folk, in their way Christains, as we are in our way, then it is possible to sustain friendly relations. The intelligent Catholics do not think the sincere Protestants bad, but more or less mistaken; and intelligent Protestants should not think sincere Catholics bad, but mistaken. A Catholic writer, in beginning his series of five articles dealing with Catholic truth and the unfortunate situations that have arisen amongst Protestants, writes: "In all charity therefore and prayerfully we enter this field with the trust that God may open the hearts of his separated, erring children to the teachings of his Holy Church." And in the concluding article he writes:

"To follow error is not always to be evil; to possess the truth does not always make a saint. Evil and sanctity are of the Soul; error and truth are objects of the mind. The judgment of the Soul is God's alone. . . . With due restriction, therefore, of the moral right or wrong involved, and with all reverence for the personal dictates of individual conscience, judgment is passed here upon the Anglican schism."

On such a basis it is possible, desirable, and justifiable to sustain friendly relations.

It must be confessed that the actual attitudes of many Protestants towards Catholics are far from friendly. Some persons are very much prejudiced against all things and persons Catholic. Their minds are warped so that they cannot pass a true judgment; their eyes are askew so that they cannot see straight. They are ready to believe the worst possible about them, and they take a bad instance as typical. They cannot see a priest without thinking he is "a bad one." Bodies distorted by disease are pathetic sights; minds distorted by prejudice are tragic sights; and from such minds we should pray: "Good Lord, deliver us."

There are others who are suspicious of all Catholics. They think the Catholics always have ulterior motives for their apparently disinterested actions; they always are looking for advantages for the church or Pope; they are ready to believe any wild story about them, such as stacking guns in the basements of their churches to be ready for the onslaught upon the Protestants.

Others are very fearful of them. They have a Catholic phobia-complex. They see red whenever they think of them. They lie awake nights in dread of them. One of my parishioners once dreamed on three successive nights of seeing swords and blood in the sky, which he interpreted as omens of a Catholic uprising.

These various attitudes culminate in antagonism. They are always against them, in all their plans and purposes, in all their business and social relations, and also in their religious work. To be against the Catholics is the first article of their creed religiously believed and practiced! There are more anti-Catholics than those who join the Ku Klux Klan.

It must be said that there is some justification for these various attitudes. Certain historical incidents, some present Catholic claims, and the actual conduct of some Catholics give the occasion for these attitudes. No one knows this better, and regrets it more sincerely than the intelligent and loyal Catholic. It is the penalty good Catholics and the present Catholic Church pay for wrongs done in the past. These wrongs, however, terrible as they were, were not typical, nor did they express the better mind of the Catholics.

To sustain the friendly relations with the Catholics it is necessary that we have an appreciation of the better and finer things in the Catholic Church. It is well for us to make certain distinctions. Since the Catholic Church covers the wide earth, we s not to think it is just the same in char ter, temper, work, and influence in all plac It is better in some places than in othe Once in Rome we were going through t churches, and joined an English group Catholics, who discovered we were Ame cans and Protestants, and one quiet, inte gent, devout Catholic expressed the des that we should not think the English Cat lics were like the Italian. Certainly England and in the United States the Ca olics are at their best, and as we wish be judged at our best, so should we jud them.

We should also make a distinction, whi most of them, perhaps, would not be willi to make,—a distinction between the faith and the hierarchy. If we think the hi archy wrong and dangerous, we should jud differently those faithful souls who are t salt of the earth,—and of the Catho Church itself, amongst whom are both prie and lay folk.

Moreover, there is much which we can s should highly value. Never was there more efficient organization of religion; where else does one find such histori mindedness, which takes account of t past, and serenely awaits the coming yea no group of religious persons are more lo to the church, faithful in their attendan self-denying in their support, reverent their services, and democratic in their pri leges in the church; no saints more tr pious by whom the church has its best ponents and strongest influence and strongest attraction for others; nowh else is there a greater fund and richer he tage of profound religious experience. view of these facts, we must gladly ackno edge that in spite of all its defects, spirit of God has found a habitation in Catholic Church as in the other churches

The growing recognition of the good in Protestant churches by the Catholics, and the Catholic Church by the Protestants, making for a more friendly feeling betw them. The War did much to make th known to each other and to appreciate e other, and though there has come much action since, yet we cannot forget those b ter days and more friendly relations, s there is a yearning in many hearts for th return.

It is possible, too, for co-operative eff for the furtherance of common causes. specting each others differences, traditio and religious requirements, it is possible come into friendly and helpful relations all parts of our country. This does not quire that we abandon our principles, depreciate their significance and value, be silent when occasion requires their ut ance; nor should we want the Catholics do so. When we are loyal to our own p tions, we will have better and deeper in ence on each other, and we will work a larger Christianity than either has so succeeded in doing.

Francis E. Clark

By Clarence A. Vincent

The mustard seed you planted years ago
Is now a tree where birds can build their nest;
At first the plant was small, its growth was slow,
Today it shades the thousands in their quest.
With God, you builded better than you knew;
For Christ and his own church you toiled and prayed;
In every land the workers, strong and true,
Give witness to the record you have made.
And through it all, as others blame or praise,
A humble spirit we have always seen
In you, and heartily our thanks we raise
This hour for the fine spirit which has been.

We hail you, Friend, true Leader of our Youth,
As now you place the mantle of your power
On one who, loyal to the right and truth,
Has proved him worthy of this fateful hour.
May that kind Providence which is your Guide,
Still lead in the eventful years that wait
Both you and her who always at your side
Has stood, and him who enters now the gate
Of opportunity, and the great host
That he shall lead to win this wondrous world
To God's dear Son, and, through the Holy Ghost,
The banner of the truth shall be unfurled
In every corner of this waiting earth,
'Til justice, mercy, and a world-wide peace
Shall bring to every life its priceless worth,
And every captive find a glad release.

Malpractice Upon Youth

What Mr. Bryan Saw in Education

By Theodore M. Shipherd
Scarsdale, New York

THE American Constitution, written by ex-Solicitor General James M. Beck, ells at a certain point in the story of the nonths during which the Constitution was eing formed in Philadelphia, of the two arties there developed. One party repre- ented the small colonies, the other party he strong colonies. Each party had issued s ultimatum to the other. There was a eadlock and the failure of the whole enter- rise seemed to loom into sight. Then it was hat Benjamin Franklin took the floor and nade the motion that the Convention stand djourned for three days and that during he recess each man seek conference and etter acquaintance with men holding differ- nt views than his own. When they came ogether they composed their differences, nd as a result, the Constitution of the United States was given its final form and started upon its beneficent service to man- kind.

Partisanship is one of the common de- lights of mortals and very frequently this delight in partisanship prevents the intelli- gent action of which we are really capable.

Party zest has been having its way in rather extreme fashion in recent years and months, particularly in racial and religious discussions.

It may not be an inopportune time just now to mark clearly what Mr. Bryan was fighting for at Dayton. The prejudice en- gendered in Baptist and Presbyterian circles and more laterly in the Dayton trial has done much to obscure the issue which was really central to the instinct and insight of the silenced Commoner.

What Mr. Bryan Saw

More than a dozen years ago my work threw me into intimate contact with the city and university life of Lincoln, where Mr. Bryan lived during the greater part of his active life. Mr. Bryan was in those days always among people, full of good stories, a delightful neighbor, constantly speaking and writing, and influencing thou- sands of people all the year round. In many ways he regarded himself the advocate of multitudes of people who followed his lead- ing. His thought was on simple and direct lines. His speech was clear and simple. Anybody could understand him and though life grew to be complicated and intricate he never saw it in that light.

He had a simple religious faith—the sort of faith the average man has. He took the Bible, what he understood of it, trusted God for the rest. To doubt was agnostic and atheistic. Mr. Bryan's understanding of cur- rent thought was not profound. His cure was therefore not adequate. But he did sense a situation which needs to be realized by liberals particularly—a situation which has not as yet been worthily treated.

Mr. Bryan felt the wrong which is often done to students who come from homes and churches where the Bible and revealed or Roman Catholic religion has been kept warm and highly emotionalized.

He knew that for years it has been a com- mon experience for such students to go into classrooms where the natural sciences are taught, or into the departments of philosophy and psychology, and in a few months' time to show the confusion and depression result- ing from the ridicule heaped upon the things to which they had been devoted. He be- lieved that the emotionalized beliefs of his youth, stubbornly held, would keep any boy or girl sweet and wholesome on into the later years. He feared too much agnosticism. He knew that the health of the mind and the soul is lost when cynicism sets in and floods the nature of any person. He saw partly tutored students of science who had lost their own religious insights and were partisans of fragmentary science, jeering at their pupils and the ancient formulas of their childhood. He knew how this treat- ment frequently leads to moral shipwreck among students.

The pulpit and the classroom teacher have imagined themselves as antagonists in too many instances. Childhood has been fodder for one and youth fodder for the other.

Malpractice Upon Youth

Mr. Bryan saw here a clear case of mal- practice upon youth. From my own observa- tion and experience with college students and college graduates I know that he sensed a very real fact. Not a few school men see and deplore this malpractice. Some schools of higher learning do not tolerate it. Some colleges give their students just treatment by using only men with religious insight as teachers of science, philosophy, and psy- chology.

Mr. Bryan felt the wrong. He did not diagnose or understand all the causes; he saw simply the carnage, and his cure was revealed religion unchallenged by these crude assaults of men who imagine that science is a substitute for religion. Mr. Bryan was unfortunately backed by many short-course and unequipped ministers. He was also backed by some very alert and able men who are still warmly emotionalized at the point of the thinking which comes to us from the days of Anselm and John Calvin.

It deserves to be made clear that Mr. Bryan sensed an inadequate and unfair treatment of such youth as have inadequate training in church and home. He saw the results of sharp rebuke and ridicule from teachers who did not understand that the transfer of the devotions of childhood can and should be carried on with the insight of a father instead of the Bolshevik harsh- ness of a mere propagandist.

May it not be that now is the time to recognize that we live in days of profound intellectual change? It is a delicate and gra- cious task to shift our emotionalized loy- alties, and, though some adults take it quietly, others refuse flatly to adjust their thinking. Youth is more tender and deserves to have the transfer conducted with affec- tion and understanding by people who feel the glory of the revelation of God in the world of matter and energy. The pupil and the teacher should see that the ways of revelation through a pure heart and forth- right personal life are still supreme in their value.

If this malpractice upon youth is fully realized, Mr. Bryan will have fought his fight to useful ends, and to him we shall all be grateful.

Tribute to "Sonny Boy"

One of the rare gems of newspaper literature has come from the pen of E. E. Kelley, editor of the "Grass Roots" column of the Topeka Daily Capital, who writes in the Garden City Herald of the departure of his grandson, Thomas Charlton Kelley II, five years old, who was run over and instantly killed by an auto- mobile in Garden City recently:

You were such a little tyke, Sonny Boy, to fare forth all alone on the Great Adventure— the very first of my line to engage in such a quest since your grandmother and I began life's journey together just 43 years ago today. But you had no doubt whatever that the far coun- try is a beautiful place—a place of many man- sions, and pleasant shade by cool-flowing rivers on whose banks little boy angels can play while no one fears they may come to grief; a place of joyous music and triumphant song; of rare fruits and fragrant flowers. You had no doubt of all these things, Sonny Boy, no doubt what- ever.

In an instant, Sonny Boy, you were invested with eternal youth. We who stay behind may grow old, and the years may come when we shall say, "I have no pleasure in them." But to us, you will always be the little five-year-old boy filled with joy in the new-born day. Al- ways with us will be the memory of your love for the fragrance of blooming spiraea which you visioned as banks of snow; of your trans- lation of the mocking-bird's song into language of men; of the imagery of speech that gave us the fond hope that one day there would be a poet and writer who would give glory to the family name. Now it is one of the things that can never be. But there is a recompense. Through the weeks and months and years you will always be to us the same little boy, eter- nally young in an eternal June. And some time, Sonny Boy, when the little boy of some other father and mother has grown up, and has fallen into evil ways, your own mother and daddy may have a deep thankfulness that you are still their little boy and can never, never, cause them an earthly pang or heartache.

You were lain to rest, Sonny Boy, under heaps and heaps of the flowers you loved. As the fragrant coverlet was spread over you a mocking bird sang his farewell song to you from a near-by tree-top and that evening the new moon—a tiny sickle of a new moon—peeped from behind a curtain of clouds to see that all was well with you; and the storm king kept watch over you through the night with his many flashlights, and his drums were rolling as his marshaled clouds freshened your cover- let of flowers. So good-bye, Sonny Boy, for a little while, with the wish that we may meet again where every morning has the gladness of a Junetime morning. And when in the even- tide I tell the other little folks, as we circle around the fireplace, the story of "The Little Red Hen," or of "The Ugly Duckling," or else read aloud certain poems which delight little folks with their rhythmic roll, I shall think of you as being somewhere there in the shadows cast by the flickering firelight, listen- ing too. But perhaps, Sonny Boy, you know all this as I write it down.

Therefore, O Lord, I will not falter,
Nay but I ask it, nay but I desire,
Lay on my lips thine embers of the altar,
Seal with the sting and furnish with the fire.
—Frederick W. H. Myers.

Home Missionary Society's Centenary

The Congregational Home Missionary Society completes one hundred years of Christian work

By Frederick L. Fagley

THE Congregational Home Missionary Society will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of its founding, at Washington, D. C., in October with the twenty-first biennial meeting of the National Council of Congregational Churches.

This society was organized in New York in 1826 under the name of "The American Home Missionary Society." It was formed to promote churches, schools, and Sunday schools in the then pioneer country of Western New York and Vermont. For some years previous to this the United Domestic Missionary Society had been carrying on work in these sections and the workers of the Domestic Society were the first to be enrolled under the American Society. The work in the early days was supported by four denominations, the Reformed Dutch, the Associated Reformed, the Presbyterian, and the Congregational. But as the years went by the other denominations withdrew to form their own denominational bodies and thus it came about that by 1893 the Society became the Congregational Home Missionary Society.

At the centennial meeting to be held in October, the history and accomplishments of the Society will be reviewed. It will be brought out that while at the beginning the Society had only 169 workers, it has now 1,367, that at the beginning the workers were paid $83.00 per year while today the average salary received by home missions workers is $1,305. Of this amount the Society pays on the average $778.

In the reports of the General Secretary, Dr. E. M. Halliday, and of Dr. F. L. Moore, the Secretary of Missions, the work of the Society will be described and the needs of the future presented. In his report Dr. Halliday says, "Total expenditures of the Society in the first year of its existence were $13,984. Last year they were $1,063,149. Additions to churches during 99 years of the Society's life gives a total of 704,674 who through the ministry of missionaries have been brought into church membership."

Changing Conditions

The past century has seen such a transformation in the material aspects of civilization as were undreamed of when the Society was organized. Three years after its founding, the first short stretch of railroad began operation in America, but for many long decades thereafter its missionaries were dependent upon the slower locomotion provided by saddle-horse, buckboard, and stage coach. Today the use of the automobile and the railroads makes the transportation problem comparatively easy of solution. Formerly when workers went forth to their fields, they did not always know when, if ever, they might be able to take the long, arduous journey back to the old home, nor could they be certain of other than a precarious and long-delayed correspondence with the dear ones left behind. Today the mails go everywhere, and few are the mission stations which have not, within easy reach, a direct physical connection, through countless miles of shining wire, with homes and friends, while if necessity demands, the homeward journey can be made both quickly and securely. For scores of years the missionary labored in isolated homes and isolated communities. Now he finds newspapers and magazines and the radio when he makes his round, while the automobile and good roads have freed the people and given them a wider range.

All this does not mean that home missions have lost their challenge to self-sacrifice or that people no longer require the missionary's help. It indicates, however, that conditions in missionary service are in constant flux and that the Society must be alert to adapt its methods to the changing life to which it administers.

Conspicuous, too, among the demands which are made upon the Society are those arising out of the migration and immigration of peoples. In the widespread movement of Negroes from the South to the North in recent years, new social and religious problems have been brought to many communities. In the needs of seasonal itinerants who follow the crops, often as entire families, the Society has a field for worth-while service. In the flow of newcomers to this country from other lands, there is an opportunity for Christian helpfulness which the Society is constantly endeavoring to make use of.

While it is true that the constructive results of the Society's work are not all susceptible of statistical tabulation, it is nevertheless fair to expect that earnest and persistent effort will show in increased church membership, continuous recruiting for the Sunday School, the organization of new churches, and the coming to self-support of others. During the last two years 22,258 persons have joined missionary churches, 14,492 of them on confession of faith; the Sunday School enrollment at the close of the period was 121,304; 49 new churches came into being, and 67 reached a point where they are no longer dependent on missionary aid.

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday

Total net receipts of the Society from all sources for the last two years were $2,162,053. Total contributions from churches and individuals were $1,429,549. The area of this great "national territory" is more than three-fourths that of the entire mainland; its population is some forty millions.

The Spirit of Home Missions

Dr. F. L. Moore, the Secretary of Missions, in speaking of the "Spirit of Home Missions Today," says:

When our New England fathers a hundred years ago organized a Missionary Society to send the Gospel to the West, they little imagined what forces they were setting in motion. The impulse that prompted them was twofold —one, an increasing appreciation of the meaning of the words of the Master, "Go ye into all the world"—the other, the human appeal that came from the settlements North and West where their own children had gone as pioneers. It is a striking fact that the first home missionaries under the National Home Missionary Society went to Vermont, then they followed the great migrations to Western New York, the Western Reserve, and so on as the country opened with each succeeding decade. The pioneer days lasted a bare three-quarters of a century, years filled with struggles, victories, hardships, heroisms. The rewards have been great and the accomplishments far reaching as churches, academies, colleges, and universities have been established by the home missionary from ocean to ocean and from the Lakes to the Gulf. The movement that started with the purpose of planting a few churches in places of recognized need has grown into a nation-wide movement little dreamed of by those who gave their first dollars for the work.

The spirit of home missions has been that of the strong endeavoring to bear the burdens of the weak; the desire to give others a chance has always been uppermost. This pioneer spirit, undaunted by obstacles, calling for a courage equal to the emergency, has continued from year to year. Today though the task has changed in character, the need for service and ministry among the needy people of our homeland is as insistent as ever and the Home Missionary Society is seeking in every way for the upbuilding of character, the spread of virtue, and the cultivation of the sterling elements of personal and public worth which should characterize a good American citizen.

A Service Prayer

By Mary S. Thayer

Dear Lord, we come to this, thy great new time,
Hearts bowed in awe, and so we kneel and pray:
Show us its meaning, set us on the way,
So we walk boldly through its dust and grime.

Grant us the vision so we see aright,
Give us high courage, faith to work or wait,
Make all thy children, humble ones and great,
Workers together, conquerors in thy might.

And these, thy lads who gladly stood the test
Of drudgery's toil, of danger and of pain;
O may they feel there's still a world to gain
Ere armor drops, or lance is put at rest.

Seal them for service through the coming days,
Till wrongs are righted, fear and sorrow cease;
Make them thy bearers, bringing glad release
To all in bondage, with their Christlike ways.

And there thy lads, who broken lie and sad,
Touch with thy pity; help and cleanse and heal,
To their fine service set thy holy seal,
And give them work to do to make them glad.

And there thy lads who girded on the sword
And dropped it, called thy larger tasks to share:
These radiant souls so eager, young, and fair,
They serve with thee; and we, we praise thee, Lord.

O may the spirit of these deathless ones
Fill with its glory all our humble life,
So we be strong, and eager for the strife,
All loving, working, serving, as God's sons.

O God above, the days loom large with fate,
May all thy children hear the ringing call:
We come for service; let no tasks appall,
Till Heaven's Peace enters through earth's open gate.

"In my young days it was a sign of good breeding in a man to keep his cigar or cigarette in his hand and not in his mouth. Nowadays I constantly see a man slouching into a public place, such as a restaurant, with six inches of cigar or cigarette-holder protruding from his face. Personally I would as soon think of coming in with my hat on. And of course what looks bad in a man looks worse in a woman."—From "Paid in Full," by Ian Hay.

Who Help Themselves—in Greece

Work of the American Friends of Greece

By Dr. E. O. Watson

A TINY, ragged tent on a wind-swept hillside. In the tent a woman sitting on the ground nursing a baby. Big, black, frightened eyes in a pale, shrunken face. Another woman with mad, inflamed eyes and matted hair stoops over the first. Near them is hunched a man, the very picture of wretchedness and dejection. . . . They are Greeks, refugees from Asia Minor through the exchange of populations they have been able to bring with them to Greece only a small trunk and three rugs. One of the rugs they have given for the tent. They have nowhere to go, and they are facing hunger and death. . . . These are three. There are half a million like them.

There are no longer any Christian Minorities, for what is left of them have been rejoined, perforce, to the majorities in Europe. Up to the time of the Lausanne Treaty, Greece took in the vast hordes of refugees who fled before the oncoming Turk. After the Treaty, with its clause stipulating that the Christian population of Asia Minor should be exchanged for the Turkish population of Greece, hundreds of thousands more came to Greece, the only country that would take them in. And more are coming.

This has meant an increase in the population of Greece of fully thirty per cent. Greece is not a rich country either in land or in money. The refugees have come destitute, starving, half-clothed, and ill. The League of Nations has appointed a commission to settle those of them that can still till the soil on land that the Greek Government has given. There are many, however, those who have spent their lives in cities, merchants and their families, professional men and their wives and daughters, who know nothing about farming and who are not physically fitted for it. These must be given the opportunity to earn a living in some fashion. In time the men may find a place in their own work, but the women must work likewise, and they have never worked before. Work or starve. What is to be done?

Coundouriotis Camp

It is to the solution of this problem that the American Friends of Greece, an organization with its headquarters in Washington, has addressed itself. This society has labored, and is laboring, to establish workshops where refugee women who are unfitted for farm work may earn a living by making those things for pay that they once made for their own pleasure. For example:

Greeks in America gave the money to establish Coundouriotis Camp. This camp, or village, consists of about 300 little one-room houses. About thirty of the houses are in a block with one roof, like a barracks. Each house is some ten feet square, with one window, a dirt floor, and, usually, a roof that is beginning to leak. Even so the houses are palaces to the refugee who has been sleeping with his family in a flea-infested, cootie-laden, vile-smelling, water-soaked warehouse in the Piræus. About 2,500 people were selected to live in Camp Coundouriotis. They came chiefly from the bathing houses at Phaleron that are built out over the sea. With the rain coming in overhead, and the winter sea below, pneumonia was rampant, and the people had to be moved; so moved they were to Coundouriotis Camp, it being understood that each tiny room was to house five people, a very slightly larger one, ten people, and that each family was to pay from 10 to 12 drachmas (20 to 25 cents) a month as rent just so soon as they found work.

Looms for weaving carpets and cloth were bought, and some of the people were given work to do, but the funds of the organization were too small. Work had to come from outside, and so fathers, mothers, and children tramped to Athens, seeking work in a city already packed to overflowing with refugees, in the search for life.

It was then that the American Friends of Greece came to the rescue. When they saw how many thousands of women and girls were hopelessly pleading for work, going from door to door, praying people to buy their embroideries, they decided that they would do most good by giving these people the work they craved sorely.

The first order was placed in the Coundouriotis workshop. There an organization was found that was already running smoothly, but without capital left to continue work for more than twenty girls. Arrangements were at once made for twenty more to be taken on the following Monday. The forewoman went through the camp and chose the twenty women and girls who were suffering the most from hunger. Those who did not know how were taught to sew, and today the American Friends of Greece are keeping fifty workers busy there.

The shop itself is merely a single room about twenty feet square with no furnishings except benches. The girls and women range in age from eleven to that point at which the sight is beginning to dim. They are embroidering little Greek bags with designs taken from the old pottery of Rhodes. Beside the shop is the weaving room where the cloth is woven by women who in happier days wove their own materials, but never worked for hire. Some weave the beautiful, natural silk into the right width for scarfs, while others weave cotton into material for bags and dresses. They have found work to do. It is this or starve.

Several workshops have been established by the American Friends of Greece, employing a total of about one thousand women and girls, but many more will have to be established before the problem of saving the starving girls and women even approaches a solution. Meanwhile this solution is halted by the very practical question of money. Shops must be built and equipped. The refugees must be fed and housed. Raw materials must be bought, and the finished product must be marketed. The refugees in their very desperate plight must be helped to help themselves. They are willing and they are able, but, proverbially, bricks cannot be made without straw, and straw, or money, is lacking. An opportunity offers, not only to help these people to save their own lives, but to restore their self-respect, and to make them useful members of a Christian society. The immediate need for carrying on and extending this constructive relief work is direct contributions to the workshop fund. The main office of the American Friends of Greece, Inc., is 1038 Investment Building, Washington, D. C.

A Workshop of the American Friends of Greece

New Leader of Churches in Bay State

Rev. Frederick H. Page, D.D., of Waltham, has been elected President of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society. The election occurred on July 27, and in accordance with a plan adopted at the annual state meeting in Holyoke last May, the new president will give active full-time service beginning about Nov. 1. Dr. Page's associates are Dr. Frederick E. Emrich, Secretary Emeritus; Rev. John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewall, Treasurer.

Dr. Page has been pastor of First Church, Waltham, for the last 19 years, and has done a large and important work. His resignation will cause deep regret among the people of his church and community. The election to his new office was a complete surprise to Dr. Page. The choice is a wise and happy one.

The Temple

By G. Harrison Riley

Dedicated to Rollstone Church, Fitchburg, Mass.

And those who worship year by year and then pass on,
Shall leave within the very timbers here a spirit-power,
An unsensed gift, a help to each and every one,
A moral force that cumulative hour by hour,
Shall build a temple composite and strong,
Of all that human souls idealize;
A temple in each heart, enduring long,
The Brotherhood of Man to realize.

ALONG OUR STREAM OF FREEDOM (Ps. 124)

Coming Leaders

If one wonders if the standards for a higher church life upheld by leaders among colored Congregationalists are to be still upborne and carried to still higher heights, he should consider the many coming leaders of this group. I cannot name them all here. Without attempting a full list, I speak of three here, picked from as many different states.

Rev. S. O. B. Johnson

The first I mention is Rev. S. O. B. Johnson of Buffalo, N. Y., familiarly known by his friends as "S—O—B," and yet his type is very different from what his initials imply. A product of Talladega College, his chief work in the South was as assistant pastor at his Alma Mater. Seeing, however, a larger opportunity in the Empire State, he joined the migratory movement of his people northward, and at the call of the denomination came to Buffalo. Surmounting Herculean difficulties, he has at last succeeded in comfortably housing his flock, and now has the largest auditorium of any Congregational church in the city. This could not have been done, however, without the generous assistance of the city and state denominational agencies, with whose cordial co-operation he was favored.

Rev. S. O. Johnson

The new facilities, including opportunities for social service, have greatly enhanced the attractiveness of his work, especially among the younger folk and also among the devotees of fraternal societies, great numbers of which utilize his fine auditorium for special services. Mr. Johnson is blessed with a large family and great credit is due Mrs. Johnson for her loyal co-operation with all her little ones. As an expression of appreciation for his efforts, Mr. Johnson was recently made moderator of the local Congregational association, and at the recent state meeting at Jamestown, N. Y., he was the first man of his race to be made assistant moderator of that body. He presided with ease, dignity, and grace. It was at this meeting that the body voted while he was in the chair, to eliminate the suffix "colored" from certain churches.

Rev. Roland T. Heacock

Last fall I was called to Brockton, Mass., to assist in the ordination of Roland T. Heacock over the Lincoln Church. This I was especially glad to do, as it is very unusual to find a young colored man trained wholly in northern schools entering the ministry. Despite the fact that he was the son of a Fundamentalist clergyman, his examination showed him a progressive, thanks to the training of Yale Divinity. The entire fraternity of the denomination took part in his setting apart, and his people felt they had made a great find. I had the opportunity of being present on a recent Sunday when he finished his first year's work, and was pleased to note the indications of his leadership. The press was making generous notice of his work, the white community looked upon him as an asset, and his own people were enthusiastic in their co-operation, loading him down with presents and good will as he went off for his vacation. Added to his liberal training he saw service in the World War, and he is one of the coming leaders of his group—a faithful pastor, a fine preacher, and a community leader.

Rev. William L. Cash

From Massachusetts I go to Louisiana for another leader of promise, Rev. W. L. Cash of New Orleans. He, too, is the son of a minister, a Baptist rejoicing in the liberality of his child. Coming to Fisk, he got a broader vision, and became a Congregationalist, an experience not dissimilar to my own. Completing his course at Fisk, he went to Oberlin and got his B.D. His first pastorate was that at Savannah, where he did fine service in the development of the church Maxwell founded. Completing his ministry there he went to Chattanooga, Tenn., where he was leader of the church the late Rev. Joseph Smith founded. At length he was persuaded to take up the pastorate of Central Church, New Orleans, where he is giving a good account of himself. He has served as moderator of the Georgia Convention, and is now the president of the National Convention of Congregational Workers among the Colored People, whose last biennial session was held at Chattanooga, and whose next is to be in Detroit the coming year. Officially, he is the leader of our group.

Welcome to Dr. Bridgman

It is fine news that Dr. H. A. Bridgman is to join the ranks of the A. M. A. As District Secretary in New England he will be on familiar ground, and he is the type of man colored Congregationalists welcome to this organization—affable, aggressive, original, human, brotherly.

Henry Hugh Proctor.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 8.

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Free Merry-Go-Round

I passed a field in England where there had been a Fair, and it was all over but the Litter. And they were taking down the last of the Tents, whereof one had sheltered a Merry-Go-Round. And the canvas had been removed, and was in process of packing, but the Horses and Deer and Lions were all there. And the children of the neighborhood were all there. And some did push the Merry-Go-Round around on its axis, and others did ride the Horses and Deer and Lions. And the men cared not at all.

And I and Keturah stopped and looked at them in sheer joy of their enjoyment.

And I spake unto Keturah, saying, I have seen many children happy on Merry-Go-Rounds, but none, I think, were so happy as these. And it is costing them nothing save their own labor.

And Keturah said, When I was a little girl I enjoyed it, but we had not so gay Horses and no Tigers or Deer. And it seemed a pity to spend all the money that might have bought so many fine things and still be just where we started. But these children have unalloyed joy.

And I said, Keturah, they enjoy it the more because they are propelling it themselves. For this is the vice of those who in misguided love seek to do everything for their children that they leave for the children no opportunity for Invention and Adventure and the putting forth of their own Labor.

And I said, This old Merry-Go-Round of Life could have been better oiled and made to run more smoothly, but it is a mercy that we are permitted not only to ride but to push.

The Preacher and the Magazines

By Rev. W. Bertram Chandler
Great Barrington, Mass.

The position which religion occupies in the popular mind is indicated by the growing number of articles upon religious subjects which appear in the weekly and monthly literature of the country. When many are complaining of the decadent forces in our midst and are lamenting the emptiness of the churches, the various popular magazines are continually publishing articles of a distinctively religious nature.

Subjects which were once considered the prerogative of the pulpit are now attractively and originally discussed in the pages of secular magazines. Whilst the church is neglected, religion remains a matter of intense interest. For this reason the preacher cannot afford to ignore the periodical literature of the present time, because here at his hand there is a profitable field of material which he can utilize.

The magazines strive to meet the public taste of the moment. They create an ephemeral literature which reflects the modern thought and attitude. The editors have their fingers on the public pulse and endeavor to meet its diverse demands. It is encouarging, therefore, to find that among the host of subjects of topical interest at the present time, religion is one of the chief.

In a survey of current monthlies I have selected several articles which I consider are of particular interest to the preacher, and which are worthy of his attention.

In the June Century John O'Hara Cosgrave writes on "A Scientific Trail to Immortality." As the title suggests, the case for the immortality of the soul is approached from an original point of view; nevertheless the argument is sound and the conclusions inevitable. A refreshing departure from old lines of thought brings new arguments for a belief in the immortality of the soul. In the modern illustrations the preacher will find novel suggestions for himself. As the author informs us it is "an attempt to rationalize a Revelation of the Spirit."

The popularity of Immortality is attested by another original presentation of the same theme by Booth Tarkington in the June American Magazine. Together they form an interesting study of the wide difference in the mode of treatment. The July American contains a moving story of twentieth century faith and service. It is an example of discipleship brought up-to-date which would make a powerful gospel tract. An unconventional Christian is Charlie Page, who began by first giving God a tenth, then increasing it to a quarter of his income, and finally giving all above his living expenses. Up to the present he has given away twenty millions of dollars. And thirty years ago he was a lumberman drawing logs out of the woods on a contract. He says, "I believe in shooting square with man and God." For the alert preacher here is up-to-date proof of the power of the old Gospel.

The Living Age for July 4 contains an interesting study of "The Undergraduate's Religion." It is a sympathetic account of the ction of the modern undergraduate to reli- I've been so busy." A pathetic confession of n at the universities of Oxford and Cam- modern preoccupation.

dge, England. The author sums up those In the July Review of Reviews, under "Lead-ifferent to religion as spiritually and in- ing Articles of the Month," theree are two lectually lazy. "The religion of the irreli- subjects which will bring grist to the preacher's us is prevented from being a religion by a mill: "The Religious Press in the Teach-ling of laziness." His classification of the ing of Evollution," and "The United Church ferent kinds of Christians is strikingly true: of Canada."
ctive, Passive, and Otherwise Engaged." And Other articles worthy of the preacher's no-description of the answer a certain type of tice are "The Outlook for Western Civiliza-dergraduate gives to the question, "What do tion," by Glenn Frank; "Sinclair Lewis and think about God?," would express the at- Sherwood Anderson," by Carl Van Doren, in ude of many outside universities. "I'm the July Century, and "Transplanted Men" in aid that I've forgotten about God—you see, July Harper's.

City-Wide Schools of Missions

By Arthur O. Pritchard

Ex-President Board of Religious Education, Pasadena, California

FOUR thousand people in one city studying missions at the same time! I never ard of such a thing, and yet why not?" ch was the answer of a visitor to Pasadena, l., when told the story of the City-Wide hools of Missions held in that city during nuary and February. Twenty churches rep- enting nine denominations had agreed to hold ir schools for six weeks simultaneously. For a number of years there had been schools missions in several of the churches, but y had no relation to one another. As al- st all used the splendid courses issued by Missionary Education Movement, leaders ked "Why not work together?" The result s not a number of interdenominational hools situated in convenient centers, as is ne often with vacation church schools. It s a full school in each church that wished co-operate—run by the church, backed by church, and financed by the church so far as ances were necessary,—but each teaching the me courses on China and race relations. Each school was organized according to its n genius under the leadership of a dean and cretary. Most schools observe the usual oupings of the church school but with the ginners' and primary department taking their rk at the Sunday church school periods. ost of the schools met on Sunday evenings 5.45 and lasted for one hour and a half. ssions opened with songs, Scripture, and ctures for fifteen minutes, then class work r an hour, and a final closing period of amatization.

Co-operation among the schools was carried t along four main lines:—

(1) The normal school conducted by ecialists for three afternoons and evenings ring the week before the school began. This as of great value. Some few teachers had en to the Missionary Education Conference Asilomar held each July, but even they were lighted to "brush up" at the normal school home. About 100 teachers enrolled and in- ruction was given in departmental groups.

(2) Publicity. All of the outside advertis- g was done together. Through the courtesy the transportation company placards were ng in street cars and busses; the daily pers gave from one to three columns weekly the "write ups," and helped much with sug- stions. An atmosphere of missionary inter- t was created all over the city.

(3) Interchange of ideas and workers. e speaker served several churches, groups of ung people exchanged their dramatic work, e office of the Board of Religious Education as a clearing house for ideas, slides, and erature.

(4) A community pageant which wound the rands of church and racial interest together. the close "The Land of Beauty"—a California pageant written locally, was presented in the high school auditorium by over 200 people representing American, Japanese, Mexican, Chinese, and Filipino racial groups. It was a challenge to California to use the Christian spirit in solving her problems. The orchestra and chorus were furnished by interested churches.

Other ways of co-operating were seen in the special features. Near the close of the series the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Lake Ave. Congregational Church gave a dinner to 22 officers of the Japanese Union Church and had a corresponding number of Lake Ave. officers present. The Intermediate Department of the First Congregational Church used groups of children of different races each week at assembly. A colored Baptist church gave a demonstration at a white Baptist church assembly and the white friends reciprocated.

Statistics are not final in measuring results but they help. There were 20 schools in as many churches. Of these, five were Methodist, four Baptist, three Congregational, three Presbyterian, and one each Disciples, Friends, Brethren, United Presbyterian, and Japanese Union. The largest school enrolled 818 and the smallest 56. The total enrollment was 4,028, of whom 1,462 were in the elementary divisions, 974 in the college and high school grades and 1,582 adults. The average attendance was 83 per cent., with the juniors 97 per cent. and the young people 93 per cent., making the best report. An encouraging carry-on feature was the formation of a group of live earnest people of many churches meeting periodically to promote plans for international good-will under the leadership of a Y. M. C. A. worker who had been 16 years in Japan.

First Church, Kalamazoo

The First Congregational Church of Kalamazoo, Mich., celebrated its 90th anniversary June 14, 1925. This church has enjoyed great prestige and prosperity during its long history. It has sent 14 men into the Christian ministry, among whom are Dr. E. B. Allen, Dr. Arie Binkhorst, Dr. A. G. Walter, Rev. John Ten Dyke, Rev. Charles Meeker, and Rev. William Woodard, and others.

One of the members has enjoyed a continuous membership for 69 years. Eight have been members 50 years. Among the notable pastors are Dr. Caspar H. Hiatt (deceased), Dr. R. W. McLaughlin, Dr. W. J. Campbell, and Dr. J. T. Jones.

The anniversary Sunday service was featured by a great audience, crowding the large auditorium. Dr. Ernest B. Allen of Oak Park wrote the anniversary hymn. Dr. J. W. Sutherland delivered the anniversary prayer, and took other parts in the service. The sermon was delivered by President Ozora Davis, upon the subject, "The Pilgrims and Their Unfinished Task," and held the great audience spellbound by his powerful address. Several former pastors who expected to be present were kept away by unforeseen circumstances, but letters were read from all living pastors. A special feature was a request by the present minister, Rev. T. T. Phelps, for "Memorials" of money to be used in modernizing the church. There have already been a number of responses to the appeal.

The future of the Kalamazoo Church, now approaching the 1,000 membership mark, promises to be the greatest in its history.

Life More Abundant

By Mrs. Theodore Jorgensen

I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly.

Before you came—
Those far-off days seem hardly real to me.
I lived; I walked my narrow path contentedly;
I ate my bunch of purple grapes;
I plucked my rose;
I drank cool water from the hidden spring;
I heard faint music pulsing on the wind;
But all as if I were a shadow gray,
A twirling wraith,
The ghost of my own soul.

When I had found you, I became
A thousand things I had not been before—
A burning coal, that glowed and burst to flame,—
A white-hot furnace, set in readiness
To smelt strange ores,—
A winged living thing, that mounted open-eyed
Into the sun,—
A spirit, knocking at the gates of Heaven.
Such verities as these I entered one by one,
After you came.

An American College for Macedonia

Anatolia Follows Refugees

ON May 26, the trustees of Anatolia College, a Massachusetts corporation with headquarters in the city of Boston, voted to relocate the institution in the province of Macedonia, Greece, near the city of Salonica.

Many of our readers are familiar with the name and work of Anatolia College in past years, and cherish the memory of President Tracy, Dr. Edward Riggs, and other good men and women, who built their lives into the service of this pioneer American school in the Near East. But that represented the old era. The movement of nearly 1,500,000 refugees into Greece and Macedonia creates a new situation.

Not all of our readers are as yet aware of the fact that the college is operating now in an effective way on a three-year plan in rented buildings in the city of Salonica. This service began in January, 1924, with a small student body, which jumped to 150 last September, with another 100 eager applicants refused for want of room. In a city where housing conditions are desperately short, the institution is fortunate in the rented buildings it occupies: a school building intended as a casino but never used; two French military hospital wards erected during the war, for dining room, dormitory, and industrial purposes; and a plain but comfortable building erected by the college, where 38 happy students lodge. The ground occupied covers more than three acres, furnishing ample space for athletics, and is on the edge of the city, at the terminus of the tram line. Good water and electric lights are among the facilities that help to make a really gratifying school.

Of the 150 students at present nearly all are refugees. By race, 90 are Greeks and 60 Armenians, with a few representatives of Albania and Russia. The classes are those of the preparatory department and the freshman year of the pioneer college, which is beginning life over again. A good teacher group of seven Americans, four Greeks, and two Armenians prove admirable for the instruction needed at present.

Meantime, the Greek Government has revised its laws regarding the foreign schools, for the express purpose of welcoming American institutions that had been operating in Asia Minor. In February a special permit issued by the Ministry of Education was publicly presented in the presence of teachers and students and many friends, by the Superintendent of Education for Macedonia. In March, the Prime Minister of Greece gave his promise to furnish a carefully selected site as a free agent for the college, outside the busy city and above the malaria, on a rugged knoll, with "a glorious view." Mount Olympus is just opposite 'cross the bay.

The New Opportunity

It was with these facts before them that the college trustees, who constitute a corporation closely affiliated with our American Board, voted in May to confirm the pilgrim school as a permanent institution in its new abode. More than 1,000,000 refugees are the first constituency. Almost before their hunger is satisfied, almost before they receive the old clothing sent from America, almost before they have permanent shelter or means of earning a livelihood in their new home, the refugees appeal for the education of their boys. The lads of today will be the leaders of tomorrow. If they lay a foundation in the character and strength of American Christian education today, they will be highly valuable tomorrow in a situation where everything is now in a plastic condition. The settled inhabitants of Greece are just as eager as others for the American type of education, just as willing as anybody anywhere to pay full tuition rates for the education of their sons.

There is great regard for America and everything American, stimulated constantly by the hundreds of thousands of Greeks and Macedonians who have come to this country and have done well here. Nor is there a better place anywhere, probably, for the education of Armenian lads than Salonica is. This wonderful harbor is at the threshold of that area of the world where the scattered Armenian colonists are most naturally at home, and Americans having done so much for Armenians cannot abandon them now. Steamers ply between Salonica and Black Sea points, making access easy for Russian students, who are alert as individuals and in the mass to secure American education. Albania is close at hand, and Albanian students have already begun to come. Serbians are even nearer. The Serbian Government has port rights in Salonica, and it is the natural point for the trade of a large hinterland belonging to that vigorous people.

No wonder Mr. Venizelos invited President George L. White to locate an American college in or near Salonica, urging that it may do much to remove the spirit of suspicion, fear, and hate which has been the bane of the people in the great Balkan Peninsula, and to establish a spirit of toleration, friendliness, and good will across racial and religious lines all along the shores of the Near East. There is in those fair lands a new spirit of toleration and progress, as there is among Americans an interest in the welfare of their people. The Near East Relief has a vast supporting constituency, as well as that which our denominational missionary and educational work long since aroused. Americans are not asked to support native Evangelical churches in Turkey or the Near East so much as they have done in time past, and so the importance of colleges that sh offer the character and the power of Americ Christian education bids fair to be far grea than ever in the period which is just dawni

Honorary Degrees

Additions to list published July 23

D.D.

COCHLIN, REV. DEMAS, Traverse City, Mich. Olivet.

MAILE, REV. JOHN L., Los Angeles, Cal. Olivet.

PATTEN, REV. ARTHUR BARDWELL, Torringt Ct.—Colby.

SILLARS, REV. ANGUS, Troy Grove, Ill.—La Forest University.

LL.D.

COMFORT, PRES. WILLIAM WISTAR, Haverfo Pa.—Lake Forest University.

FALES, DAVID, Lake Forest, Ill.—Lake Fore University.

LICHLITER, REV. MCILYAR HAMILTON, Colu bus, O.—Otterbein.

MACINTOSH, REV. JOHN A., Chicago, Ill.- Lake Forest University.

The Cross Triumphant

By L. M. Strong

I would carry my cross like a banner fair,
Flung crimson-wise to the sun and air;
As a symbol of victory, not of loss,
I would carry with pride my cross.

I would carry my cross like a conquering swor
To smite and smite in the name of the Lor
Not cringing and sullen and soul-dismayed,
But a warrior, unafraid.

I would carry my cross like a lover's gift,
A chalice, whose perfumes their incense lif
In fragrance and holiness, free from dross,-
Like a jewel, and not a cross.

The Pastor Says: Some people attempt t do so many superfluous things that life chase them like seven hounds after a poor, scare rabbit, whereas if they sought only the grea things they might go bounding over the field chasing life.

Keystone View

THE SALVATION ARMY DIAMOND JUBILEE

This important milestone in the life of the Salvation Army was celebrated at the Crystal Palace, London, when 400,000 members of the Army from all parts of the world gathered to observe the anniversary. The picture shows General Booth greeting Salvationists in their national costumes.

Young People's Conferences

linois Holds Two Young People's Conferences

The State Conference has held this year o Young People's Conferences, both at Tower ll, its fine camp ground at the lake near wyer, Mich. The first was held June 17-23, e second July 15-21. Tower Hill Camp is usually well equipped for summer conference ork. It is situated about two miles from wn and has the sand dunes, the woods, and e lake just at hand, and its 50 acres furnish nple room for sports of all sorts. The buildgs include Chamberlain Hall, which furnishes ministrative offices and dormitory for the culty, house tents for the young people, cotges for the ministers who attend, a comodious dining hall, and the Russell Smith ditorium which is used as a general meeting ace. The attendance at the conference last ar was so large that the leaders were comlled to arrange for two this year. Each had large a registration as the equipment and e faculty could care for. The attendance of ung people was approximately 300.

The daily schedule and the faculty were actically the same at both conferences. The pics taught were Bible, Missions, Dramatics, ngregational History, and Teacher Training. e faculty included Supt. C. C. Merrill, Asciate Supt. Walter Spooner, Secretary Gamon, Prof. B. W. Robinson, R. M. Pratt, A. . Palmer, Grace E. Mayer-Oakes, M. G. n Buskirk, A. W. Barwick, R. J. Montgomy, Paul Fox, Harry T. Stock, Miriam Woodrry, Bertha Wheelock, Cora E. Barnard, and anche Wormley. The missionary addresses re given by Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Nolting, ul Fox, A. W. Palmer, and Miss Woodberry. . Palmer gave the convocation addresses in e first conference, and Mr. Stock in the second. . E. B. Allen and President Ozora S. Davis re the preachers. Other leaders who had rt were: H. H. Goodell, Thomas A. Goodn, Charles E. Reidt, and George E. Stickney. . Gammon was Camp Executive and Miss llie A. McDermott, Registrar, of both conences.

The young people furnished an evening's litary entertainment for each conference, and ited a daily paper which was exceedingly well itten, and had all the departments found in e daily papers of the day. The devotional riods were led by the young people under e direction of Rev. Walter Spooner, and the adership of the church services was also comtted to them. Both conferences were fairly presentative of the state with delegates from th the larger and the smaller churches. The -operation between faculty and students was cellent and the faculty did a piece of teamrk that made their teaching a great success. inois had to limit the number of delegates is year that a church could send, and now ces a demand for three conferences next year.

North Dakota Conferences

The third annual Young People's Conferce was held at Valley City, June 17-24, with attendance of 85. Heavy rains that made ficult roads kept away a number who would ve attended under more favorable conditions. he same fine spirit was manifest that has aracterized the preceding conferences. The rnings were filled with interesting studies courses in Bible, Missions, Congregationaln, and Young People's Work. Rev. Harry Stock and Rev. and Mrs. Edward L. Nolt-g were the out-of-state leaders who rendered ficient service at this camp, and the other instructors were North Dakota men. The afternoons offered excellent opportunities for recreation with games and swimming. The evening programs were varied from the hilarious stunt night to the pageants and address of the Sunday evening service, and all entered into them with the same keen interest.

A second conference was started this year. This was held at Velva for those in the northwestern part of the state. Dr. E. W. Huelster of Chicago taught the class in missions for this conference and the other instruction was given by state pastors. This conference was along the same general lines of the Valley City Conference. There was an enrollment of 32, a good response for the first year, and a keen interest for the continuation of this conference.

C. Y. P. C. is beginning to mean something to the churches of North Dakota whose young people have been attending these conferences. Thirty-one received certificates this year for completing successfully the work of two conferences.

A. C. H.

"The Play's the Thing"

Under the improvised porch—an old piece of tarpaulin stretched from the tent to the Ford—half a dozen black-eyed girls were busy sewing white paper stars to blue and scarlet cheesecloth. In the tent a plump, bright-eyed child sent a quick needle into an autumn-hued Japanese kimono while another basted mandarin squares on a long blue coat. Here and there moved the Pageant Lady correcting, encouraging, keeping up a steady stream of vivacious chatter. Out behind the tent hammers were at work building a throne for "Liberty," "Justice," and "Brotherhood."

Three tall, young girls in dainty summer dress came quickly across from a nearby tent.

"We've finished the torch for Liberty. See!" they cried, and held aloft the paper-covered flash light with its cleverly twisted orange flame.

"Oh, how lovely," cried every one in chorus.

"And here are the scales for Justice," shouted the Pageant Lady, diving under the cot and coming out triumphant with two gilded paper plates daintily balanced from a tiny gilded pole and cross beam.

"How do I—aren't they cute?" breathed the Spirit of Justice, reaching out eagerly for them. "How do I hold them—this way?"

"Yes! Oh, that's great!" and everybody paused with uplifted needle, to admire the posing Spirit.

"I'm going to feel just funny!" gasped that "Spirit" as, to hide her embarrassment, she, too, disappeared, ostrich-fashion under the cot, reappearing minus the scales but with various strips of cheesecloth caught on her silver bracelet and "Play's" wreath of paper flowers dangling from her ear.

Of course every one laughed and then went back to work. And "Justice" herself offering her services, was sent on an errand to the nice "Music Lady" to arrange for a special practice of separate parts that afternoon.

For Mission Meeting was to have a real pageant. And the beauty-loving heart of every Indian girl in camp reveled in this opportunity to "dress up" and "be something." For three days practically every girl in camp and many of the boys and young men had been busy making costumes and "properties," learning parts, practicing songs and games and drills. For the Pageant Lady was a tireless worker and her energy was contagious.

"It's a pretty big undertaking, way out there, so far from any town," said the skeptical, beforehand.

"Yes," said one who knows both the Dakota country and the Dakota temperament. "You are surely ambitious. But," she added, "you may have a lot of Santee girls and boys there and, if you do, there is no reason why the pageant should not be a success. They can do things, they aren't afraid, and you can depend on them every time."

To one who does not know Santee that might seem a rather exalted boast. But the Pageant Lady and those of us who were her assistants for the time being, believed. For we had had experience with Santee pupils before. We went confidently ahead with our plans.

The Music Lady, herself a Santee person, came to the door of the tent.

"I have arranged," she began, sitting down gratefully in the shade of the tarpaulin, "for the choir to practice before breakfast so that you people can have the big tent and the organ after the women's meeting."

"That's awfully good of you," breathed the Pageant Lady, gratefully. "You are tired now. Lie down here on the cot and I'll get you a drink from our canteen."

But the busy Music Lady must hasten away, pausing first to admire the costumes of "America's Handmaiden" growing rapidly under the fingers of the eager-eyed girls there on the porch.

. . . . . .

"It was beautiful!"

The Santee Man said it vehemently and turned back to the stage, empty now of all save the white draped throne and the green branches in the background.

"It was beautiful, and more than that it was very worth-while. You surely have helped to make a place for our young people in Mission Meeting—a place worthy of them."

The Pageant Lady's face glowed. But she disclaimed the credit.

"It is the young people themselves who have found their place and filled it so nobly," she said. "And I surely think that it is the Santee pupils who have led the way and made such a scene as we had tonight possible."

She, too, turned to the empty stage—and it was as though they both saw again the colorful tableau that closed the Pageant: America, standing amidst the countries of the world, behind her the nations who made history but who failed to set their people free, before her the people of her own land appealing for freedom, for justice, for a greater vision. To those longing eyes she lifted the white cross—lifted it high and all hands reached out to it—eager, full of new hope.

"Oh, it was splendid!" repeated every one they met as they left the big tent.

Into the heart of the Santee Man came a new joy! The school was sending out pupils who could do a thing like that for a thousand people to witness. To a thousand hearts had come a new breadth of vision, a new idea of the place of their country in the world of today, a new realization of the great task before her.

"In the Cross of Christ I glory," rang in the ears and sounded deep in the hearts of many, many Indian people that night. And who can measure what influence such a picture and such a touch of song can do for the Indian people of our nation and, through them, for a world!

D. C.

I know we are prone now and again to say this or that is to be a final test of Christianity. I do not believe that there is any one test, but I am convinced that the efficiency of the Christian religion never found a more insistent challenge than in the relationship of the races in the world.—M. Ashby Jones.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

A Brave Man

I have been meeting a brave man. For twenty-five years, since early manhood, he has been the victim of unusually acute deafness. His son never knew a time when he could speak to his father without shouting; the father has never heard his boy's normal voice. Even the ear-phone which he wears continually (he actually had it on when he went for a plunge in the swimming pool)—even that enables him to understand only when the speaker shouts. So far as hearing goes, this man is almost completely shut out from the world; though that ear-phone, his son said, has done marvels toward reducing his isolation.

"It's remarkable," said some one at the breakfast table, "that he has kept his expression so cheerful." And then followed remarks about a very deaf aunt, who looks gloomy, and thinks other people are talking about her.

That is just where this man's victory is notable. He goes about with an alert expression and a genial smile, is frank and open, and mingles with those about him in a normal and gracious way. Only once did he show that he felt his isolation. We had had an unusually good story-teller at the table, and the rest of us had been convulsed with laughter. "It's hard for you at such times," I said to this man a day or two later; and his voice choked with emotion as he spoke of how great a trial it is to see everybody around in such glee, and not be able to catch one word of it all.

During those heavy days of the Great War we all felt ourselves deeply moved and tremendously lifted up when a young American poet of rich promise wrote, as almost his last message to the world, those fine words:

> I have a rendezvous with Death
> At some disputed barricade, and then went out not long after and kept that rendezvous. He had told, in the preceding lines, how he loved life:

> From a boy
> I gloated on existence. Earth to me
> Seemed all-sufficient and my sojourn there
> One trembling opportunity for joy.

But he had a rendezvous, and there was no escaping it. So it is with many another. Not with death is the rendezvous of these I have in mind, though often enough they may wish it were; but it is with suffering that must last for all the years of life—twenty-five, fifty, as many as there are to be. All hail to those who keep the rendezvous with high heart unfailing, and fill their souls with joy still!

"Do not strive for heroic issues," says Archdeacon Wilberforce, "but in patient, quiet obedience to duty . . . assure yourself nothing is trivial, nothing is small." The greatest things we can do for other people are involved in just these unpicturesque issues of everyday life.

A society controlled by the robust and capable tends to become merciless; and a society without mercy would be grievous to live in, even for the merciless themselves. The sturdy and the weak, the capable and the inefficient, the handicapped and those who glory in their powers, the advanced and the backward, the good and the might-be-good—there is no independency. Only by the modifying of the strong by the weak and the completion of the weak by the strong, only by the working together of the different kinds of strength, has the world made such progress as it has yet made. Each has his own contribution to make to the well-being of his fellows.

Closet and Altar

THE CHILDLIKE HEART

Except ye turn and become as little children ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.—Matt. 18: 3.

The childlike spirit is a social grace, and the child begins to be a social being earlier than we think. The child is always in the presence of another, or of others, greater than itself. The habitual sense of dependence comes from the fact of dependence.—William Newton Clarke.

Would you have a safeguard against worldliness and sin and error and the snares of the last days? Choose and keep the young child's companionship.—Horatius Bonar.

No matter what disappointments we have lived through, the child wakes us from the slumber of the soul, from the lethargy of custom, to old ideals and loves and worships and dreams. The future is no more dwarfed and shrunken—at evening time there shall be light. The spirit is quickened and begins to pray again.—William Robertson Nicoll.

> Father, who keepest
> The stars in thy care,
> Me, too, thy little one,
> Childish in prayer,
> Keep, as thou keepest
> The soft night through,
> Thy long, white lilies
> Asleep in the dew.
> Charles G. D. Roberts.

In all the best men you meet, perhaps the thing that is most peculiar about them is the child's heart that they bear within the man's. However they have differed in other respects, in their tempers, gifts, attainments, in this they agreed. With those things they were, so to speak, clothed upon—this was their very core, their essential self. And this child's heart it is that is the organ of faith, trust, heavenly communion. It is a very simple thing, so simple that worldly men are apt either not to perceive or to despise it.—J. C. Shairp.

Yes, to inherit the Kingdom of God we have to become as little children again. The faith of a little child, the simplicity and the love of a little child, makes us one with the spiritual glory of him which came to earth a little Child. This is not an experience upon which the wisdom of the world can pronounce.—Reginald J. Campbell.

Our Father in heaven, who hast ever loved us and askest of us love and glad obedience, give us the childlike and responsive heart of those who walk with thee. In simplicity of faith and quietness of heart may we follow the way of thy commandments. Give us the happiness of a child in our immunity from anxious care. Teach us the confidence of a child in looking for tomorrow and add thereto a firm and overcoming assurance of thy love and care. And this we ask of thee in the name of our brother, Jesus Christ, who for our sake came as a child and kept the heart of a child through the labors and temptations of our mortal life. Amen.

Isaac Ogden Rankin.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVO

"What Is the Gospel—Why Preach It?"

Comment on the Missionary Topic fo August 30-September 5

BY ROBERT W. GAMMON

Scripture passages: I Cor. 15: 1-11; 9: 16

Devotional Service

Scripture, Luke 2: 40-52; Luke 15: 11- John 4: 1-42; John 19: 23-27.

Suggested Hymns

Majestic Sweetness Sits Enthroned; Je Calls Us, O'er the Tumult; Immortal L Forever Full; Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me.

The Life of Jesus

Have one of the members give an outline the life of Jesus (five or six minutes). H several members relate such incidents in life of Jesus as, the conversation with woman at the well, the dinner in the home Simon, the relationship of Jesus to John Baptist and the fate of John the Baptist, the story of Jesus before Pilate. Also h some one tell the parable of the Prodigal S using his own rendering rather than that Scripture.

What Is the Gospel?

The word gospel leads the thought inevita to Jesus. We can hardly think of the w without thinking of him. He brought the b news that humanity has ever heard. We c hardly imagine what the thinking of Christian world would be now if Jesus h never lived. Have a number of persons spe briefly on the following:

1. Jesus as an influence in the lives of g and great men and women.
2. Jesus in art.
3. Jesus in literature.
4. Jesus in music.
5. Jesus as an influence in history duri two thousand years.

Why Preach the Gospel?

Jesus is the gospel. It is admitted that h life was wonderful and that his teaching full of lofty precepts. But there have be other beautiful lives—why should we sing him out and preach him?

Points for Discussion That Will Help to Answer the Above Question

1. What can Jesus do to redeem men fro their sins? Does he have a message to t outcast, the immoral, the brutish? What h he done for people of this type in the pa and what is he doing today?

2. What message has Jesus to the world co cerning human relationships? What abo capital and labor, race relationships, war, t relation of nation to nation, individual individual, in business life and in the church If his gospel promises more helpful relatio ships than any other, should we not preac him?

3. What has Jesus done for the lonely, fo the fearful, for the confused? Has Jesus an message concerning the future life that is bette than the message of others? What has he t say to those who are ill, or who are in poverty and bearing great burdens? What messag has he for those who are facing death? Ha he a message for all these which no other on could give? Did Jesus bring life and immor tality to light? If we did, we should preach him

I tell you, my countrymen, the world need more of the Christ, the world needs the spiri of the Man of Nazareth. If we can bring int the relationships of humanity, among ourselve and among the nations of the earth, the broth erhood that was taught by Christ, we would have a restored world.—Warren G. Harding

WITH THE CHILDREN

Jeremy Dives Into Luck

By Daisy D. Stephenson

Jeremy hadn't meant to eavesdrop. He supposed Aunt Bess, at the kitchen table kneading bread, had seen him come across from the bunk-house. Uncle Hank's back was to the window.

Jeremy was tired and hot, and for just half a jiffy, he told his jabbing conscience, he'd curl up on the sagging old sofa on the screened porch. He had spent two hours delivering fresh garden "sass" to the summer trade. Two miles down the winding creek road was tucked a pretty little resort where the evergreen hills were dotted with rustic pine-slab cabins. From June till September city people moved up to rest and play, follow the woodsy, sage-scented trails, or wade the foaming streams for speckled trout. Aunt Bess had filled and refilled her cracked cooky jar with dimes and quarters that tinkled in for her green vegetables, fresh eggs, and plump frys.

"Seems sort of hard on the boy to take the only thing he calls his own." Thump, thump. Aunt Bess's tired drawl sounded far off to Jeremy.

"Humph! Where'd he be if we hadn't let him stay on here after his dad lost all but his rag-tag of the old place, and then got himself killed bustin' a broncho? Tell me that."

Uncle Hank's harsh, complaining tones brought Jeremy back from his fleecy cloud of dreams like a clap of thunder. He swallowed hard, sat up, but was too stunned to move a foot farther. Could—could they be talking about him, Jeremy? And what was it all about? He was not left in doubt. It came out with brutal promptness, though evidently the unsuspecting pair had milled it over before.

"That's so," assented Aunt Bess, who dodged any contributing factor to rousing her husband's wrath. "He'd have been sent to some home in the city, I s'pose. He was such a scrap when we took charge of the remnants here, not much help to a rancher. Jeremy wasn't cut out for stiff work, but it takes all sorts to fill up the world; and some, like him, would rather read story books and mess up their pockets with rocks and want to know what makes the earth tick."

Uncle Hank growled. "Yes, just what ruined his dad—book readin', and dreamin' before business. He's got to be jolted awake, Jeremy as, and maybe losin' his pony will do it. Mr. Hotchkiss covets Nubbins for that sickly-lookin' young 'un of his. Seems as if the lad saw Jeremy put Nubbins through his tricks down around the post office one day, and has been talkin' about it ever since. Well, that note's got to be renewed if Warren won't buy, and the interest handed over. All we've saved won't pay for the new pump and the grocery bill, let alone the new range. I tell you, Bess, I'm for gettin' rid of this tag-tail of land and headin' for California and maybe—"

Somehow Jeremy stumbled off away from those cruel voices; but the sickening realization of what was to happen to him stuck in his mind like a tomahawk. Nubbins! The stunted little colt he had raised himself and trained like a dog. Blindly he groped his way past the corral on toward the little hill pasture.

That Hotchkiss boy? Jeremy vaguely remembered a pale, shrinking chap looking through the windows of the handsome car, parked at the village post office. An old cowboy friend had egged him on to show Nubbins off to the summer folk waiting for the mail one day. That was it. A wave of bitterness swept over Jeremy and some of it washed over his eyes, leaving them wet.

"Course it isn't Mr. Hotchkiss' fault that my dad went broke and his dad bought in the old ranch, and the new house and woods and everything. Anyway, he's not there except summers. Just the same,—oh, Nubbins!"

With playful, prancing steps, as if he kept time to the rollicking tune of the creek, the peerless black pony minced up to the gate and nuzzled Jeremy for greeting. He tossed his head and nickered, asking plainly what was the matter. Jeremy's shoulders shook, his curly dark head was pillowed on his arms atop the fence. Here was a puzzling to-do! Something had to be done about it. Nubbins was a creature of action, and opening gates was his specialty. Nubbins could do everything but write letters and fry flapjacks, Jeremy had boasted. But—poor, helpless pony! he could not save himself for Jeremy!

The boy threw his arms about the glossy neck, murmured loving, broken words into the thick mane, and Nubbins nibbled his ear for comfort. Then a daring impulse seized Jeremy. He glanced toward the house fearfully. Nobody. When was that note due? The big calendar on the kitchen wall had been stripped of its July leaf that morning. Would they take his pony away tomorrow?

With a reckless set of his slim shoulders, a strange, defiant gleam in his honest blue eyes, Jeremy swung swiftly to Nubbins' back and off they flew like the wind toward Deep Pool. Deep Pool, jade greeen with its mirrored pines, lay at the foot of a precipitous hill. One reached it more easily by a good trail from the old ranch, but that meant going through the new Hotchkiss fences.

To the hill boy, expert swimmer outclassing the Scouts who had camped by the creek the previous week, there was a simpler way than climbing down that sheer granite ledge. Despite the lump of lead where his heart had once been, Jeremy's spirits rose a little as they swept through the whispering aspens and started up the hill overlooking the pool.

"Deep Pool," a bowl chiseled out of granite, hollowed in the long-ago age of glaciers when gigantic carving bees had been the program of the colossal forces of nature. "Nobody knows how deep it is," Jeremy's dad had often said, and he had tried to plumb it himself.

"There, old pal, you can nibble around till I come back." Jermey knotted the bridle ends securely so the pony would not be hampered or in danger of tripping.

Jeremy stood an instant, gazing down into the crystal depths, sheer fifty feet below. He felt a thrill of joy that he could do at least one thing well. He was the envy of all the boys of the region, "the diving wonder." But his look of elation faded, he crouched instantly in keen dismay. For out from the shadow of his rocky, overhanging perch, floated a rude raft bearing the slight figure of a boy who was plainly an amateur at the sport.

"That Hotchkiss sissy!" Jeremy's lip curled contemptuously. Going to cheat him out of this last swim, this last picnic with Nubbins. "Bet his mother doesn't know he's out. Of all the clumsy—"

Sick at heart, he turned away; then, as a scream rent the silence, turned a horrified gaze on the pool again. The raft was tipping crazily—the boy was gone! Just one thing to do, and Jeremy did it. Presto! A clean, beautiful dive. When he came up he had something with him. Jeremy never fumbled. The boy was half-unconscious from terror and clutched Jeremy desperately. Jeremy had to be pretty rough with him before he could do his life-saving decently.

Well, he thought breathlessly as they landed, that dive did away with a lot of messy first aid. He rolled the boy, pumped the water out of him, and made sure that he was more scared than hurt. It seemed to be Jeremy's day for quick service. A minute to frisk up the ledge like a gray squirrel, squirm into his overalls, and grab Nubbins, who looked injured at having his picnic meal so rudely interrupted. A detour was necessary in hitting the trail to the Pool, where Billy Hotchkiss was picked up and persuaded to cling limply to the pony before Jeremy. And though Nubbins loathed carrying double, he seemed to sense the situation and behaved as a hero and a gentleman.

Mr. Hotchkiss was away just then, and Billy's mother gave one glance and went into hysterics. So leaving Billy in charge of the stolid, sensible country cook, Jeremy tore off, promising to send Dr. Davis out post-haste. This he did with a fine indifference to what Uncle Hank would say to "that boy."

But there was company when Jeremy galloped into the corral, and Uncle Hank didn't seem to know Jeremy had been away. Jeremy didn't force him to listen. There appeared to be business in the air at supper, and impending change. Jeremy caught Aunt Bess's eyes watching him anxiously. The boy tried to eat, but even the flaky, latticed apple pie choked him.

As the men scraped back their chairs, a car whizzed into the yard. Jeremy flushed guiltily. Could he run? There was Mr. Hotchkiss at the door, and yes, Billy. Jeremy's heart did a somersault. They had come for Nubbins!

What was this Mr. Hotchkiss was saying as he pumped Jeremy's arm up and down? That he deserved a distinguished service medal? Uncle Hank's surprise was comical. "Sure, Jeremy, run along outside and talk with Mr. Hotchkiss," and Aunt Bess shooed them nervously outdoors into the ebbing glory of the August sunset.

A little later, a boyish figure sped to the pasture bars and confided the whole wonderful tale to an appreciative Nubbins. "So that stuttery man's bought the place and Uncle Hank's going to skip for California. But we're going to live with Billy, and you'll belong to both of us, old boy, just like a brother, his daddy said. And I'll teach Billy to swim and ride and camp out till he's husky and hard as nails. And I can have lots of books and go to school next winter—my, didn't I dive straight into luck? And oh, Nubbins, it's a good old world, isn't it?"

Nubbins nipped a lock of hair playfully and whinnied as if saying, "However did you doubt it, Jeremy?"

(All rights reserved)

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

Paul and the Philippian Jailer

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for August 30

Acts 16: 16-40

The quiet and normal experiences of Paul's going to Macedonia were rudely broken by the arrest of himself and Silas and by their being thrown into prison. The occasion of this arrest illustrates the age-long conflict between the unselfish ideal of Christian ministry and the selfishness of those who set gain above every consideration, human and divine.

In the city of Philippi were certain men who were exploiting for gain the psychic powers of a young girl; the spirit of divination, the lesson calls this psychic quality. Its exact nature is not indicated, but in some way this psychic power led this young girl to appreciate the truth concerning Paul and Silas. She followed them crying, "These men are servants of the most high God to show unto us the way of salvation."

Through Paul she was restored to normal experience, and with this return to normality her masters lost their source of gain. It would not, of course, have done to have complained simply because they were losing in a material way. The magistrates and people might not have cared particularly about their pecuniary loss, so these ancient money-grabbers did exactly as money-grabbers do today. They omitted reference to their own interests and tried to make the matter one of social, political, and religious prejudice. They accused Paul and Silas of being trouble-makers and of teaching customs "which are not lawful for us to receive neither to observe being Romans." The appeal to prejudice worked just as it works in modern days. Paul and Silas were beaten and thrown into prison. But this was not the end of the story.

Probably more sermons have been preached from this passage of Scripture than from any other. The cry of the Philippian jailer, "What must I do to be saved?" has been the theme of every preacher. It is strange that one very seldom hears of a sermon on this text today. Is it that the text was overworked or that the cry of the jailer is not heard as frequently in modern days? Is the church at fault that this cry is not heard? Should we be revealing truth in such a way that men who feel their own sins and imperfections would cry out instinctively in their consciousness of coming far short of the glory of God?

"What must I do to be saved?" The jailer apparently did not question in fear. He was, of course, desperately afraid when the earthquake came and the prison doors were thrown open. He was about to kill himself, realizing that he would have to answer for the escape of the prisoners, but when Paul's voice sounded through the night calling him to safety and assuring him that none had escaped, fear seems to have vanished and a sense of sublimity taken its place. His cry was that of a soul awakened to a world of truth and beauty that he had missed. He may, of course, have heard Paul preach the Gospel. One may be sure that Paul would not be in his care even for a day without preaching to him about the need of salvation, but whatever his previous experience had been, he knew at once that Paul and Silas had some great thing that he had not found, and so his appeal was one of deep sincerity. Paul's answer was clear and unmistakable, and no better answer to the question has ever been found.

We need not here take time to consider the nature of faith or what it means to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. Whatever it may imply in detail, it means a complete response of the soul and heart, a yielding of the whole man to Jesus. That, and that alone, is the way of true salvation.

"Divine Healing" in the Episcopal Churches

What was declared to be "the first official step taken by a modern Protestant church to enter the field of healing now dominated by independent organizations" was instituted at the winter meeting of the Episcopal Pacific Province at Santa Barbara. A Christian Healing Commission was appointed to work jointly with the biennial provincial council of the church to determine the simplest and most effective method by which the program of healing may be presented to each Episcopal church. There is the aim to make spiritual healing a part of the curriculum in each parish.

This is no new matter, of course, with our brethren. The Emmanuel Movement of Boston is far from forgotten, and the books of Dr. Worcester probably are read with eagerness by many. Then Mr. Hickson toured the country greeting ministers of various denominations to promote what he had found so valuable in England. But at no time has there been so concerted a movement among the rectors to apply in all churches the method of spiritual healing.

Doubtless they are answering to a great human need. The success of Christian Science and various similar and dissimilar cults is ample demonstration. Everywhere are souls who feel the inadequacy of the material method. If not hostile to it dogmatically, yet they have tragically experienced in some direction its failures. Without distrusting medical science, rather taught by researches of science in the paths of psychology, multitudes of well-balanced folk insist on the recognition and use of the personal factors in health and curing disease.

So, then, we should all be grateful to the Episcopalians for their program. That there will be decided limits to the success, we are confident. The spiritual gifts of the rectors will vary as do all their other gifts. A few may heal very fruitfully, others will find discouragement in the attempt. That is a fault in any attempted official action, in dealing with the soul. But we hope there will be so devoted and intelligent an application of the plan that they may have much to teach us all.

Just why the Episcopalians should be so prominent among the denominations in their interest in healing has not been stated. Their hospitals are legion. Their rectors often attempt psycho-therapy.

On the other hand, we hear little of the activities of Congregationalists in such lines. We have not even a hospital in all Southern California. Perhaps the rather general prevalence of the scientific spirit makes us most critical, less ready to take up methods that deal in wonders and the unseen. Perhaps we do les by vote, and more by spontaneous action; th gift to heal is something discovered by oneself not communicated by the vote of a convention Then, too, there may be emphasis on the in tellectual, the educational, to the neglect o such other vital issues as the healing of th body, or maybe even of the soul. Truly, if a a denomination we are to apply a fully bal anced program of service, the power of spirit ual healing must be accorded the attention i is worth.

Much attention has been drawn to the An geles Temple in Los Angeles, Aimee Sempl McPherson, pastor. Reference was made i the columns of The Congregationalist to he evangelistic work in Denver and elsewhere a few years ago. She has built up a great in stitution in Los Angeles, with a large, con spicuous structure, attended by 5,000 or s people, maybe several times a week. An inde fatigable worker, a gracious personality, a delivery which freely unlooses all her remark able powers, with her mother a rare manager she energizes a great corps of workers. Ther is presented in multiform ways "the fou square gospel." The form is conservative, bu the essence is power which touches all th chords of the human heart. There is preachin and training of preachers. There is prayer focalized in a circle of prayer which like th holy Shekinah, is never allowed to die out, da or night. There is music superb, such as "5 golden harps." There is the appeal for lif decisions, with hundreds streaming up th aisles. And—this is the point—there is heal ing. Perhaps nothing is more prized by th throng that seek the Temple than the ministry of healing. In simple, authoritative method she offers the prayer of faith, and many be lieve and are comforted. The critic may dis count the stories of recovery; it may be tha some have been "healed many times." Yet com pare her claims and her methods with that o Jesus and the early church—are they no practically the same? If the New Testament is convincing, then must her ministry be con vincing. Does she misconceive the command as from Christ, to make healing a component part of the work of the church?

Well we believe there are diversities o gifts; and some are endowed with the gifts o healing; and some ministers are not. In the church, however, the Episcopalians are right in making the healing of the body a part o their curriculum, however secured. As R. F Horton sums it up in his Mystical Quest o Christ, the church should work for health by securing the sanitation of the community; supplement the physician's materia medica with a psycho-therapy which, if he does not possess must be supplied by other spiritual agency the individual Christian may work for health by a disposition of cheerfulness, by the skilled use of suggestion for well-being, and heal by the prayer of faith.

Yucaipa, Cal. CHESTER FERRIS.

The Philosopher's Stone

By Robert Elliott Brown

Visitors may see in the California Mining Exhibit in San Francisco, a meteorite located in Tucson, Arizona, by General Carleton on his way to Texas with the Union Army, in 1861. It was then being used as an anvil.

That man who dug a Meteorite
From Arizona's burning plain,
And hammered on its Heaven-turned horn,
Shoes for his mustang train
—Illumined on its stellar source,
Glowed with the high surmise
That days of toil are meant to be
But anvils from the skies.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Biography

TWICE THIRTY, by EDWARD K. BOK (Scribrs. $4.50). If any reader of The American-ition of Edward Bok needed urging to ac-aint himself with this further volume of tobiography we should readily supply the centive. Mr. Bok, whose primary character emed during most of his life to be that of a ccessful purveyor of the writings of others, s himself made in these latter years a no-ble and permanent contribution to American erature. The nominal justification of the esent volume is suggested in the record of a ry beautiful conversation with Henry Ward eecher, in which the great preacher assured r. Bok, then a lad under twenty, helping him th his mail, that wisdom, "a rare quality, boy, just like a rare orchid," does not me before sixty. The real justification of vice Thirty is that Mr. Bok had consider-ly more to say, and he recalls Mr. Beecher's easantry in explanation of the fact that hereas the former volume was largely nar-tive, having now attained the age of wisdom, has not refrained in the present volume om being "preachy." However, this volume so is largely narrative, and Mr. Bok is as teresting in the rôle of preacher as in that narrator. The volume is too rich in incident summary within our space. There is one ank that we wish we could fill up. Who was e member of President Wilson's Cabinet con-rning whom Mr. Bok makes the revelations pp. 342-3? Mr. Bok had gone to see the esident about some matter, and was mani-tly loath to go directly to a member of the binet as the President suggested. Mr. Bok's count is interesting:

"Why not?" he [President Wilson] asked. You don't join in all this push against ——?"

"I don't have to join in any push," I an-wered. "It is what I have personally experi-ced at his hands. I don't believe in him, and u must admit it is hard to deal with a man whom you have no confidence."

"Very," he returned. "But what are your ounds?"

"These," I answered, handing him two let-rs, one absolutely contradictory of the state-ents in the other.

The President read and handed them back to e. "Not quite according to Hoyle, I admit," said. "However, you are too old to over-ok the fact that all of us lapse from grace metimes."

"Lapse, yes, perhaps, but not flop," I swered.

Books of Social Significance

SOCIAL ORIGINS AND SOCIAL CONTINUITIES, ALFRED MARSTON TOZZER (Macmillan. .50). If we could choose only one of recent oks we should be disposed to make it this lume by Professor Tozzer, and we should oose it as much for its interest as for its lue. In six chapters, delivered originally as owell Lectures, one of the most eminent of thropologists has stated for the layman, in nple terms, the basic facts and admitted potheses concerning the development of man his social life and institutions. An Appendix esents, with interesting comment, thirty emes written by Harvard freshmen on their rsonal superstitions and inhibitions. Profes-r Tozzer's chapters are: I. Basic Methods d Theories; II. The Nature of the Savage and His Society; III. The Crises in the Life of e Individual; IV. Marriage and the Family; V. Organization, Associations and Classes, and VI. Government, Law and Ethics.

WHO SHOULD HAVE WEALTH?, AND OTHER PAPERS, by GEORGE MILTON JANES (Morehouse Pub. Co., Milwaukee. $1.50). Competent and able essays on social themes by the Professor of Economics in Washington and Jefferson College. The title essay after examining the aristocratic, communistic, and socialistic ideals of distribution champions, and expounds "the democratic or competitive ideal," which is expressed in the principle, To everyone according to the value of his service. Professor Janes does not seem to indicate very clearly by whom, or by what criterion, the value of each man's service is to be determined, and to that extent he apparently fails to realize how revolutionary his principles would prove if vitally applied in relation to present-day society. "The pirate in business," he says, "is anti-social and should be exterminated." But in so far as his essay is a defense of the competitive system he fails to take sufficiently into account the extent to which that system gives the social pirate his opportunity and power. Professor Janes, however, is far from being a defender of what is. He discusses social philosophies with irenic spirit, and such essays as that on The Nonpartisan League and The Steel Strike Report, where bias would readily appear, display an impartial approach and a weighing of the facts and issues with well balanced judgment.

THE ECONOMY OF HUMAN ENERGY, by THOMAS NIXON CARVER (Macmillan. $2.50). Professor Carver has been a contributor to The Congregationalist, and has commended himself for the open-mindedness of his approach to social and economic questions. In this volume he expounds with much detail the thesis "that the principal resource of any country is its fund of human energy," and he writes of human energy bearing fully in mind the fact that human energy, even in an economic sense, is definitely related to the quality of human life. He states his conviction "that moral practices have much to do with economic prosperity, and that it is therefore as inexcusable to ignore them as it would be to ignore geographical resources, currency systems, or anything else that affects national prosperity." Professor Carver presents a wide array of facts and considerations to show the waste of human energy and consequent economic loss through ignorance, inefficiency, idleness, false personal and social ideals, and immoral habits and practices.

If there is a weakness in his book it seems to us to be upon the constructive side. This appears in the discussion of the problem of unemployment which Professor Carver seems to us to regard too exclusively from the standpoint of the personal defects of the worker and the questionable policies of organized labor, and too little from the standpoint of the organizational breakdown and spiritual inefficiency of the present social structure. The workingman has contemplated the demand for "efficiency" and "productivity" against the tragic personal experience of, often extended, periods of unemployment, which capitalists and economists have explained to him as due to "overproduction." Under the circumstances he has not been entirely illogical, or unfair, in seeking "limitation of production," and shorter hours of labor, as measures for his own self-protection. The improvement of life in its spiritual outlook and social organization must precede, or accompany, the conservation and development of human energy as an economic factor if there is to be any real social gain. Probably Professor Carver recognizes this, but it is not adequately regarded in his discussion.

His Summary and Conclusion comes dangerously near defining religion as a sort of glorified economics. In the glorification of "work" and "energy" it is worth while to remember that Jesus challenged life's labor with the test of spiritual value and inherent worth. We wish that Professor Carver had more clearly defined his conception of economic, social, and spiritual values. Despite his defense of the Indiana farmer whose ambition in life was "to grow more corn to feed more hogs, to buy more land to grow more corn to feed more hogs," etc., we cannot but believe that between that ideal and the conceptions of life, labor, and rest in the teaching of Jesus there is a great gulf fixed.

SECRET SOCIETIES AND SUBVERSIVE MOVEMENTS, by NESTA H. WEBSTER (Dutton. $7.00). Here is a very remarkable work which fills one alike with admiration and amazement. For the painstaking energy, the serious purpose, and the erudition displayed in its more than 400 closely printed pages one can find only the highest praise, but one is amazed to discover so vast a mass of competent and detailed investigation and historical knowledge dominated by almost fanatical adherence to a narrow theory and an almost shell-shocked psychology of fear and distrust. Mrs. Webster's theory is "that neither the French Revolution nor the Russian Revolution arose merely out of contemporary thought or political and social conditions of the time, but that both of these explosions were produced by forces which for centuries have been deliberately gathering strength for an onslaught on Christianity and on all social and moral order." And one is further amazed to discover that "she considers that this age-long doctrine of destruction has been perpetuated and handed down by a succession of secret societies, which have appeared from time to time in the course of history and have shown such a continuity of procedure and homogeneity of doctrine as to prove that they were directed by members of some secret cult whose masters have never come into the open." That the book contains an immense amount of valuable information and is full of striking interest we heartily affirm. But one cannot read it without regret that the energy and erudition of its author should not have been combined with a more impartial and discerning spirit. As it is, a work that has qualities of real greatness is marred by the sort of thing that one would expect in an erudite history of trades unionism if we could conceive of Mr. Gary writing it, or in an erudite history of the Jesuits written by a Ku Kluxer, or in an erudite history of the Protestant Reformation written by a Jesuit. Even revolutionary movements must be approached with certain sympathy if one would discover what element of truth is in them. Prince Kropotkin reminded the German Professor Zenker, who had applied to him for Anarchist literature, that "we understand only what we love." The fact is that revolutionary literature, far from revealing secret understandings and unities of conspiracy, reveals both in its history and in our own time as bitter dissensions and hostilities as have ever divided warring Christian sects.

A Canadian Poet's Verse

Canada has a poet in Arthur S. Bourinot who writes verse of remarkable charm. Lyrics from the Hills is one of his little volumes, privately printed, which include some delightful word paintings of Canadian scenes. Rhythmic, colorful, and of deep feeling they are. Another collection is his Verses, which also contains pleasing nature poems but includes a number of war poems reflecting the poet's experiences and soulful impressions overseas—on battlefields, in German prisons, and elsewhere.

Christian Healing

HEAL THE SICK, by JAMES MOORE HICKSON (Dutton. $3.00). Mr. Hickson is an English layman of the Anglican faith who sets forth a remarkable record of his healing ministry. It covers 24 years, but this book is devoted chiefly to accounts of Mr. Hickson's healing missions which took him around the world and occupied the five years, 1919-24. Beginning in America, at Boston, he went on from coast to coast in the United States and into Canada. Two years were spent in India and the Far East, returning through Egypt and Palestine. Another long tour included Africa, Australia, and New Zealand. Mr. Hickson's narrative is supplemented by letters from bishops and other clergy and quotations from newspapers. Thus it is attested that cures of countless cases of the disabled, including deaf, blind, and paralytics, resulted from his work. He ascribes all to divine power. Believing that others can do what he does, he seeks to have the church of today resume the healing ministry which was carried on by the early church. He gives practical directions for such ministry.

Missionary Education Text Books

Issued by the Council of Women for Home Missions and the Missionary Education Movement.

BETTER AMERICANS, No. 3 in the Better America Series for Junior Home Mission Courses, has been prepared by Dr. Herbert W. Gates, Secretary of the Department of Missionary Education, and at present acting General Secretary of our own Congregational Education Society. Dr. Gates could be depended upon to treat such a theme with breadth of spiritual vision as well as with the technique of the teacher. The method is that of developing the theme of how the church can enlist the boys and girls in making a Better America by means of stories, illustrative material, discussion, expression, and service. Though the subject is covered with much thoroughness the treatment is intended to be suggestive rather than exhaustive. (75 cents.)

Old Testament Times

THE MONUMENTS AND THE OLD TESTAMENT, by IRA MAURICE PRICE (Judson Press. $2.50). A new, rewritten edition of a book first published in 1899. Convenient and valuable for its information regarding the backgrounds of the Old Testament, and its light upon the lands and peoples related to the life and history of Israel.

RELIGIOUS LIFE IN ANCIENT EGYPT, by W. M. FLINDERS PETRIE (Houghton Mifflin. $2.00). A companion volume to one previously issued on Social Life in Ancient Egypt, and a popular summary of part of the material gathered in the "Descriptive Sociology of Egypt," which is to appear through the provisions of the will of Herbert Spencer. Probably no man can speak in these matters with greater authority than Sir Flinders Petrie, who was for some years head of the British Exploration Fund in Egypt. His survey in this volume is concerned with religion as a part of daily life and social relationships rather than with theology and theory.

THE PROPHETS AND THEIR TIMES, by J. M. POWIS SMITH (University of Chicago. $2.25). A psychological study of the Prophets against the background of the political and social events of their times. Broad, wholesome, commonsense interpretations of great men and their contribution to religion, and likewise a clear, well-written, constructive introduction to the prophetic literature of the Old Testament.

HEBREW LIFE AND TIMES, by MARION O. HAWTHORNE (Abingdon Press. $1.00). A "Teachers' Manual" in which Hebrew life is studied in its entirety and not chiefly in its great men and women in accordance with the author's principle that "to become acquainted with a race, to understand its ideals, to appreciate its failures, to know its heroes and heroines, one must study the common people."

THE CODE OF DEUTERONOMY: A NEW THEORY OF ITS ORIGIN, by ADAM C. WELCH (Doran). A critical volume, necessarily somewhat polemical, which rejects prevailing theories concerning the origin of the Book of Deuteronomy and expounds the general conception that the Book was not the program or instrument of the Reformation under Josiah in 621 B. C., but the product of that Reformation. Dr. Welch is Professor of Hebrew in New College, Edinburgh.

For Christian Leaders

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER AS A SOUL WINNER, by WILLIAM FRANCIS BERGER (Revell. $1.25). In spite of all the developments in religious education—courses, curriculum, psychology, and the rest—the biggest single factor remains the teacher and his spiritual equipment. So, in effect, says Mr. Berger. Hence these talks on the prayer life of the teacher, his passion for souls, his loving touch, and his evangel. Besides these are talks on methods, which are never merely mechanical. A good book for the Sunday school teacher.

THE ESSENTIALS OF PRAYER, by EDWARD M. BOUNDS. Edited by HOMER W. HODGE (Revell. $1.25). The fourth book on prayer by the same author. "The entire man must pray. The whole man, life, heart, temper, mind are in it." Wholeheartedness, humility, praise, thanksgiving, consecration, devotion, and maintenance of a definite religious standard are some of the essentials of prayer which Dr. Bounds insists on.

CHURCH LEADERSHIP, by CHARLES EDWARD BURRELL (Dorrance & Co. $1.75). All the church officials with their qualifications, duties, and limitations are discussed in a sane manner. Young people's work, women's work, every member canvass, music, and church business are taken up in a common sense, practical way. This is really a text-book and study in church methods.

MANUAL OF THE PRESBYTERIAN PROGRAM FOR YOUNG PEOPLE (Presbyterian Board of Education. 60 cents). This is an excellent statement of certain principles which are valid for all churches. It is based upon the conviction that all work for the 18 to 23-year group should be centered in a single unit, the Young People's Section of the church. Where several organizations exist within a church the cabinet of the section should assign particular phases of the program of instruction, worship, recreation, and service to the class, society, etc. Part I deals with general principles which are basic to religious education; Part II indicates how the various young people's organizations may fit into the general program. This manual may well be used by Congregationalists in conn tion with Plans and Methods for Congregatio Young People (10 cents) issued by our Edu tion Society.

VISITATION EVANGELISM, ITS METHODS A RESULTS, by A. EARL KERNAHAN (Rev $1.25). In brief, this is employing the met and machinery of the every member canv for getting men instead of money. Dr. Ker han has developed this method of evangeli with great success. He goes carefully into way in which workers are secured, instruct and sent out, and how the results are conserv

THE LORD WE LOVE. Devotional Studies the Life of Christ, by PROF. CHARLES R. E MAN (Doran. $1.50 net). The Professor Practical Theology at Princeton Theologi Seminary has given us devotional, untechni studies of the chief events in the life of Jes Naturally the book is conservative in theol and in criticism, but it has spiritual insi and power.

PRAYERS AT BETHANY CHAPEL, by JO WANAMAKER (Revell. $1.25). Here is a co panion volume to "Prayers of John Wa maker" issued a year ago. The prayers short, simple, but full of faith and as natu as "when a man talketh with his friend."

Year Book Corrections

For each of the 5,680 churches there are the Year Book 36 columns of figures maki 204,440 opportunities for mistakes. The figures depend on 20 different persons for the accuracy. Moreover there are complicatio involved in dates of closing books and que tions regarding credits on apportionmer Hence the folly of expecting perfection.

The editors, however, desire to publish o vious errors and are especially eager to tra discrepancies. We will hold the column op for others that may be reported.

LEE, MASS.

Lee, Mass., is credited with contributi under the apportionment $472. Ten times th amount and more the treasurer was sure ha been given. It develops that the major po tion of the contributions was sent to the sta office on Jan. 8, 1925; this was received Ja 16; the books close Jan. 10. The amount wi therefore appear in the 1925 Year Book i stead of in the 1924 issue.

In addition, a sizable personal contributio which was intended for apportionment cred was not so understood by the receiving societ and in other cases money was sent direct institutions that could have been credit o apportionment. All together the church coul have had credit for $4,449 instead of $472.

The other three cases are accounted for b misunderstanding in the office of the Woman Union of Pennsylvania. For four years th office of the World Movement and Commissio on Missions kept the records for the Union This was discontinued in the middle of la year and entire dependence was placed on th Union Treasurer for Year Book reports.

DUQUESNE, PA.

Year Book shows $192. It should have bee $215. The difference is properly credited o the books of the C. H. M. S. which now handle the distribution, but the $23 was not reporte to the Year Book.

WEST PITTSTON, PA.

Here a similar situation prevails. Yea Book shows $578; it should be $630.

EBENSBURG, PA.

Year Book shows $1,108, whereas it shoul be $1,207, the discrepancy being accounted fo in the same way.

Vital Questions for Congregationalists

To Come Before the National Council in October

The Value of a Name

siness and sentiment are not supposed to gether, but the business men tell us that e long run, no business can succeed with- entiment. Those who set such a high value the personal and historic associations of big business of our missionary organiza- are slow to consolidate such running s, fearing to lose something besides money. mere name of a great business house is h money, and the actual reach of the s "A. M. A.," for example, in the South hich many of us know very little, is a er power than anything which can be ed by the very best intelligence in a good years. Therefore, why sacrifice even a , in the conduct of that business which is, y the least, in excellent running order, be eed of new ideas and new intelligence what ay.

wish also to say something for the con- ation of those who think that because nse to old-fashioned methods of stimulat- nterest in missions comes but slowly, those ods must be outworn. It is undoubtedly er to reach people who are not informed t missions in this day than ever, but I have nally seen new interest and effort for mis- spring up in the most unexpected and in- ent places when the right person made the al and stressed personal elements. In other s, I do not believe people are so very dif- t after all, and certainly will never be ested by removing any part of the per- contacts which experience has taught us rgely to depend upon in the past. It will do to build up a constituency of those lean back on their contribution to the x envelope, however good the contribu- even though a great many are so harassed iscouraged that it honestly seems to them ir procedure.

am sure, however, that we are all looking reat things from this definite reaching out more power and efficiency, and that if lo not too quickly discard the inherited om of the century passing, we shall be to deal with home missions as broadly and ligently as with the larger field of our gn work.

ELOISE WHITE BUSHNELL.

ybrook, Ct.

he Home Missionary "Why Not's"

ay I, a home missionary for fourteen years, the thought of the denomination before National Council convenes, through the col- s of The Congregationalist? If that privi- is mine, allow me to hurl a few "Why s?" to "provoke one another to good ks," one of the purposes of the Council.

l followers of Jesus striving for the Chris- zation of the world, must know that a stian home base is required for successful gn missionary effort. Without a Christian ed States supplying trained youth for mis- aries and the money for their support, the rican Board cannot accomplish its purpose urkey, China, India, and the other points Tort. Also it is increasingly evident that rica offers an opportunity for foreign mis- through contacts with Chinese students merican universities and Japanese farmers ie West, as with foreigners from nearly nation on earth who are some day to n to the place of their birth.

ese considerations, exclusive of the right l native-born Americans to the Christian message, lead us to some "Why Not's?" as we face National Council. To begin with, why not adopt a bigger plan and program of Christian effort along national lines? The fact of holding the Council in Washington when the President is Honorary Moderator obviously declares the hour timely for the inauguration of increased effort to meet the national spiritual needs of the day.

Specifically, why not determine to establish at once a school of home missions? Home workers should have the same careful training as is offered in the Kennedy School of Missions in Hartford, Ct., for those going abroad. It is not reasonable that those engaged in the home service should face city slum, rural parish, or alien problem less equipped than those entering overseas fields.

Again, why not organize a Student Volunteer Movement for Home Missions? There are young men and women whose lives are already dedicated to the home service; through organization, they could be sent among the churches and colleges to attract youth into the home service by the contagion of their lives and the presentation of problems the nation faces. No doubt many of the summer students sent to serve for a few weeks, if so enlisted for continued effort, would be led to life consecration.

Why not adopt a financial policy for the home service which shall label it as equal in worth to other branches of service? Why not fewer workers with larger salaries, six-year furloughs on salary, with chance to study again and present message of lifework to churches? Why not home missionary residences at seminaries and scholarships that are as keenly needed as for foreign workers?

Why not consolidate our Congregational Societies working at home so that the nation may not be parceled into petty areas among many societies, but all work within the national boundaries becomes part of one plan and enterprise? The presentation of home missions in segments as it is now done in the American Missionary because the denominational work is divided among several societies tends to belittle all the work and weaken its appeal.

Why not develop home workers to greater usefulness? The American Board has brought out Peet, Bridgman, Pye, Laubach, and a score more who are of national and international usefulness. Who knows of the work of a single home missionary outside of his circle?

Why not, in short, at this coming Council add to the admirably progressive movements already begun, such as the summer student service and rural larger parish, a forward movement to make America Christian for its own sake and as a home base for the world effort?

Why not, O worker in city slum, rural parish, or alien problem,—why should we not organize at the National Council, prepare a list of recommendations for that body, and thus back up our forward-looking secretaries who are working for more effective home service, that America may become Christian in fact as now in name?

Let's become articulate, home missionaries. Let's overcome our isolation and speak up in meeting.

Collbran, Col. W. D. BARNES.

Consolidation

In response to your request that readers of The Congregationalist make known their attitude on some of the vital questions that are to come before the National Council next October, I want to speak of one or two matters.

Firstly—regarding the consolidation of the magazines, I think Dr. Palmer's suggestion of a unified journal with a monthly edition that would correspond to the Survey Graphic is a most happy one.

Secondly—in regard to the consolidation of boards, I believe such a policy is usually a wise one. I do not know what the overhead expenses of our various boards are, but they must be considerable in amount. It may not be always wise to cut the overhead, but the reason for not doing it must be urgent if such a policy is to justify itself in the eyes of the layman.

Thirdly—it seems to me that we ought to elect an outstanding layman as Moderator this year. Not merely because we have side-stepped the policy of alternating ministers and laymen as Moderators. Nor merely because the outstanding layman I have in mind comes from the West, whereas most of our recent Moderators have come from the section east of Chicago. But because he is the type of man that I believe our church needs to have as its leader during the coming two years. I refer to the whole-souled, courageous Christian, former Governer Sweet of Colorado.

GLENFORD W. LAWRENCE.

Chicago Commons,
Chicago, Ill.

One Good Journal

By all means combine our periodicals into one superlatively good journal. Subsidize it more heavily, if need be, than all three are now subsidized. Enable us pastors to go to our people with goods we can enthusiastically sell. Give us the talking points of "features" for every member of the family and every type of Congregational churchman. Let us have our Dr. Copelands and our Martha Lees and our "colyumist." Spare no expense to get the ablest editors, reviewers, and contributors. Make it as worthy and necessary a contribution of Congregationalism to modern life as Harvard and Yale were to their day, and more; for this will go into the home and find disciples, not waiting for them to come to it.

Lakewood, O. ROY E. BOWERS.

An Instance of Consolidated Magazines

Several years ago the three foreign missionary magazines, Life and Light, Mission Studies, and the Missionary Herald were merged into one. It was confidently hoped that with only one foreign missionary magazine for which subscriptions must be solicited that Congregationalists would gratefully and eagerly respond with a larger list of subscribers than before. I do not know what story the figures for the entire Congregational constituency would tell, but in Ohio, which is probably an average state, this is the situation:

Before the merger the number of subscriptions to Mission Studies alone was 1,490. There were also a number of subscribers to the Missionary Herald who were not on this list. (I do not know how many.) This past year the number subscribing to the merged magazine, the Missionary Herald, was 810. A loss of more than 680 subscribers, or about half the readers of a foreign missionary periodical.

May we not expect similar results from any other contemplated merger?

Whether we shall lose interest in missions if the number of specific objects in the Apportionment is lessened is hard to predict. Undoubtedly some who love their old friends, the national societies, will lose interest in the apportionment even though their interest in missions continues. But the average church member cares little about the "objects in the Apportionment," while he cares much about the work itself when he is made to see it. The trouble at present is that our Congregational missions are presented too infrequently in the churches, too perfunctorily, and not at all vitally and personally. Many congregations never hear the missionary work presented by its best qualified advocates, board secretaries, and missionaries, and never feel the thrill that such a graphic account of it gives.

The Near East Relief, the Anti-Saloon League, and other organizations make their strong appeals by special representatives in our pulpits. They take their offerings and go their way, often with more money than is give those churches for our world-wide denor tional work. Why? Not because the world work would have no appeal for them bu cause those most vitally interested in it been barred from the pulpits, sometimes few hard-headed trustees who are afraic much money will be taken out of the ch

Cleveland, O. MRS. A. M. GIBBO

OUR READERS' FORUM

Two Weather Vanes

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

In our village, as in every rural neighborhood, the people are apt to be weather-wise, and to watch rather closely the direction of the wind. There are two weather vanes in our vicinity. One on the high school building represents a large quill pen. The other on the church in the form of an ornamental pattern. One day my next door neighbor called my attention to the fact that the vane on the school responded more quickly to a change of wind than that on the church. I thought that this might be due to a difference in weight, for the school vane is much lighter, but it struck me as being rather symbolic of the difference between school and church in comparative sensitiveness to the influences of discoveries and achievements in scientific knowledge: the school vane registering the slight variations, while the church vane is moved only by the stronger and more lasting air currents.

Perhaps, after all, it is inevitable that the church should be more slow in responding to these influences for the spiritual loyalties run deeper and the thought of modifying any of them becomes a more profound concern than that of a changed aspect of our intellectual interests. And it may be well that time should be given for scientific pronouncements to become well established beyond the liability of alteration before deep-lying religious implications are modified in a marked degree.

However, the church should not be so far behind in its recognition of a wider knowledge and changed emphasis that it becomes misleading. So backward that it is unrealiable. So out-of-date that it is ridiculous. When the winds of scientific discussion are whiffling about uncertainly in various quarters, and sudden changes indicate stormy or unsettled weather, it is well enough for the church indicator to be slow to follow all the various shifts; but when the skies have cleared and the winds of scientific discussion have settled down to blow steadily and assuredly,—when it is a bracing northwest breeze with blue skies and a promise of certain weather, then the church ought not to be indicating southeast winds with murky skies and storm warnings. The anachronism then becomes evident and ridiculous.

BURTON A. LUCAS.

Cumberland Center, Me.

An Irish Pastor's Impressions

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Having received a call from the Warren (Vt.) Congregational Church, I was in America only a few weeks when I attended my first conference, at Waterbury, Vt. (1925). The spirit of Christian fellowship and brotherhood which was manifested at that conference I shall never forget. An Irish stranger in a strange land, it was not long until the spirit of Christian brotherhood and the right hand of friendship was extended to my wife, daughter, and myself. Never shall I forget the kindness extended to us by ministers and laymen alike.

What impressed me most was the different types of speakers, with different points of views, yet all with the spirit of Christian unity. What I saw and heard at the Vermont State Conference this year, convinces me that the Congregational churches of America have the right ideals, and are going along the right lines, to promote the growth of Christian knowledge, and unity. The peoples of all lands are looking toward the Christian Church to bring them out of the slough of despond.

It is from America, with its glorious history the idealism of its founders, and the home of liberty, that the peoples of the world are expecting a lead toward a new world.

Fundamentalism and modern, what's in a home?—if all the people of these two sections of thought will only agree to differ on these points, and come together, realizing that what the world needs today is the application of the teachings of the Christ in individual, social, national, and international life? Where we came or evolved from is not so important as what we are and what we hope to be. There is still a unique sweetness about The Name of Jesus, who said, that I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me.

The Gospel of service and brotherhood and love is more needed today than ever. The Congregational churches of America can proclaim this Gospel better because it is seeking to unite the Forces of Good against the Forces of Evil.

And if the same spirit is working throughout the churches of other States, as is working in Vermont, I can predict a glorious future for our churches and Christian teaching. What the world needs are men of the Type of our State Secretary of Vermont, Rev. W. F. Frazier, and the leaders of our Conference. These are just the hasty impressions of an Irish excile.

Warren, Vt. ALFRED F. FERGUSON.

Confronted With Unique Opportunity

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Meeting in the National Capital with the Chief Magistrate an honorary member of the Council and a regular member of the Congregational Church, it ought to result in a great impetus toward the achievement of peace throughout the world.

A thousand delegates representing about a million citizens of surely more than average intelligence and committed to a Christian program of good will to men never can meet without creating an atmosphere of international friendliness which will dispel the present friction and suspicion.

Free from internal dissension itself, and not likely to spend its time quibbling over metaphysical speculations, or biological Simian-tracings the Council can get down to real things.

The first important task is the election of a Moderator. He should be a layman, particularly fitted to represent the denomination at a time like this when the church is confronted with a world in pagan chaos, every nation engaging in saber polishing or rattling against an overwhelming popular public senti against it; racial malice menacing the peaceful neighborhoods, and commercial viciously distorting the whole program o selfish service.

The man to my mind best fitted in ex ence, character, and equipment is Williar Sweet of Denver, a man of modern, Chri social vision,—mature, traveled, retired business, and having time and means to service to the denomination, north, south, or west.

The leading issue before the church at present hour is the outlawry of war. Cl defining the position of the church on whole issue involved, that she is a spir agency and as such has nothing whateve do with a government that depends upon f This position may be neither antagonistic subordinate; just different. Each to keep within its proscribed rights.

The next issue is radical. The Nordic the Sudic must learn to be brothers. have become brothers and neighbors sudd in these modern days. Now for the ad ment.

And the third is the Christianization of p commerce. Mortgaging small and helpless tions with foreign loans; predatory indust ism, exploiting backward and ignorant, hel peoples; and international commercial tions involving the peace of the country.

One other and very important new servic needed. The impossibility of getting about the actual causes of trouble in outside of our own makes it imperative some money should be appropriated to get news from our own representatives in t lands and the same published in The Con gationalist. We all know that we are are getting the truth about the situation in Ch Why not hear by cable from our missionar Their word is more dependable than any respondent of a metropolitan daily. Our isters would be willing to add that fund to others and I am persuaded it would be ra first.

Never before have the Congregationalist America had such an opportunity to show world that they have a mission to the age t now and we are persuaded that it will ris the occasion.

ROBERT ALLINGHAM

Fort Collins, Col.

In the Untrodden Ways

By Cora A. Matson Dolson

Tread not on graves; the wide earth enough
Of roadway, where dead hopes have ne lain.
Better, with eager step, to seek its rough
New windings, and, with cheery heart, prove
The healing balsams of new life, new l
Than stay to weep beside ideals slain.

It is not what a man is, but what he can which challenges the supreme effort of Jesus M. Ashby Jones.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

Fifty Years in the Ministry

n the last Sunday of July Rev. John an closed a period of 50 years in the min- of the Congregational denomination, and years of pastoral work at BRISTOL, N. H. other two Protestant churches of the vil- united in the service of respect and lis- to Mr. Cowan's closing sermon on "A Century in the Gospel Ministry." It was ep, scholarly address, with lessons drawn his rich book of experiences and observa-

r. Cowan is a native of Parkesburg, Pa., cotch-Irish descent, with Presbyterian an- rs back to the days of John Knox. He educated at a Presbyterian college, Lafay- and a Presbyterian seminary, Union, but for the 50 years of his ministry served gregational churches. He was ordained 21, 1875, and has since that time served churches, all in New England: Essex and ter, Vt., South Deerfield and Southampton, ., and Lyme and Bristol, N. H. In this there has not been the loss of a single between pastorates, and of only four Sun- in the 50 years, due to illness.

n leaving Bristol Mr. Cowan will make his with his daughter, Miss Mabel F. Cowan, is a teacher in Billerica, Mass. Two sons ve, both of whom were overseas during World War, and are now in electrical work ew York and Detroit. Mrs. Cowan passed a little over a year ago.

he clerk of the Bristol Church has received of resolutions passed at the recent meet- f the New Hampshire Congregational Con- ce regarding Mr. Cowan's retirement, essive of the deep appreciation of the rkable contribution he has made to the ch by his "intellectual strength and ability, broad, scholarly reading and thinking, his tual fervor and earnestness, by his kindly t and his willingness to serve, by his mod- and devotion, spirit of co-operation and denominational fellowship, by all of which as proved himself a sterling example of our England ministry." H. B. P.

Reaching the Young Folks

LUMBIA, BARBERTON, O., Rev. J. W. ton, pastor, has found three successful of dealing with the problem of the young

Short chalk talks have been given every lay by the pastor. These have been in ion to the regular sermon and have proved terest old as well as young. Nearly all he older church school scholars stay for ch.

The churches of the city started an inter- ch baseball league but this church had no . The pastor and a faithful worker in vicinity, not a church-goer, "rounded up" t 20 young men from 18 to 35 years of many of whom lived in an unchurched munity about five miles away. Players coached by the pastor four nights a and a team was formed and the pastor made manager. According to the rules of league all must attend church school and men agreed to do so and have been regu- even bringing their wives. A new class formed and the pastor chosen as the teacher, so that now there is a splendid class of young married men, which will soon be the means of new members in the church and later perhaps open up a new territory for a Congregational church. A great many young men who are not church men in the neighborhood are talking about joining the class, for they constantly comment upon the minister who can play the man and play baseball. This team is now considered the strongest in the league. This is a good piece of parish work, though out of the ordinary line, perhaps.

3. It was found that many of the boys in the vicinity from 10 to 16 years old were not as plentiful as they might be in church school and the few who attended had only a slight knowledge of the Bible or Jesus. Therefore, the pastor, seeing the opportunity, started a secret lodge. The lodge has seven degrees, seven officers, and has plain and inexpensive regalia. It follows a brief outline of the Bible for the first five degrees. The last two degrees treat of the duty of a Christian citizen and Congregational church history. The work of the degrees is in bare outline, so that any pastor can easily fill in from his knowledge. The lodge is easily adaptable to any church school. The boys like it, but best of all a pastor cannot help but enjoy being with the boys. Many of the Ohio pastors have written to ask about it. It has helped the church at Barberton to solve the boy problem.

From East to West

MAINE

Ordained Twenty-Five Years Ago

Sunday, July 26, was the 25th anniversary of the ordination of Rev. W. A. Richmond, pastor of FIRST, BRIDGTON. A special service was arranged in which three clergymen, numbered among our summer visitors for many years, took part. Rev. H. C. Hay of Boston, pastor of the Swedenborgian Church, offered the prayer, Rev. J. A. Richards of Winnetka, Ill., and Rev. E. A. Burnham of Taunton, Mass., gave brief addresses, expressing the worth and high privilege of the ministerial office. Many summer people were in attendance at the service.

That evening a community service was held in the big Chautauqua tent with all the local pastors taking part. The attendance was remarkably good.

The noon forums, which in other summers have been so popular a feature of Mr. Richmonds Sunday services, are maintained again this year. Among the summer colony are many who are helpful as leaders and participants in these discussions.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Triple Celebration at Raymond

Late in July on a week-day evening, RAYMOND held a triple celebration in honor of the pastor, Rev. H. E. Carlson, who is leaving after a three-year pastorate to take a charge in Iowa; of Charles Poor, veteran organist of the church, and of Miss Louvan Harriman, prominent in the work of the church. There was a reception, and a program of music and refreshments. As a token of appreciation of the pastor's faithful service, he and Mrs. Carlson were presented with a purse of gold. Mr. Carlson presented Mr. Poor a richly upholstered arm-chair, and in doing so mentioned his faithful work in the community, and for 60 years as organist of the church. It was Mr. Poor's 82d birthday and his fellow-citizens delighted to honor him as a loyal and useful member of the community. Miss Harrimon was presented with a birthday cake in honor of her approaching 82d birthday. She has had a long record of service for the local church.

Musical Treat at Gorham

Recently when Signor Mario Capelli of the Metropolitan Opera Company, the world celebrated tenor came to GORHAM to give a concert in the local opera house, he remained over the week-end and gave a concert in the auditorium of the Congregational Church, Rev. William Sinclair, pastor. The church was crowded to the doors. Signor Capelli is a Protestant, a member of the Methodist Church.

MASSACHUSETTS

Descendants of Original Pew-Holders at First, Middleboro

Sponsored by the Old Middleboro Historical Association a unique service was held Sunday afternoon, Aug. 9, in the old Middleboro Meeting House on the Green. The church, under the leadership of Rev. Arthur G. Cummings, minister since 1905, co-operated in making the affair notable. In early Middleboro history this Congregational church, organized in 1694, served the entire township. Its roll of members was in proportion reaching 1,400 during the pastorate of Dr. Israel W. Putnam (1835-65). Colonial governors worshiped in its ancient edifice and Whitfield and the elder Beecher preached from its pulpits. The present house was erected in 1828.

The commemorative service was participated in by a distinguished company of descendants of original pew-holders seated where their forebears worshiped, though in the first meeting house "rude benches without backs" offered the only hospitality. Dr. Brewer Eddy of the American Board, president of the local Eddy Association, and whose ninth grandfather was one of the original proprietors of the town, gave the memorial address. Music was rendered by a stringed orchestra assisted by a chorus of 40 voices. W. P. L.

Stated Supply for Harvard, Dorchester

HARVARD, DORCHESTER, lately served by Rev. J. G. Miller, has made an arrangement with Second, Dorchester, by which Rev. E. E. Aiken, Jr., Director of Religious Education, will become stated pulpit supply. He begins this relation Sept. 1.

First, Greenfield, Has New Parish House

FIRST, GREENFIELD, has a new parish house which is not fully completed and yet has been in partial use since April 2, 1924. The main part of the building is 68 by 42 feet outside measurement and contains an assembly hall, with a seating capacity of 375, and a gymnasium in the basement which is 65 by 41 feet on the floor and 17 feet high. The wing extends westerly from the main part and contains the front entrance hall, a reception parlor, a library and reading room, and the kitchen which is located next to the assembly hall and connected with it by double doors. In the basement of the wing there is also a commodious men's room, toilet rooms, and the heating plant. The cost of the building as it stands is $25,000, and when fully completed will not be less than $27,000. About one-half of the cost was raised by subscription and the balance was borrowed on a mortgage. The pastor of the church is Rev. H. C. Beebe, to whose unremitting efforts must be given much of the credit for the success of the campaign which has resulted in the possession by the society of this much-needed equipment.

PARISH HOUSE, FIRST, GREENFIELD, MASS.

"Loyal League" Publishes a Manual

The Loyal League, organized in 1913 in the interest of the girls of GRACE, FRAMINGHAM, has recently issued a handbook, compiled and published by Miss Isabella S. Craigin of Framingham. Since its organization more than ten years ago this work has grown steadily, its membership being open to girls ten years old and over. There are several ranks of membership, depending upon a girl's age and upon her ambition to win honors. At the time of its organization there was no thought of the League's extension beyond Grace Church, but its method of operation, worked out by experience, led to the belief that it might meet equally the needs of other girls in other churches. It is essentially democratic and undenominational.

Brockton and Vicinity

A Vacation Bible School at SOUTH, BROCKTON, representing nine churches of the city, including Christian Science, had an enrollment of 210. Interesting demonstrations of work were given, July 24, at closing exercises in which pupils of seven nationalities participated.

Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Dornan, of WHITMAN, are summering in Nova Scotia.

ROCKLAND'S August supplies include Rev. Messrs. J. M. Trout, Chelsea, and E. S. Pressey, Belmont.

CENTRAL, MIDDLEBORO, is this month enjoying a series of Sunday evening organ recitals.

Candidates for its vacant pulpit are being heard by FIRST, ABINGTON.

EAST WEYMOUTH, with the Methodist Church of the town, had 75 pupils in its summer Vacation School which closed Aug. 3 with appropriate program.

VERMONT

Interdenominational Celebration of Communion

At the church at GREENSBORO, which in the summer time is attended by large congregations of summer visitors who are members of many different denominations, the minister, Rev. E. R. Gordon, arranged for an interdenominational celebration of the Lords Supper. The minister invited all followers of Christ, without regard to denominational affiliation, to participate, adding this statement: "This is not the Congregational Table; it is the Lord's Table."

The officiating clergymen and laymen were: Rev. E. R. Gordon, Greensboro, Vt., Congregational; Dr. M. S. Howland, Buffalo, N. Y., Presbyterian; Prof. E. H. Rockwell, New Brunswick, N. J., Dutch Reformed; Deacon C. H. Potter, Orange, N. J., Presbyterian; Deacon A. E. Perrin, Greensboro, Vt., Congregational; Deacon P. N. Allen, Greensboro, Vt., Congregational.

At this service six members were received into the church, some of whom came by most brotherly letters of dismission and recommendation from a Baptist Church in Beverly, Mass. After the minister had extended the right hand of fellowship welcoming these new members into the local church and into the Congregational denomination, the minister invited Dr. M. S. Howland to give to the new members the right hand of fellowship on behalf of the Universal Church of Christ.

Communicants of more than six denominations participated in the Lord's Supper at this time, and after the service many of these came forward to greet the new members.

The Divine Presence seemed manifest. An extraordinary spirit of brotherhood and good fellowship prevailed. Afterward an Episcopalian said: "That was a very impressive service. It seemed like a return to the Apostolic Church." Another Episcopalian said: "It moved me deeply. Big lumps kept coming up in my throat all the time."

CONNECTICUT

Collinsville's New Members

FIRST, COLLINSVILLE, received into membership, July 5, on confession of faith, four, and by upward revision, 17. To explain the revision: These 17 represent the number reclaimed, after two years of correspondence by a special secretary, from a much larger number whose names were retired five years ago. These 17 are in regular communication now with the church. They were voted into regular standing.

Resigns the Pastorate of First, Milford

Rev. L. B. Briggs has resigned the pastorate of FIRST, MILFORD, after a ministry of eight years. During this time 337 members have been received into the church, the local budget has been increased 100 per cent., and the missionary budget has been increased 400 per cent. for denominational gifts. The Church School has been reorganized and the average attendance has increased 75 per cent. Forty thousand dollars have been spent on improvements and equipment, all but $2,000 of this amount having been paid in.

Mr. Briggs spent six months in France during the war as chaplain for the American Red Cross. He is not a member of the faculty of Columbia University, as previously rep but holds an executive position in the u sity. His resignation is to take effect i fall.

A 100 Per Cent. Churched Community?

Although "UNITED CHURCH," BEACON F Rev. T. F. Campbell, pastor, has not able to duplicate her last year's E ingathering of 56 new members, 1925 thus far shown good progress. Tw have been added to her fellowship, eigh letter and 12 on confession. Seven of th received baptism, all are of high school a older, one a man of 51. The goal of ch ambition is a 100 per cent churched commu and in striving for it, the membership o church has been almost doubled in the 30 months, 84 new members being added t original resident membership of 95. "E man's Bible Class," an organization of church, which has a record enrollment of men, and an average attendance record o per cent. at 9.30 on Sunday mornings for consecutive months, has continued success through its second year, completing a two- study of the Life of Christ, with Matth Gospel as the text-book.

In the November election of last year, church ranked highest in the state of Co ticut, in the Christian Herald's Get-Out Vote Contest, voting 98 per cent. of her v membership, and receiving as the prize a be ful Holman Pulpit Bible; and now she is loo for "more worlds to conquer." If some good cator, looking for an ideal location for a vate school would select Beacon Falls, thus supply the local lack of a high sc "United Church" would be happy to co-ope

NEW JERSEY

Annual Meeting of Community, Rutherfo

COMMUNITY, RUTHERFORD, Rev. N. Pendleton, pastor, reports these outstan features of their recent annual meeting:

1. One hundred and one new members ceived into the church.

2. The rapid growth and successful ac ties of the Young Men's Bible Class and (The Rutcons).

3. The completion and opening of the church and community center.

4. The success of the Sunday evening ices.

5. The local budget of $10,000 well t care of.

6. The building fund in a most satisfac condition.

7. Growth of the Sunday school and Young Women's Club.

8. The splendid financial successes of Ladies' Aid.

9. Installation of bowling alleys, pool ta etc., by the Men's Club.

10. Over 100 per cent. increase in att ance at the Sunday morning service.

The program for the fall and winter se is developing with fine promise. Many new tures will be introduced, including the es lishment of the Rutherford Forum, to be in the community center one Sunday night month. The events planned for September October include the dedication of the church and pipe organ, a social rally given the new members to the old-timers and t friends, and "A Cross-Word Sanitarium the board of trustees as the inmates.

OHIO

Votes to Disband

IMMANUEL BOHEMIAN, CLEVELAND, or ized in 1905 as the result of Dr. Shauf work, has voted to disband and sell its p rty, its natural constituency having become merican and moved away. The Cleveland ohemians and Czecho-Slovaks steadily refuse be regarded as foreigners and the younger eneration furnish some of the finest working aterial in our churches.

FLORIDA

ew Church in Fort Myers

Fort Myers is a rapidly growing city of 2,000 people. It is the center of a large region Southwest Florida and is destined to hold a mmanding place among the cities of the state. hen the Tamiami Trail is completed a mil-on people will annually pass through the ty on the great highway that will encircle e state. Many Congregationalists have been ming to Fort Myers and, as in many other Florida's leading cities, finding no Congre-tional Church they joined and built up the resbyterian Church. In the larger denomina-onal program for Florida, Rev. O. T. Ander-n, pastor at large for Florida, opened serv-es in a theater last March. He gathered the embers of a church and, on July 26, assisted Supt. L. H. Keller, a church of 27 mem-rs was organized. A community house, to be ed for religious services, temporarily, will opened in October, in the coming best resi-ntial section of the city. This is the begin-ng of a strong, influential church in this owing city. Fort Myers, the winter home Edison and Ford, will welcome Congrega-onal tourists and residents. Write Rev. O. T. nderson, General Delivery, Fort Myers, Fla.

INDIANA

ans Adopted for New Church

Gary has decided on plans for a new church. he building will be of the old New England pe with massive columns in the front and all, tapering spire giving a very handsome pearance. The plans provide for every con-nience for a fully organized modern work. he new church is in a rapidly growing resi-nce district. The opportunity to conduct a ighborhood church opens up auspiciously. Rev. Willard Crosby Lyon is the minister and he has patiently and hopefully labored for this opportunity. Our place and work are assured in Gary by his work and by the decision to build in the new location. The old church in the downtown district has been sold to advantage. The entire situation is most promising.

Minister Leaves Terre Haute

Rev. H. R. Jay, for four years minister at PLYMOUTH, TERRE HAUTE, leaves, Sept. 1, for the pastorate at Lockport, Ill. During his ministry at Plymouth a fine new church has been built. Mr. Jay has served as secretary of the ministerial association and as secretary of the local departments of the Indiana School of Religion. A field of much promise awaits him at Lockport.

IOWA

Tornado Destroys Church at Alexander

A destructive tornado swept through northern Iowa June 11, leaving a trail of wreckage in its path. Many beautiful groves were broken down and farm buildings lie in ruin. The little town of Alexander was caught in its fury and suffered considerable property damage. Fortunately no lives were lost or even seriously injured. Judged by the havoc wrought, the tornado seemed to have special grievance against the churches of the village. The Congregationalists, who owned the best building in town, suffered the total loss of their church. The Lutheran Church was also completely destroyed. The Methodist Church was moved six feet from the foundation, and the parsonage belonging to the Reformed Church was partially wrecked. It has long been felt that this community of only 400 people was somewhat overchurched. This calamity has renewed the agitation for federation with more lively interest than ever before, and it is probable that our people will enter into some co-operative agreement with the Methodists. If this can be accomplished the wrath of the elements may contribute to the glory of God and the advancement of his kingdom.

"The Little Brown Church" a Real Shrine

The Bradford Church, commonly known as "The Little Brown Church in the Vale," still maintains its popularity as Iowa's most attractive matrimonial and religious shrine. Thousands of people, from all over the country, visit the church during the tourist season. Religious services are held every Sunday afternoon and the church is always crowded, with often as many people outside as in. On a recent Sunday the services were of a special character, fittingly setting apart a parcel of ground which has been acquired, and which will afford better facilities for handling the Sunday visitors. Supt. P. A. Johnson preached the sermon, Rev. W. M. Swann of Charles City offered the prayer, and Mrs. I. M. Fisher of Cedar Falls gave an historical sketch. The month of June witnessed the joining together in holy wedlock of 80 couples—eight ceremonies being performed on the last day of the month. In one instance the groom hailed from Long Beach, Cal., and the bride from Los Angeles. Rev. G. T. Hanna, pastor of Nashua, is the spiritual guide at this famous Congregational shrine.

IDAHO

Student Supplies

At the suggestion of Supt. C. H. Harrison, three students from the Pacific School of Religion are relieving several of our home missionary pastors this summer, giving them an opportunity to have a real vacation. This plan is working out in a happy way. Several men who have been tied down to their isolated fields for years have had the privilege of getting completely out of the state for awhile. They are returning with new visions of service and renewed vitality. So successful has been the plan that it is hoped that each year some of the pastors can be relieved in this way. Messrs. Supplee, Blake, and Trovik are the three student pastors, each one of whom has done real work this summer.

Splendid Growth at Pocatello

FIRST, POCATELLO, has received 108 into fellowship, most of them on confession, since Rev. George Sloan came as pastor less than a year ago. If the present growth continues a new church building will be an essential in a short time. Standing room has been at a premium often during the past winter.

Daily Vacation Bible Schools

Daily Vacation Bible Schools have been conducted at WEISER, NEW PLYMOUTH, INDIAN VALLEY, and FAIRVIEW this summer. Mr. Erickson, a college student from Seattle, has assisted at New Plymouth and at Fairview.

Important Announcement

Relating to Reduced Railroad Rates to the National Council Meeting at Washington, D. C., October 20th to 28th, 1925

Round-trip tickets to Washington, D C., will be sold at the rate of one and one-half times the single trip rate on the certificate plan under the following conditions:

1. Selling dates and return limit (to reach starting point):

All points in	Selling Dates	Return Limit
The New England Association	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
Central Passenger Association	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
Southeastern Association	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
Southwestern Association, Ark., Kan., La., Mo.	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
Oklahoma and Texas	Oct. 16-22	Nov. 5
Transcontinental Association; from Ill., Iowa, Kan., Minn., Mo., Neb., Northern Mich., N. D., S. D., Wis. and Julesburg, Col.	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
From Col. (except Julesburg), Idaho, Mont., New Mex., Utah, Wyo.	Oct. 16-22	Nov. 5
From Ariz., British Col., Cal., Nev., Ore., Wash.	Oct. 9-15	Nov. 11
Trunk Line Association	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
Canadian Association Rate applies only to points east of Armstrong and Fort William	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4

2. Tickets will be good going and returning the same route only.
3. In order to purchase the reduced fare excursion ticket, it is necessary that the applicant present an official identification certificate. These certificates will be furnished all official delegates and Registered "Associate Members" by the National Council Office, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City. If you have not received your certificate, write the National Council Office at once.
4. Tickets must be validated by Railway Agent at Washington, for return trip.
5. The return trip may be begun any time after Oct. 19, but must be completed before midnight of the final return limit.
6. Local Railroad Ticket Agents should be notified at least three days before ticket is purchased as they may not have blanks on hand.
7. Please note carefully that tickets will be sold only on the dates specified, and cannot be purchased except on presentation of certificate issued by the National Council Office. There will be no exception to this rule of the Railroads.
8. The official Certificate for delegates will be mailed to them by the office on receipt of credentials of election and must be preserved by them as duplicates cannot be issued. Additional certificates will be furnished members of families on receipt of registration of such members as "Associate Members."
9. "Associate Members" will receive the certificate on receipt of registration. There must be separate registration for each individual.

For Additional Information write to National Council of Congregational Churches

287 Fourth Avenue New York City

THE HALL ORGAN COMPANY
WEST HAVEN, CONN.
High Grade Pipe Organs
Churches Masonic Halls Residences

Individual Cups
Over 50,000 churches use Thomas Service. Self-collecting Tray saves one-fourth cost of others. Catalog and Trial Free.
Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 5 Lima, Ohio.

McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND
220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

Organ Builder Tuning Repairs
WILLIAM O. LYNCH
16 Everett Ave. Dorchester, Mass.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B

The school at New Plymouth was especially successful under the direction of Mrs. A. I. Ferch and a splendid corps of teachers.

SOUTH DAKOTA

A Notable Event at Templeton

A year ago the church building of TEMPLETON, of the Wessington Springs Parish, was completely wrecked by a storm of wide destructiveness. Steps were taken at once to secure plans for a new building, but the outlook was not hopeful. The last bank in the community had closed its doors two months before, and the whole region had suffered heavily from the storm's devastation.

However, a felicitous combination of faith and works prevailed over the untoward circumstances, and on June 14, 1925, the anniversary of the "big storm," a happy people met to dedicate a larger, better equipped, and more beautiful building than the one they lost.

Dr. D. J. Perrin preached the dedicatory sermon and led in raising the deficit. The amount needed was easily over-subscribed, and enough additional was raised to assure a good lighting plant. Rev. J. B. Reese, who built the first church, recalled the difficulties encountered in the earlier day, when lumber had to be hauled 25 miles by team over bottomless roads, and only three subscriptions overtopped the ten-dollar mark. Rev. S. F. Huntley, a veteran of 85 years, the father and founder the church, was able to be present and vo the dedicatory prayer.

TEMPLETON CHURCH IN WESSINGTON SPRINGS PARISH, S. D.
June 14, 1924

TEMPLETON CHURCH, WESSINGTON SPRINGS
June 14, 1925

The addition during June of 21 new memb to the little band of 30 already on the r helped to make the dedication season one special blessing.

CALIFORNIA

Recognition Service for Masis Church

To take care of the Turkish-speaking Arm nian hundreds in Los Angeles is the purp of the Masis Church (Old Armenian for Mou Ararat), Rev. Haig Adadourian, minister. T original membership of 50 has been increa to 63. A meeting which accorded recogniti was held in the Sunday School auditorium First Church, June 16. Rev. E. D. Gayl was made moderator and Rev. A. S. Yeretzi scribe. At the evening session, the serm was given by Rev. H. C. Culbertson. Oth parts were taken by Rev. J. J. Jones, R F. E. Dell, and Supt. G. F. Kenngott. Int esting features were greetings brought by R Adom Melikian, pastor of the Apostolic (Gr orian) Church of Los Angeles, and by R M. H. Knadjian, of Fresno for the Armeni Evangelical Union of California.

Young People Speak Out at Mission Hills

The young people these days find a way speak out. Inspired by a sermon in Bo Week, the young people of the Christian E deavor classes in the Sunday School of M SION HILLS, SAN DIEGO, cornered an idea, a put it into drama. The subject of this pl given one evening, was "Razzberries." "T Christian Endeavor classes represented by t cast wish to state that their desire in prese ing this play is solely to offer their viewpoi concerning certain matters vital to the life a community church, in the hope that it m promote a closer union between the young and older generations and tend to bring both a family united, nearer to the church."

In the interests of reconciliation, Rev. La rence Wilson gave the following suggestive Su day evening sermons: "On What Can Fund mentalists and Modernists Agree?"; "On Wh Can Educators and Anti-Evolutionists Agree? "On What Can Catholics and Anti-Catholi Agree?"; "On What Can 'Patriotic Societi and 'Peace Societies' Agree?"

Wedding of Plymouth and Olivet, Los Ange

With all legal preliminaries settled, PLY OUTH and OLIVET, LOS ANGELES, had their ma riage service Sunday, May 24. Following t Church School hour, the congregation of Oliv formed an automobile procession for the mor

Did You Have Whooping Cough When You Were a Child?

Remember the stuff mother rubbed on your chest that loosened the phlegm and brought relief so quickly.

It's called Roche's Embrocation and is still aiding thousands of little ones throughout the land.

Effective for croup and colds on the chest too

Sold by All Druggists

E. FOUGERA & Co., Inc., New York
W. Edwards & Son, London, Eng.

ROCHE'S EMBROCATION

Fights Whooping Cough and Croup

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

CAMPS AND VACATION PLACES

Desirable place to board for elderly husband and wife. Home of practical nurse. Quiet village among New Hampshire hills. Climate unsurpassed, price moderate. Mrs. H. E. Card, West Springfield, N. H.

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., in the vicinity of the White Mountains. We offer the comforts and conveniences needed for a successful vacation and rest. No hay fever. Booklet. A. J. Newman, Prop.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, homelike rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

PASTOR WANTED

Pastor wanted for rural Congregational church in Brentwood, N. H. Apply to Mrs. John F. Swasey, Exeter, N. H., R. D.

PASTORATE WANTED

Pastorate wanted—Nebraska or Iowa preferred. Both college and seminary training. Interesting preacher, efficient pastor, good executive. Nearly a year Nebraska Near East Relief representative. Rev. Albert A. Robertson, 2100 Vine St., Lincoln, Neb.

Congregational minister, well educated, with wide experience as teacher and preacher, desires pastorate. Iowa preferred. Rev. Woodcock, Deep River, Iowa.

Pastor wishes church in rural or semi-rural community. Federated or union church in Southern New England preferred. Address "M. A.," Congregationalist.

TEACHERS WANTED

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

POSITION WANTED

Desire position to teach in high school, Science Department. Address "F. T. I.," Congregationalist.

MISCELLANEOUS

Brookline—One or two elderly or semi-invalid people will be accommodated in home of nurse and former mission worker. Home comforts. Good food. Cheerful surroundings. S. G. Smith, 42 Harris St., Brookline, Mass. Tel. Aspinwall 1277.

Mail Order Printing. Ask for quotations. 500 envelopes and 500 letterheads or statements or billheads, $5.00. The Print Shop, E. Northfield, Mass.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wastleless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

Unusual opportunity to adopt Bob, nine, merry disposition, superior intelligence, sterling character, good New England stock. "C. C.," Congregationalist.

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.
THE LESLIE
A quiet, cosy little House by the sea. Now open. Private baths. Descriptive booklet. 21st season.

service at Plymouth, where there was appriate sermon and music. Services are distinued at old Plymouth, and the property be sold. Now the commodious and beautiWest Coast Theater on Washington Boule, seating 2,400, is used for the Church ool and morning worship. Dr. C. F. Aked, il recently preaching colleague with Dr. nk Dyer at Wilshire Boulevard, has now me associate with Dr. Hopkins at Plymh and preaches mornings in the theater. ning meetings are held at the old Olivet the time, but the building will be demold and a structure fitting for the enlarged ortunity will be erected on the lot. Dr. kins spends July in the East, and in ust will return to put on the campaign to nce the new structure.

n the two years of Dr. W. H. Hopkins' pasite nearly 150 members have been received. a recent group of 10, a family of four genions were received. To those who realize the coming of Dr. Hopkins was a last desite effort of the conference to save Olivet n extinction, there is the more marvel in program of ambitious enlargement now beexecuted. In addition to Drs. Hopkins and d, Rev. J. V. Mauzey has been enlisted as eational director. In their repertoire of ice is a choice orchestra and a great chorus r led by Mrs. E. C. Crossman.

v Project at Westgate

s a rule now in city projects, the central e scouts out a strategic location and plants urch there whether the neighborhood asks it or not. Especially welcome, then, was request coming from the choice new sec at Westgate to locate a Congregational rch among them. They start with nearly members, had already decided upon their ister, Rev. G. F. Ray, and made a good scription toward his salary. The Extension iety of Los Angeles has secured a lot, about mile from the new Occidental College for ng men, and about the same distance from rtelle. This should develop into a strong church.

a Ana Brotherhood's "Smile Night"

he May meeting of the SANTA ANA Brotherd, closing its season, is "always Ladies' nt and also Smile Night." The program is ays local talent and always frivolous. Its object is to help folks smile. It always eeds. The program this year sustained reputation of "Smile Night." So there e the dinner, jazz music and ragtime by usually dignified church choir. There were ches: "Would the Modern John Alden e a Sacrifice Hit for Myles Standish?"; the Modern Girl More of a Flapper than cilla?"; "Which Would You Enjoy Most, ing Your Leg Pulled by a Lawyer, or Your th Pulled by a Dentist?"; a debate, "Red, that woman's reputation for talkativeis based on fiction and that man is the ative member of the human family," the mative by the ladies, and negative by the . An original poem, "Modern or Victorian," pleted the program.

or Wednesday evenings, Dr. Carl Patton's Religion in the Thought of Today, has studied chapter by chapter. The morning m has had a series of biographical studies: , Galileo, Jeremiah, William Penn, Job, tin Luther.

ican Work Expanding hat the Southern California Conference some responsibility for the Mexican folk hown by the annual expenditure of $6,000, to speak of the contributions of the people nselves; and by the aggressive and devoted leadership of Supt. C. C. Haworth, and other white workers. The Pomona Valley Mexican Church has been divided into two churches, at Chino and at Pomona. There was an increase in membership last year of 23. The line of stations extends along the Valley Boulevard from Puente on the west to East Highlands on the east, and includes Pomona, Chino, Ontario, Claremont, Cucamonga, and Mentone, and Redlands Junction. Fertile expedients are adopted to win interest, such as the stereopticon and motion pictures. Sometimes meetings are held in the homes or the packing houses, or on the street. The people are responsive, appreciative, and grateful.

Improvements at Maricopa

Led by their new minister, Rev. H. E. Chapman, the MARICOPA parsonage has been renovated and an addition made to it. The church also has been refurbished. Congregations have grown, as has the Church School to 130. The Christian Endeavor Society won the county banner.

Young People Active in Sierra Madre

Operating under the commission form of government, the League of Youth at SIERRA MADRE is a vital force. They work under the project method: a general project, $5,000 for the new organ, and monthly projects such as a forum on community needs, one on building up the Sunday evening service, one on working for the sick, another on bringing their folk into contact with the Fundamentalists. Thus in two years from a half dozen they have become 40. Vigorously led by Rev. W. A. Tate, the church, thought a couple of years ago ready to close its doors, has so strong a congregation that they have secured a fine new lot, moved the parsonage, and are about to erect a $60,000 structure. The minister was recently presented with an individual Communion service, for it is a community which welcomes the sick, there being some 425 tubercular people. At a high elevation, the people of the church have ideals of service as noble as its mountains.

Social Service at Lake Avenue, Pasadena

Evangelism has a strong emphasis at LAKE AVE., PASADENA. Its healthy tone is indicated by many social fruits. This spring, Dr. Millicent Waterhouse held afternoon clinics once a week, at which mothers could obtain expert advice on their children. A four days' Conference of Christian Workers had for its faculty Dr. H. A. Dowling and Dr. Millicent Waterhouse. There was a successful School of Missions, with an average attendance of 251, which gave $212 to work in China. One night was given to International Brotherhood, with parts taken by a Negro, a Chinese, a Japanese, an Armenian, a Spaniard, and an Icelander, while Rev. Paul Waterhouse spoke on "International Relations." Fraternal spirit among the races was fostered by a dinner given by the official board of this church to the officials of the Japanese Union Church.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

BOWN, F. A., Plummer, Ida., to Condon, Ore. Accepts to begin Sept. 1.

EELLS, EDWARD, First, Chesterfield, Mass., to Vernon Centre, Ct. Accepts to begin Sept. 1.

HESS, A. F., to Beaumont, Texas. At work.

MARK, STEPHEN T. K., Second Chinese Church, Honolulu.

PAGE, F. H., First, Waltham, Mass., to presidency of Massachusetts Home Missionary Society. Accepts. Begins full-time service Nov. 1.

PERRY, E. W., Wailuku and Kahului Union Churches, Hawaiian Island. To take up his work in October.

SCHLARAETZKI, WALTER, Lockport, Ill., to New England, Chicago, Ill., to be assistant pastor and director of religious education. To begin Sept. 1.

VAANANEN, JOHANNES, Maynard, Mass. (Finnish), to Portland, Ore. Accepts.

Correction

Notice of the call of Rev. T. Y. Williams, Chicago, to First, Kansas City, noted in The Congregationalist of Aug. 6, was based upon what was supposed to be authentic information. Mr. Williams was not called to permanent pastorate but served acceptably as stated supply.

NOTICE

The National Council Office desires to have a complete file of pictures of former moderators. Pictures are desired of the following:

REV. W. I. BUDINGTON
HON. L. S. FOSTER
HON. W. B. WASHBURN
HON. LORRIN A. COOKE

Any information that will assist in securing these pictures will be greatly appreciated.

Address, National Council Office
287 Fourth Ave. New York City

UNUSUAL
Educational Opportunity

FOR YOUNG LADIES who wish to spend a year of study in Florence, Italy, in healthful home surroundings. Courses under recognized professors in Italian, French, History, Art and Music, Recreational work in Fencing, Horseback Riding and Dancing. Trips during the winter to Rome, Perugia and Siena. School term October to June. Best references given and required. For terms address THE SECRETARY, Box 142, Cambridge, Mass.

The Pratt Teachers' Agency
70 Fifth Avenue, New York
Recommends teachers to colleges, public and private schools in all parts of the country. Advises parents about schools.

BE A LEADER!

Leadership is largely a question of Training.

The Chicago Theological Seminary

has trained more than 2,000 men for positions of Christian Service. It knows how! Every opportunity for success is offered high grade students desiring to enter the Ministry. Full information gladly furnished.

FRANK G. WARD, Dean 5757 University Avenue, Chicago

Resignations

CARLSON, H. E. (M. E.), Raymond, N. H.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
COLORADO
Lyons		15
MASSACHUSETTS
Dedham, Riverdale	13	15
NORTH CAROLINA
Bailey's Grove	1	2

Personals

BENNETT, REV. W. E., the new pastor of Community, Manitou, Col., is making prompt and noteworthy advances. The church roof has been reshingled by volunteers from the congregation, led by the minister, and the entire interior of the building has been renovated. Already 53 new members have been received into fellowship. Mr. Bennett is an Illinois product, and a graduate of Northwestern University and Garrett Biblical Institute. His ministry thus far has been in the Methodist Episcopal Church. It was largely his splendid record as pastor of St. Paul's M. E. Church at Colorado Springs which led to his unanimous call to Manitou Community. He erected the church and parsonage at St. Paul's and increased the membership from 180 to 500.

BOLLINGER, REV. E. S., after being laid aside for several weeks by injuries received in an automobile accident, is back in the harness and has been supplying Park Place, Clackamas, and other adjacent points. Mr. Bollinger's services as a general worker are greatly appreciated.

GALE, REV. LOUIS, of Nucla, Col., is using a new home missionary car to good advantage in his scattered parish.

GUILD, REV. GEORGE, of Craig, Col., is being congratulated on his recent marriage to Miss Vera Palmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Palmer, now of Craig, but formerly of Boulder. The bride is a graduate of the University of Colorado and has been teaching home economics the past year in the Brighton High School. Mr. and Mrs. Guild are spending their honeymoon attending the summer session of Chicago Seminary.

HAYLEY, REV. J. W., a retired minister, making his home at Center Tuftonsboro, N. H., quietly observed his 91st birthday on June 8 of the present year.

LANE, PROF. CHARLES S., of the Hartford Seminary Foundation, Hartford, Ct., with his two sons from New Hampshire parishes, Rev. Stoddard Lane of First, Manchester, and Rev. G. H. Lane of Milford, is at Mere Point, Me. Dr. Lane's daughter, Laura, of the middle class in Hartford Seminary, is engaged to Mr. E. Jerome Johanson, who graduated from the seminary last May, receiving the Graduate Fellowship as well as the prize in Evangelistic Theology.

OSBORNE, REV. E. C., pastor at Pembroke, N. H., has announced his engagement to Miss Dorothy Ellen Harte of Roxbury, Mass.

PERRIN, SUPT. D. J., and ASSISTANT SUPT. GEORGE WILLIAMS, of South Dakota, recently visited five churches in one day, covering a distance of 150 miles. They were able to do this by the use of a Ford Service Car. By train only one point could have been reached. The following day they were able to visit two additional churches. Without the car it would have taken at least three days to make the visit.

PRICE, REV. JAMES W., who has done a notable work at Pilgrim, Portland, Ore., is visiting his old home in Maine. He will represent the Pacific Coast on a C. H. M. S. team in some of the eastern states before he and his wife attend the National Council as official delegates from the Oregon State Conference.

REINER, REV. E. L., of Waveland Ave., Chicago, Ill., will spend the last two weeks in August as Religious Director of Camp Warren, near Benton Harbor, Mich.

STEVENSON, REV. W. S., who was ordained at White River, S. D., late in June, covers a large circuit, including Happy Hollow, Wood, Cady, Cottonwood Creek, and Rosebud Valley, reaching his fields by means of a Ford car. Leyden Church, Brookline, Mass., has been contributing to the upkeep of his car.

STRAUCH, REV. WILLIAM AND MRS., of Ft. Collins, Col., attended the German Congregational Conference at Lincoln, Nebraska, and then visited friends in Chicago for their vacation.

WANGELIN, REV. F. G., has finished a period of three months' service in the Grandin (Mo.) Larger Parish which includes Willow Springs, Noble, Payne, and three other points. A successful Church Vacation School was conducted at the Payne Schoolhouse, with others to follow. He is assisted in the work of this Larger Parish by Mr. L. E. Deets, a graduate of Union Seminary. Mr. Deets makes Willow Springs his headquarters and is conducting a thorough survey of the entire region.

WRIGHT, MR. HAROLD, a student in the State University, is assisting Dr. George Andrews of Tucson, Ariz., remaining in Tucson during the summer, keeping the Sunday School alive, and conducting such other activities as are possible. Mrs. M. P. Yarrow, who has ably served as assistant in this field, left in June for work in California.

YOUNG, REV. L. A., Hillsboro, Ore., has been granted a three months' rest in order to recuperate after a dangerous attack of pneumonia.

Events to Come

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

ISLES OF SHOALS CONGREGATIONAL SUMMER CONFERENCE, Star Island, off Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 10-24.

FIRST ANNUAL CONGREGATIONAL YOUNG PEOPLE'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE AND SCHOOL OF METHODS, Lake Cobbosseecontee, Winthrop, Me., Aug. 22-29.

Northfield Summer Conferences

MASSACHUSETTS CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR INSTITUTE, Aug. 17-24.

State Conferences

IDAHO, Boise, Oct. 20-22.
KENTUCKY, Evarts, Oct.
NORTH CAROLINA (Colored), Beaufort, Sept. 23.
NORTH DAKOTA, Dickinson, Sept. 15-17.
UTAH, Salt Lake City, Oct.
WASHINGTON, Seattle, Oct. 6-8.
WISCONSIN, Appleton, Oct. 5-8.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Obituary Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

GILBERT M. NICHOLS

The church in Assonet, Mass., has suffered severe loss in the sudden death on July 28 Gilbert M. Nichols. As deacon, superintende of Sabbath School, parish treasurer, and for o forty years clerk, he faithfully and efficien served his master and had come to be relied up as a "pillar in the church."

His loss is also keenly felt in the whole co munity, which throughout his life he had wis and usefully served as legal adviser, administ tor of estates, helpful counseler, and dependa friend. He filled many town offices, and h the unusual record of being chosen as modera of the town meetings without break for the p thirty years.

Counting among his forebears John Alden, K elson Winslow, and William Bradford of the Plymouth Colony, his life conspicuously ill trated the high ideals and sturdy character his Pilgrim ancestry.

The affectionate regard and high respect which he was held by his neighbors was sho by the sad throng which filled the old meeti house at his burial. He leaves, besides his wido one sister, Charlotte, a brother, Winslow, w resides in Assonet, and a younger brother, R Dr. John T. Nichols, pastor of the church in llington, Ct.

DR. GILBERT R. SHERWOOD

Dr. Gilbert R. Sherwood of Pasadena, C passed into the Other Room July 22, 1925, the ripe old age of 86. Although a native Vermont, he spent nearly forty years in Elyr Ohio, as an ideal family physician, honored a beloved. Not only a trusted friend in fam affairs, he gave his life unstintedly to the chur holding office in the First Congregational Chur for nearly all that time. In 1908 upon his moval to Pasadena, Cal., he entered at once i the life of the neighborhood church—the We minster Presbyterian—and at the time of death was elder-emeritus. During this time closely followed the affairs of the Congregatio Church and always read The Congregationali During the Civil War he served in the 14th V mont Volunteer Infantry, going through Battle of Gettysburg. Dr. Sherwood took gr interest in the G. A. R. during his later ye and the judgment of his comrades can well seen in their resolutions: "He was truly an round man. His soldiership was crowned w the life of a physician. Service to humanity, se ice to the church marked a long life. His Mast Christ, was always pre-eminent, his citizens was faultless."

Dr. Sherwood had seven children, six of wh reached maturity. The three surviving ones residents of California. His wife died seve years ago. A. O. F

To the Corsican

By Thomas Curtis Clark

Napoleon, the glory of your name
In olden days was as the noonday sun,
But now, that proud autocracy is done,
The world casts scorn upon your storied fa
Your words were steel, your presence ma men cower—
And yet your soldiers loved you, staunch true;
But when your realm into an empire grew,
Pride hurled you headlong from your seat power.
In ancient times there was a lowly Man
Who with sublime affection loved His ki
But to His dream the lords of earth w blind,
And Him they slew, with fierce and fiend plan.
That Man still lives, and millions follow Hi
While you walk lonely, in the shadows dim

FIRST MORTGAGES
and REAL ESTATE BONDS
Interest 7% Semi-Annually
On Improved Income Florida Real Estate
Loans confined to
Tampa and South Florida
Principal and Interest Guaranteed
Write for booklet and information
GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

Record Books
For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Church School Superintendent, the Secretary.
ASK FOR CATALOGUES
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New York 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

"Please Excuse!"

By W. H. Morse, M.D.

School principals and teachers in cities and wns where there are Roman Catholic urches are accustomed to have the Roman tholic children ask if they may be dismissed certain days, at an hour earlier than the ne for the close of the session, so that they ay "go for instructions," that is, that they ay attend a period of religious instruction at eir church. The day may be different in some aces, but it is said to be preferably Friday. this request many, if not most Protestant achers refuse consent, while others more or s readily grant it. Those who object are ry apt to make the objection because of a ejudice against the Roman Catholic Church, d in this contravention they are upheld by e Protestant parents and Protestant senti- ent. On the other hand it is urged by the oman Catholics that as the children are not ven religious instruction in the public hools, and as they should have such instruc- on, it is but just and right that it should given weekly to the Roman Catholic chil- en at the church.

Without holding any brief for Romanism, is custom is one that may well be not only commended, but so extended as to embrace the children in the school. It is a plan at appears to be excellent, and one that ould have sympathetic co-operation on the rt of the public school boards and public hools, on the one hand, and that of parents d Protestant churches on the other. Accord- g to such a plan the other children would dismissed at the same time with the Roman tholic children, that they might go to the urches designated by their parents or guar- ans, there to receive religious teaching for an hour or longer. Such a plan, properly carried out, would be a great force in the prevention of juvenile delinquency. It is being generally felt and recognized more and more by all thinking citizens that because of indifference on the part of all too many parents, there is a general lack of religious knowledge on the part of many American boys and girls, and that this lack has to do with the fact that the juvenile courts have to deal with so many infractions of the law, which ofttimes are of a serious nature, and of a kind that is all too apt to lead up to the making of bad citizens.

"This persistent and continuous 'Please excuse' every week, coming from the Roman Catholic parents, is not only provoking, but it materially interferes with the lesson and study periods!" exclaims the teacher. This may not be questioned; but in answer the parents urge that that which they ask for their children is calculated to furnish a conception of moral truth that is strictly advantageous to the children and to the community. Moreover, they are not slow to maintain that it is rare that children who regularly "go for instruction" are ever before the judge. This statement is supported by one of the foremost American judges, who adds that the children who are brought before him in the juvenile court are, as a rule, untaught religiously.

It may be argued against the suggested plan that it is not convenient for the Protestant churches to have "instructions," and that it is out of the question to have such teaching. Some years ago at Westfield N. J., the pastor of the Methodist Church, Rev. Joseph A. Owen, saw the necessity of it, and took up the matter with the superintendent of schools, Edwin Francis, and the pastors of the other four churches. The five pastors and the school superintendent saw eye to eye in the matter, and when it was broached to the parents and children there was general agreement. At that time, some thirty years ago, the village had but one schoolhouse, and the church that was nearest to it was the Methodist, and it was chosen as the place of meeting. There, on every Friday afternoon, at one hour before the time for closing the public school, the Protestant children met and received religious instruction from well-qualified women, who volunteered from all five churches. There was nothing denominational in the teaching, and from the first the Children's Class, as it was called, was a marked success. There was nothing obligatory about attendance, and although there were children from each of the churches, there were also those who were dismissed with the rest of the scholars, who did not attend for one reason or another. Presumably the same plan has been carried out elsewhere. If not, why not? Is it not feasible?

Hartford, Connecticut.

The Pastor Says: The power of one's whole moral past masses itself for or against every puny instant's temptation or resolve.

"On the First Day of the Week"

By Bertha Gerneaux Woods

Christ himself had stood by her,
Near his empty sepulchre!
"Yea, these eyes of mine have seen!"
Argued Mary Magdalene.
Glad her speech and swift it fell,
Yet the things she had to tell
Were received "as idle tales."
Surely, surely there were scales
On the eyes that would not see
How such miracles could be!
"They believed them not," we read,
And though Peter went with speed
To the sepulchre, where lay
Empty linens thrust away,
Even he, Christ's rock, alas,
Wondered what had come to pass!
Fools and slow of heart, indeed!
Oh my Savior, as I read,
Draw thou near and hold my hand.
Teach me, make me understand
All those things the prophets spake
Of thyself. I pray thee, break
Bread with me—the bread of life.
I am weary of my strife
And the darkness of my night.
Touch mine eyes to clearer sight.
I can never, never be Satisfied away from thee.

Rockford College for Women

Founded In 1847 for Modern Women

A COLLEGE of distinguished graduates, fine traditions and high standards of Christian scholarship. Chartered as college with Beloit by Congregationalists, February 25, 1847. A.B., B.S., and A.M. degrees. Majors in Education, Art, Social Service, Home Economics, Music and Secretarial studies. A campus of wooded acres on Rock River, 88 miles from Chicago. All girls participate in athletics. An intimate college with many student activities.

Write for catalog and book of views.

Wm. A. Maddox, Ph.D., Pres., Box C, Rockford, Illinois

SEA PINES School of Personality for Girls

THOMAS BICKFORD, Founder

tdoor life. Training in self-discovery and self-direction. timulating ideas of health, responsibility. Christian in- ence. One hundred acres, pine groves, seashore. College ep ratory, Cultural, Secretarial and Athletic courses. Arts. afts. Dramatics. Music. Corrective Gymnastics. Recrea- on Camp July and August. Summer Courses and Counsel- ship Training for older girls and young women.

Miss Faith Bickford, Miss Addie Bickford, Directors Box V, Brewster, Mass.

KIMBALL UNION ACADEMY

Congregational preparatory school with a moderate tuition. 113th year ens Sept 16th. High elevation. Nine buildings. 100-acre farm. Sep- te dormitories for boys and girls. Gymnasium. Playing fields. Outing b DR. FRANCIS E. CLARK, President of Trustees. CHARLES ALDEN ACY, A.M., Headmaster, Meriden, N. H.

Union Theological Seminary offers Specialized Training for Pastors of Country Churches and those preparing for

RURAL CHURCH WORK

A Special Course by
Prof. Ralph A. Felton, of Cornell University.
Supervised Field Work under
Dr. Edmund de S. Brunner, Director of Town and Country Surveys, Institute of Social and Religious Research.

A Rich Variety of other courses available at the Seminary in the Bible, Religious Education, History and Philosophy of Religion, etc., and in Rural Education, Economics, Sociology, etc. at Teachers College of Columbia University.

Full information from
Rev. Gaylord S. White, Director,
Department of the Church and the Community, Union Theological Seminary.
Broadway at 120th Street New York City

Oberlin Graduate School of Theology

Scholarly and practical training for the ministry, directors of religious education, missionary and Christian Association service. Interdenominational faculty and student body. All the cultural advantages of Oberlin College and its complete equipment. Unusual opportunities for women. Scholarships and financial help available.

Degrees A.M., B.D. and S.T.M.
Correspond with Dean Thomas W. Graham Council Hall, Oberlin, Ohio

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION

BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

Sixtieth Year Opened August 17, 1925

Prepares men and women for

The Pastorate Social Service
Religious Education Foreign Service
Research

Practical Instruction. Opportunities for Self-Support.
Facilities of University of California.
Graduate Degrees. Faculty of Ten.
Modern and Commodious Buildings under Construction.

COME TO CALIFORNIA TO STUDY

HERMAN F. SWARTZ, President

Bangor Theological Seminary

The 110th year opens Sept 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.

For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor Maine.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.

Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries — Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton — Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton — Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong
Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady, Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Henry Smith Leiper, M.A., Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries
Rev. A. V. Bliss, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F.
100 East 42d Street, New York

Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit su
plies and Congregational ministers seeking pa torates. Maintained by the Congregational Co ferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Cove
Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chairma

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secreta and Missionary Education Secreta
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and Adu
Education Secreta
Rev. Harry T. Stock,
Student and Young People's Secreta
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Educati
Program including Social Service, Missiona
Education, Student and Young People's Wor aids Ministerial Students, University Pastor directs campaign to secure Recruits for Christi Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of t denomination for the publication and distributi of The Congregationalist, church school equi ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, teache magazines, children's and young people's week papers, and books for home and church use, w book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Manag
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregationali
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston. Massachusetts
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Congreg
tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Treas
Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTERIO
19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurlbu
Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACIF
760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W.
Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec. S

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONA
FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H.
Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONA
UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasure
Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Congreg tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY, constituent of the Congregational Home Missio ary Society, represents the churches of Massach setts in their home missionary work. The Socie solicits bequests, pays annuities on condition gifts, administers trust funds for churches. Fre erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; Re
John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sewa
Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL A
Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, al bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Colu bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F.
Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF BO
TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object is t establishment and support of Evangelical Congr gational Churches and Sunday Schools in Bost and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; C.
Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Sea
Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely f
Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites co tributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annui Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Superi tendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasure Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT, constituent of the National Society, solicits co tributions, administers Special Trust for Church and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Re
Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Har ford.

RISIBLES

Cook (being engaged)—"And of course, Sam, I shall require a reserve ear-piece on ur wireless set."—London Opinion.

Mr. Henry Ford is making cheap engines for planes. Unwary pedestrians will soon know what it is to receive bolts from the blue.—London Passing Show.

Mrs. Henpeque—"It says here that this new elixir of life will make a man live for 200 years."

Mr. Henpeque—"If I were a bachelor I'd buy a bottle."—Goblin.

"Last year she wouldn't marry him because he was fat, but now that he has grown thin as a rail, she accepts him."

"Well, you know how women like a thing that has been reduced."—Bucknell Belle Hop.

Jimmie—"Pa just gimme this dime fer throwin' away my tin whistle."

Storekeeper—"What's the idea?"

Jimmie—"It's his day of rest. Gimme a bunch of firecrackers an' a drum."—American Legion.

A man who had some money stolen from him received a note with part of it returned. It read, "I stole your money, and remorse gnaws at my conscience. When it gnaws again, I'll send you some more."—Dartmouth Jack o' Lantern.

Master—"Brown, this is an example in subtraction. Seven boys went down to a pond to bathe, but two of them had been told not to go in the water. Now, can you tell how many went in?"

Brown—"Yes, sir; seven."—Pearson's.

Soapy—"Say, bo, kin you spell potatoes witt all 'o's?"

Rastus—"How you get dat way?"

Soapy—"Take out dat nice leather memorandum of yours, put one o, put two o's, put three o's, put four o's, put five o's, put six o's, put seven o's, put eight o's, potatoes!"—Lutheran.

Pat—"This is the foist time inny of these corporations hev done innything to binnifit the workingman."

Mike—"How is that, Pat?"

Pat—"It is this sivin-cent fare. I hev been walkin' to and from me work and savin' tin cents, and now I kin save fourteen cints."—Book of Smiles.

"What we want," explained the employment manager, "is a well-behaved, trustworthy man of high moral character. Do you think you can fill the bill?"

"Yes, suh," replied the colored applicant, "no question 'bout it, suh."

"No?"

"No, indeed, suh. Why, it was on account of my good behavior dat I done got let out of de penitentia'y last week."—Judge.

"English as she is Japped" is the term given by Anglo-Saxons in the Orient to the weird effect sometimes produced by the Japanese in their efforts to employ English in their shop signs. This Oriental capacity for using our mother tongue with strange twists of unconscious humor is perhaps no better exemplified than in the wording of a sign on a Japanese baker's shop:

"A. KASHINURU, BIGGEST LOAFER IN TOKIO."
—American Mutual Magazine.

A school teacher had found her class of boys reluctant in their writing of English compositions. At last she conceived a great idea to stimulate their interest—to write an account of a ball game.

It seemed that she was successful. With one exception, the boys threw themselves at the task and evolved youthful masterpieces. The backward one chewed reluctantly at his pen and was then struck by a burst of genius. When the teacher opened his paper it read: "Rain—no game."—American Legion Weekly.

She (making conversation)—"Dad bought a Rubens when we were in Europe last year."

He (interested at last)—"Really! How charming! What horsepower?"—Banter.

Boss—"That hired man of mine is a regular steam engine."

Empy—"Good worker, eh?"

Boss—"No: good whistler."—Detroit News.

American Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches. Bequests and Annuities are solicited in order that the House may be freed from mortgage indebtedness and the Association thus enabled to furnish our Missionary Organizations with business offices at minimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Rev. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hubbard, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

Beacon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816
Home visitation and personal missionary service in connection with our churches. Emergency relief. Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contributions and legacies gratefully received and scrupulously administered.
William Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. Parker, Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

Incorporated 1829 Boston Reorganized 1922

Seaman's Friend Society, Inc.

This Society, reorganized in 1922, now fully represents the Congregational Churches of New England in its practical, social and religious work among seamen. Has finely equipped Chapels at 287 Hanover Street, Boston, and at Vine-yard Haven, and Reading Rooms at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. The Society provides dormitory accommodations, reading and recreation rooms, religious services, pool tables, and games of many kinds, a restaurant, a canteen, shower baths, postal and banking facilities. Donations and bequests solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis. President, Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore Busfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles F. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. Com., Franklin P. Shumway; Office 618 Congregational House.

American Seamen's Friend Society

Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational international and national Society aiding seamen.
Maintains a Sailors' Home and Institute at 76 West Street, New York City.
Loan Libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing from New York.
PUBLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).
Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.
SUPPORTED by contributions and legacies.
JOHN B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE HENRY WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary.
CLARENCE C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 79 Wall St., New York, to whom contributions may be sent.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817
National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday Schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundational work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.
W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder* and *The Advance

August 20, 1925

Vol. CX No. 34

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook 227
Editorial—A Problem of Youth to Be Solved 228
The Ku Klux Parade in Washington
The British Coal Mining Problem
On Being a Contributing Editor, by Gaius Glenn Atkins
Baxter the Puritan: A Pastor of Pastors—An Editorial Message
The Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches. VIII. Sustaining Friendly Relations with Catholics, by Daniel Evans 232
Malpractice Upon Youth, by Theodore M. Shipherd 233
Home Missionary Centenary, by Frederick L. Fagley 234
Who Help Themselves—in Greece, by Dr. E. O. Watson 235
New Leader of Churches in Bay State 235
Along Our Stream of Freedom—Coming Leaders 236
The Parable of the Free Merry-Go-Round 236
The Preacher and the Magazines, by Rev. W. Bertram Chandler 236
City-Wide School of Missions, by Arthur O. Pritchard 237
First Church, Kalamazoo 237
An American College for Macedonia 238
Honorary Degrees 238
Young People's Conferences 239
Our Invalid Parish—A Brave Man 240
Closet and Altar 240
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic 240
With the Children—Jeremy Dives Into Luck, by Daisy D. Stephenson 241
The Congregationalist's Bible Class—Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson 242
Our "Camino Real"—"Divine Healing" in the Episcopal Churches 242
Among the New Books 243
Year Book Corrections 244
Vital Questions for Congregationalists 245
Our Readers' Forum 246
News of the Churches 247

"Hymns and Readings to Make the Service One Harmonious Whole"

THE PILGRIM HYMNAL

(Revised Edition)

THIS hymnal provides a collection of hymns by which adequate utterance is given to the religious spirit of our day. It contains, therefore, an unsurpassed collection of those hymns, new and old, in which the social interpretation of Christianity is set to music. ¶ The responsive readings, prayers, and other aids to worship are unequaled in richness, dignity, and reverence. ¶ The inclusion of the Kansas City Confession of Faith gives the book special value for Congregationalists.

Nature and Contents of The Pilgrim Hymnal

(Approximate Analysis)

200 at least of the hymns may be classified as belonging to the old standard list, such as "Come, Thou Almighty King," "Lord of All Being, Throned Afar," "Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me," etc. With these hymns are connected the old familiar tunes.

200 and more are later hymns which are now familiar, associated, many of them, with English tunes, such as "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty," and "Beneath the Cross of Jesus" (St. Christopher).

150 are less familiar old hymns and tunes, hymns by such authors as James Russell Lowell, Thomas Hughes, Anne Brontë, F. L. Hosmer, John G. Whittier, Samuel Longfellow, etc.; beautiful hymns to which a hearty welcome will be given.

150 more hymns or tunes are new to our hymn books, by authors like Maltbie Babcock, Oscar E. Maurer, Isaac Ogden Rankin, Felix Adler, George T. Coster, and others.

127 pages of responsive readings.

What Users of The Pilgrim Hymnal Think About It

"The New Pilgrim Hymnal is easily the best."

"I say without hesitation that I am delighted with it."

"I think it is almost as near perfection as one could come."

"A collection of hymns rich with beauty and deep with feeling."

"It seems to me of a very high character in its selection of hymns and its adaption of music."

"I have never had a book in my twenty-five years' ministry that I consider as near a model."

"It seems to me that your claim of its being the best book yet published for Congregational churches is fully justified."

"For my taste, it comes nearer being what I would recommend without reserve to a church than any hymn book I have seen."

"We are impressed with the firmness of the editorial touch, the courage and freedom of literary taste. Altogether the editors have reason to expect warm and wide appreciation of their work on a hymnal which is a credit to the denomination whose name it bears."

"The well selected and arranged body of hymns, the responsive readings, the prayers, benedictions, and other features, along with the complete system of indexing, make it a very attractive and useful book of worship. You have done an excellent piece of work and I congratulate you heartily."

$130 per hundred. Sample copies sent on request.

Congregational Publishing Society

(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston
156 Fifth Ave., New York
19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 35 August 27, 1925

LABOR NUMBER

Man, Machine, and Progress
By E. H. H. HOLMAN

The Christian Spirit in Industry
By HORACE G. HOADLEY

The Golden Rule in Industry
AN EDITORIAL MESSAGE

Provisional Program of the National Council

Young People's Summer Conferences

The Tsudas
By ALBERT W. PALMER

Labor Day Message of the Federal Council of Churches

With the Approach of September

We realize that the autumn season and the beginning of the church year is near at hand

ARE WE AS INDIVIDUALS PREPARED FOR INTELLIGENT SERVICE?

The Christian church faces a tremendous task, and needs the earnest efforts of every one of its members. Both at home and abroad, in all walks of life, its influence must be felt, and to cope successfully with the great problems at hand.

The Congregationalist

gives instructive and inspirational articles and editorials, and week by week the news of the progress of the Christian world. No church can afford to be without a large number of subscribers, for it is upon these well-informed people the pastor depends for help. The larger the body, the firmer the grip has that church in its community.

$3.00 per year
$2.75 in Church Clubs

Department of Circulation

THE CONGREGATIONALIST

14 Beacon Street
BOSTON

19 S. La Salle Street
CHICAGO

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | August 27, 1925 | No. 35

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D.
Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

The National Council Program

THE Provisional Program of the National Council meeting in Washington next October will be found on page 276 of this issue. It is a strong constructive program. A few of the distinguished speakers who have been invited to address the Council and who are expected to do so have not yet promised definitely to speak, and so their names cannot be announced until later. The addition of these names will add further to the attractiveness and value of the program to be presented. Pastors and as many men and women of the churches as possible will find this great meeting the opportunity of a life-time. The inspiration and knowledge which the meetings will afford, the benefit to be derived from the fellowship of Congregationalists from far and near, who will come together in Washington, and the attractions of the capital city itself are inducements not to be put aside without imperative reasons. The National Council provides for Associate Membership to which any Congregationalist may be admitted upon application to the Council Office, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, and the payment of a $1 fee. This gives one admission and practically all the privileges of the meetings except voting, reduced railroad fare, and advance reports and programs. Hotel and other rooming arrangements should be made as soon as possible. Already reservations have been made in considerable numbers.

Persecuting the Jews

THE Jews of Germany, Poland, Roumania, and Russia are suffering from persecution constantly, according to the Jewish Daily Bulletin. A Berlin dispatch tells of the arrest of 3,617 Jews because of membership in the Zionist organization. For like reason it is reported from Moscow that "a large number of young Jews" have been sentenced to exile for many years in far Siberia, Ural, and Kirgisia. Hardships suffered in Poland are cited, and thousands of emigrants are leaving Poland for Palestine. No nation can solve its problems by persecution or by discriminating against any race or group. How much stronger any government may be if it deals fairly with all and wins the loyalty of all. Is it not about time to call off the persecution of the Jews by some international action?

* *

The world cannot be ethical and have one system of ethics for the individual and another system of ethics for social and international relations.

The Heart of the Problem

IT is with much satisfaction that we present to our readers the substantial article by E. H. H. Holman in this number. It seems to us to go to the heart of a problem that in many respects is being mostly discussed in very superficial ways. Man today in relation to the age of machinery and industrial organization is somewhat in the position of a wayfarer who has accepted a lift from an automobile driver only to find himself hurried to a destination he had not intended at a rate that leaves him no chance to save himself. And this figure holds in spite of the fact that occasionally society seems also in the position of a driver who has given a man a lift only to find a gun poked in his ribs. Can man conquer the machine and system that hold him in thrall? Over a million people in England are out of employment—that is economic and spiritual potentialities are denied expression, and are temporarily or permanently thrown on the waste heap by the breakdown of modern social and industrial organization.

What is the way out? Mr. Holman is a reverent, devout Christian, a man of profound sincerity in his effort to live the Christ-life and apply Christian principles to industry. Yet he is right in asserting that Jesus has no industrial program. What he has given us is spiritual principles, that, if they are vital and practicable, must inspire us in developing sound social and industrial programs and in putting them into effect.

Much of the sentimental talk about Christianity solving the problems of the world is as futile as if men were to sit down by a great river and expect the spirit of good will to build a bridge across. Labor, science, skill, and materials are needed to bridge a stream, and all the good will in the world will not build a bridge until it works in accordance with the laws of man and God, discovering these laws where they are inadequately perceived, and applying them where they are known.

There is a deep sense in which we must develop the spirit of good will. The world is sadly lacking in Christian spirit. But there is equal need that Christian spirit be as definitely applied, and made as effective as an incentive in social upbuilding as ambition, profit-seeking and other motives have been in establishing society as it is. We are doing a great deal of tinkering at society, but real vital progress can come only out of the proper recognition of sound values in human life. In a deeper sense than we have ever realized it spiritual problems underlie social and economic problems. Jesus gives us the true values. He has revealed the way of life. But we must build these values into the very foundations of society, and we must build the Christian way of life as a highway through the modern world. This building will not come merely by aspiration and prayer. These are essential, but they must become expressed in consecrated study, science, and labor.

"Prohibition Has Justified Itself"

THE national prohibition of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes is certainly one of the greatest experiments in social reform of all history. It never has had a fair chance for complete success, because of the constant, organized and heavily financed efforts which have been made against it.

The science of propaganda was developed during the World War to a degree amazing to contemplate, and the methods of influencing public opinion for good and evil were used in every country, especially in the United States, with remarkable results. The war is over, but propaganda continues; and just as certain war propaganda was used to deceive and to accomplish sinister purposes, so today an unsuspecting public is victimized and misled by the propaganda against national prohibition. It began during the war and it has continued up to the present day. The liquor interests and those who for various reasons wish to have the liquor traffic continued have furnished a great deal of money an maintain organizations which are busy all the time try ing to break down national prohibition and make publi sentiment against it.

In view of these facts, which are a matter of curren knowledge to all who care to investigate, how surprisin it is that so many friends of prohibition should take u the propaganda of the "wets" and help to spread i further. They are doing just that.

